Han Shuo blindfolded her again and had also placed the veil back over her face. He led her out of the Dark Mantle stronghold beneath Emily’s taken aback gaze and only let her off a carriage when they were a far ways away. He said, “You can come find us at the agreed place after you make contact with your people. We can talk about the details of our cooperation then.”

“Okay, it was very nice to meet you.” Belinda responded softly and left after alighting from the carriage.

Emily hastened to ask after her figure had vanished, “Just what is going on? Why did you let her go just like that?”

Han Shuo quickly summarized what had happened. “There wouldn’t be much of an effect if we tried to force the truth out of her, but we can get a lot more information out of her if we let her go like this. I can take her life immediately if she tries to do anything disadvantageous towards us, so there's no need to worry about anything. “

“She'll reach out to the Calamity Church after she leaves and we'll obtain more information from her if we work together. We can also team up against Bob Ascher together. Isn't this killing multiple birds with one stone?”

“Do you know that you're engaging in very dangerous acts? The Calamity Church isn't an ordinary faction. If we aren't careful, not only will we lose everything we've worked for up until now, we'll lose even our lives as well! You're playing with fire!” Emily still found it hard to accept his actions even after listening to his explanations and sighed with emotion.

“Alright alright, I know my limits in this matter. Taking risks is necessary sometimes. Only with great risk comes great reward. We can handle it.” Han Shuo paused here and asked Emily, “Right, you went out just now... did you get any useful information?”

“The Phoebe that you accompanied to the finance minister's banquet last time just arrived in Valen City. You'll never guess what she's here for.” Emily frowned when she saw Han Shuo ask about business.

Starting, Han Shuo asked, taken aback, “What's she doing in Valen City?”

“Because the McGrady Guild failed their mission halfway through last time, Bob Ascher no longer trusted them, but approached Phoebe instead. As the owner, she was tempted by the high price that Bob Ascher offered to transport the siege weapons and used the channels of her guild to bypass some cities and bring them to Valen City. I didn't think that she'd actually do it, and now that she's arrived in Valen City with them. If nothing goes wrong, she'll hand them over to the Gryphon Legion tomorrow.” Emily smiled ruefully as she explained.

Han Shuo's mind spun rapidly after he heard these words and suddenly ask, “Will this matter bring Phoebe down as well?”

“It’s difficult to say. If she helped Bob Ascher even after knowing what this equipment was, then I’d be hard pressed to cover up this matter, but if she had no idea and was kept in the dark, we may have some wiggle room then.” Emily thought for a moment and responded.

“Where is Phoebe staying now? I’m going to find her immediately.” Han Shuo’s forehead creased as he looked at Emily.

Pouting, Emily glared at Han Shuo and said huffily, “And you say you have nothing to do with her! Look at you, all worried when you hear that she’s in danger!”

“I have a lot of materials that depend on her procuring them for me. Nothing can happen to her, please tell me her address?” Holding Emily in his arms, he kissed her strongly and begged with a cheeky grin.

Emily snorted lightly and pinched Han Shuo harshly before finally giving him Phoebe’s address. She reminded him as he left, “There are Gryphon Legion members guarding the premises around her hotel. You must be careful!”

“Thank you for your concern, I’ll take care of myself, just for you.” Han Shuo chuckled and shot out from the carriage like a cheetah, moving swiftly to where Phoebe was staying.

The hotel that Phoebe was staying at was on a street close to the entrance of the city. When Han Shuo reached it, he discovered that there were indeed a lot of soldiers stationed around it. It was obvious that they cared greatly about what Phoebe was transporting.

Making use of the cover of night, Han Shuo activated the Art to fly into the air and slowly descend onto the roof of one of the nearby buildings.

One had to say that the Dark Mantle did indeed possess incredible intelligence networks. Emily had known which hotel Phoebe had checked into as soon as she entered the city. She even knew which room Phoebe was in.

The last room on the west side was the quietest and most expensive room in the hotel. There were three Gryphon Legion soldiers guarding it as well. Han Shuo observed the surroundings from the roof and made use of someone dozing off to crack open a window and sneak in soundlessly.

The room was quite spacious as it had a separate living room, bathroom, and bedroom. Phoebe was fast asleep, so she was naturally in the bedroom. Han Shuo held his breath and quietly tiptoed to the bedroom, not making any sound.

A soft, big bed was located beneath purple bed curtains. A brazier, by the side of the bed, burned softly, warming the entire room. A body on her side was on the soft bed, wrapped in satin sheets and a head full of long hair spilled over the pillow. A pale, translucent shoulder was exposed to the air and she moaned deeply as if dreaming.

Waking soundlessly to Phoebe, Han Shuo's body twisted as he lifted a corner of the purple curtains, planning to wake her up. He suddenly heard a deep moan and a shy protest come from Phoebe's lips, "Oh... no, you villain. Bryan, you villain!"

NSFW Part

Han Shuo started, thinking that she had discovered him. He couldn't help but raise himself a bit higher to look at Phoebe, but noticed that her eyes were tightly shut and her cheeks flushed red. Low moans sounded from her mouth as her arms seemed to move over her body and rub herself beneath the sheets.

She was having a wet dream! And he seemed to be the male lead!

Han Shuo was flabbergasted as he looked at Phoebe in shock. Phoebe's face and nape were a patch of red as her luscious, red lips parted slightly. A hand kept traveling between her chest and lower body beneath the sheets as she emitted low moans, calling out his name every now and then.

Han Shuo felt his mouth and tongue dry out when such a shocking, incredible scene was presented in front of him. His lower body immediately stood at attention. He'd planned on waking Phoebe, but forgot everything at this moment. His body slowly lowered itself into Phoebe's bed and he even lifted a corner of the sheets to slip in.

He spooned Phoebe from behind as his stiffly alert lower body inserted itself into the rounded arc of Phoebe's bottom. He could even feel the slippery wetness of her body down there through the thin fabric.

No man was able to resist such strong stimulus. Han Shuo panted lowly once and slowly crept his hands up to Phoebe's pert and full breasts from behind, rubbing them through the silk pajamas. His mouth moved to Phoebe's neck and his passion filled mouth and lips licked at Phoebe's flushed neck.

"Oh... you pervert!" Phoebe obviously felt the same level of strong impetus in her sleep as she couldn't help but moan as well. One of her hands unconsciously covered the hand that was ravaging her breasts as her other hand guided Han Shuo's other hand along her breasts.

Phoebe's bottom also seemed to feel Han Shuo's intrusion as well as she clenched her slender legs together, seeming to want to feel Han Shuo's invasion even more clearly. This kind of soul wrenching stimulus made Han Shuo start to pant and lick Phoebe even more fiercely.

Just as this feeling became more and more acute, Phoebe's neck suddenly turned as she opened her sleepy eyes to look at Han Shuo, the expression of enjoyment plastered all over his face.

Chapter 171: You're my woman from now on!

Han Shuo was immediately gobsmacked as his heart pounded rapidly, his mouth opening and closing, not knowing what to do.

No matter how one looked at it, he had barged into someone's room in the middle of the night, climbed into her bed and committed such ridiculous acts. These were all unexplainable and unforgivable. The drowsy Phoebe was looking at him with such hazy eyes that Han Shuo had already made his preparations to welcome the advent of the storm.

Contrary to his expectations, just as he was stunned and didn't know what to do, Phoebe actually turned her body to face Han Shuo. She then snaked her arms around his neck and moved her luscious lips towards Han Shuo's wide open mouth. Her small, lithe tongue reached voluntarily into his mouth.

As she lay there face to face with Han Shuo, Phoebe's long, slender legs also entangled themselves with his legs. One of them crept around his waist she started squirming against his body like a snake.

Phoebe wore thin, satin pajamas to sleep. When the two of them were so tightly meshed together, this kind of satin material was almost nonexistent against skin. Such a perfect body was enmeshed against his body and this fragrant tongue was voluntarily offering itself for his sampling. Han Shuo immediately forgot his panic from just now and responded enthusiastically.

His two hands rested on Phoebe's chest and butt as he unceremoniously started playing with them, feeling their smooth roundness. As they changed shapes beneath the ministrations of his hands, Han Shuo's panting became rougher and rougher as he finally couldn't take it anymore and pinned Phoebe beneath his body. He roughly ripped apart her thin pajamas and started kneading her breasts roughly with his bare hands.

“Eh... that hurts!” Phoebe cried out with pain as her ardent tongue retreated. A pair of hazy, almond shaped eyes slowly became to gain a bit of clarity.

Han Shuo blanked and panted, “I’m sorry, I’ll be more gentle later on!”

Phoebe had been a bit perplexed until he spoke, and her flushed cheeks immediately changed greatly. She pushed Han Shuo off her with extreme fear and quickly pulled up the thin sheets, wrapping them tightly around herself. She screamed, “You speak, this isn’t a dream!”

Han Shuo finally reacted after hearing Phoebe’s words. It looked like Phoebe had kissed him back just now because she hadn’t been fully awake and thought that she was still in her dream. As their bodies entangled in that hazy and indistinct circumstances, as well as Han Shuo’s slightly rough movements and his response, Phoebe finally woke up and realized the truth of the situation.

“Miss Phoebe, is something the matter?” Phoebe’s scream had attracted the attentions of the three Gryphon Legion guards standing guard outside her door. One of them stood in front of it and called out to her.

“No, nothing. I just had a nightmare. Don’t worry about me. Just keep guard outside.” Although Phoebe was currently in a state of panic, she didn’t even give a moment’s thought to concealing Han Shuo’s presence when she heard the guards call out to her.

“Alright, it will be daybreak soon. Miss Phoebe can rest for a little while longer!” The guard outside the door returned to his station after saying a word.

Her face flushed red because of her shock, Phoebe’s eyes stared directly at Han Shuo as she looked at him silently, a bizarre expression apparent on her face.

Han Shuo really wanted to find a hole to bury himself into in his current state of awkwardness. Even though he had a thick face, he still couldn’t help but burn in embarrassment. He stammered out nonsense as he tried to explain, “Um... eh... I had some business with you and you were having this weird dream. And then you hugged me. Hah, I’m a normal guy, so we... that... that's how things happened..."

Han Shuo's explanation was feeble and even he himself felt a bit ashamed as he spoke. His presence weakened greatly with these words, and he looked like a prisoner on death row in his final struggles.

He looked deeply at Phoebe as her face became redder and redder. Han Shuo's frantic motions to find an excuse seemed to irritate her even more as she huffed out lowly, "Shut up!"

Han Shuo immediately shut up upon hearing these words and sat with a wry smile on the corner of the bed. He hung his head quietly, looking like a kid who had done something wrong and was waiting for the teacher to punish him.

"You dared violate me in such a shameless way while I was asleep. Bryan, oh Bryan, you're even more despicable than I had originally thought!" Phoebe looked like she wanted to kill him as she bit off her words.

"I didn't, you hugged me first! To be honest, I was the passive one here." Han Shuo hung his head and snuck a peek at Phoebe out of the corner of his eye as he spoke with some aggrievement.

"Wah!" sounded out as Phoebe sobbed lowly, a hand tugging on the thin sheets to cover herself and using the other to fiercely hammer Han Shuo's chest. She cursed lowly like she was crying, "How dare you, you despicable, shameless rogue! You've always treated me like this and never take responsibility. I hate you, I hate you!"

Although Phoebe's fists sounded out dully as she beat Han Shuo, he didn't feel any pain at all because she hadn't used any fighting aura.

Thinking rapidly, Han Shuo remembered that Phoebe had first called out his name in her sleep and connected it to the sometimes strange actions she would make towards him sometimes. Add to that what he'd just said, a moment of brilliance flashed through his mind and he suddenly understood something – Phoebe liked him!

Once he sorted this out, Han Shuo's thoughts spun even more rapidly, but even with the nimbleness of his mind, it wasn't that easy to find a rational explanation for what he wanted to do. He thought for a moment and then made up his mind viciously, deciding to just take her then and there.

He had been passively accepting the blows from Phoebe when he suddenly gripped her hands with one hand, the other striking out and lifting the thin sheets covering him and pressed her down on the bed beneath him. Wild kisses rained down on her as he started kissing and licking her neck, cheeks, shoulders, and breasts.

As he did so, he used the weight of his body to keep her pressed down and strong arms to restrain her, keeping her immobile and leaving her only able to cry out through her mouth.

"Damn it, let go of me you jerk. Um... not there, don't lick there. Stop, you evil jerk! Oh... no..." Curses and sounds of struggle continued to spill out from her mouth, but because there were guards outside, Phoebe didn't dare alarm them, so she kept her voice down, having no effect on Han Shuo at all.

Phoebe soft calls became more and more urgent beneath Han Shuo's strong kisses and her face flushed redder and redder. Her struggles became more and more weak until they finally turned into low moans. Han Shuo suddenly felt the refreshing feeling of victory and began licking and kissing even more strongly.

"Oh... why did you bite me?!" An enormous cry of pain suddenly emitted from Han Shuo's mouth. Phoebe could only move her mouth and so decided to bite Han Shuo's ear when she realized she couldn't move her body.

"You bite me and so I bite you as well!" Phoebe's face was filled with a strange light after biting Han Shuo. Her eyes sparkled and she seemed to be repressing a certain sweetness.

"Then, let's bite each other together!" Han Shuo chuckled devilishly and his mouth that had been kissing Phoebe's shoulder suddenly moved to her mouth.

Contrary to Han Shuo's expectations, Phoebe didn't struggle this time, but panted as he met her mouth.

A slippery tongue moved voluntarily into Han Shuo's mouth, entangling with Han Shuo's fiercely.

When he sensed Phoebe's response, Han Shuo's heart lurched as his hands and feet started acting up again. His large hands caressed Phoebe's full and firm peaks, squeezing them unceremoniously. His strictly at attention lower body rubbed restlessly against Phoebe's.

.....

Giving off a soft "oh", Phoebe panted roughly as she exerted force to push Han Shuo off her. A bit afraid to look at Han Shuo in her shyness, "That's enough now, the sky's about to brighten."

Seeing that it was indeed light outside and that sounds of conversation were coming in, Han Shuo tampered down his desires when he thought of the danger Phoebe was in and moved off her body. He tenderly picked up the thin sheets, wrapped Phoebe in them and held her close.

A strange light flashed through Phoebe's strong eyes as Han Shuo did so, appearing quite content and gentle. When Han Shuo finished doing all this, she lowered her head and said softly, "You violated me again today, what are you going to do about it?"

Chuckling devilishly, Han Shuo tightened his grasp and said in a dominating fashion, "You're my woman from now on!"

Phoebe's reddened face gleamed with an uncommon light when she heard these words, as if she'd waited a long time for this day and these words. She became shy when the truth arrived in front of her, but the sweetness on her face depicted the joy in her heart.

Her face trailing to her neck, Phoebe was quite bashful as she docilely said in a mosquito level voice, "Alright."

Chapter 172: Refining the yin demons

Perhaps because they'd touched each other intimately, but the cold and arrogant Phoebe now blushed often, and her attitude towards Han Shuo had changed drastically.

Women were like this. Before they gave you their heart, they would have many reservations and hesitations. However, once they gave their heart to you, they would involuntarily let the man take charge. Even a swordmaster like Phoebe was no different.

"Speak. How did you know I was staying here? What did you sneak in here for?" Phoebe lifted her head to look at Han Shuo with a slight smile as she lay on Han Shuo's broad chest.

Taking a deep breath in, Han Shuo's naughty hands and feet all stopped. He frowned as he gave Phoebe a basic overview of what was going on. However, he didn't speak of some of the more sensitive topics, including his identity in the Dark Mantle and the interference from the Calamity Church.

"Do you know what you were transporting when you were handling this batch of goods?" Han Shuo looked at Phoebe and gravely asked.

Shaking her head, Phoebe's slender brows creased as she responded, "I don't know. Those in my line of trade sometimes need to take on unknown risks. However, I hadn't thought that this time's matter would encompass so much."

Han Shuo did indeed breathe a sigh of relief when he learned that Phoebe had no idea what she was moving. He thought deeply for a moment and said, "The chief of the Gryphon Legion had the heart to rebel, so you must cooperate with us for the safety of the Boozt Merchant guild. Otherwise, once the senior levels of the Empire learn of this operation and of your guild's involvement, I'm afraid your guild will be subjected to unmeasurable danger, even as strong as it is."

Nodding her head in understanding, Phoebe hugged Han Shuo and laughed softly, "I'll do as you say. I think you'll be quite earnest in helping me.”

Phoebe was completely trusting of Han Shuo as she spoke, making him quite flattered by her trust. He quickly weighed some things up and once again coalesced a drop of essence blood, placing it in a small flask. He gave it to Phoebe, “Try to drip a drop of this blood onto those siege weapons as you transport them.”

“If you’re unable to open the containers, then drip it on the containers themselves. Then, try to accompany the shipment as far as you can tomorrow. Don’t be in a hurry to leave after you’re done, I’ll come find you again. Oh, right, Candice is in Valen City too and she’s staying at a hotel owned by Elaine. You can go find her.”

“No problem, I’ll do as you say.” Phoebe agreed and then lightly laughed, taking out a bunch of items from her storage ring. Her clear eyes looked at Han Shuo like she was showing off a treasure. “This batch has the all items that you wanted. I collected all of them in the course of helping Bob Ascher transport his items over.”

She handed the list over; looking over it, Han Shuo realized that all these items were what he’d needed to refine the yin demons. It looked like Phoebe had paid a lot of attention to his matters and had collected all the necessary materials for him in a short period of time.

He pulled Phoebe over and landed a kiss on her blushing, beautiful cheek, delighted. “Heh heh, thank you so much!”

The guard’s voice sounded again from outside at this time, “Miss Phoebe, the sun has completely risen. You should get ready to leave.”

“Mm. I’m awake. I’ll be out in a moment.” Phoebe responded, pushing Han Shuo away, bashfully changing her clothes within the thin blankets and pouting, “It’s all your fault. You ripped my undergarments, you savage brute.”

Han Shuo chuckled evilly and left Phoebe’s bed. “Alright, alright, I’ll make it up to you. Remember what I said. I’m leaving here for now, but I’ll come find you again soon.”

Han Shuo slowly made his way to the window. Just as he reached it, Phoebe suddenly called out softly. He looked back at her in surprise as she reminded softly, “Be careful.”

“I will!” Han Shuo responded dashing. Taking a quick peek out the window, he took advantage of a guard blinking to shoot out from the window like a wraith.

Han Shuo concealed his body in the light of the early morning and flew to the Dark Mantle stronghold. He discovered that Chester was already waiting when he arrived. It looked like he’d come from Elaine’s hotel.

“What’s the situation?” Han Shuo asked when he saw Chester.

“I was unconscious in the hotel. A druid told me that we’d fallen victim to a drug when I woke up and didn’t say anything else.” Chester looked a bit confused as he looked to Han Shuo for an explanation.

Han Shuo briefly went over what had happened while Chester had been unconscious. “Did that druid chat about anything with the female leader of the mercenary band? In addition, is Lisa back safely? How are things within the hotel?”

“It looks like that the druid spoke with the female swordsman Candice for a bit, but he evaded our hearing so I don’t know what they spoke of. I personally took Lisa to Lawrence, he said that he’ll be in touch shortly. The hotel is rearranging Belinda’s room with Elaine’s guidance and should be back to normal operations soon. The druid and everyone from the mercenary band are still there. They haven’t left!” Chester replied.

“So I see. Right, have you seen Emily since returning?”

“No, I just came over and saw the two that work for Madame Emily, but she’s not here at the moment.” Chester responded.

“Ah, I see. I don’t have anything going on at the moment. If you’re free, why don’t you head out and see what’s going on around town.” Han Shuo smiled and walked past Chester to head for the secret room.

When he set up the magic formation, Han Shuo once again entered the cemetery of death. The little lewd dragon Gilbert immediately bounded over with enthusiasm when he saw Han Shuo appear, thinking that Han Shuo was taking him out.

“Now isn’t the time, but I’ll take you away from the cemetery of death in a few days; don’t be in a hurry.” When he saw Gilbert rush over, Han Shuo immediately proceeded to throw cold water over him and ignored the rest of Gilbert’s mutterings, heading to where the yin demons were being refined.

Refining the yin demons was similar to refining the original demons. Apart from making a few adjustments to the formation and substituting in more precious ingredients, as well as three drops of essence blood, there were no other differences.

Han Shuo took a deep breath and quickly went over the details he needed to pay attention to in his mind. He then took out the Demonslayer Edge and started to change the cave in which the original demons had been refined in, changing it to the formation that could be used for the yin demons.

When the yin demon cave formed, Han Shuo placed all the ingredients that Phoebe had collected in the proper order in the yin demon cave. He had needed eighteen wraiths to be the catalyst to refine original demons, but the yin demon refinement required double. While 36 wraiths were needed, the time for refinement was decreased to 18 days.

Since Han Shuo had reached the true demon realm, he now possessed essence blood. Add that to the improved quality of his magical yuan, he’d be able to have the 36 wraiths finish battling each other in a short 18 days. The strongest wraiths that seized the three drops of essence blood would have the right to absorb the power within the yin demon cave and be refined to yin demons even more powerful than the original demons.

When the three yin demons finish forming, not only would they have all the power of the original demons, they would have even stronger life forces than the original demons. They would be able to lay in wait once they invaded a body until they rose to land a fatal blow at a critical moment.

If someone becomes possessed by a yin demon, then Han Shuo would be able to see everything they saw and felt through the yin demon within them. The yin demon lying in wait within their body could suddenly explode to action when the victim was deeply asleep or fighting others, and make its attack when the victim was otherwise distracted.

It'd be best if it could kill his enemy, but if the opponent was particularly strong, the yin demon could continue to lay low within his victim's body, or leave it and flee back to Han Shuo.

When the three yin demons were completely formed, they could even briefly transform into Han Shuo and create illusions of him for a short period. If Han Shuo suddenly created three copies of himself during battle, he'd be able to turn the situation around by befuddling his enemies.

When Han Shuo dripped in his essence blood and saw that the 36 wraiths had started furiously attacking each other within the cave to fight over Han Shuo's three drops of essence blood, he understood that the yin demon cave had started operating successfully and didn't continue to watch. He left without listening to Gilbert's complaints.

Chapter 173: Not enough right to

After returning from the cemetery of death, Han Shuo discovered that Emily was standing next to him as soon as he reappeared from the secret chamber.

“So you’ve seen your little lover?” Emily immediately asked when she saw Han Shuo.

“Regarding those siege weapons that Bob Ascher asked for, Phoebe is completely out of the loop. Moreover, I told her everything and she will cooperate completely with our work. I think, we can conceal the fact that Phoebe is implicated in this.” As he walked out of the transportation matrix, Han Shuo retrieved the six magical sticks one by one while explaining to Emily.

“If Phoebe is truly ignorant of the situation, then she won’t be implicated in this matter. We of the Dark Mantle will definitely not treat a good person with injustice. In the future, you will know of this,” Emily resolutely replied. Then she smiled tenderly and said, “You entered her room in the middle of the night, did she not mistake you as a rapist and beat you up?”

“Of course not,” Han Shuo replied with a straight face.

Emily stared intently at Han Shuo, trying to decipher something, but she realized that Han Shuo’s expression was bland with absolutely no particular changes.

“Alright alright, let’s leave this matter as it is. I just received a message. That Belinda that you released contacted me using your method. I don’t know what happened.” After Emily realized that she could not read anything from Han Shuo’s expression, she dropped the matter and continued to talk about proper business.

Before he released Belinda, Han Shuo had left her a means to contact him and told Emily about it so that she could keep an eye on it for him. Now, when he heard her say this, he immediately replied, “That’s good. Then let’s go meet Belinda right now to see what she wants.”

Han Shuo traveled with Emily to the Dark Forest where he had previously killed the two Gryphon knights. Although he had already left some insurance on Belinda's body, Han Shuo continued to be very cautious. He had been utmost vigilant on the way here, afraid that he would fall into one of Belinda's schemes.

When Han Shuo entered the forest, he suddenly felt an enormous presence concealed inside.

This energy clearly did not originate from Belinda. Han Shuo immediately focused his attention and spoke softly to Emily who was right beside him, "Be careful. There's something unnatural inside."

Emily nodded her head and replied, "Indeed. It seems that Belinda isn't in the forest alone. It'll be better if we take precautions to avoid being lured into one of her traps."

"Relax. If Belinda dares to raise a finger against us, I will make her suffer the consequences," Han Shuo's expression was calm. He retrieved the Demonslayer Edge from his space ring and walked towards the depths of the forest.

Suddenly, a streak of blinding lightning, as thick as a man's arm, violently launched towards his body like a soaring dragon, zig-zagging in midair as it exploded with brilliant radiance. As it moved, some large trees around its path began to smoke with a chaotic creaking noise.

Han Shuo's brows furrowed as the Demonslayer Edge shot out at will. With a whoosh, it leapt past the trees that blocked his path and instantly stabbed towards the top of the streak of lightning.

Amidst a string of thunderous explosions, Han Shuo's Demonslayer Edge could sense a storm of vengeful sword aura infused with the power of lightning. Not even the Demonslayer Edge infused with Han Shuo's demonic power could continuously withstand this kind of incredibly violent and chaotic energy. In the blink of an eye after making contact, Han Shuo was visibly unsettled as he hurried to compel the Demonslayer Edge back to his palm.

"Who's there?" Emily, who was also very cautious at this point, called out delicately. She gripped her magic staff, her bright eyes affixed to the soaring lightning overhead.

“Calamity Church Thunder Magic Knight Johnny! I only wanted to see if the two of you have the qualifications to work with me!” From the mysterious depths of the forest, a deep voice suddenly shouted.

After this shout, a middle-aged man in black armour with with ash-silver hair emerged from deep within the forest alongside Belinda. An ugly scar ran from his forehead to his nose, adding even more harshness to his already ugly visage.

The moment he stepped out from the Dark Forest after speaking, his body had already launched rapidly towards the soaring lightning. With a luxurious flourish of his right hand, a milky white fighting aura flashed into existence. The suspended lightning seemed to be steered by a titanic force into the palm of his hand.

After the lightning had receded, Han Shuo realized that it was actually a long silver sword. Only, even now the sword was still covered by electricity that had yet to disperse, sparking occasionally with light.

The milky white fighting aura of this man spoke of the strength that he had as either a swordmaster or an Earth Rider. Combining this kind of potential with the lightning demonic arts that this person had cultivated, it was no wonder that this person was so powerful to the extent that even Han Shuo’s Demonslayer Edge couldn’t handle it.

From behind thunder mage swordsman Johnny’s figure, the veil-adorned Belinda walked out slowly. When she reached Han Shuo, she first apologized briefly before turning around to Johnny. “Uncle Johnny, I already told you. Their potential qualifies them to work with us. Otherwise how could I have miscalculated?”

This man, Johnny, of the Calamity Church looked to be an extremely egotistical person, but he was still somewhat respectful towards Belinda. When he heard her say that, he could not help but nod and say, “Their potential can be considered passable, but cooperating with them will not benefit us much. Bob Ascher of the Gryphon Knights is a sky rider. These two people are no match for someone of his potential. Our only opportunity is if you can only use your golem to obstruct the surrounding people while I execute him.”

Emily couldn't help but speak up when she heard this person's arrogance, “Apparently, apart from the Gryphon Legion Chief being a sky rider, there are five earth riders by his side. Add to that Clark's master, great swordmaster Gabriel, and two other water and earth archmages.”

“Just based off of this alone, it has to be a divine swordmaster and a magister, or a divine knight acting in concert, or it'll be an empty dream to try to kill him alone. Heh heh, I see that although Mister Johnny is a thunder mage swordsman at the level of swordmaster, it won't be that easy for you once you truly start fighting Bob Ascher, not to mention the followers on his side.”

Most people would know that Bob Ascher had a few followers by his side, but wouldn't know to the level of detail that the Dark Mantle was aware of. When Emily started describing all of Bob Ascher's followers in detail, even the arrogant Johnny's face changed drastically.

“Then, what aid can you bring us?” Johnny stood there silently with a stone-cold face and looked at Emily.

“No matter your goals in fighting Bob Ascher, I just want to tell you not to make moves lightly. Otherwise not only you, but even we will be dragged in as well. If we work together, we can provide you the intelligence on the people by Bob Ascher's side and can help you distract them for a short period of time, creating the appropriate moment for your assassination attempt.” Emily revealed a confident smile and softly described what the Dark Mantle could do for Johnny.

“Uncle Johnny, this is precisely what we need!” Belinda suddenly spoke up beside Johnny.

“You're likely members of the Lancelot Empire?” Johnny wasn't an idiot and naturally made out Han Shuo and Emily's identity at this point.

Nodding, Emily admitted, “That's right. I hope you can keep this secret for us if we work together.”

‘Humph. You people are so fake. You’ll cooperate with us when you need us, but will pretend you don’t even know we exist when the matter passes. You’ll come at us with everything you have.’ Johnny sneered with utmost sarcasm.

“Then the matter’s settled then. We’ll tell you if we find a suitable time to kill him in the next couple days. We’ll let you know when the arrangements are made. You can make use of the time to find more helpers, otherwise it won’t be that realistic in wanting to kill Bob Ascher.” When Han Shuo saw Johnny’s experience, he knew that although the latter didn’t care for those who worked for the country, he seemed to be used to using others. He looked like he’d agreed to work together.

With the Calamity Church’s current level of strength, it wasn’t feasible to assassinate Bob Ascher alone. Han Shuo and Emily had agreed to work with them not because they hoped they could kill Bob Ascher, but they wanted to make use of the chaos to slip into his manor and obtain the information they needed, and then use the Dark Mantle’s power to take him down.

“Alright, then this matter is settled. I hope you two don’t get up to some tricks, or you’ll regret it.” Johnny finally agreed with a darkened face.

Chapter 174: Cover is blown

After leaving the Dark Forest, Han Shuo and Emily split up, making his way towards Lawrence's new place of residence.

When Han Shuo saw Lawrence, the latter immediately thanked Han Shuo, "Thank you so much for last time, otherwise Lisa might have been put in danger."

"No problem, considering my relationship with Lisa, this was something I should've done. Right, how is Lisa now?" Han Shuo sat down and asked Lawrence with a smile.

"Don't worry, I've already sent her back to Ossen City. As strong as the Gryphon Legion is, they wouldn't dare to do anything in the capital."

"That's wonderful. Oh right, your junior sister Phoebe is also in Valen City. She has some dealings with the Gryphon Legion." Han Shuo started talking about Phoebe with Lawrence.

Surprise on his face, Lawrence was quite shocked and looked at Han Shuo in confusion, "What is she doing in Valen City? What's going on?"

Due to his previous understanding, Han Shuo discovered that Lawrence and Phoebe had a tight relationship. As the third prince, it'd be better if he knew everything that Phoebe had done. Therefore, after Lawrence started asking, Han Shuo sketched out what had happened.

After Han Shuo finished, Lawrence thought deeply with a furrowed brow for a bit and then looked deeply at Han Shuo. "It looks like I have you to thank for helping Phoebe in this matter. Your Dark Mantle is truly all powerful!"

Han Shuo started in fright after hearing these words. His eyes focused on Lawrence and he looked deeply at Lawrence for a bit. Han Shuo sighed softly, "When did you discover my identity?"

"When we left the slave trading house." Lawrence smiled in response and hesitated before speaking again, "More accurately speaking, I've just found out of your identity now. Ever since we left the trading house last time, I began to suspect Madame Emily's identity. I found someone to confirm it for me and then started investigating you."

It wasn't something ignoble to work for the Dark Mantle. Within the senior ranks of the Empire, the existence of the Dark Mantle wasn't a secret. Its mission and operations wouldn't harm ordinary people unless this person did something that harmed the Empire. He didn't think there was anything wrong with what the Dark Mantle was doing.

Musing silently for a moment, Han Shuo's expression returned to normal as he smiled, "That's right, I've just joined the Dark Mantle, but I've truly recognized its strength!"

"Then, you must know a great deal about me?" Lawrence suddenly asked Han Shuo with a faint smile.

Starting, Han Shuo laughed heartily, "Of course, you're Lawrence, the son of the finance minister. Everyone knows this!"

Even though Han Shuo knew full well of Lawrence's identity, he couldn't voice it, otherwise the relationship between him and Lawrence would change. At the very least, Lawrence would probe Han Shuo's thoughts or invite the latter to exert effort on Lawrence's behalf. This was a conundrum that Han Shuo currently didn't wish to face, so he felt that playing dumb was the smartest move.

Lawrence had a strange smile on his face after Han Shuo's declaration and he looked deeply at Han Shuo for a bit before responding, "Alright, let's not talk about this for now. With your visit to Valen City this time, you have surely come to understand that Bob Ascher has the desire to rebel and are here to collect evidence. I've come here for similar purposes in taking down this Gryphon Legion Chief. Can you tell me your current progress?"

Han Shuo hesitated a bit and quickly weighed the gains and losses in his mind before mentioning that he had laid hands on evidence regarding the siege weapons and had given it to his superior in the Dark Mantle to officially arrest Bob Ascher. But Han Shuo remained silent on anything regarding the Calamity Church, he didn't want Lawrence to know of what was happening in this regard.

“It looks like our goals are the same, I think we can work together. What plans do you have? How can I help?” Lawrence asked Han Shuo.

Han Shuo eyed Lawrence and asked, “Then, what can you help us with?”

Smiling mysteriously, Lawrence looked deeply at Han Shuo and said, “I have someone inside the Gryphon Legion, second to only Bob Ascher. He can directly deploy some of the Legion for us at certain times and do much for us.”

Han Shuo’s mind worked furiously, there was much to mine from these words. It looked like Lawrence was here not only to take down Bob Ascher, but likely to raise his own person as a replacement and thoroughly take control of the Gryphon Legion, paving the way for his future attempt on the throne.

“That would be for the best. Let me consolidate things a few things. We’ll make a move in the next two days and I’ll be in touch to discuss how to coordinate!” Han Shuo responded after thinking for a moment.

“No problem, I’ll wait for your good news. Heh heh, we’re friends now, and I have utmost confidence in your style. I know you’re prudent enough and trust that you won’t make any large mistakes in your plans. Let me know when you’ve settled everything and I’ll do my best to coordinate with you. It’s a win-win situation for us.” Lawrence laughed heartily and spoke forthrightly to Han Shuo.

“Alright, then I’ll be going now.” Han Shuo took his leave after Lawrence finished speaking and walked over to Elaine’s hotel, not too far off in the distance.

When Han Shuo arrived at the hotel, he discovered that Belinda’s wrecked room had been mostly repaired, and looked like it would be open for business again soon. Han Shuo hadn’t checked out of Emily’s room yet, so he returned to it after arriving in the hotel.

The chubby, middle aged lady Elaine walked out not too long afterwards and closed the door with a smile, “Thank you so much for your aid, otherwise my hotel would've been destroyed in the hands of that woman from the Calamity Church!"

"It looks like Emily's already told you everything that's happened." Han Shuo said.

Nodding, Elaine said, "Yes, Madame Emily came by once to tell me everything, and told me to keep an eye on the guests. Do you have any instructions for me?"

"Of those within the hotel, who has yet to leave? In addition, has the female mage swordsman of the mercenary band been in touch with anyone else?" Han Shuo couldn't help but ask when he thought of his agreement with Phoebe.

"There's been no changes in the guests here. The great druid and little female elf still temporarily occupy their rooms. The two of them went out earlier today and returned not too shortly after. Apart from the girl called Candice, those of the mercenary band have all gone out once, seemingly to look for new missions and haven't returned yet."

"I observed for a bit and no one suspicious seems to have walked into Candice's room, and I haven't seen her leave either. Apart from this, there has been nothing out of the ordinary within the hotel. The Gryphon Legion has sent men once to patrol and asked about the collapsed room. I covered it up." The frightening events that had just taken place in the hotel hadn't seemed to affect her as Elaine spoke calmly of what had taken place, describing everything in great detail.

"Those of the Gryphon Legion don't suspect this place, do they?" Han Shuo asked with a frown after remaining silent for a while.

"Don't worry, I don't think there's any trouble. I've been in Valen City for many years and have known long ago how to handle the Gryphon Legion." Elaine guaranteed with confidence.

Han Shuo wasn't able to say much else after her words, otherwise it would appear that he didn't trust her. He nodded, said "You've done well", and indicated for her to go about her business.

He thought for a moment after she left; he should still tell Candice that Phoebe might come looking for her, just in case she suddenly left.

Walking out of his room, Han Shuo contemplated how to broach the subject with Candice. As he walked towards her room, he suddenly heard, “Bad guy!”, and saw the little elf Angelica point and yell at him from Caspian’s room window.

He smiled wryly and made a face at Angelica, ignoring her and continuing towards Candice’s room. However, he soon heard running footsteps from Angelica’s direction. It was obviously Angelica in hot pursuit.

“Bad guy, what are you doing here?” Angelica had already rushed up and spoke with some happiness.

“Why, here to kidnap someone like you, of course!” Han Shuo winked and chuckled devilishly.

Chapter 175: Conversation between three girls

“Pssht, I don’t believe you!” Angelica wrinkled her exquisite little nose in disdain.

“It’s up to you whether you believe me or not. Alright, I still have some other things to do, so you can go back to whatever you were previously doing.” Saying these words with a smile, Han Shuo didn’t entertain Angelica any longer, and was about to continue his way to Candice’s room.

Right at this moment, a “creak” sounded from the door Angelica had ran out from, with the great druid Caspian walked out. He glanced at Han Shuo and cried out in surprise, “Why is it you? Why are you here?”

Han Shuo smiled at Caspian and nodded amicably, then bowed and said, “Hello great druid elder Caspian; Trunks and I previously met you in the Dark Forest previously.”

“Huh, you’re acquainted with grandpa?” Angelica watched Han Shuo greet Caspian and appeared to be surprised. She looked towards her grandpa Caspian, then turned back to stare at Han Shuo.

Han Shuo laughed and was about to reply, when Caspian’s eyes lit up, and inspected Han Shuo’s body. With a smile of having figured something out, Caspian said, “So it’s you, but we should have met very recently as well, haha!”

Not long ago, Han Shuo wore a black hood, but despite that, his physique and voice hadn’t been altered. In addition, when the matter ended Han Shuo even called out Caspian’s name. Just based on these three flaws, it was not at all strange for Caspian to be able to quickly recognize Han Shuo.

With regards to Caspian’s vague tone, Han Shuo didn’t try to justify or explain anything, he just gave Caspian a profound smile and said, “I’m busy right now, so I will see you later.”

“Little Angelica, you shouldn’t disturb others when they’re busy. Come back into the room with me.” Caspian nodded understandingly, then went up to grab hold of the little elf, about to carry Angelica away.

Right at this moment, Candice, who’d heard Han Shuo speaking, opened her door to look at Han Shuo, then looked at Caspian, who was chatting with Han Shuo, in astonishment. She gave an amicable nod towards the other two, then said to Han Shuo, “Are you here to look for me?”

“Sister Candice, I’m also looking for you. Let me come in as well!” Angelica on the other side sweetly called out towards Candice.

“If our cute little elf really needs me for something, then I’ll come over and look for you in awhile, older sister is busy right now.” Candice said with a smile. She opened the door, leaned back and said, “Come on in!”

“Alright, no more playing around, come back to the room to study magic!” Great druid Caspian rebuked Angelica, then dragged her back to the room.

Han Shuo entered Candice’s room, with her closing the door afterwards. She thought of something and asked Han Shuo, “The person who previously saved us was you, right?”

There was no need for Han Shuo to deny this matter. He nodded and replied, “This matter is rather complicated, has your employer Belinda paid your commission yet?”

Candice forced a smile, then shook her head and said, “She’s someone from the Calamity Church. This church has always done things in a sinister manner. I’m already very lucky that nothing happened to me, how could I possibly get any commission out of it?”

After some consideration, Han Shuo gazed at Candice and replied, “Promise me one thing, do not try to create trouble for Belinda. You guys definitely won’t gain a thing from doing that. As for the commission you’re promised, I will help you get it back.”

Once these words were spoken, Candice was evidently surprised. She looked at Han Shuo in bewilderment and said, “I heard from Caspian that you and a woman brought Belinda away. Just what is your identity? Since you've captured Belinda, why do you say this?"

"This matter is a little complicated right now, I'll explain it to you both once Phoebe arrives. However, don't think about dealing with Belinda. I understand how strong she is, and she's not at a level that your mercenary band can handle." Although Han Shuo hadn't known Candice for a long time, he knew that she wasn't someone who would give up so easily. He also understood that despite her knowing the risks involved, once she set her mind upon something, it would never sway, so he had to placate her.

"Huh, why is Phoebe coming over too?" Candice was first surprised, then staunchly replied to Han Shuo, "You've said this a little too late, I've already dispatched the others to search for Belinda's tracks. This time there was a problem with the employer, so the Mercenary Union should bear our losses, I will deal with Belinda my own way."

"Consider this as me begging you. Older sister, let Belinda go. That woman is in my hands, I need her for some matters, please give me face." For a woman like Candice, who wouldn't listen to reason, the more one tells her of the dangers, the more obstinate she would become. Out of options, Han Shuo could only use this method to placate her.

Once Han Shuo said this, Candice no longer remained so persistent. Her resolute eyes stared at Han Shuo for a while, but unwillingly nodded, and said: "Since you're begging me, then fine. I promise I won't persist on this matter, but Belinda must pay the commission she owes, otherwise I have no way of answering to the chief."

"No problem, that's no problem at all. She said she'd send the commission in the next two days after I questioned her." Seeing that Candice had loosened up, Han Shuo quickly agreed.

While Han Shuo and Candice were chatting, the sounds of two people's footsteps could be heard, Han Shuo then heard the hotel owner, Elaine's voice: "This is Miss Candice's room."

"Thank you very much." Phoebe's cold and arrogant voice sounded from the outside.

Candice was pleasantly surprised. She quickly stood up and walked to the door. When the door was opened, Phoebe, in an elegant dress and a coldly noble expression, could be seen. However, once she saw Candice, the coldness instantly receded and a brilliant smile took over, she cried out, "Candice, you're really here!"

"Not just me, there's also someone who you definitely want to see here!" Candice laughed cheerfully, then leaned back to let Phoebe walk in.

Elaine had taken this chance to skillfully shift her head to peek inside, when she realized that the one inside was actually Han Shuo, she was incredibly astonished. Phoebe had already walked in by this time, and the room's door was quickly closed by Candice.

Having experienced last night's twisting of sheets, when Phoebe saw Han Shuo, her beautiful cheeks blushed. Perhaps it was because Candice was right by her side, Phoebe's body became a bit stiff and she didn't even dare to look at Han Shuo too much. She only took a side peek at him before she started chatting with Phoebe herself, her clear eyes surreptitiously looking at Han Shuo.

When Han Shuo saw Phoebe, he also felt a little awkward because there was someone else present, but his skin had always been thick, so he wasn't really affected by this. He remained properly sitting there while drinking his tea, and looked rather at ease.

The two ladies chatted, briefly narrating what they had gone through since they had last met, and focused on Valen City. As both of them had bumped into Han Shuo, Han Shuo naturally became a topic of discussion.

"Go on, why are you here in Valen City, and why do you know where I stay? Also, Candice said that you've been together with another woman, explain yourself!" After Phoebe and Candice had chatted for a while, Phoebe finally set her sights on Han Shuo, and she inquired him.

Candice was evidently astounded as well, so she supplemented, "Belinda is from the Calamity Church, and should have no relation to you. Why did you have her captured, and what use do you have for her? Just who on earth are you?"

The two ladies were filled with doubt, and they stared at Han Shuo hard, attempting to get a reasonable answer out of him.

Han Shuo had a prepared story, but when it was time for him to explain it, he had a headache trying to go about saying it. However, such a matter was not something that he could easily trick them with, because there were indeed many complicated matters involved.

Right at this time, Han Shuo's brows creased, he heard another person coming from the outside. He lightly coughed, then made a hand gesture telling the two to keep quiet.

The footsteps got closer, and the room was lightly knocked on a few times, Emily's soft voice was heard from the outside, "I know you guys are in there, can I come in?"

Phoebe and Candice both had an expression of suspicion. They turned towards Han Shuo at the same time and asked, "Who is she?"

"She's the woman you guys have been asking about!" Han Shuo revealed a bitter smile. He could never have expected that Emily would come and stir the pot at this time as well.

If it was yesterday, when Han Shuo hadn't done something so intimate to Phoebe, Han Shuo wouldn't be afraid of the two of them meeting each other, but now, Han Shuo was really caught between a rock and a hard place. He thought at a rapid pace as to how he could handle the relationship between the two.

Chapter 176: It's enough to know that I'm in your heart!

“What are you doing here?” Han Shuo couldn't make out Emily's intentions. Although his expression was the same as usual, his heart was in a panicked mess as he smiled apologetically at Emily.

“I'm just here to discuss things with you on how we should handle the chief of the Gryphon Legion.” It was unknown whether Emily was doing this on purpose, as she didn't even glance at Han Shuo after entering, but rather gave an expectant look at Phoebe while talking to the other two.

“Eh, are you not Madame Emily? How do you know Bryan? What exactly is going on here?” Phoebe found the relationship between Emily and Han Shuo to be quite interesting, and she was much more intrigued about this than dealing with the Gryphon Legion. Since the person in question was here, she couldn't resist the urge to bring it up.

Phoebe sneakily glanced at Han Shuo after uttering these words. Her good looking face blushed all the way, and she even extended her hand towards Han Shuo's arm as a way of trying to look good in front of Emily.

If this were yesterday, Han Shuo would still be able to give Phoebe no face and explain that the relationship between the two of them was fake. However, due to last night's flirtations and her charm, he wasn't sure how to explain this now. He could only look at Emily with an awkward face, wearing a wry expression and not saying a word.

A pair of clear eyes glittering with complicated emotions, Emily watched Han Shuo carefully. However, this look only made Han Shuo feel even more guilty as he resolutely made up his mind, took in a deep breath, and said to Phoebe, “Actually, the relationship between me and Emily is...”

“We are that of a subordinate and superior in the same assassination organization. We happened to be assigned to the same target this time, so please do not think too much about it Miss Phoebe!” Just as Han Shuo was about to make a thorough explanation, Emily, who'd been staring at Han Shuo, suddenly interrupted Han Shuo's words, obscuring the original words he had been going to say.

Han Shuo was flabbergasted. He had no idea why Emily was saying all of this, but when he looked at Emily in surprise, he saw Emily give him an understanding smile. It was as if Emily had only wanted to be recognized by Han Shuo, and his actions to reveal the truth had been what she wanted, instead of competing for a title with Phoebe and gaining a momentary victory.

Since Emily had put it this way, Phoebe felt a bit awkward. It rather appeared that she had been petty. It was a good thing that Phoebe was a superwoman in charge of a guild, so she only spent a moment in awkwardness. Phoebe immediately let go of Han Shuo's arm, making her way towards Emily's side. "I apologize, sister Emily. It was just me thinking too much. When taking into account your position and identity, it's hard to imagine you looking upon this villain with any sort of favor!"

Phoebe's censure of Han Shuo as a villain met with Emily's approval. However, Emily's heart gave a slight sigh, saying that unfortunately she'd already hopped onto this villain's pirate ship and was so deeply entrenched that there was no way to get off now.

"Indeed. I would never like such an uneducated and ill mannered fellow like him. Besides, I'm already married, and so that would be even more impossible. Please don't think any wild thoughts" Emily sighed in her heart, a smile still on her face as she reassured Phoebe.

"I should have known after seeing how that jerk is so secretive. To think that he is actually part of the Dark Mantle! We should have guessed that earlier." Candice looked at Han Shuo with interest, speaking with a gentle laugh.

Contrary to Han Shuo's expectations, both Phoebe and Candice didn't seem particularly surprised after his identity had been revealed by Emily. It seemed that they had long since suspected that his actions were the result of a secret organization, and Emily's revelation only served to confirm their internal suspicions.

“I already told you didn’t I? He really is very secretive. As part of the necromancy major at the Academy, he’s always doing weird things on the side. It turns out that he has another identity within the Dark Mantle, so this completely explains all of his previous odd gestures.” Phoebe also laughed. She flung Han Shuo an eyeroll from Emily’s side, apparently faulting him for keeping everything a secret.

Han Shuo shrugged his shoulders and spoke, “Alright, now is not the time for this. We should be checking how we can help Phoebe shake off the implications of this matter and take down Gryphon Legion chief Bob Ascher. This should be the final matter in the end?”

The two girls decided to drop the topic about Han Shuo’s identity after he spoke. Since Emily did not know how much Han Shuo had told the two girls previously, he was still the one explaining matters this time and also explaining a few things about his identity to the two girls.

“My senior brother Lawrence is also in Valen City?” Once Han Shuo mentioned Lawrence’s existence, Phoebe seemed to be surprised as she exclaimed softly.

Nodding his head, Han Shuo said, “Indeed. He will help us with this time’s matter as well. He came to Valen City because of his cousin Lisa and their family matters. The downfall of her family was caused completely by the Gryphon Legion. Lawrence wants to avenge them and will be helping us wholeheartedly.”

In their previous discussion, Han Shuo understood that Lawrence had come with a primary motive not just to avenge Lisa, but to kill the chief of the Gryphon Legion and prop up his own man as well. However, Han Shuo couldn’t reveal Lawrence’s identity to the two girls and thus he could only just say that Lawrence was willing to help only for Lisa’s sake.

“With regards to the siege weapons, I’ve already surreptitiously dropped a bit of your essence blood onto one of the siege weapons. We will keep escorting the shipment until it reaches the western part of the city and before handing it over to the Gryphon Legion. I think the Gryphon Legion’s weapons warehouse is definitely there. We can look around for it there.” Phoebe spoke after Han Shuo, recounting what she had done after Han Shuo had left.

“Very good. That location is definitely where all the weapons of the Gryphon Legion are being stored. I will visit the place myself so that we will have a grasp on what direction it is in. As long as we obtain records that the Gryphon Legion has bought these siege weapons, as well as the shipment itself, we’ll be able to pin the crime of rebellion onto Bob Ascher if we report it to the leaders.” Han Shuo immediately said excitedly after hearing Phoebe’s words.

After saying this, Han Shuo and the three women discussed things a bit further, then left with Emily using carrying out the mission as an excuse.

“I feel that his relationship with Madame Emily is a bit off. The way they interact and speak with each other is a bit too intimate.” Candice immediately said with a furrowed brow after Han Shuo and Emily exited the room.

“Heh, don’t think too much about it. Madame Emily is a widow. Besides, she is a member of the Betteridge family, nothing is going to happen.” Phoebe spoke with a content smile and soothed Candice.

“Um, have you two gone from putting on an act to doing this for real? Why do you have this expression on your face otherwise?” Candice suddenly spoke with astonishment when she saw Phoebe’s face change to that of a young woman in love.

Upon hearing this, Phoebe blushed even harder, stammering in embarrassment. “Last night... last night we already...”

“My goodness, Phoebe, you are too easy! How could you end up sleeping with him so fast?” Candice exclaimed in surprise with an open mouth without even waiting for Phoebe to finish her words.

“Peh! What are you saying? We only... only confirmed our relationship last night!” Phoebe’s face was now a deep shade of red as she scolded Candice in a low voice.

“Oh really, I don’t think it’s was just confirming your relationship. Your expression is obviously trying to hide something else. Out with it now!" Candice watched Phoebe attentively, having waited for Phoebe to say those words before effectively checkmating her with a ruthless demand for an explanation.

After Han Shuo and Emily left the room, they didn't immediately go to carry out their mission. Rather, the two of them went to the hotel room that Emily stayed in.

The two of them entered the room, and Han Shuo immediately hugged Emily, tenderly asking, "Why?"

"I know you have me in your heart. That is enough for me. The age gap between us is too large, and I have the identity of a daughter-in-law to the Betteridge family as well. If you attempt to expose our relationship, this would have drastic consequences for both me and you." Emily buried her face within Han Shuo's chest, speaking in a soft voice and recounting with great sorrow.

Before Han Shuo reached the full peak of his strength, exposing their relationship would have drastic consequences. Particularly for Emily, not only could this affect her brother's career, but also stain the family's reputation. There was no other way, so Emily could only complain and stay quiet about this matter.

"Phoebe is a good girl. Though her birth is not very high, she is pretty and clean and doesn't have many strings attached. You should be together with her. Her merchant guild would benefit you so much more. I would understand!" Emily burrowed deeper, murmuring softly.

"I promised you that we won't have to sneak around for very long. Some day, when there is no one else left in the empire who can dictate what I can or cannot do, I will give you what you deserve!" Han Shuo had a firm expression as he declared this in a low voice, fiercely kissing Emily's body and carrying her towards the bedroom. Emily responded to him with a degree of warmth she never had before, perhaps wishing to extinguish the bitterness that she had been feeling with happiness.

Chapter 177: Devising strategies

After a tumble in the sheets with Emily, Han Shuo left alone, heading for the Gryphon Legion's warehouse on the western side of the city. Thanks to the Dark Mantle's intelligence network, Han Shuo had a pretty good idea as to where the exact location of the warehouse was.

Under the cover of night, Han Shuo left no traces behind as he moved. He made use of the "Art of the Demonic Ninth Heaven" to sneak into the warehouse from above, hiding himself in an isolated corner and silently circulated the magical yuan to compel the demon infant to sense where the drop of essence blood was located.

When Han Shuo did so, he felt the demon infant jump as it sensed the drop of essence blood's exact position. He evaded the thick infestation of Gryphon Legion patrols and stopped not too far from a low house. He made use of his sharp vision to see that apart from being under heavy guard, it was completely sealed with no windows.

After observing for a while, Han Shuo silently sensed and clearly felt that the drop of essence blood was beneath the house. This meant that there was definitely a secret room used to store things underneath this house.

It was a pity that the earth elite zombie had yet to be fully formed. Otherwise, with its power of earth, the earth elite zombie could tunnel into the ground and scout ahead. Without the earth elite zombie, Han Shuo could only take out all the guards at the front door if he wanted to enter and look inside.

Although the guards weren't that weak, Han Shuo was still confident that he could take care of them with no one being the wiser. However, he'd alarm his enemies in this way and the siege weapons may get moved again. Therefore, he didn't take any action after thinking for a while and returned back the way he'd come.

Within the Dark Mantle stronghold, Emily and Han Shuo met up to weigh all the powers within Valen City as well as the Calamity Church and Lawrence. They then carefully estimated Bob Ascher's strength, and the two of them began to brainstorm strategies to take care of Bob Ascher with furrowed brows.

Through the Dark Mantle's intelligence, Han Shuo learned that there was a secret chamber hidden within Bob Ascher's manor. The two of them discussed for a bit and became generally certain that Bob Ascher's siege weapons were likely within the secret chamber. There might even be other evidence.

After the two had discussed, they decided to sneak into the Ascher manor when the guard was lax during Clark's funeral tomorrow night. They were going to make use of Lawrence's key man to make the guard even more loose that night and divert some of the men away from Bob Ascher's side. The Calamity Church would also attempt to assassinate Bob Ascher, whereas Han Shuo and Emily would make use of the opportunity to sneak into the secret room and see if there was any useful intelligence.

When the operation had been more or less settled, Han Shuo and Emily thought carefully about what problems might crop up and brainstormed corresponding strategies again and again.

Han Shuo only started moving when the two of them felt that it was more or less settled. He went off to visit Belinda and Lawrence, thoroughly discussing the operation with them.

This matter had to do with Phoebe as well, but she didn't have to help him with this. However, once Emily learned that Phoebe was a swordmaster, she went ahead and counted Phoebe as part of their team. Her excuse was that Phoebe was now involved anyways, so it was the best way to resolve this matter.

As Han Shuo went to find Belinda to discuss things, Emily also sought Phoebe and Candice's assistance. No one was sure what she said, but Phoebe and Candice both agreed readily to join this mission.

When Han Shuo returned to Elaine's hotel from Lawrence's place, he was planning on going to find Phoebe when he ran into the druid Caspian along the way. Han Shuo didn't think much of it and just nodded at Caspian, planning on passing him by.

“A moment of your time please.” Caspian suddenly said at this time.

Han Shuo was taken aback and turned to look at Caspian with confusion. He smiled, “Does the elder need me for something?”

Nodding with a smile, Caspian said, “If you don’t mind, can you come to my room? I have a favor to ask.”

It had been thanks to Caspian that everyone had been saved last time, otherwise Han Shuo would’ve been hard pressed to rescue everyone with his own strength. Things wouldn’t have been that easy, not to mention capturing Belinda in the end.

He nodded straightforwardly and smiled, “Of course.”

Han Shuo walked with Caspian as they arrived at his room. There was nothing out of the ordinary in his room, but Han Shuo could feel the extraordinary life exuded from the plants within the room as he walked in.

“Eh? The big bad guy, what are you doing here?” The little elf Angelica seemed to be meditating on the bed and was quite surprised to open her eyes and see Han Shuo walking through.

“Don’t be so rude Angelica. You need to understand to respect others, or no one will respect you.” Caspian glared severely at Angelica and admonished.

“Understood, grandpa!” Angelica stuck her tongue out after these words and spoke a bit fearfully as she made a face.

Han Shuo randomly picked a seat within the living room according to Caspian’s instructions. Angelica didn’t continue her meditations at this time and jumped off the bed, walking to the living room, staring at Han Shuo with eyes bright with interest.

“Elder, do you have any instructions?” Han Shuo looked at Caspian with a faint smile after he sat down.

“You’re too polite. It’s not instructions, but rather a favor I’d like to ask. I wonder if it’ll be too much of a bother.” Caspian looked at Han Shuo with a benevolent smile.

Han Shuo was planning on commencing the operation tomorrow night with Emily, so if Caspian wanted anything that would affect his plans later, there was no way he could possibly agree. Therefore, Han Shuo spoke honestly, "Please go ahead and speak first. I will certainly help you if I can, but I also have some matters to attend to. Please understand if I don't have the time to this time."

Caspian nodded with an understanding smile and mused silently for a moment, pointing at Angelica, "I need to run an errand and will be back tomorrow at the latest. However, I can't bring Angelica with me. I hope you can take care of Angelica during this time and promise that she won't be in harm's way."

Han Shuo wouldn't undertake his mission until tomorrow night, and he had made all his preparations already. He actually didn't have much to do between today and tomorrow. Even if something urgent came up, Emily, Phoebe, and the others could handle things. Thus, Han Shuo only thought briefly after Caspian spoke and agreed readily, saying, "No problem, I don't have anything pressing during this time. Valen City is quite chaotic, so be careful when you venture out."

With Caspian's strength and his need to leave the hotel immediately without bringing Angelica, it must be an exceedingly dangerous matter. He must have been afraid that he would endanger Angelica's life, and that's why he didn't take Angelica with him. This was why Han Shuo had spoken up in reminder.

"Grandpa, you must be going to fight that enemy. Take me with you! I've practiced magic for a very long time and can help you!" Angelica obviously knew some of Caspian's matters as her little face changed immediately when she heard these words. She stretched her hands out to wrap them around Caspian's arm and started pleading anxiously.

"No, you can't go. A duel is between two people. I would be breaking the rules if I brought you." Caspian truly doted on Angelica and would patiently not give way on this matter. He resolutely turned her down.

In actuality, Han Shuo could understand why Caspian didn't want to take Angelica with him from his tone and words. He didn't want Angelica to take the risk with him, and so breaking the rules was just an excuse he was using to distract Angelica.

"But, the enemy doesn't necessarily follow the rules!" Angelica cried out anxiously and then looked at Han Shuo. "Although this person is bad, he's strong. Why doesn't he help you? I can protect myself."

"No matter what the other does, grandpa will not break the rules. Do you not listen to grandpa's words anymore?" The druid Caspian frowned ferociously as he stared at Angelica.

Angelica and Caspian stared stubbornly at each other for a while before the former backed down. Her face scrunched up with worry, she said, "Then, you must be careful!"

"I will." Casian agreed and then turned to Han Shuo, "Then I leave her in your hands."

Caspian nodded gratefully towards Han Shuo after these words and walked towards the door, leaving through it.

Chapter 178: I'm happy to be captured by him, what can you do about it?

"Big bad guy, will my grandpa be alright?" The little elf Angelica looked at Han Shuo with great worry when the Caspian left.

Caspian obviously possessed no allies in Valen City, otherwise he wouldn't have given Angelica over to the care of a relative stranger. If his enemies were in Valen City and decided not to follow the rules and fight him, then the danger to him would be greater. However, in order to relieve Angelica's worries, Han Shuo could only smile and say, "Relax, your grandpa's strength is great, so there definitely won't be any dangers."

Angelina, who'd originally been carefree and without worry, suddenly became worry stricken because of her grandpa's matters. The eyebrows on her charming face were knit together as she suddenly became taciturn.

Tomorrow night, Han Shuo would have to face the Gryphon Legion with the others, but for Belinda from the Calamity Church and Lawrence, today was a special day, so they had to use the resources at hand to prepare in advance.

After staying here for a short while, Han Shuo decided that just waiting in Angelica's room wasn't the thing to do, so after thinking for a bit, he turned to the sulky little elf and said: "Let's go find big sister Candice and play."

"I don't want to go anywhere! I want to wait here for my grandpa!" Unexpectedly, Angelica, who always wanted to play, did not acknowledge Han Shuo and even firmly refused his suggestion.

Momentarily stunned, Han Shuo stared blankly before opening his mouth, "You waiting here is not a good option either. I think your grandpa will be fine, so why don't you talk to big sister Candice? Maybe you will feel less worried?"

"I know that you want to find sister Candice yourself, you big evil person, so if you want to go then go by yourself! I'm not going!" Angelica resentfully glared at Han Shuo, snorted, and then proceeded to ignore him.

Han Shuo did not know whether to laugh or cry at her words, but he'd already given Caspian his promise, and Valen City was indeed not safe at this time, so he couldn't possibly leave her alone. Otherwise, if Caspian's enemy took this opportunity to seize Angelica and used her to threaten Caspian?

Looking at Angelica's stubborn expression, Han Shuo muttered to himself before fiercely glaring at her and said: "Who cares if you are willing to or not? I already promised your grandpa, so I won't let you leave my side."

After speaking these words, he didn't wait for Angelica's reply before his body flashed like lightning, arriving next to Angelica. His left hand extended and hooked Angelica's body before lifting her up into the air with hands that were like steel claws.

"Let go! You big scoundrel, you big pervert. Hurry up and let me go!" When Angelica reacted, she found that she was unable to move her body even a little bit. Her two little feet kicked in the air while her mouth spewed out curses.

Han Shuo paid no attention towards Angelica's shouting. Han Shuo didn't care at all as he kept his hand hooked around her body while he pushed open the door and made his way towards Candice's room.

Once he was outside the door, Han Shuo discovered that Angelica was still screaming. In order to prevent her from attracting too much attention, he reached out with his right hand and covered her small mouth. Angelica's loud screaming was suddenly diminished to low grunting, and she looked as if she was being coerced by Han Shuo.

"Put her down!" Just when Han Shuo was close to Candice's room, several members of the Battlefire mercenary band suddenly stepped out from two doors down as they stared at Han Shuo. One of whom had a fierce body shook a head full of hair like it was like iron needles, and shouted with a sword strapped to his back.

"Eh, isn't he the man who was talking to the vice chief outside the city?"

One of the journeyman mages said in shock as he recognized Han Shuo with a glance.

“I don’t care what his relationship to the vice chief is. This kind of public coercion of a little girl infuriates me. I cannot possibly stand by and watch with wide eyes as he takes this poor little elf away.” The fierce-looking senior swordsman spoke with extreme righteousness. His bronze eyes stared at Han Shuo while he slowly reached behind him to draw his longsword to point it at Han Shuo.

Not knowing what was going on, a pair of eyes concentrated on Han Shuo’s body, and Candice asked with astonishment, “What happened Bryan? Why are you grabbing ahold of little Angelica?”

“It’s nothing, something happened to her grandpa, so he asked me to protect her. I am keeping her by my side so I can ensure her safety.” Han Shuo shrugged his shoulder and replied easily.

“Davis, this is just a misunderstanding, there is no need to be so nervous!” Candice gently smiled and said towards the fierce senior swordsman.

“His words are useless. Only that beautiful little elf’s words can prove his innocence.” For some reason, Davis was still quite obstinate upon hearing Candice’s words, as he stared straight at the little elf Angelica, who had her mouth covered by Han Shuo’s hand.

With those words, Han Shuo immediately loosened his hand from Angelica’s mouth and said, “Okay, stop playing around now and tell him that I am only protecting you.”

When Han Shuo loosened his hand, Angelica loudly cursed and continued once again to make a ruckus before staring angrily at Han Shuo and saying fiercely: “You big evil person, you’re kidnapping me! You’re kidnapping me!”

As soon as Angelica’s words left her mouth, Davis, standing off to the side, immediately flew into a rage. He was pointed his longsword at Han Shuo, and proclaimed righteously, “Let her go immediately, otherwise you will definitely regret it!”

“Enough, Davis can you really not see that the little girl is just messing around? If you really have nothing to do, then it would be better for you to return back to your room and recover your strength, and not to poke your nose into other people’s business!” Candice said with an imposing aura, her eyes bright and expression cold as she glowered at Davis.

Maybe he was used to Candice’s berating, as Davis was timid at first, but regained some courage after he looked at Angelica. He straightened up, puffed out his chest and said, “Master Candice, if your suggestion is wrong then I will not listen to you.”

By now, it was Han Shuo’s turn to be amused as he could tell from Davis’ gaze when he looked at Angelica that there was a different kind of fire within them. Han Shuo’s heart moved as he already had a grasp of the situation.

With a weird chuckle, Han Shuo remarked, “So this is the case hmm? It seem like this valiant mercenary wants to appear to be a hero in front of a little beauty, or maybe there’s yet another reason for him to be acting like this.”

With these words, Candice and Phoebe, along with the other mercenaries off on the side, all of them turned to look oddly at Davis. Even the little elf Angelica measured up Davis with an astonished look. At this time, Davis’s face turned red as he awkwardly tried to explain, “No, no. It’s not like that!”

Han Shuo loosened his grip on Angelica and put her down, as he spread out his hands and said, “Alright, I won’t hold onto you any longer since this hero wants to save the beauty so badly. Angelica, you are now saved and the hero can take you away. I won’t care about you.”

After speaking, Han Shuo calmly walked towards Candice and Phoebe, not sparing a single glance at Angelica, as if he’d completely forgotten about the promise he made to her grandpa.

“You, you, you are safe now!” Davis said as he walked towards Angelica. The righteous aura he’d boasted before was gone as he stammered.

“What does this have to do with you, you stupid dumb dumb! I’m happy to be held by him, big deal!” When Angelica saw that Han Shuo didn’t even acknowledge her, her heart suddenly shook. When she saw the approaching Davis lick his lips, she became even angrier and replied angrily.

Davis’ expression suddenly became peculiar, as if someone had just stepped on him with a dirty shoe. His face was unspeakably embarrassed and bitter.

“Big bad guy, you promised my grandfather that you would take care of me, so you’re not allowed to leave!” The little elf Angelica hollered at Davis before picking up her small flower skirt and quickly charging toward Han Shuo. She reproached loudly while running, fearful that Han Shuo would ignore her while she didn’t even deign to give Davis a glance.

Davis stood to the side with a bitter face as Candice glared at him, saying without any good feelings: “Scram back to your room. Stop making a fool out of yourself. If you want to be a hero who swoops in to save the beauty, then first look carefully whether or not the beauty is willing to let the fiend kidnap her. You deserved to make a fool out of yourself by acting so ignorantly!”

With Candice’s words, the heart-broken and inconsolable Davis let out a long sigh and gloomily returned to his room. This kind of situation was indeed complicated to his brain and he didn’t quite understand it even until now. How come Angelica, who’d had on a face full of mistreatment and injustice, start to implore Han Shuo when he’d let go of her hand and turned to leave?

Chapter 179: Officially starting the mission

In the end, Angelica went into Candice's room with Han Shuo. They chatted with Phoebe as well and learned that Emily had gone out on business.

With Emily and Phoebe here, Han Shuo didn't need to worry about Angelica's safety as much, and left with the excuse that he had something to do. He returned to his own room to quietly practice another high level necromancy magic – summoning hate warriors.

Clarendon's years of knowledge, combined with Han Shuo's own spirited fortitude, meant that he struggled for a few hours' worth of time before he became well versed in the art of summoning hate warriors. Eventually, he managed to summon before him from the other dimension, a hate warrior holding a metal club.

This summoning consumed most of Han Shuo's mental energy. As he meditated, he felt his mental strength quickly recovering after using the transportation matrix to return to the cemetery of death.

"Evil master, are you finally going to take me away now that you've come?" As soon as Han Shuo appeared, dark dragon Gilbert began to make a ruckus in a loud voice.

"That's right, this time I'm really going to take you away from here," Han Shuo smiled as he spoke, seeing Gilbert looking especially crestfallen.

As soon as he heard that he could finally leave the cemetery of death, Gilbert's dejection was replaced by ecstasy in a flash, as he started a continuous stream of fawning compliments.

"Enough, you should get ready. We're going to leave soon!" Han Shuo said impatiently as he quickly walked to the place where he was refining the earth elite zombies. He discovered that the qi of earth streaming towards the center seemed to flow slower and slower from when he had first started. It seemed that the elite earth zombie had absorbed nearly all of the earth qi from the cemetery of death.

The yin demon cave was on the other side and its resentful spirits were still struggling over who would swallow the three drops of essence blood that Han Shuo had dropped in before. Because his actual strength was comparable to the true demon realm, Han Shuo's magical yuan had changed fundamentally. Not to mention the fact that it had three drops of Han Shuo's essence blood to sustain it, the yin demon cave could actually operate for quite a long time. It wasn't like the time when he was only refining the original demons and had to infuse it with magical yuan everyday.

Seeing that everything in the cemetery of death looked normal, Han Shuo didn't linger, but instead attended to the entreaties of the dragon Gilbert and brought him out of the cemetery of death.

After returning to Elaine's hotel, Han Shuo told Gilbert to stay in his room while he practiced magic the entire night to ensure his best performance.

The afternoon of the second day, Han Shuo stayed in his room. He also forbid Gilbert to take a single step outside while he spent the entire day mastering the adept level necromancy magic corpse explosion.

Towards evening time, Gilbert finally couldn't take it any longer. He made an uproar towards Han Shuo from inside the room. "What kind of lame place is this? After we left the other place, we've stayed here the entire time! I'm about to get ill from being so stifled."

The meditating Han Shuo suddenly exhaled, opening his thoughtful eyes to look at Gilbert. "All right. We'll leave this place immediately. When we do, you have to keep your mouth shut the entire way and do as I say. If you dare to try anything without my permission then I'll leave you in the cemetery of death forever."

"What is it? What kind of things are we doing at night? Haha, esteemed master, don't worry, I'll definitely pull my own weight!" Gilbert immediately became incredibly excited when he heard Han Shuo's words.

Footsteps sounded from outside at this moment as Emily's voice rang out, “Are you inside?”

Han Shuo immediately stood up when he heard it was Emily and opened the door to ask, “How are things? Did you manage to take care of everything?”

The open door revealed Emily’s voluptuous body, making Gilbert’s eyes widen in appreciation. He suddenly whistled and said excitedly, “A beauty, it’s a great beauty!”

“Shut up!” Han Shuo turned back to glare ferociously at Gilbert. Gilbert didn’t dare say anything after this, but he kept looking at Emily up and down and looked at Han Shuo with a face full of envy.

“Who is he?” Emily wasn’t aware of Gilbert’s existence and looked at Han Shuo in surprise when she suddenly saw him appear.

“One of us. There won’t be any problem with him at all. He’ll take action with us and he’ll be able to help us quite a bit.” Han Shuo explained.

Although Gilbert was still a young dark dragon, he possessed great destructive abilities when he transformed into his dragon form. If a dark dragon added to the chaos in a critical moment, this would greatly increase the success of Han Shuo and the others missions.

Emily had never doubted anything Han Shuo said, so Gilbert’s appearance only made her get to know him that much better. She didn’t question Han Shuo’s methods.

“The great druid Caspian has yet to return and even Angelica is quite worried. Forget the Battlefire mercenary band this time. Candice and the others don’t know our identity and planned a mission. I just saw that Candice asked the other members of her band to temporarily take care of Angelica, and that senior swordsman Davis was quite happy about that. You don’t need to worry about Angelica’s safety for the time being.” It looked like Emily had learnt of the conflict between the two from Phoebe, which was why she was saying this to Han Shuo now.

“Alright, since this is the case, let’s leave it to them.” Han Shuo thought for a bit and opened his mouth to say.

Since Caspian had yet to return, that meant something must have happened. However, Han Shuo wasn't great friends with Caspian, so he wouldn't alter his long laid out plans for Caspian.

The middle aged Bob Ascher had lost two of his sons in the span of a few months. This matter had been a matter of great shock to him. As the true master of Valen City, Clark's funeral had to be conducted with all due pomp and ceremony.

All sorts of luxurious carriages were parked in front of the Ascher manor, with no one of any importance in Valen City daring to miss such an important occasion. No matter how busy things were at home, they would always manage to squeeze out the time to come comfort old Ascher's injured soul.

"So we're here to participate in a funeral!" Gilbert stood in a quiet corner next to Han Shuo and Emily as he spoke with disinterest.

"No, we're here to make a mess." Han Shuo chuckled lowly and said, "If the mission is successful, I'll award you, so work hard."

When he heard that they were here to cause a mess and that there might be rewards later that night, Gilbert's interest was hugely sparked once again as he laughed heartily. He was about to walk inside when Han Shuo grabbed him back with a hand again.

"We can't go in through the front door since we're here to make a mess, stupid!" Han Shuo hectored Gilbert with ill temper and nodded towards Emily. The three of them circled around the manor and arrived at a high wall where no one else was present.

"Ascher's even set up some magical protection at some key parts of his manor, but there shouldn't be a problem if we enter through here. Be careful though, I'll go up first to take a look." Emily spoke softly and used a levitation spell to slowly rise into the air, taking a look around when she got to the top before making a gesture towards Han Shuo.

"Can you still fly?" Han Shuo looked at Gilbert by his side as he prepared to make a move.

Shaking his head, Gilbert answered honestly, “Only if I transform back to my original form. Otherwise I won’t be able to fly.”

“Being a burden from the very beginning!” Han Shuo looked disdainfully at Gilbert and grabbed his nape, using the “Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens” to fly into the air and land beside Emily, the three of them descending together.

Han Shuo and Gilbert followed behind Emily after descending as they passed through two corridors and an artificial mountain, appearing in the crowded manor with bland expressions.

The three of them had changed clothes earlier, and Emily had applied some magical solution to her face, completely altering her appearance. Even Han Shuo barely recognized her. The three of them was dressed like the rest of the guests at the manor, so no one gave them any trouble when they appeared within the crowd.

“Wow, so many women! So many beautiful women!” Gilbert was a bit excited as his eyes spun lustfully in all directions, speaking to Han Shuo lowly.”

“Mind your image Gilbert!” Han Shuo cursed lowly as his eyes also darted to and fro. He finally located Belinda and Johnny from the Calamity Church, noting that they had also arrived.

In a distance not too far away, Lawrence had also used a magical solution to alter his appearance and waved at Han Shuo when he saw their group arrive.

Emily had arranged for Phoebe and Candice to be elsewhere. They would set things on fire as soon as the Calamity Church made their move, utterly throwing the manor into chaos.

Add to that a schedule adjustment from Lawrence’s man, the defensive capabilities of the manor at that time would certainly be at its weakest. Han Shuo and Emily would then take advantage of the confusion to sneak into the Ascher secret room.

Chapter 180: Complete chaos

Everything was proceeding according to plan. Lawrence had first made arrangements to alter the protective detail from the Gryphon Legion. Emily then used the power of the Dark Mantle to restrain three out of five great earth riders by Bob Ascher's side.

Belinda and Johnny from the Calamity Church walked in and out of the crowd for a bit before disappearing without a trace. Belinda nodded at Han Shuo and Emily from afar, indicating that she had made her preparations.

"Let's go. Be careful and let's head for the secret room." Seeing that they had done all that needed to be done, Han Shuo didn't continue to linger, but avoided the guests and made his way to Bob Ascher's bedroom.

There would've been a heavy guard along the way, but Lawrence's man had made arrangements beforehand, so the three of them had an easy stroll down.

When the three of them paused behind an artificial mountain and peered at Bob Ascher's room, they discovered many Gryphon Legion soldiers standing in front of the door.

Each had solemn expressions, and the faint scent of those who had weathered multiple battlefields emanated from their tall, well built bodies. It was easy to tell from a glance that they wouldn't be easy to handle.

"Lawrence said that the soldiers around Bob Ascher were all his most trusted men and have overcome many battles and skirmishes with him. All of them are unafraid of death and won't listen to anyone else's commands apart from Bob Ascher himself. Therefore, Lawrence's man had no way to do anything about them either." Han Shuo glanced at those men and explained lowly to Emily.

Emily nodded, "Mm, the Dark Mantle knows of this as well. We must personally take out this group of people ourselves, or we'll be unable to enter at all."

Soldiers were standing on top of the roof and at every window. Unless they could fly through the dirt, even with Han Shuo and Emily's extreme abilities, they would find it impossible to avoid these people's eyes.

"Alright, we'll wait for a bit. The entire manor will be engulfed in chaos as soon as the Calamity Church makes their move, regardless of their success." Han Shuo thought for a moment and then responded to Emily.

"Honored master, what should I do in a moment?" Gilbert's face was filled with excitement as he looked towards Han Shuo.

"Master?" Emily asked in astonishment and looked at Han Shuo with considerable confusion. She then looked at Gilbert, "How can he be your master? Did he buy you as a slave?"

Looking at Emily with immense disdain, Gilbert said proudly, "A brainless bimbo alright. As a legendary dark dragon of the mighty Dark Dragon City, I, Gilbert, would never become a slave!"

"Dark... Dark Dragon City? You say you're from the Dark Dragon City beneath the ground?" Emily was greatly taken aback.

"Haha, you've heard of our great name as well?" Gilbert was quite happy to see that Emily seemed to know of the Dark Dragon City. He puffed his chest out and said solemnly, "Indeed, I am the future legend of the Dark Dragon City."

"Mm, he's not my slave, but more like my magical pet." Han Shuo smiled faintly at the flabbergasted Emily.

Gilbert immediately deflated when those words were said. As a dark dragon, it wasn't an honorable thing to be someone's pet. But that was the truth, and there wasn't much he could refute. He could only hang his head and sigh, "So darned unlucky that I was besieged by so many people the first time I left home. How would I have been afraid of you otherwise?!"

Emily had been a bit disbelieving, and the shock on her face only deepened when she heard Han Shuo and Gilbert speak thus. Her bright eyes fixed upon Han Shuo as she asked shakily, "He, he really is a dark dragon?"

Nodding, Han Shuo confirmed very firmly for her, "Absolutely. This stupid dragon was being attacked on all sides from a dark elf clan, and they paid a heavy price to wound him deeply. I was going to take advantage of it and harvest his core or something, but he was the one without the slightest bit of dark dragon dignity and shamelessly wanted to sign a master and servant contract with me, becoming my magical pet!”

“Hehe, dark dragons are the most shameless and evil of all dragons, what kind of dignity do they have?” Emily was delighted by Han Shuo’s explanation and looked at the dejected Gilbert, chuckling with sarcasm.

“Beautiful women can sometimes be so hateful!” Gilbert was thoroughly incensed as he glared at Emily and spoke with gritted teeth.

A shrill scream sounded out at this moment as all sorts of panicked footsteps suddenly exploded into hearing. The sounds of horses screaming were mixed in, as well as all sorts of weapons clanging against each other.

“The Calamity Church has made their move, but we still don’t know anything as of now. Why does the Calamity Church want Bob Ascher dead? Just what kind of grudge exists between them?” Joy blossomed over Emily’s face as she said excitedly.

Han Shuo chuckled coldly with a sinister face, “According to my thinking, it doesn’t matter whether or not the Calamity Church succeeds this time. Johnny and Belinda will be grievously hurt, if not dead. We’ll capture them as well and slowly interrogate them.”

“Master, you’re too ruthless and despicable!” Gilbert couldn’t help but cry out with excitement when he saw that Han Shuo was ready to move against his allies

“Gilbert, are you mocking me?” Han Shuo’s brow creased as he flicked a frosty glance at Gilbert.

Shaking his head ferociously, Gilbert hastened to protest, “No, no! I’m complimenting you! Your methods are the same as the teachings of my wise and courageous grandpa, thoroughly embodied with the essence of the superior heritage of us dark dragons!”

Emily had just said that the dark dragons were evil and despicable dragons, but Han Shuo finally understood her words after he'd heard Gilbert's praise. It sounded like he's both praised and cursed Han Shuo.

Several places within the manor suddenly lit up in flame before Han Shuo had a chance to lecture Gilbert. The manor had already been engulfed in chaos beforehand, and now it was suffused with all sorts of panicked screams. The guards from the Gryphon Legion appeared as well, frantically trying to deal with the situation.

"Phoebe and Candice have also made their move, it's our turn now." Han Shuo stopped bickering with Gilbert and set his sights on Bob Ascher's room with a serious expression.

Emily's charming face was equally grave as she took out a magic staff and lowly sang out a dark magic spell. Several shadows that looked like demons started soundlessly approaching the guards.

The Demonslayer Edge danced through the air according to Han Shuo's thoughts, swiftly approaching a man at the door. Just as it reached the point where the person might discover the weapon, Han Shuo's magical yuan suddenly exploded and greatly increased the Demonslayer Edge's speed. A howling sound rose as it punched through the neck of the now alarmed guard.

"Assassins!" Someone screamed shrilly. The eight Gryphon Legion guards hastily raised the longswords and spears in their hands, planning on handling the danger that would appear at any time.

Emily's dark magic spell landed into the two guards it first encountered, causing them to bleed continuously and then fall down bonelessly after a while. The five guards behind them released their fighting auras in time, destroying the effects of this spell and weren't injured.

Because of Lawrence's man, the immediate surroundings had been cleared. No matter how the guards called out, no one answered them. Han Shuo and the three others didn't continue hiding after this blow and directly rushed out from the darkness.

Contrary to Emily's expectations, Gilbert's speed was the fastest. Even though he was in human form, the ferociousness of a dark dragon wasn't something that an ordinary person could imagine. Gilbert rushed out excitedly and acted like a bulldozer, grabbing the spear of the first guard Han Shuo had killed and charging the other people.

Although his target was a journeyman swordsman and was releasing an uncommon fighting aura. Gilbert stabbed through him with a single thrust, sending him flying to one side, dead before he hit the floor. When his fighting aura crashed onto Gilbert, Gilbert only grunted softly and wasn't injured at all.

Emily was sorely surprised by this blow, and finally truly accepted Gilbert's identity as a dark dragon. Han Shuo knew of this already and so wasn't surprised, walking over leisurely and directing the Demonslayer Edge to dance wildly, using a bewildering pattern to kill another two Gryphon Legion soldiers.

These soldiers were mostly journeyman or senior swordsmen and knights, and were actually not terrible. Their job was to thoroughly defend this place, and to summon greater experts when enemies came knocking.

If it hadn't been for Lawrence's man within the Gryphon Legion, the first cry of "assassin!" would've been enough to summon vast troops of the Gryphon Legion. If this had been the case, Han Shuo and the others would only be able to flee for their lives.

As Emily attacked once again with dark magic, the remaining two guards finally fell down. Seeing that the obstacles had been cleared, Han Shuo spoke to Gilbert, "Stay here on guard, notify us if anything happens."

Han Shuo flung a look at Emily after speaking and the two of them carefully pushed open the door, walking into Bob Ascher's room.

Bob Ascher's room was exceedingly opulent and luxurious. Expensive furniture dotted the room, the carpet was made from the fur of a rare magical creature, and the paintings on the walls were all worth cities.

"This Bob Ascher knows how to enjoy life alright. The decorations of this house are already enough to prove that his sources of income aren't clean." Han Shuo immediately said after walking in and looking around at the surroundings.

“Of course, otherwise with his identity as the chief of the Gryphon Legion, he never would’ve been able to afford such a place.” Emily nodded and headed towards the inner chamber as she responded.

There was a secret doorway to another room within his bedroom. This was a bit of intelligence that the Dark Mantle had spent a lot of effort before finally obtaining. Han Shuo and Emily immediately made for the inner chamber as soon as they entered the bedroom.

Emily immediately lifted the covers on the bed in the room and ran her hand along the edge for a bit, looking for something when the boards of the bed suddenly split open to reveal a cave with stairs.

“Within the Lancelot Empire, the Dark Mantle can manage if we absolutely must learn of some intelligence. Although the secret chamber is hidden quite well, we still learned of this place’s existence and how to enter because Bob Ascher would bring his mistress in to exult in his glory.” Emily smiled at Han Shuo in explanation before they went down.

Nodding, Han Shuo expressed his understanding. “Indeed, someone like Bob Ascher would find it hard to control his desire to show off. If someone wants to keep a secret hidden, they’ll have to pass through their own hurdle first.”

“Come, let’s go and see what lies in Bob Ascher’s room?” Emily said.

Han Shuo followed behind her and suddenly heard soft, breathing sounds from someone before they’d reached the bottom.

“Someone’s there, be careful!” Han Shuo’s heart tightened as he grasped Emily, proceeding forward with even more caution.

When the two got to the bottom, Han Shuo looked towards the source of the breathing and suddenly discovered that Caspian was being held tightly within a cage enclosed by a magical boundary. Caspian was likewise looking at the two with a face full of surprise.

Chapter 181: Found it

Metal chains entangled all four of the great druid Caspian's limbs in a cube-shaped cage, around which lightning was crackling and sparking off of. An icy mist was hovering about the chains, freezing the man stiff to the bone and making even his breathing obviously labored.

When Han Shuo and Emily found Caspian in this room, they rushed towards the druid, shocked. Emily only took one glance before diagnosing quietly. "There are both electric and water element magical boundaries at work here. In addition to this, the cage is restricting his power. I need some time to disassemble the spells."

Glancing quickly at the ice beginning to form on tips of the druid's hair, Han Shuo said, "I'm confident that my weapon is sharp enough to penetrate the cage directly."

Emily reached out a hand to stop Han Shuo, shaking her head sternly and explaining, "This is a magic boundary made of both electric and water elements that has been set up quite intricately. If you don't know the proper technique and attempt to break through the cage with brute force alone, you might kill him through electrocution or hypothermia."

Han Shuo was far from being Emily's equal in the knowledge of magic in general since necromancy magic differed from the other paths of magic. After hearing her explanation, he didn't continue pressing his own thoughts, "All right. You work on releasing him from the boundary, and I'll look for evidence against Bob Ascher."

With that said, he left Emily and began to investigate their surroundings. Crowded with numerous shelves of various sizes holding many strange, fascinating items, the room did not seem very spacious.

There were many glistening badges marked with certain symbols describing its meaning on one of the shelves. These were the awards which Bob Ascher had received through his many years of service, which helped him rise to the position of chief of the Gryphon Legion, becoming the items that he could flaunt for the rest of his life.

There was another shelf that housed a few cavalry helmets and weapons. Some were shiny, while others were patently damaged. There was a small slip of paper under every piece that detailed which battle the helmet or weapon had been used in.

The rest of the shelves of assorted sizes held either old books or obviously exorbitant swords and spears, not the pearls, jewels, and jade that Han Shuo expected.

Emily had been working on dismantling the druid's confinement in the distance when she happened to see Han Shuo bored by the items on the shelves, his mind even wandering a little. She couldn't help but chide, "A man such as Bob Ascher wouldn't place run-of-the-mill jewels in his secret chamber, so rid yourself of thieving thoughts. Wealth hasn't been his goal for a long time. The things here represent his glory and memories, nothing that gold can compare to."

With that reminder, Han Shuo sighed dejectedly. "Here I thought I would find a ton of gold and wealth in his secret chamber. I was even planning to reward Gilbert after this mission, but I suppose I was ignorant and ill informed."

"Go look through the other things." Emily rolled her eyes and urged Han Shuo. "We need enough evidence to pin him for good!"

Taking a deep breath to help himself focus, Han Shuo quickly walked around the shelves searching for any hidden items, but after going around once and looking through every single shelf, he still didn't find anything of value.

"Seems like we're out of luck!" Han Shuo walked back to Emily with his palms open and said with some resignation.

"Just a second." Emily was at a crucial part of her work. A shadowy cloud of magic pulsed between her hands, and she pressed it firmly against the cage.

Snap! Crackle! The cage began to sizzle and fizz once Emily's magic cloud came into contact with it and vanished in an instant. Caspian's trembling eased, as well.

“All right. Now that the magic boundary has been broken, you can rescue him with your weapon.” Emily breathed out a light sigh and turned around with a graceful smile before sashaying towards the shelves. “Leave finding evidence against Bob Ascher to me. My experience in the Dark Mantle has made me an expert at this kind of work.”

“Thank you!” The druid shakingly expressed his gratitude towards Han Shuo as he slowly regained his body heat after the magic boundary was dissolved.

“Heh heh, you’re just lucky that we came across you!” Chuckling, Han Shuo took Demonslayer Edge into his hand into which he directed his magical yuan and swung it in the air.

With a loud crack, a few obsidian metal bars snapped under the Demonslayer Edge’s swing. Han Shuo reached out and forcefully bent the bars to the side, allowing the druid to step out.

Upon leaving his confinement, Caspian stretched his body and took in a few deep breaths before asking Han Shuo, “Where’s Angelica? Is she in danger?”

“Rest assured. We left her in the care of the Battlefire mercenary band before we left. I don’t think she will run into any trouble, but she’s very worried about you.” After answering, Han Shuo looked at Emily, not asking why Caspian was imprisoned there in the first place.

Meanwhile, Emily took out a particular magic item and played with it in her hands until she forced open a hidden compartment in the corner. After rummaging through it, she fished out a small book.

“Ah hah, I found it.”

“Hidden compartments are common in secret chambers, but are concealed with space magic that an average person can almost never discover. Only a space grand magus is able to sense these magical ripples and disable the disguise, but the Dark Mantle does this kind of stuff so often that we’ve come up with a specialized magical tool. With it I could detect even the slightest magical activity in this room and obtain everything we need.” Emily proudly explained with the book now in hand.

“So, does that mean our mission is complete?” Han Shuo asked with a grin after a pause.

Nodding rather happily, Emily replied, “That’s right. As long as we can leave Valen City, Bob Ascher is a dead man!”

It was then that they heard a series of hurried knocks coming from above.

Expressions tensing, Han Shuo and Emily shared a quick look before the former finally spoke, “That was Gilbert’s signal. It means that somebody has noticed our existence and is heading here. Let’s go back up and depart from this place.”

With that said, Emily ascended the way they had come. The great druid had yet to recover from his recent escape from the cage. He was still pale in the face and his steps were stiff and awkward.

Nimbly maneuvering himself to flank Caspian, Han Shuo threw the druid onto his back and dashed out behind Emily, returning to Bob Ascher’s bedroom.

Just as they arrived, they heard the sounds of battle from outside the door. Emily shared a quick, worried look with Han Shuo before she reached out for the bed. Reverting the bed to its original form, the two of them raced out the door.

On the other side, Gilbert was holding off an attack from several soldiers of the Gryphon Legion with a spear in hand. Another squad of Gryphon Legion troops was drawing near. Some were equipped with bows and arrows and had positioned themselves appropriately to shoot down Gilbert.

“You’re finally out, honored master. I’m afraid I can’t hold them off for much longer.” Spotting Han Shuo, Gilbert jumped back after fending off a strike with his spear and shouted to his master.”

All three of them, Han Shuo, Emily, and Gilbert, had their faces and identities concealed, unmistakably the appearance of no-good-doers. Even the great druid had been disguised with black mask before Han Shuo carried him out. The party appeared more like a group of sneaky bandits.

“Let’s get out of here!” Han Shuo exclaimed as the flow of Gryphon Legion soldiers converged on them. He sprinted out through an opening before the enemies could seal them in.

The bowmen and crossbowmen had finished loading their weapons by then. If Han Shuo and Emily were to take flight, they would become clear targets without any cover, and thus they were forced to take shelter behind the artificial mountain and plants in the villa.

Without wasting words or even a nod, Gilbert charged behind Han Shuo. Flames had completely swamped the manor and screams now filled the air. Belinda and Johnny had stormed through a wall using the three-eyed golem and were running as if their lives depended on it. Johnny even appeared to be wounded, as an arrow stuck out from his butt and his chest was dripping with blood.

“This way!” Spotting Han Shuo’s party, Belinda rather loyally waved and signalled for them to join up with her. However, Han Shuo ignored her and dashed for the opposite wall. He yelled back, “Are you kidding? I don’t want to die fighting all those soldiers on your tail, thank you very much!”

Chapter 182: A fierce battle

Everything was incredibly chaotic within the manor as fires licked at all the houses. Groups of black robed people scurried hither and thither amidst waves of panic as Gryphon Legion soldiers chased them everywhere, completely throwing the manor into wild disarray.

“Wait for us!” Two shapely black figures suddenly rushed out as Han Shuo, Emily, and Gilbert were running in another direction.

Han Shuo knew this should be Phoebe as soon as he heard the voice. It went without saying that the other person was Candice. The two of them had set fire to everything when the mission had just begin. As a fire mage swordsman, such matters came naturally to Candice. She had engulfed the entire place in a sea of flames after a short while.

There were a few Gryphon Legion soldiers behind them, and another awe inspiring elder wielding a longsword that flared with silver fighting aura.

The man quickly dashed over, and his imposing presence made it hard for one to look directly at him. He lightly waved the great sword in his hand and thoroughly pulverized all trees, shrubbery, and rocks in the silver fighting aura’s path. Even the ground split open with various cracks, demonstrating the frightening ferocity of the fighting aura.

“He’s Clark’s master, great swordmaster Gabriel! We need to get out of here!” Candice grew extremely worried as she called out and fled towards Han Shuo with an even faster speed.

Gabriel was extremely swift as he’d flung the Gryphon Legion soldiers with him far behind. As a great swordmaster, Gabriel possessed extreme strength. Han Shuo needed to take one glance at him to know that there was no one beside him who could fight Gabriel alone.

As they witnessed Gabriel picking up speed, about to overtake Phoebe and Candice, Han Shuo’s heart clenched as he looked at Gabriel, suddenly remembering the might of Gilbert’s transformation and immediately shouted, “Damn it, hurry up and transform!”

Han Shuo concentrated like he never had before and, at the same time, compelled the Demonslayer Edge to fly wildly at great swordmaster Gabriel. Infusing the Demonslayer Edge with magical yuan, a thick magical aura flared out from it, with a bizarre sense of fire and frost interspersed within it.

The Demonslayer Edge howled and slashed through the air, appearing directly in front of great swordmaster Gabriel, stabbing directly towards him. That odd sense of heat brought an exceedingly dangerous presence and rather surprised Gabriel.

Snorting coldly, Gabriel waved the longsword in his hand and suddenly gave birth to a silver firework in the distance, as resplendent as the shattered stars. Han Shuo suddenly felt an enormous force explode out of the glorious silver sparkles and attempt to firmly hold the Demonslayer Edge in place.

A burst of tremendous energy surged violently into the Demonslayer Edge. Gabriel's silver fighting aura was incredibly overbearing, rumbling on the surface of the Demonslayer Edge as though it wished to ravage everything. The enveloping silver light caused the Demonslayer Light to emit humming noises.

This tyrannical power wound its way around the Demonslayer Edge in an instant, chaotically mixing with the fire and frost energy that Han Shuo had created inside the blade with his magic. The magical energy from the "Mystical Glacial Spellfire" that had coalesced in the blade rapidly disappeared.

Muttering a quick curse, Han Shuo knew that his magical training had been too brief. No matter how fantastical his magic was, with such a short amount of time spent on training, he was still unable to measure up to Gabriel's decades spent coalescing his fighting aura. In the moment they'd connected, the magical yuan within the Demonslayer Edge completely dissipated, and the result a foregone conclusion.

However, because of the Demonslayer Edge's obstruction, it slowed down Gabriel's pursuit of Phoebe and Candice. Han Shuo felt that things weren't right when he couldn't resummon the Demonslayer Edge back to his hand.

He thought quickly as his heart clenched. Han Shuo swiftly sang out a magic spell as two bone spears suddenly flew towards Gabriel. In the instant that Han Shuo made his move, Emily also released a dark magic spell.

At the same time, Han Shuo used his entire strength to quickly circulate the magical yuan within the Demonslayer Edge and used Gabriel's distraction in fending off their magical attacks to wrest the Demonslayer Edge away from the ball of silver light. Because he'd spent too much energy and the speed of the circulating magical yuan was beyond Han Shuo's limits, Han Shuo couldn't help but spit out a mouthful of blood, having already been injured.

"You're injured, let me down, I think I've recovered!" Caspian, on Han Shuo's back, could clearly feel Han Shuo's body tremble violently and immediately spoke when he saw Han Shuo spit out a mouthful of blood.

Gabriel had already destroyed Han Shuo and Emily's magics in this short amount of time and his cold, grey eyes once again swept towards Han Shuo and Emily. His gaze on Han Shuo in particular was infused with some surprise, as he seemed to be incredibly curious about Han Shuo's magical yuan and the Demonslayer Edge.

Bam! sounded out as Han Shuo turned his head to see that Gilbert had finally transformed back into an enormous black dragon. His body was covered with black scales and he'd already crushed the wall in front of Han Shuo and the others.

"Everyone, on his back!" Han Shuo was delighted to see Gilbert reveal the body of a black dragon and roared out loudly, throwing Caspian over to Gilbert as well.

He used a certain amount of force when he did so, so that when Caspian arrived where Gilbert was, the momentum around his body would lessen and it wouldn't cause too much harm to the druid.

Apart from Emily knowing Gilbert's identity in advance, Gilbert's sudden transformation shocked everyone senseless. They stared, open mouthed, at the enormous Gilbert and couldn't really react for a while.

"All Gryphon Legion soldiers gather here! Archers and spear throwers, prepare your arrows, spears, and crossbows! You can be dragonslayers today!" Gabriel's loud call suddenly rang out and spread throughout the manor.

"Why aren't you getting on yet?!" Han Shuo couldn't help but roar furiously when he saw that Candice and Phoebe were still dithering about on the ground in shock.

Dark dragons were also labeled as the most evil and greedy amongst the dragons. They liked to live in the gloomy underworld, and were lustful, shameless, and greedy. They were practically the materialization of evil on the earth. That such a dark dragon had suddenly appeared in front of them, it was no wonder that Phoebe and Candice didn't know how to react.

But when Han Shuo urged them on a second time, the two girls finally recognized the dark dragon's relationship with Han Shuo and looked askance at him, leaping up to land on Gilbert's back.

When he saw that Emily, Phoebe, and Caspian had all leapt until Gilbert's back, Han Shuo relaxed and activated the Art to also fly towards Gilbert. "Leave immediately, but don't take to the skies, or you'll become a flying target."

"Honored master, you must block the spears and arrows that fly my way." Gilbert had a mouth full of sharp teeth now and his dragon's breath was filled with a piercing odd smell. His voice also appeared to have an additional layer of dignity in it.

"I know, all is a mess here anyways. Just destroy anything that gets in your way. Don't pay heed to anything else as long as we can get out of here." Han Shuo didn't put any restrictions on Gilbert now as long as they could make it out of this sticky situation alive.

When Caspian heard Han Shuo's orders, he seemed to want to protest, but when he thought of how Han Shuo had helped him numerous times already and that he was trying to get everyone out alive, he said nothing in the end after moving his lips a few times.

“Wahahaha, then alright, I’ll do as I see fit!” Gilbert spoke excitedly with his dignified voice.

That heavily fanged mouth suddenly yawned open and sprayed a gout of acidic poison into the distance. Dragonbreath accompanied this spray, and the archers, who had just set up their formation, hastily retreated. Those who didn’t back up in time were reduced to melting flesh after their bodies had come into contact with the acid. Death was the only way out for them.

After this breath went out, scores of Gryphon Legion soldiers appeared suddenly. They wielded silver spears and gleaming silver armor as they flew in on the backs of gryphons. The person in front was fierce and stocky. He looked middle aged as the silver fighting aura from the spear in his hand shot out two to three meters tall, making that silver spear, carved with mystical patterns, appearing even longer.

“Hurry and go, Bob Ascher has arrived! It looks like the Calamity Church has failed indeed!” When he saw that the dark dragon still wanted to rampage around, Han Shuo quickly kicked him in the side and hastily gave this order.

Chapter 183: The swift and fierce silver spear

Ten Gryphon Legion soldiers and Bob Ascher, as well as the swordmaster Gabriel, – little dark dragon Gilbert would be courting death if he attempted to face this enormous amount of strength head on.

Beneath Han Shuo's urging, Gilbert realized the magnitude of the situation they were in and didn't waste time with cheeky remarks. He charged over from the now obliterated wall, while the archers and spear throwers on Gabriel's side found their footing once more in a newly formed formation. They suddenly shot out in unison and filled the blotted out the skies with arrows and spears, targeting Gilbert.

Han Shuo and the others had long since made preparations. Emily shot out a dark magical spell and formed a grey, semi-circle protective barrier in the air. Han Shuo also chanted the incantation for Dark Mist, covering the entire area in darkness. Candice, Phoebe, and Caspian also used a variety of methods to smash the arrows and spears that came their way.

Han Shuo had already been injured when he had crossed blades with Gabriel earlier. It was a good thing that he could call upon his necromancy magic without his magical yuan. When Han Shuo chanted out a magical spell, several zombie and hate warriors suddenly appeared on the ground, in addition to dozens of skeletal warriors, forming a blockade in the gap in the wall that had been made by Gilbert.

The summoned dark creatures played the roles of meat shields, filling up the gap so that the attacks fell only on them.

Add to this Emily's magic shield and Han Shuo's Dark Mist, as well as Phoebe and Candice's efforts, Gilbert didn't suffer any injuries in the end.

The dark creatures that Han Shuo had summoned were shot full of arrows and spears, and he once again began chanting, but this time it was the "Corpse Explosion" spell that he'd just mastered when the soldiers of the Gryphon Legion drew near, making two hate warriors explode, sending flesh and blood flying through the sky. The ten soldiers were caught off guard and were all sent crashing backwards.

“Take to the sky and get us out of here!” Han Shuo yelled out as he made use of this chance in which the dark creatures were blocking all the arrows and spears.

Gilbert didn't hesitate when he heard Han Shuo's order and swung his enormous body around, crushing two houses by his side. Boulders hurtled through the air as trees snapped. Gilbert roared as his body, previously hovering close to the ground, suddenly shot towards the dark sky.

“Halt right there!” Bob Ascher suddenly shot over magically at this moment, the silver spear in his hand suddenly shooting out like a silver comet. A splendid tail followed behind it as it aimed for Gilbert.

As a sky rider, Bob Ascher had weathered many battles over the years and had seen all sorts of situations. Not only was he himself quite fierce, but his breadth of battle experience was even more rich. He understood that it would be difficult to catch up to Gilbert with the gryphon's speed, so the only way was to injure Gilbert first. Otherwise, even though he had a large amount of troops following close behind him, it would be impossible to keep Han Shuo's group behind.

Bob Ascher's abundant fighting aura was concentrated into the spear as it drew a magnificent, almost piercing, arc in the dark night sky. It embodied a severe presence within it, giving Han Shuo and the others immense pressure. The spear flew towards them, as if hunting prey, whistling through the night and seeming to be making use of the wind as well.

Han Shuo hastily chanted another bone spear spell, and two bone spears suddenly materialized in front of the silver spear according to Han Shuo's will. They broke apart as soon as they touched the spear, and the spear continued, unabated, on its path.

As Han Shuo was reeling in shock, Emily chanted out a dark magic spell as a Grim Reaper's blade once again formed in the night sky. As the magic staff in Emily's hands drew an arc downwards, the Grim Reaper's blade shot swiftly towards the oncoming silver spear.

Another exploding sound rang out as Emily suddenly stumbled on Gilbert's back. She couldn't help but take a few steps backwards as the blade formed out of her mental strength dissipated in the blink of an eye.

However, because of her attack, the fighting aura coalesced on the tip of the silver spear had decreased noticeably. Whether it was the flare of its silver light, or its speed, both had been suddenly decreased.

Although Han Shuo's heart went out to Emily at this time, he didn't have the time to comfort her. He stared unblinkingly at the spear, prepared to summon the Demonslayer Edge and meet it in combat.

Two crossbow bolts suddenly flew out from Phoebe and Candice's hands. Candice's bolt missed, but Phoebe's bolt solidly smashed into the slowing silver spear.

Because of this bolt, the spear's speed decreased once more. Gilbert had increased his speed at this time and was making for the horizon. He increased the gap between the group and Bob Ascher's gryphon, and continued to pull ahead.

"Convey my orders! The entire city is under martial law. Only entrance is allowed, exit is not. All transportation matrixes traveling to other cities are to be closed! No one can activate them without my order. All trespassers will be killed without exception!" Bob Ascher's fierce yell could be heard in the distance, with even Han Shuo and the others hearing him clearly.

"Are you alright?" Han Shuo relaxed when he saw that they were temporarily out of danger, but his expression tightened as he hurriedly rushed to Emily's side and held her up.

Emily took off her mask and displayed a face drained of color, but when she saw that Han Shuo was asking after her so urgently, sweetness flooded her heart as she gave a weak laugh, "No worries, this is what happens after I exhaust my magic. Don't worry about me, how are you?"

"I'll be fine after a few days of rest as well!" Han Shuo also comforted Emily with a smile.

Phoebe was now wearing a stiff expression when she saw how intimate Han Shuo and Emily were, but Emily was wounded and had gotten her injuries just now from protecting them all. She wasn't in a position to say anything about Han Shuo's concern for her.

Coughing lightly, she braved the chilly wind to walk up to Han Shuo, worry also appearing on her stunning face. She reached out a slender, jade hand to wipe the blood from Emily's lips, admonishing her, "You spit out blood, so how can you say that you're alright?!"

Phoebe's light cough and her motions immediately made Emily realize something. She pushed away Han Shuo's support with a nonchalant smile and maintained a distance of two arm lengths from him, only saying then, "What do we do now?"

"I'm beginning to worry about the safety of the others now that Valen City is on lockdown." Han Shuo's face darkened as she looked at Emily.

Nodding, Emily said, "That's right, he was incredibly enraged just now and won't be easily pacified. Valen City has never closed its transportation matrixes to other cities before. In doing so, he's cut off all chances of communication with the outside world. Whether it was the Empire or news from any other places, Valen City will be unable to receive any of it. Bob Ascher must have hardened his heart and won't give up that easily since he's taken this step."

"The target I'd come to fight this time was water magus Howard by Bob Ascher's side. I had originally been confident of handling him, but he found someone to help him who doesn't play by the rules to capture me. He wanted something from our druid order after he captured me, but I didn't give it to him even when threatened with death. Before you came tonight, he said he was going to capture little Angelica to threaten me with, so I'm concerned for her safety." Caspian finally came clean with everything at this time.

"Honored master, where are we flying to? If you don't make a decision soon, we'll be leaving Valen City!" Gilbert's voice suddenly rang out in the frosty winter air.

Valen City was a mess at the moment and so the best and wisest course of action was to leave. However, if they left now, those still in Valen City would likely be in great danger. Hesitation showed on Han Shuo's face as he looked uncertainly at those assembled in front of him.

"My cousin is very good to me and I cannot leave him in danger!" Phoebe resolutely expressed her stance when she saw Han Shuo look at her.

"I can't give up on my battle comrades!" Candice also spoke up.

When Han Shuo looked at Emily, Emily smiled charmingly, "I'll go with whatever you decide!"

"Gilbert, return to the hotel!" Han Shuo stomped down on the back of the dark dragon after thinking for a while.

Chapter 184: An incredible memory

Having finally increased the distance between himself and Bob Ascher and seeing that he was about to clear the danger zone, Gilbert complained when he heard Han Shuo's instructions telling him to turn back. "Honored master, even the mighty Gilbert cannot take on an entire Gryphon Legion! We'll surely be discovered if we go back to the city like this!"

"Shut up and fly back to the hotel. We need to pick up whoever we need to pick up." Han Shuo snorted lightly as he spoke to Gilbert.

In his dark dragon form, there wasn't much space on his back for people to stand on. Han Shuo wouldn't be able to take everyone away in one go, so he started to contemplate what to do.

Thoughts racing furiously, Han Shuo's sharp eyes saw Gryphon Legion soldiers patrolling the skies as Gilbert was returning from the outskirts of Valen City.

Gilbert was such a large target that it was impossible to surreptitiously sneak back into the hotel. Han Shuo thought silently for a moment before suddenly saying, "Gilbert, land immediately since the Gryphon Legion has yet to spot us. We'll be returning to the hotel by foot."

Under Han Shuo's commands, Gilbert didn't say anything pointless and traveled stealthily at a low altitude, with everyone getting off his back in succession shortly after. When everyone had gotten off, Gilbert's huge body gradually shrunk, entombed in a dark radiance before once again transforming back into that tan-skinned, handsome, young man.

"When we were within Asher's manor just now, we had masks on. Now that we have returned under our true appearances, it's likely that they won't be able to recognize us." Han Shuo glanced over at Emily as he spoke to her.

"Right, however, if a group of strangers suddenly appears at the same time and are somehow discovered by the Gryphon Legion's people, we will definitely raise suspicions. I think we should split up, and by doing that, other people won't think that we acted together!" Emily looked at their group as she spoke.

“Alright, then let’s do this. Everyone should be familiar with the way back. We’ll split into two groups, and if there’s danger within the hotel, we’ll meet up at the block behind it.” Han Shuo nodded, agreeing with Emily’s plan.

Once Han Shuo had spoken, Phoebe immediately moved matter-of-factly to Han Shuo’s side. As a magical pet, Gilbert naturally couldn’t be separated from his master either. With the situation developing like this, Emily quickly looked at everyone and spoke again. “Since things are like this, I’ll be with Miss Candice and Elder Caspian.”

“Elder Caspian has entered the city before, so we need you to use magic to adjust his features. Otherwise, it will be extremely easy to recognize him.” Han Shuo warned. He then turned towards Phoebe and Gilbert, saying, “Let’s go.”

Currently, Valen City was even more chaotic than during the day that Clark had been assassinated. The chief of the Gryphon Legion used the invasion and assassinations of the Kasi Empire as an excuse to seal off the entire city. The Griffon Legion’s men whistled through the skies. and immediately carried out a severe interrogation as soon as any stranger appeared.

Under Han Shuo’s sensitive eyes and ears, his group of three focused on taking small, winding paths. They scuttled under the shadow of the eaves, avoiding many troops from the Griffon Legion along the way.

Regardless of whether it was Gilbert or Pheobe, they were both extraordinary characters. Since Han Shuo’s brain had developed, his powerful ability to recall things was fully deployed during this return trip. There were all types of complicated small passages that existed in Valen City, and it seemed as if there was a map imprinted into Han Shuo’s heart. As Han Shuo made his way back, he moved erratically in all directions.

In the end, even Phoebe began to feel as if they were getting farther and farther away from the hotel. If it wasn’t for her knowing how mysterious Han Shuo was, she definitely would have questioned whether or not Han Shuo knew where he was going. After going through many small roads and traveling through a few curved routes, the back door of the hotel suddenly appeared before their eyes.

Han Shuo's had actually managed to completely avoid the airborne Griffon Legion and soldiers on the ground. By using a few smaller, more complicated roads, the three people actually didn't encounter any danger as they appeared at the the hotel doors.

"This is too amazing!" Phoebe couldn't help but exclaim when she saw Elaine's hotel, lights dancing in her eyes as she complimented Han Shuo.

"Honored master, I'm super dizzy. How were you able to memorize such complicated roads?" Gilbert was also looking at Han Shuo with incredulity.

Pointing at his head, Han Shuo chuckled. "I'm just that good!"

It was like he'd said nothing with that statement, but even if he'd explained the bit about his brain being developed, the two of them most likely wouldn't have understood regardless, so he didn't bother.

Han Shuo took a deep breath after speaking and concentrated his gaze on the hotel. His eyes sparkled with dark gleams and his sensitive ears also turned towards the hotel.

Contrary to his expectations, there wasn't anything out of the ordinary in the hotel. Han Shuo heard that everything was normal inside. There were no panicked sounds of fighting, nor was there any sounds of interrogation from the soldiers of the Gryphon Legion.

"You and Gilbert head over first, I'll go find Lawrence and tell him to leave the city immediately!" Han Shuo spoke to Phoebe beside him.

Phoebe's stunning face turned to look at him as she reached for his hand. She grasped his broad, coarse hands tightly and said softly, 'Be careful!'

"Don't worry! Nothing's going to happen to me!" Han Shuo said with a smile and turned to Gilbert, "Protect her well if anything happens!"

Han Shuo was like a shadow in the dark night after he spoke. He melted into the darkness and vanished without a trace.

On his way to Lawrence's place, Han Shuo heard a bizarre sound. He quickened his steps and landed on a tree branch. Han Shuo saw a disguised Lawrence, Lucky, and the two swordsmen he'd seen before making for the direction of the hotel with Belinda and Johnny from the Calamity Church.

Coughing lightly, Han Shuo called out softly from the tree, "Lawrence!"

The group below was greatly frightened by Han Shuo's cough. They all grasped their weapons tightly and swivelled to look up into the tree, almost sending out attacks as they turned.

"Bryan, what are you doing here? Shouldn't you have left the city long ago? We saw you take the dark dragon out of the manor and leave Ascher behind!" Lawrence spoke with confusion.

"We came back again. Cut the blather and gather at the hotel. We are going to be leaving immediately. You can't stay in Valen City for a second longer." Han Shuo had no time to explain anything and responded carelessly, landing on the ground and convening with Lawrence and the others.

When he drew near, Han Shuo discovered that Johnny had not only taken a hit to his buttocks, but there was a large patch of blood on his chest and it looked like he was injured quite severely. Although Belinda still had her veil on, her gaze wasn't as sharp as before. She looked a bit weak and had also likely been wounded.

Lawrence and the others had only been involved in logistics and cleanup in this operation. They hadn't taken part in the actual battle, and so they were in relatively good spirits, with no one being injured. What Han Shuo didn't understand was why he was with Belinda. Han Shuo hadn't introduced the two to each other and so they shouldn't know each other.

Hesitating, Han Shuo couldn't keep back the questions in his heart. He looked at Lawrence and then at Belinda, "How do the two of you know each other?"

“Oh, we discovered that our two groups were going the same way when we were retreating earlier and ended up walking together!” Lawrence glanced noncommittally at Han Shuo and explained faintly.

Belinda also nodded, “It’s because of Mister Lawrence’s aid and that such a large number of his men went after you that we were able to make it out.”

“So that’s the case!” Han Shuo still felt that things weren’t this simple, but since Belinda and Lawrence had the same story, he wasn’t able to get anything else out of them either.

Just as Han Shuo and Lawrence were almost at the hotel, Han Shuo could hear a group of Gryphon Legion soldiers interrogating Elaine inside. He could hear her hearty laughter from a distance away, seemingly to not have a care in the world.

However, his superior vision saw that as this troop was talking to Elaine, another soldier seemed to have received some instructions and surreptitiously left the hotel, walking swiftly towards the street and waving his hand up at the two Gryphon Legion soldiers hovering in the sky.

“Damn it, we must’ve been made!” Although he didn’t know why, Han Shuo knew that Elaine’s hotel was no longer safe. He called out softly and didn’t bother concealing his tracks anymore, making for the hotel like a streak of lightning.

Chapter 185: The great escape

“Has there really not been any suspicious characters nearby lately?” A Gryphon Legion officer asked Elaine.

“Honored sir, our hotel has always had good ratings in Valen City and have always cooperated with the Aschers. We would’ve immediately reported to you had we discovered anyone suspicious.” The chubby Elaine was still merry and promised with a smile that nothing was wrong with the hotel.

“Mm, I feel that nothing would be wrong with your hotel anyways!” The officer’s expression was calm as he spoke gravely.

A severe whistle sounded at this moment as a streak of faint red cut through the dark sky, making straight for the officer.

The officer, who’d been putting on a show in talking to Elaine, had long since been on his guard. He wouldn’t have sent his men out for help otherwise. He pulled out the sword by his side with an audible clang as soon as the whistle had sounded. Dark green fighting aura suddenly flared across it as it immediately flew out towards the descending red light.

Ding! The sounds of weapons clashing into each other rang out. The Demonslayer Edge bit viciously into the officer’s blade and extinguished his fighting aura, causing a nick in the officer’s blade.

A figure flashed at the same time as a hard fist pummeled towards the officer. The officer started in shock and he lifted his left hand, blocking his chest and attempting to stop Han Shuo’s punch.

It had seemed to be an ordinary punch, but suddenly flared up with purple spellfire when it reached the officer’s chest. A biting cold presence suddenly rushed to the front, and it surged into his body when Han Shuo’s fist landed on his chest.

The officer felt like he’d fallen into an icy cavern in a single instant. Frost immediately formed on his hair and eyebrows, and ice pierced through his body as well. He didn’t even have the strength to lift his hands.

Han Shuo retraced his tightly clenched fist and snatched the Demonslayer Edge out of the air. He turned his head to yell at Elaine, “This place has been compromised. Tell everyone to leave the hotel immediately!”

Elaine quickly sized up the situation after recovering from her shock. The cries of the gryphons were sounding out from the air at this time. This meant that Han Shuo’s judgment had been without error, and that the soldiers circling in the sky were already closing in.

“However, Madame Emily has yet to return!” Elaine was about to leave when she suddenly recalled that Emily was the true leader of this mission, and couldn’t help but speak up at this moment.

“You don’t need to worry about this, she will return soon.” Han Shuo grasped the Demonslayer Edge and charged into the soldiers, quickly responding to Elaine.

Elaine had no other reservations after Han Shuo’s words and she nodded as she turned. She yelled out as Angelica, members of the Battlefire mercenary band, as well as Phoebe and Gilbert all emerged from the hotel.

When they came outside, they joined in the fray without another word from Han Shuo, killing all the Gryphon Legion soldiers.

“Go! Leave through the back!” Although these soldiers were dead, this location had already been compromised. Along with the soldier’s previous report, this place would quickly become a prime target. The two hovering soldiers high up in the air had also discovered the abnormalities over here.

The group of people didn’t pack anything under Han Shuo’s orders and had just fled the hotel, running towards the back. Although Elaine didn’t possess any fighting aura, she was quite quick on her feet and didn’t become a burden.

A loud outcry of yells suddenly sounded from the distance. Han Shuo ran and jumped up, landing on a nearby roof. He looked into the distance and noticed that Emily, Candice, and Caspian were fighting their way over here.

A dozen cavalry members were behind them, riding armored battlesteeds and wielding sharp spears. They pursued Emily fiercely, seeming to have discovered their identities.

“Hurry, come this way!” Han Shuo suddenly called out loudly, his voice making it over to Emily’s location like a sharp weapon.

Lawrence’s group also bumped into Phoebe and Candice at this time, making all those who had participated in the Bob Ascher operation gather in one place.

“Form up! Let’s make it out of here before the entire Gryphon Legion arrives!” Standing on top of the roof, Han Shuo had become the leader of this mission as he called out sternly.

“Steal the horses!” Emily suddenly hovered in midair on her way over as she lowly chanted a dark magic spell.

The dozen fiercely charging knights suddenly floundered into a dark vortex along the way. The battlesteeds’ lightning fast speed suddenly became incredibly slow, and their hooves made no sounds on the ground.

The trees in the surroundings suddenly became alive as their branches danced liked snakes, entangling the slowing horses, forcing them to stop where they stood.

Caspian’s old tree branch of a magic staff rested on a nearby tree. He concentrated and released the magic of the druidic order, restraining all twelve horses and confining even the legs of the knights on the horses.

“Hurry up!” Caspian also suddenly roared out.

“Grandpa! Are you alright?” Angelica broke down into tears of joy when she saw her grandfather appear from the vantage point of being protected by the Battlefire mercenary band members.

“Take the horses, come on!” Han Shuo had already charged out in the air and turned his head to yell back.

Lawrence waved his hand and didn’t bother speaking to Phoebe. Those beside him, including Belinda and Johnny of the Calamity Church and even Phoebe and Candice, dashed out and made for the dozen trussed up horses and knights.

Han Shuo had Caspian, swordmaster Phoebe, magus level Emily, thunder mage swordsman Johnny, as well as fire mage swordsman Candice, and finally Lawrence by his side. With such a group of experts coming together to take care of the ordinary knights tied up on the backs of their horses, it was easily a slaughter.

Everyone displayed their abilities in the span of a few breaths and killed the twelve ordinary knights in a few seconds. They threw the bodies down and claimed the horses.

“Hurry and get out of here. We escaped this way because there’s more than a hundred similar cavalry behind us.” Emily tugged on the reins and shouted.

Just as her words sounded, the cries from the gryphons in the air became more and more numerous. Han Shuo lifted his head and suddenly discovered a few black dots converging on their location. His sensitive ears could hear random hoofbeats. It seemed that they would be surrounded before long.

“Come with me, we’ll make it out soon!” Han Shuo yanked on the reins and turned the horse around, charging in the direction that Emily and the others had just come from.

“You’re crazy! There’s more than a hundred knights back there!” Emily was immediately shocked by Han Shuo’s about face and called out in surprise.

He turned back and looked at Emily with a wry smile. “I think that’s the only path available to us that will get us to the city walls as soon as possible! If we don’t leave immediately, there will be countless troubles that follow behind us, so we must take that risk!”

Han Shuo didn’t hesitate after speaking and charged off on the back of his steed, shooting for the location where the hoofbeats were converging. Emily was stunned for only a second before she immediately followed Han Shuo's battlesteed.

Phoebe and Candice had worked with Han Shuo before and trusted his judgment greatly. Gilbert had no objection of course, and charged out after Emily. Caspian and Angelica, on the same horse, also followed quickly after a moment of hesitation.

The last group was more hesitant, but they too followed Han Shuo's direction one by one after a short while.

None of them knew whether or not this path would lead to life or death. They could only hope that Han Shuo's judgement had been correct.

Chapter 186: The “Demonic Art of Assimilation”

It was the dead of winter, and some ice had already formed on the surface of the streets. The frosty wind cut through the air like a knife, as if a demon was walking the streets, giving pedestrians an awe inspiring feeling, which sank into the depths of their soul.

The hooves of Han Shuo’s horse pounded against the ground of the streets as everyone followed closely behind. Everyone had severely grave expressions pasted on their faces, having already made their preparations that they would be charging head on into great trouble.

A dense concentration of hooves sounded in front of Han Shuo. The presence of ten thousand fiercely charging horses assaulted him before he even seen anyone.

The Demonslayer Edge was gripped loosely in his hand right now as a coolly composed Han Shuo discarded all the stray thoughts in his mind. He focused his concentration like he never had before, adjusting his breathing and heart rate to his most ideal condition. Even the pain originally emanating from some of his wounds began to fade away.

When he focused his attentions and planned on carving out a path of blood, he suddenly felt a bit lightheaded, as if he’d suddenly sunk into some strange state of mind. His mind shook at the same time as a profound incantation slowly crystallized in his heart.

The “Demonic Art of Assimilation” was a demonic art that could be grasped only after one reached the true demon realm. Its effects were evident from the word “assimilation”. A demonic practitioner in the true demon realm would have formed a demon infant at that time, and once injured, the practitioner could use the “Demonic Art of Assimilation” to swallow the enemy’s blood, flesh, and soul to heal their own injuries.

If the demon infant wanted to grow quickly at this time, it could use the “Demonic Art of Assimilation” to swallow the enemy’s soul or demon infant. However, because there was no one else in the same school of study as Han Shuo in this world, there were no other demonic infants for him to swallow.

Before a person died, the energy in their soul wouldn't fade away. If one used the "Demonic Art of Assimilation" to absorb a living person's soul and fortify the demon infant, that would be the fastest way for Han Shuo's training to advance to the next level.

The power of one's soul would quickly fade upon death, and the remnants of energy would completely dissipate in an exceedingly short while. It was also impossible to summon the vengeful spirits known as wraiths to fill the void, because those were creatures from another dimension and had been dead for an indeterminate amount of time. The energy of their souls had long since vanished, leaving behind only the simplest traces of life.

In actuality, Han Shuo's use of the original demon and yin demon cave to refine the original and yin demons was actually using his blood essence and magical yuan to imbue these wraiths with the energy of a soul again. These original and yin demons would regain their powers, in addition to incredible abilities after they managed to absorb Han Shuo's blood essence and large amounts of magical yuan.

A mystical incantation magically imprinted itself into Han Shuo's brain as he sped forward on the back of the battlesteed. He quickly reviewed the incantation in his state of concentration and continued to gallop forward.

The sound of hooves were even more densely packed ahead, pounding into Han Shuo's heart like a war drum. When his sharp eyes looking straight ahead, he calmly circulated his magical yuan according to how to deploy the "Demonic Art of Assimilation", trying to see if it would have any effect.

To his surprise, Han Shuo discovered that he could circulate the magical yuan smoothly according to the requirements of the "Demonic Art of Assimilation", not meeting any obstacles at all.

Han Shuo finally realized that since he'd reached the true demon realm, many of his meridians had been carved out by his magical yuan, and the meridians that the “Demonic Art of Assimilation” was circulating through happened to be similar to the ones needed for the “Mystical Glacial Spellfire. Although they weren’t the exact same set of meridians, the current set was clear and without obstacle at all. Han Shuo’s thoughts raced as he immediately sensed the changes in his body.

As he circulated the “Demonic Art of Assimilation” and focused his concentration on his empty left hand, a thick, black cloud of magical mist materialized as a spinning black hole, full of an eerie and hard to define presence. There were many black flecks sparkling inside, giving off a frightening feeling.

The vortex hovering over the palm of his hand wasn’t that large, but Han Shuo understood that this meant he’d fully grasped the “Demonic Art of Assimilation”, and he would only know its effects when he actually tried using it on someone.

“You in the front! Halt for questioning or be killed without exception!” A fierce roar sounded out from in front of Han Shuo at this time.

A dense collection of knights whipped forward with battle rage. The silver spears in their hands flared with dark green fighting aura, appearing quite piercing in the darkness.

“Heh heh, I just so happened to want to see who’s going to kill who!” Han Shuo laughed wildly as he clenched with his legs. His horse shot forward even faster as it made for the knight.

In the moment that they were about to crash into each other, Han Shuo chanted a necromancy spell and the knights who were about to attack Han Shuo suddenly found bone spears materializing out of nowhere and hurtling towards them instead. They hastily raised their weapons to defend themselves as one of their silver spears was blocked by a white bone shield that had formed on Han Shuo’s left shoulder.

Beneath the cover of necromancy magic, Han Shuo pointed at the lofty knight who had shouted. When the sharp Demonslayer Edge connected with the knight’s spear, the latter immediately broke apart in accordance with Han Shuo's expectations. Making use of the knight's momentary shock, Han Shuo suddenly reached out a hand when he was passing by the knight and grabbed the latter.

Han Shuo's physical body was perversely strong now. When his left hand grabbed the knight and squeeze severely, the knight's shoulder blade immediately fractured. The Demonslayer Edge then nicked the knight's head, causing an immediate fountain of fresh blood.

The knight had been howling in pain when his cries of agony intensified after the Demonslayer Edge's blow. Strength drained from his struggling body and he was knocked senseless.

Han Shuo's left hand once again activated the "Demonic Art of Assimilation" at this time. The knight's flesh and blood, as well as lifeforce, swiftly flew from the knight's neck into Han Shuo's left hand.

A vigorous, strange power suddenly surged into Han Shuo's body thanks to the demon infant consuming it. His previously injured body recovered miraculously from this injection of strength, as if he'd obtained some sort of magical elixir or pill. Han Shuo could even clearly feel that some of his broken blood vessels had bizarrely reconnected themselves beneath the nurturing effects of this force.

At the same time, the knight in Han Shuo's hands was slowly deflating and turning grey because his flesh, blood, and lifeforce was being absorbed. When Han Shuo was finished with that, his remaining strand of soul was also sucked away like a drop of water.

When Han Shuo let go, a cold wind blew up and the corpse, now an empty husk, disintegrated in a cloud of dust. A life had been demolished in the span of a second, leaving not a single trace behind, thanks to the "Demonic Art of Assimilation".

As the caster, Han Shuo had received the nourishment from this knight in a short amount of time. Not only were his injuries healed, but he felt greatly alert and energetic at this moment as well.

The effects of the "Demonic Art of Assimilation" scared even Han Shuo himself. He'd never thought that it would be able to suck away all of the knight's life force in such short amount of time.

This was a typical case of harming others to benefit oneself, and it rather fulfilled the true principles of a demonic practitioner. Helping one recover and advance through slaughter and careless abandon of other lives, making use of other's soul and life force. These were the methods that demonic practitioners had long since grown accustomed to in the past hundred, thousand years.

"Demon, he's a demon!" The knights in front of Han Shuo stopped in their tracks with shock after seeing their leader die in such a horrifying fashion. One of them yelled in panic.

Han Shuo's methods had obviously surpassed the limits of their understanding, particularly when Han Shuo's left hand devoured their leader. The blood and bone fragments flying everywhere made his left hand appear like a man-eating demon. It made all this very difficult for the knights to accept.

Han Shuo had now charged deep into this group of knights. Due to the narrowness of the streets, the way forward was completely blocked.

He was forced to lower his speed due to the crush of people around him. Han Shuo had been ready for a cruel round of attacks when he realized those around him had all fallen into a stupor. They were all looking at him in horrified fright, and no one dared make the first move.

Chapter 187: Flying

Emily and the others took advantage of these people's stupor to unceremoniously rain attacks down upon the knights.

Dazzling spells and fierce fighting aura exploded at the same time, smashing into the knights like bombs and causing great injuries and casualties.

Faced with extreme threat to their lives, the previously shell-shocked Gryphon Legion knights started fighting for their lives. Javelins, arrows, and sharp spears all shot towards Han Shuo's groups.

The knights had completely blocked off the street, and so Han Shuo's group would have to meet them in head on battle if they charged over. When the Gryphon Legion knights shrugged off their fear and fought desperately, they immediately became a great hindrance.

However, Han Shuo's group was created of all experts with strong martial arts techniques and magic. They fought on the narrow streets since it wouldn't allow the Gryphon Legion soldiers to spread out. Only ten or so soldiers could face Han Shuo and the others at any given time.

These soldiers were naturally no match for Han Shuo and the others in this regard. The soldiers were all struck down from their horses in an exceedingly short period of time. It was a pity that there were roughly a hundred or so soldiers with the Gryphon Legion crew, and they were all experienced soldiers who had weathered many battles. They charged forward without heed for their own lives, greatly obstructing the group's speed.

The cry of gryphons came from the direction they had come from. Han Shuo took one listen and immediately understood that a larger portion of the Gryphon Legion were on their way. Perhaps even Bill Ascher was amongst them.

"Charge through this group or we'll be in trouble!" Han Shuo roared furiously. He turned and looked at Gilbert, "Transform back into your dragon form and destroy everything you see."

Gilbert immediately jumped up upon hearing these words and transformed into the enormous body of a dark dragon in the air. Gilbert's body hurtled through the sky over the crowded streets, opening his maw to send out a jet of flame on dozens of soldiers.

A dull thud sounded at the same time as Belinda's ironclad golem of the three eyed demon god, Ansidesi, charged into the crowd under her orders. It caused mass destruction, along with Gilbert, dealing disastrous blows to the soldiers.

Han Shuo took stock of the surroundings and noticed that there were several noticeable marks on Belinda's ironclad golem. Although it was as powerful as ever, it seemed a bit more bedraggled and was even a tad bit slower than last time.

Han Shuo knew without much thought that the golem must've been damaged in the operation to assassinate Bill Ascher, or it wouldn't be appearing in such bad shape. Han Shuo turned his head and was about to shift his gaze elsewhere, when he suddenly saw the light of excitement shine in Lawrence's eyes. Lawrence looked at the ironclad golem in fascination, seeming to continuously emit sighs of amazement as he looked at it.

Perhaps Lawrence had wanted to save Belinda because he was targeting the value of the golem. This was an enormous entity of mass destruction. If it could be used as a weapon in war, then he would have a great advantage in besieging cities and ravaging lands. No wonder Lawrence was so excited.

Due to Gilbert and the ironclad golem leading the way, those following behind immediately felt a lot more at ease. Their charge was accompanied by howls of pain and agony from their enemies as Han Shuo and the others treaded through the devastated streets, continuing forward.

Several large earth spikes suddenly appeared towards the front at this moment. They were all several meters long and shot fiercely towards the low flying Gilbert. Two water dragons also materialized into existence also churning ferociously towards Gilbert.

Gilbert had been squalling in his excitement when he was hit on all sides in his stupor. His large body completed a forward roll and fell down again. The knights, who were still alive after all his attacks immediately shot all their weapons at Gilbert, injuring him as well.

“Damn it, you guys actually injured me. I’m going to kill you!” Gilbert shrieked after a howl of agony and spewed flames towards the water and earth archmages in front of him. His enormous body thrashed and crushed some houses around him as he once again took to the air.

“We go.” One of the archmages said coolly as both of them used the levitation spells to float into the air and leave in another direction.

“Don’t chase them, we need to get out of here!” Han Shuo immediately yelled out when he saw that Gilbert seemed to want to chase after the two magi in his rage.

Gilbert had just set foot into this world and lacked sufficient battle experience. He was also full of himself and quite arrogant, so no wonder he’d been injured by the two magi. If they didn’t have Gilbert with them, the group may not be able to destroy a section of the city wall later with only the slow moving golem by itself. Therefore, there was no way that Han Shuo would allow Gilbert to leave at this moment.

Due to the contract between Han Shuo and Gilbert, although the latter complained a bit after receiving Han Shuo’s order, he continued charging forward in the end. However, his speed wasn’t as fast as it had been. It seemed that his injuries were indeed affecting him.

The calls of the gryphons drew closer and closer as Han Shuo’s group finally made it to the closest section of city wall in their desperate flight to escape. All of the scattered soldiers they met along the way immediately vanished beneath everyone’s attacks.

“Break through that section of the wall!” Han Shuo ordered when they arrived.

Gilbert and the ironclad golem charged a section of the wall at the same time. However, this sturdy wall only creaked and trembled beneath the tremendous force and wasn’t instantly destroyed.

“Valen City used the most durable of rocks to build its walls in order to defend against invasions from the Kasi Empire. As opposed to having the dark dragon break through the wall, it’d be easier to fly over it.” Emily immediately suggested when she saw that Gilbert’s first charge hadn’t resulted in immediate effect.

Han Shuo swept everyone a glance and immediately said decisively, “Those who can’t fly over the wall, take a place on top of the dark dragon using the levitation spell and leave the horses behind.”

As a dragon, Gilbert would rather die than let a lifeform many times inferior to him crawl on top of him. To force him to carry them would make this become the dragon’s lifelong shame and disgrace. Han Shuo naturally understood this taboo and so had given up the notion of having the dark dragon ferry the battlesteeds across.

Angelica, Candice, Caspian, and members of the Battlefire mercenary band, who weren’t able to fly, immediately discarded their horses and leapt on top of Gilbert. Emily grabbed the chubby hotel owner Elaine and slowly flew up as well.

Lawrence used an expensive flying scroll and also flew up leisurely with the assassin, Lucky. His speed wasn’t that slow, so it looked like the scroll must have been the work of, at least, a wind grand magus.

To Han Shuo’s surprise, Belinda from the Calamity Church released another golem, shaped like a kite. It was made out of bizarre wood and actually brought Belinda and Johnny into the air. They weren’t as helpless as Han Shuo thought they would be.

Everyone started showing their hidden aces in this time of need, and this was also when Han Shuo suddenly realized that apart from the mercenary band and Caspian, everyone else was rich and all had objects that could allow them to fly and take them away from here.

Seeing that everyone had taken their places, Han Shuo moved to Phoebe’s side. She too was preparing to leap up to the dark dragon’s spine, but Han Shuo suddenly grabbed her by the waist and activated the “Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens” to soar into the sky, amidst Phoebe’s panicked expression.

A faint fragrance flowed into Han Shuo's nose due to their proximity. Phoebe's breathing was a bit labored in her panic and her eyes sparkled with an odd light. Her red lips drew close to Han Shuo's ear in her incredulity, "How can you fly?"

Not only Phoebe, but even Lawrence, Candice, and the others were all looking at Han Shuo dumbfounded. Exclamations of disbelief sounded from the back of the dragon, as they too couldn't seem to understand why Han Shuo could fly.

What surprised them even more was that, despite bringing Phoebe along, Han Shuo's speed was actually the fastest. He'd soared over the city wall like lightning in the span of a second and continued his flight to the other side.

He hadn't flown as they'd run for their lives because for one, it was an enormous drain on his resources. Flying drained Han Shuo's magical yuan quickly, whereas it drained Emily's mental strength. For an archmage such as Emily, using the levitation spell was an enormous depletion of her mental strength. Prolonged flight would quickly exhaust an archmage.

In addition, for an archmage of Emily's level, her speed wasn't that much faster than a horse's, even if she flew. Long stints of flying was also quite tiring for great dragons. Gilbert had flown with everyone on his back for a while, and he'd also suffered injuries from the soldiers earlier. This was why Han Shuo only commanded him to give everyone a ride now.

Now that they had left behind the battlesteeds and the Gryphon Legion soldiers were hot on their tails, flying wasn't an easy thing for any of those in the group, but they all had to grit their teeth and bear it, hoping to get as far away from Valen City as possible.

Their pursuit didn't let up. As the group cleared the city wall and continued flying forward, Han Shuo turned back to see a thousand cavalry and a dense collection of black dots in the air in hot pursuit. It looked like Bob Ascher was truly enraged this time and wouldn't stop until he had killed them all.

The Kerlan Grand Canyon, the geographic marker that separated the Kasi and Lancelot Empire, was just ahead. There were many great and small mountain ranges around the grand canyon, with thick growths of trees and not that many people. They'd be able to shake off their pursuers if they set foot into that area.

Thus, once their path had been plot, Han Shuo once again became the leader. He explained the situation at hand and then dashed forward with Phoebe in his arms, the dark dragon following close behind.

In these moments of danger, everyone was flying full speed ahead. Lawrence and Belinda however, were looking at Han Shuo in the front with odd expressions of excitement. Their speed kept increasing, seeming to want to pull ahead of him.

"You've concealed this operations from both of them and was the person in charge from beginning to end. Those two proud people must be a bit irritated. Now that you're flying faster than them with me in hand, they must be even angrier." Phoebe looked behind her and then said softly to Han Shuo.

"That seems to be the case, but there doesn't seem to be a need for this at all!" Han Shuo abruptly understood why.

"If you weren't the person I liked, then I'd want to triumph over you as well, since you best me in all areas. Heh, such is human nature!" Phoebe explained lowly and then mischievously said next to Han Shuo's ears. "Will you beat them?"

Laughing loudly, Han Shuo felt a surge of heroism in his heart that he forgot all about the danger at hand. Looking down at the beauty in his arms, he said lowly, "Hang on tight, I'm going to make them despair soon!"

Chapter 188: Inner conflict

Han Shuo's "Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens" was more than a bit faster than the levitation spells that the archmages could cast. Therefore, when he circulated his magical yuan during his flight, his speed was faster than anyone could possibly imagine.

Because he had previously used the "Demonic Art of Assimilation" to absorb the flesh, blood, and souls of one of the knights, his injuries from when he'd clashed with Bob Ascher had been completely healed. When he flew now, his speed was like a loosed arrow. He flashed through the dark sky and disappeared from view.

Lawrence and Belinda were inwardly rejoicing as they drew close to Han Shuo, only to see his speed suddenly double and disappear from their line of sight.

Shaking his head with a wry smile, Lawrence was full of agitation as he became even more aware of Han Shuo's amazing abilities.

He also made up his mind at this moment that he would recruit Han Shuo under his banner.

"Well?" Han Shuo slowed down after increasing the distance between him and the other two.

"How did you do it?" Phoebe's voice was full of surprise.

"Heh heh, don't pay attention to that. The reason I can fly through the air is not because of necromancy." Han Shuo smiled with explanation.

Dawn was about to break after a night of chase. The Kerlan Grand Canyon was bathed in morning light as the sun slowly began to rise.

As he looked back, Han Shuo discovered that Gilbert, Emily, Lawrence, and Belinda's figures were slowly approaching. When they caught up to Han Shuo, Han Shuo could also see a dense gathering of black dots in the distance.

Judging them their distance, Han Shuo discovered that his group had maintained an ideal distance from the Gryphon Legion's soldiers. When he looked at the Kerlan Grand Canyon beneath them, Han Shuo encouraged everyone, “We’ll be able to make use of the complicated terrain within the grand canyon and use accumulated snow on the trees to conceal ourselves. The Gryphon Legion soldiers won’t be able to find us then.

Everyone knew what to do without further instructions from Han Shuo. Everyone became even more enthusiastic as they charged forward. They indeed reached the grand canyon before the soldiers made caught up to them.

The Kerlan Grand Canyon was vast. The mountain ranges, lakes, and forests within were located between the Lancelot Empire, the Kasi Empire, and the orcs. The orcs lived in the territory to the west of the Kerlan Grand Canyon, and the border of the Kais Empire was to the north. If one traveled a few days south of the canyon, one would find themselves in Zajoski City in the Lancelot Empire.

The orcs of the Lancelot Empire lived in a triangular region surrounded by the Kerlan Grand Canyon. This area didn’t belong to either empire, and the Kerlan Grand Canyon was always the focal point of conflict whenever war broke out. However, a few cities and towns still existed in such a special geographic region, with members from both the Lancelot and Kasi Empires, as well as orcs living amongst them.

They used this special geographic region to conduct mutually beneficial transactions. The merchants and adventurers from all three nations coexisted peacefully within these cities and towns before war broke out.

Of course, as runaways, Han Shuo’s group didn’t plan on hiding in these places. All of them landed as soon as they entered the Kerlan Grand Canyon. As someone who’d long since run a merchant guild, Phoebe and the highly competent Emily immediately took control of operations. The two of them discussed briefly and walked forward after settling on a direction.

Much snow was accumulated on the densely packed trees, almost completely blotting out the sky. To Han Shou’s group, this was an area perfect for concealment, and the Gryphon Legion soldiers in the sky would be hard pressed to pick up their tracks once they took the cover under the trees.

Therefore, when everyone landed, they purposefully moved towards where the trees and grass grew the thickest. It wasn't the most convenient for Phoebe to be in Han Shuo's arms now, so he indicated for her to leave his grasp.

As a swordmaster, Phoebe first moved her body back and forth in his grasp, seeming to be greedily taking in the warmth of his body, but when she noticed that everyone was walking on foot and Candice even seemed to be looking back at her with a trace of a smile, she finally tore herself away from Han Shuo's grasp with a reddened face.

The frost winter wind pierced her bones. As mages, Emily, Angelica, and the others were all wrapped in thick furs. They'd been subjected to the cold wind for so long under the night sky and were now all shivering with cold. Thus, they were all moving a bit more slowly.

When he saw Emily half frozen and trembling, Han Shuo felt pained and looked around. He suddenly suggested, "We've made it into the Kerlan Grand Canyon already. There's a covering of big trees here and it'll be difficult for the soldiers to find us. I think everyone's tired after today. It's not a wise decision to keep going on. Why don't we find a hiding place to rest?"

Everyone agreed after hearing Han Shuo's words and Phoebe suddenly remembered something with a roll of her bright eyes. "I've walked these woods many times and remember there's a concealed cave nearby. I've stored items there before, so we can rest there."

"Alright, we'll take a look around. It's best if we're able to find this place." Han Shuo was delighted to hear this.

Phoebe thought for a bit with a furrowed brow and pointed in a direction, saying, "If I remember correctly, it should be in that direction. Let's go take a look!"

When the group arrived, they didn't see any signs of a cave other than a thick covering of snow. Phoebe blinked, and then said resolutely, "It should be here. It looks like the cavern's been sealed off. We'll know if we dig a bit."

"Then what are we waiting for!" Lawrence roared out heartily. It looked like he quite trusted this junior sister. He took out a longsword and stabbed fiercely at the place that Phoebe was pointing at.

When they saw Lawrence go to work, Belinda and the other mages seemed to want to come help. Han Shuo called out at this moment, "Wait, don't use any magic. We should exercise caution while moving the snow away. That way, we won't leave any traces behind when we move the snow away and the soldiers will find it difficult to pick up our traces, even if they land to search of us."

Everyone agreed with Han Shuo, and it was up to Han Shuo, Phoebe, and Lawrence to carefully dig away at the snow and move it away.

"This was the place alright! Heh heh!" Phoebe called out with joy when the snow was moved away and she stabbed her sword forward."

Han Shuo and Lawrence looked at each other and moved a particularly thick chunk of snow away from the entrance, revealing a dark and looming cave entrance.

Han Shuo took a peak and discovered that this entrance was actually as large as a basketball court. It was enough for everyone on their side to enter.

"Go on in one after another. Don't enlarge the hole, or it'll be too difficult to cover up!" Han Shuo said and moved away from the entrance.

Angelica was the first to walk in, replete with teeth chattering from the cold. Emily, Candice, and the others all followed in one after another. Phoebe and Lawrence were the last ones in, with Han Shuo bringing up the rear. He set up a few branches at the entrance and shifted some of the excavated snow to cover them.

When Han Shuo felt that all was complete, he walked into the depths of the cave after taking a look around. A bonfire had already been lit at this time and the warm wave spread throughout the cave. The originally chilly cave had become a warm zone.

Thanks to the space rings, all mages carried some firewood on them during the winter time, in case they needed warmth. All sorts of tents and soft carpets were also brought out at this time and placed next to the fire. Everyone settled comfortably into their equipment to rest.

Emily and Caspian felt their limbs slowly thawing thanks to the fire. They sighed with relief as Emily slowly got to her feet. She made for the entrance, saying, "I'm going to set up a concealing boundary to prevent us from being discovered here."

Caspian also got up at the same time and walked with her, saying, "I'm going to go help her."

As Emily and Caspian got up to set up the magical boundary, Belinda and Johnny's expressions grew a bit unnatural. Their eyes danced uneasily and they looked defensively at the mouth of the cave, seemingly afraid that Emily and Caspian would do something to the cave entrance.

This was indeed the case. Han Shuo had been walking back when he saw Emily and Caspian walk towards the mouth of the cave. He turned back absentmindedly and saw that Emily and Caspian had indeed set something up at the entrance of the cave out of wariness.

"Miss Belinda, you should pay us the fees that you still owe us!" Just as Han Shuo was looking on in astonishment, Candice was already looking at Belinda unhappily and spoke with an irritated tone.

Everyone had worked together before because they had a common enemy, and the relentless pursuit from the Gryphon Legion had made it so that they couldn't relax even for a moment. This was why they hadn't taken each other to task for debts. Now that the threat from the Gryphon Legion was temporarily abated, the already existing conflict between people began to come into play.

"You're already quite lucky to be alive! Sorry, the Calamity Church has never had the habit of paying our mercenaries!" Belinda's voice was quite soft as she flicked a glance at Candice, replying noncommittally.

Clang rang out as Candice's broadsword was unsheathed. She glared ferociously at Belinda, "I escorted you to Valen City! Not only did I not receive a single gold coin of my payment, you even tried to kill me! Looks like it's time to settle our debts."

"I think you'll regret trying to do anything!" Belinda was obviously not afraid of Candice. She turned to look at Johnny and took out a scroll with the image of Ansidesi on it.

"The cave is only three meters tall. Your golem won't be able to do much if it's released!" Candice snorted and walked towards Belinda. It looked like she was planning on making a move.

Phoebe had been standing by Han Shuo's side and was basically a sister to Candice. When she saw that Candice was about to make a move, she unsheathed her longsword without hesitation and was already flaring milky white aura from its tip.

Belinda had had a disdainful expression in her eyes when they lit up upon seeing Phoebe's milky white aura, seemingly surprised.

"Humph, you're looking to die!" Johnny's chest wound had been dressed as was now covered by gauze. The sword in his hand right now was sparkling with thunder and lightning, and he didn't seem any weaker than Phoebe.

"Give them their payment. You should've paid this, otherwise you'll die!" Han Shuo quickly sized up the situation and walked over with a cold face to Phoebe's side, looking at Belinda and snorting coldly.

Gilbert also cackled as he cracked his knuckles. Caspian and the Battlefire mercenary band also stood on Candice's side. It looked like a fight would break out as soon as Belinda refused to back down.

Although Belinda's voice was soft, her temper was quite stubborn and she didn't display any fear at this time. She seemed to be prepared for a hard fight.

"This doesn't seem to be the time for inner conflict. Heh heh. Miss Candice, how much do they owe you? I'll pay it for them, so let's not fight over this right now, shall we?" Lawrence suddenly stood up, to everyone's great surprise and smiled to smooth things over.

Chapter 189: You have no chance

Shaking her head, Candice rejected Lawrence's suggestion. She looked resolutely and admonished, "This isn't just about the money!"

Candice noticeably held the upper hand in this situation. With the aid of Han Shuo and the authors, Belinda and Johnny couldn't do anything at all. It was apparent from Belinda and Johnny's equipment and weapons that the Calamity Church wasn't short on money. Belinda could easily settle this matter with a bit of money, so she was being surprisingly stubborn this time.

"The Calamity Church isn't someone you can threaten!" The scar on the injured Johnny's face became even more apparent because of his rage. The longsword in his hand shone with blinding electrical light thanks to the power of thunder and lightening.

Just as Han Shuo was about to open his mouth, Johnny's body suddenly moved forward and charged at Han Shuo. He had a look of killing intent on his face and the longsword in his hand was as if an electrical dragon, exploding with the frightening power of thunder and lightning and lighting up the somewhat dark cave.

"Be careful!" Phoebe and Emily were both shocked by Johnny's sudden motions and couldn't help but cry out in reminder.

A pile of white bones suddenly gathered in the air and formed a white bone shield, blocking the longsword that was striking like an electrical dragon. Two bone spears flew out viciously afterwards, crashing into Johnny's longsword, which was wreathed in lightning before it had a chance to strike the white bone shield.

Some light cracks rang out as the bone spears exploded. The longsword angrily gave off sparks as it smashed into the bone shield beneath Johnny's thrust.

The white bone shield immediately fractured into many bone fragments as Johnny's thrust still made viciously for Han Shuo despite being thwarted twice.

The Demonslayer Edge finally howled as it made its appearance. A metallic clang exploded through the air as a cold light flashed in Han Shuo's hands. Han Shuo grunted as he was driven back for a few steps. The lightning flared once on Johnny's longsword as it abruptly extinguished.

Johnny's imposing momentum finally slowed down at this point, and when he planned on regrouping for another attack, Caspian, Emily, and Phoebe were already standing by Han Shuo's side and glaring at Johnny angrily.

"I don't think I'm your enemy, hmm?" Han Shuo steadied himself and circulated the magical yuan around his body, confirming that he'd suffered no harm before directing a cold look at Johnny and asking faintly.

"You lied to us during the Bob Ascher operation and made us cannon fodder. Apart from distracting a few people for us, you didn't go to any other efforts. Now that everything's over, don't think I don't know what plans you're making in your heart. You're the one who deserves to die the most!" Johnny grimaced as he looked frostily at Han Shuo.

Since Bob Ascher was the chief of the Gryphon Legion, whether or not Han Shuo and Emily had concrete evidence, they had no right to condemn Bob Ascher to death, not to mention engaging in an assassination attempt like this.

If Han Shuo and Emily had colluded with the Calamity Church to kill Bob Ascher, then there would've been severe consequences from the Dark Mantle's side afterwards. Not to mention that Han Shuo knew full well the exact strength of his intended victim, and that it was impossible to kill Bob Ascher in Valen City. Only fervent religious followers would do something that held such a high risk.

Nodding, Han Shuo smiled faintly. "Since things are out in the open, don't blame me for cutting our relationship here then. You've already made a move against me, don't blame me for doing the same."

Han Shuo turned to look at the wryly smiling Lawrence after speaking, "You still want to help them now?"

Spreading his hands, Lawrence took a few steps back. He smiled ruefully, “I’d been quite interested in the Calamity Church’s golem and wanted to obtain the method to make one through peaceful means. It looks like that’s not too likely now.”

Lawrence’s words also confirmed Han Shuo’s earlier speculation. For someone concerned with only his matters, he must have had something else on his mind to suddenly give Belinda and Johnny a helping hand. Lawrence’s words were an obvious indication that he was standing on Han Shuo and Phoebe’s side.

Nodding, Han Shuo smiled slightly at Lawrence. “Many thanks!”

“Do you think you’ve got us?” Standing behind Johnny all this time, Belinda finally spoke up and took out the item she’d used to seal the golem. It looked like she was finally going to make a move.

“Heh heh, you won’t have the chance to use that!” Han Shuo laughed for a long while and used the demon infant to manipulate the drop of blood essence hidden within Belinda. A mere thought was enough for the frosty air within the blood essence to invade Belinda’s body. She felt her neck grow numb and fell backwards in a dead faint.

“What, what did you do to her?” Belinda’s sudden faint shocked Johnny as he looked at Han Shuo in great panic.

“She’ll live, but there’s no need for you to continue living. It’s too dangerous to allow you to live.” Han Shuo smiled coldly and suddenly opened his mouth to chant a necromancy spell. A hate warrior appeared out of thin air along with three other zombie warriors standing in front of Han Shuo.

Johnny knew that Belinda wouldn’t be able to help him now that things had deteriorated to such a stage. He hesitated only slightly and immediately turned to run, trying to leave from the only entrance. Both Emily and Caspian suddenly started chanting and several thick branches snaked over adroitly, as well as a cloud of black mist.

“You can’t escape!” Emily chuckled and chanted another spell. The cloud of black mist seemed to be some kind of restraint as Johnny’s body suddenly stiffened as soon as it neared him. The flexible tree branches then entangled his body.

Johnny was a thunder swordsmage alright. He could still barely manage to move even when restrained like this. He lifted the longsword in his hand with difficulty and planned on chopping away at the tree branches that held him down. However, the three zombie warriors and hate warrior had already closed in on him.

A bolt of lightning flashed as the longsword sliced through the air, hitting the two zombie warriors that arrived first and sending electricity through the zombie warriors' bodies. The slash of the longsword made the two halt abruptly and never move again.

As he deployed the longsword with difficulty and planned on making a move on one of the other zombie warriors, the hate warrior's club crashed downwards and connected with Johnny's sword wielding right hand. The sharp sound of a bone breaking rang out and the sword slid to the ground after a wail of pain from Johnny.

Han Shuo had been standing beside Phoebe and the others when he suddenly flashed behind Johnny, deploying the "Demonic Art of Assimilation" with his back to the others. He absorbed Johnny's wailing soul into the demon infant. When the demon infant had overcome Johnny's soul, it was as if Han Shuo had been greatly fortified and only then did he bring a punch down on Johnny's back.

A thud sounded as life drained from Johnny's eyes. He fell down listlessly, a caved in handprint apparent on his back.

After wiping out Johnny, Han Shuo's demon infant grew noticeably and began to use the magical yuan to purify Johnny's soul, turning it into nourishment for the demon infant. As a thunder swordsmage, the strength of Johnny's soul was noticeably more abundant than that of the Gryphon Legion soldier's. Han Shuo could clearly feel the demon infant grow and develop as it did so.

"He's dead." Emily slowly walked over when she saw that Johnny had died. When she saw Han Shuo stand there without moving and not searching Johnny's body for valuables as usual, she spoke up to alert him of the fact.

Han Shuo abruptly came to himself as he was thoroughly reflecting over the changes to the demon infant. He continued to operate the "Demonic Art of Assimilation" without change in expression and nodded towards Emily. He pointed at Johnny, "Can you handle this? I need to rest for a bit."

Han Shuo sat down cross legged after speaking and focused his attention on the changes in the demon infant after it had absorbed Johnny's soul. The stronger one was, the stronger his soul. The strength from Johnny's soul seemed to be accelerating the demon infant's growth.

The demon infant was the foundation of the "true demon" realm. Han Shuo would be able to break through to the next level, the bloodlust realm, only after the demon infant reached a certain level. He would only need the power from souls in this realm. Once the demon infant was strong enough to reach the "bloodlust realm", it wouldn't require the energy from the souls anymore and it would be able to be deployed to greater uses.

Just as Han Shuo was quietly training, everyone else huddled together and chattered away. After Belinda had been captured and Johnny was killed, there were no other suspicious characters in the cave. Candice had seen Belinda mysteriously taken out by Han Shuo and didn't mention anything about compensation. She laughed as she chatted with Phoebe and Emily.

Lawrence and Phoebe finally had time to converse with each other. Caspian was also reunited with Angelica after his long absence and could breathe a sigh of relief. Angelica was pouting that he wouldn't describe the events of the past two days.

Han Shuo had been meditating with his eyes closed when he suddenly opened them and raised his finger to make a "shushing" noise.

Han Shuo walked cautiously towards the entrance of the cave without saying anything. Everyone watched him place his ear against the entrance of the cave as their relaxed emotions once again grew nervous.

Footsteps slowly grew louder and approached from the distance. The sounds of several people talking traveled into everyone's ears at this moment.

"The Kerlan Grand Canyon is so vast that there's no way we can find them after they've escaped in here. What's the point in searching aimlessly like this!" A voice said.

"I know right, but the chief is crazy with anger this time. His two sons have been murdered and someone has been so bold as to attempt to assassinate him within Valen City. They've even gotten away with it. The chief has been fighting on the north and south all these years and have seen all sorts of situations, but has never been humiliated like this before. I don't think he'll rest before he's caught these people and killed them!" Another person responded with emotion.

"I've heard that so much has happened in Valen City because the chief offended those in the capital. If this really is the case, then the chief is in for a world of trouble and I wonder if we'll be affected as well."

"Don't worry, we were just following orders. Nothing should happen to us as long as we take note of the greater picture. We're also not the chief's confidantes, and we should listen to the orders from the king. We'll just follow orders before any further developments."

"Come, there's no place to hide here anyways, let's try someplace else!"

The group of people passed by the cave in which everyone was hidden in. They didn't discover anything out of the ordinary, and the sounds of them conversing grew fainter and fainter before vanishing entirely.

Another two groups of people passed by afterwards. Thanks to Emily and Caspian's actions, the entrance to the cave was well concealed. No one discovered anything out of the ordinary and didn't spend more time there.

"Alright, it's been a tiring night, everyone take a rest!" Han Shuo waited for a while and noticed that there were no further movements outside, so he turned and smiled to those inside.

Everyone sighed in relief and nodded, before starting to meditate, or went to sleep by the warm bonfire.

Everyone rested for a day within the cave and spent a full day recovering their strength. Han Shuo mediated for the entire day and fully absorbed Johnny's soul, recovering his mental strength and magical yuan.

"It's nighttime now, I think they've forgotten after a day of searching. We can leave now!" Han Shuo got up.

Everyone else got to their feet as well and packed their belongings. Emily and Caspian took down the boundary at the door and the group walked out of the cave.

Chapter 190: Beauties in both arms

The waning moon hung high in the sky as cold moonlight spilled down, casting a silvery white layer across the world and brightening up the night.

All was very quiet without the slightest bit of sound. Even bugs weren't willing to venture out on this cold winter night, not to mention humans or beasts.

When they walked out of the cave, they could immediately feel that the outside temperature was much colder than it had been within the cave. Even though they'd been prepared, they couldn't help but wrap themselves more snugly in their clothing and huff out a breath.

"Things shouldn't be delayed. We should leave here as soon as possible and return to the Empire." Han Shuo looked at everyone and spoke solemnly.

After such a huge disturbance, they didn't know if Bob Ascher had discovered that the important items within his secret chamber had been stolen. When his search came up empty handed, he would discover this sooner or later when he returned to Valen City, he'd be beside himself with panic then.

Therefore, Han Shuo and Emily had to use the shortest amount of time possible to deliver the intelligence to the upper levels of the Dark Mantle and take care of Bob Ascher as soon as possible, in case he got up to any trouble before they could make their report.

"Some towns in the Kerlan Grand Canyon belong to no jurisdiction. The Dark Mantle has some strongholds there and a magical apparatus to communicate with the senior executives is in the largest one. Bryan and I need to head there as soon as possible. We're in very little danger now, it looks like it's time to go our own separate ways!" Emily thought for a moment and then raised this suggestion with a smile.

"Those who were accompanying the shipment with me all left Valen City before we entered Elaine's hotel. I'm moving alone now and also left instructions previously, so the guild won't need me for a while. I'll return to the Empire with Bryan.” Phoebe expressed her stance whilst standing next to Bryan.

Caspian and Lawrence both thought for moment and expressed their intentions to leave. Caspian thanked Han Shuo solemnly, and Lawrence’s gaze patrolled the captured Belinda before saying, “Bryan, if you can get the secrets behind refining that golem, I’d be willing to buy it from you for a high price!”

Nodding, Han Shuo indicated his understanding and smiled, “I’ll ask her, but I’d say don’t get your hopes up. I feel that even if we obtained the method, you wouldn’t be able to mass produce them. Otherwise, with the Calamity Church’s deep pockets, they would’ve produced a golem army a long time ago!”

Lawrence started and once again opened his mouth to say, “It would be of great help if I can even refine one or two of them.”

“Alright, I’ll try my best!” Han Shuo said with resignation when he saw that Lawrence wasn’t giving up.

“Big bad guy, will we meet again?” Angelica suddenly turned to speak to Han Shuo when Caspian was about to leave.

Shrugging, Han Shuo said dashingly, “I think we will, we’ve already met up twice in not too long of a period. We seem to have quite a bit of shared destiny!”

“Alright, many thanks to you this time. If you have a chance to, come be a guest at the elf tribes within the Dark Forest in the future. Angelica will host you well!” Caspian bowed towards Han Shuo and smiled.

Lawrence and the others didn’t linger after Caspian and Angelica had left. The former left in the opposite direction of Caspian and Angelica. Han Shuo started worrying what might happen if Caspian and Angelica learned of his identity as the leader of the forest trolls. What if the two of them hated him? It was probably best not to pay the elves a visit then.

The Battlefire mercenary band’s senior swordsman Davis was saddened after Angelica had left. The fierce warrior’s gazed still stared dumbly in Angelica's direction.

"Candice, how much does that Belinda owe you? How about I pay for her? We have use for her and can't give her to you!" Emily looked at Candice at this moment and took out her crystal card, seeming to want to pay Candice's fees.

"Forget it sister Emily, we're not short on money anyways. We'll treat this mission as a failure, no worries!" Candice immediately responded hastily when she saw that Emily wanted to pay and looked at the mercenaries behind her. "Alright, alright, we're going to leave as well. We have more missions to execute!"

Candice didn't wait for Emily to transfer the gold coins after she'd finished speaking and hastily left with the mercenaries. Only Han Shuo, Phoebe, and Emily were left in front of the cave, as well as a bizarrely quiet Gilbert.

"Eh, why are you so quiet?" Han Shuo finally remembered that Gilbert hadn't spoken up in quite a long time when he saw this and couldn't help but ask in surprise.

Gilbert had been standing there with closed eyes and immediately spoke with a long face after hearing Han Shuo's question. "Disloyal master, I was injured on the way and have been recovering whenever I had time. Why have you only thought of me now?"

Han Shuo finally recalled that when they'd rushed out of Valen City, Gilbert had been hit by attacks from two archmages and a horde of knights. He'd then dragged along a group of people and flown for so long, no wonder he'd been so quiet.

"No worries, you've got thick skin anyways!" Han Shuo chuckled and thought for a moment. "How about this, go home first and rest up, I'll bring you out again once you've recovered."

"I've only come out for a few days and you're sending me back already?!" Gilbert immediately complained loudly when he heard that Han Shuo was sending him back to the cemetery of death.

“Go on, be a good boy or you’ll be in for it. I have two companions now and it will be quite an inconvenience to travel with you, not to mention that you’re injured!” Han Shuo cackled as he set up the magic sticks and kicked Gilbert in whether he wanted to or not.

Han Shuo mobilized his mental strength and activated the transportation matrix. Gilbert vanished without a trace afterwards. Gilbert wouldn’t be able to emerge from the cemetery of death without the Eye of Darkness, so Han Shuo’s wasn’t worried that he’d get into any trouble.

Phoebe, on the other side, exclaimed softly in surprise when she saw Han Shuo set up a small transportation matrix and send Gilbert away. Her clear eyes looked at Han Shuo with even greater surprise.

“Heh heh, just a transportation matrix, nothing to be surprised about. Let’s go, we can leave now!” Han Shuo chuckled softly and stored the sticks in his space ring, rushing Phoebe and Emily onwards.

Having two companions on his trip wasn’t necessarily a good thing. The usually coldly aloof Phoebe seemed to have adopted a very intimate attitude with Han Shuo on this trip. Whether she was doing this on purpose or not, this made Emily cast some aggrieved looks at Han Shuo.

As a mage, Emily was wrapped warmly in thick furs but still shivered regardless. Han Shuo couldn’t help but feel a bit pained. However, Emily was purposefully keeping some distance between Han Shuo, as if deathly afraid that Phoebe would discover their relationship.

Han Shuo had been flying through the air with Phoebe in his arms along the way, and Emily had been expending her mental strength by using the levitation spell to hover above the ground. However, as an archmage, Emily could only sustain this type of flight for a limited duration of time. Han Shuo noticed that her lips were turning white towards the end of the night.

He suddenly decreased his speed and moved next to Emily, saying, “I’ll be fine even if I’m flying carrying with two people!”

Han Shuo reached out a hand and wrapped it around Emily’s soft waist, disregarding whether or not Phoebe would agree. He had Phoebe under his right arm and Emily under his left arm as he flew through the air. He also silently started circulating magical yuan and warmed up Emily's chilled body.

Emily struggled briefly under Han Shuo's arm and attempted to extract herself from his embrace, but discovered that she was firmly pinned beneath his arm. When Emily turned her head to look at him, she noticed the pain and resolution in his eyes. Sweetness flooded her heart.

Whether it was because the warmth was flooding into her body or not, Emily's body suddenly started heating up and all of her previous chills were instantly dissipated. She seemed to be encompassed in warmth.

"I feel like your actions in holding her around the waist seem to be quite well practiced!" Phoebe brought her lips close to Han Shuo's ears and spoke lowly with a hint of jealousy, seemingly unafraid that Emily would hear these words.

"We need to hurry and make it to the Dark Mantle stronghold. We'll be in a lot of trouble if we're late, so me flying with the two of you is the fastest way!" Han Shuo's expression was remote and he didn't express anything because of Phoebe's words.

He deployed his "Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens" to its maximum effect along the way and also split out a portion of magical yuan to warm up Emily's body. He shot towards one of the mountain ranges in the Kerlan Grand Canyon according to Emily's instructions.

Even with Han Shuo's magical yuan, having to fly for so long and help Emily warm up meant that he suffered greatly beneath the energy drain. He was already sweating and panting profusely towards the end of the night.

"Let's take a break, you look so tired!" Although Phoebe had been a bit jealous, her feelings for Han Shuo were real and her heart went out to him when she saw him sweating.

Emily also felt quite bad for Han Shuo. She'd planned on opening her mouth to tell him to rest, but since Phoebe had already spoken up, there was no need for her to say anything.

He was indeed a bit tired now. Han Shuo had been going non stop since last night, running after the battle, using all the time within the cave to digest the strength of Johnny's soul afterwards.

A pair of sharp eyes patrolled the area as Han Shuo discovered a hole in a tree. He landed in front of it with Emily and Phoebe, brushing aside some accumulated snow and discovering that there was some space within the tree.

"Let's rest inside!" Han Shuo suggested.

The trunk itself was quite solid, with only a tall, narrow hole in the roots. The three of them discovered that the cold wind couldn't make its way all the way inside. Han Shuo plugged the hole with his body whereas Phoebe and Emily occupied the two sides.

Although there was some space inside, it was a bit cramped with the three of them. The three of them were pressed tightly against each other. Their arms and legs were pressed against the others and it was a bit difficult to move around.

Han Shuo took a deep breath in after relaxing and circulated the magical yuan in his body, recovering swiftly from his depletion just now.

Emily and Phoebe were pressed against Han Shuo's front, and Emily's chest and stomach were resting against Phoebe's back and butt. Han Shuo's chest was at their shoulders, and his hands were resting on his thighs. There was a small sliver of space between his legs and the two girls.

It was night, and the only source of light was blocked by Han Shuo's back, making the cave ink black.

Apart from Han Shuo, the two females basically had no vision of their surroundings.

Han Shuo's chest was pressed against their delicate shoulders as he started circulating his magical yuan to transport some warmth to Emily. His left hand on his thigh twitched a little as he started placing it on Emily's.

Chapter 191: The cry of help from the little skeleton

A warm sensation drew closer as Emily and Phoebe felt it at the same time. Emily felt it on her thighs, and Phoebe felt it on her pert butt. When Han Shuo's hand landed on Emily's thigh, her body stiffened as she thought that Han Shuo was trying to do something funny at this time. She moved her thigh away in a bit of an admonishment.

In regards to this, Han Shuo's hand suddenly moved backward thanks to her movements and landed on Phoebe's pert, well rounded butt.

"Umph!" A soft cry emitted from Phoebe's mouth. Han Shuo could see her cheeks blushing furiously red in the darkness.

As a mage, Emily had extremely thick clothing on, but as a swordmaster, Phoebe was much more resistant to the cold, so her clothes weren't that thick. In addition, a swordmaster needed to be able to jump over rocks and be agile in battle. She was wearing a normal outfit on the lower part of her body, and so Han Shuo could clearly feel the fullness of her buttocks when his hand landed on them.

Phoebe's face was a flaming red in the darkness as her heart thumped rapidly. How dare this daring pervert treat me like this in such a place! How wicked!

Her heart racing, Phoebe craned her neck in Han Shuo's direction to give him a firm glare. Han Shuo was quite enjoying himself and couldn't help but turn his head to look at her as well. When their eyes met, he made a funny face at her.

There was no light within the cave, but because the three were very close to each other, Phoebe could still see Han Shuo's face. She couldn't do anything else but continue to curse at his daringness inwardly.

Han Shuo had been planning on sending warmth to Emily, but had ended up touching Phoebe instead due to Emily's shyness. Because he'd already been intimate with Phoebe in Valen City, and the two of them had basically confirmed their relationship, Han Shuo wasn't going to be any sort of gentleman now. He decided to go with the flow and placed his hand firmly on Phoebe's butt, greedily kneading it.

It felt damn good doing so as the soft roundness of her butt still gave him a marvelous sensation through the clothing. Phoebe however, had never been so treated. Her body temperature continued to rise and her originally calm breathing began to become a bit heavier.

Emily and Phoebe's vision were both affected in such a dark place, but Han Shuo could clearly see everything around him. Not only was Phoebe's face blushing red and her eyes misty, she was breathing hot air out from her cheery red lips. Han Shuo saw it very clearly, and saw how alluring her expression was right now. He got a lot more into it and became even more bold with his movements.

His hand suddenly felt that the thin layer of clothing was an unbearable obstruction. He tugged her shirt upwards and then placed his hand on her smooth and warm waist. As Phoebe's breathing grew heavier, he moved his hand down towards her well rounded butt.

In this regard, Phoebe's neck and face were red as she found it more difficult than ever to control her panting. She couldn't help but moan softly.

Just as Han Shuo was thoroughly enjoying himself and wanted to continue, he suddenly heard Emily cough softly and a sharp pain travel from his waist, as if she'd pinched him.

If it'd been anyone else, Han Shuo likely would've felt a bit awkward, but Emily and Han Shuo had long since slept together countless times, so he had no reservations around her at all. He turned his head to look at her and moved his right leg, shifting his knee behind Emily's butt and bumping her with his knee.

Emily was completely irritated by his actions, thinking that he was simply too bold. Not only was he violating Phoebe right in front of her, but he was doing the same thing to her as well. Her slender hands had been resting on his waist after her pinch, but now she made up her mind and slowly moved it downwards. She gave it a firm pinch when she'd reached her destination.

"Ow!!!" A weird cry suddenly burst from Han Shuo's mouth. His proud lower body had been given a firm pinch and he couldn't help but yell out in pain. He'd been planning on violating both girls, but abruptly retracted his hands and feet.

"What's wrong? What happened to you?" Phoebe had been losing her composure in her aroused state when she immediately snapped back to herself after hearing Han Shuo's cries, turning around to ask Han Shuo with some panic.

"There was a squirrel inside that probably bit him. It's probably flown out of the hole by now!" Emily's odd voice sounded noncommittally in the darkness. Han Shuo could hear the glee in her voice.

Little hussy, you dared pinch me even there! See how I take care of you next time! Han Shuo grit his teeth and started plotting on how he would punish Emily.

"Is that right, Bryan?" Emily asked happily and on purpose when she saw that Han Shuo wasn't agreeing with her.

"Eh... yes. A wicked squirrel bit me. I'm going to make it suffer if I catch it!" Han Shuo's mouth was bitter from his inability to speak the truth. Not only did he have to swallow what had happened, but he had play along with Emily as well.

"We invaded its territory, it's only right that it treats us thus. Don't think of killing people and setting things on fire everyday!" Phoebe's voice only regained its customary coolness now.

"Miss Phoebe, your body temperature is a bit high and you were panting a bit loudly just now. Did you catch a chill from traveling in the cold wind these the past two days?" Emily was quite happy to see Han Shuo's discomforted state. It was as if her repressed emotions had been vented all at once, and she gave no thought to the threat in his voice.

However, she didn't feel satisfied doing this only to Han Shuo. An evil thought struck Emily as she pretended to ask Phoebe.

“Eh... I guess so!” Phoebe’s cheeks reddened again with Emily’s question as she responded with some awkwardness.

“Bryan, look at how you’ve made Miss Phoebe catch a cold. Why aren’t you holding her tighter to warm her up? However, don’t take advantage of her! Heh heh!” Emily chuckled.

Both Han Shuo and Phoebe were a bit awkward after hearing these words. There was an obvious intent in them, and Phoebe could naturally deduce that their embarrassing moments had been discovered by Emily just now. She couldn’t help but glare ferociously at Han Shuo.

With the way things were, Han Shuo naturally understood that it wasn’t very possible to take advantage of Phoebe or Emily again. To someone as perverted as Han Shuo, he wouldn’t feel a thing even if he stood naked on a winter night like this. In order to prevent Emily from speaking further, Han Shuo said, “I need to go relieve myself, you ladies rest here!”

He didn’t wait for them to speak before struggling out of the hole. When he was a few steps away, he sat down cross legged in a snowdrift and began to circulate his magical yuan.

When Han Shuo felt himself enter an ideal state with circulating his magical yuan, a sudden strong impulse suddenly tugged on his soul. It was a bizarre summons that was reflected in his heart, like a voice carrying a message from the depths of his soul and immediately wanted to return to his side.

Han Shuo was greatly startled and didn’t know what was going on. However, when he cleared his mind of stray thoughts and focused his concentration, he suddenly discovered a marvelous connection that had been unaffected by distance. Or perhaps it had always existed, but he’d only discovered it now.

It was a summons from the little skeleton in the other dimension!

When Han Shuo felt this cry carry with it a plea for help, he immediately used the most basic of skeleton summoning spells and followed this weak but unbreakable connection to summon the little skeleton.

The little skeleton creaked as he stood in front of Han Shuo, still waving his bone dagger around like he'd weathered a great battle. The bones of his body were cracked and the seven boys spurs on his back seemed a bit dull, perhaps because they had been cutting through things for a long time.

Judging from the little skeleton's body condition and current motions, Han Shuo could be certain that the little skeleton had fought with creatures in the other dimension, and he knew clearly that it had been the little skeleton crying out for help earlier.

This all seemed rather fantastical!

Chapter 192: Valley of Sunshine

Some of his bones had been broken, and the little skeleton suddenly seemed at a loss as he slowly stopped waving the bone dagger about. Han Shuo hadn't treated the little skeleton as an ordinary dark creature since the very beginning.

From the moment that he began practicing necromancy magic and summoned this little skeleton, he had become Han Shuo's indispensable companion. Before he'd learned how to fight, the little skeleton had released Han Shuo from the drudgery of daily chores and had helped him take out the trash and clean.

When Han Shuo had used magical yuan to refine him, the little skeleton was even less of an ordinary summoned creature to him. The former had assumed an essential role whenever Han Shuo met danger in the future, always assisting him in his escape.

But now, Han Shuo discovered that the little skeleton had a marvelous connection with him, similar to how he had one with it. Han Shuo had never thought of nor attempted to discover the little skeleton's matters or methods in the other dimension. If he hadn't concentrated his attention this time, he might've missed the little skeleton's cry for help and the little skeleton might no longer exist now.

A few traces of guilt grew in Han Shuo's heart when his thoughts traveled down this path. His necromancy magic would have to reach new heights before he would be able to understand what had happened to the little skeleton in the other dimension, and if there were any other existences in that world apart from regularly summoned dark creatures.

It was even more impossible for him to communicate with the other beings in the other dimension for the time being.

As Han Shuo closed his eyes and attempted to communicate with the little skeleton, he discovered that the little skeleton seemed to have realized that it was in different surroundings. His wildly flailing arms and legs slowed down as his empty eye sockets looked around in confusion, abruptly quieting down when he looked in Han Shuo's direction.

Han Shuo could clearly feel the little skeleton's chaotic presence calm down.

It was as if the little skeleton realized that the danger was gone with Han Shuo's appearance, that he was truly safe!

It was a speechless kind of trust, an innate dependence that was similar to how a naughty child would sob endlessly in front of a fierce beast, but would think his parents would protect him, no matter if his parents actually could or not.

A baffling sensation suddenly surged into Han Shuo's heart, making his emotions complex. An exceedingly intricate emotion wrapped around his heart, giving him the illusion for a second that this little skeleton made of bones was like his child. It was a feeling that he never wanted to be apart from the little skeleton.

"Alright, it's alright now!" Han Shuo walked over to the little skeleton very naturally and reached out a hand to stroke the little skeleton's skull, speaking softly in comfort.

Han Shuo could clearly feel that this simple word of comfort brought immediate comfort to the little skeleton.

"Who are you talking to?" Emily and Phoebe walked out from the tree hole at the same time, with Phoebe out in front. She was a bit jealous when she heard Han Shuo's tender voice, thinking that Han Shuo was speaking to another woman, so she asked before she could even see who it was.

But when she saw Han Shuo pat the little skeleton's head benevolently and his tone of soft tenderness, that she'd never heard before, she immediately lost her jealousy and looked a bit oddly at Han Shuo.

Since history began, the necromancers of the Profound Continent only viewed their summoned dark creatures as tools. Phoebe had never heard of a necromancer treating a dark creature as kindly and as friendly as Han Shuo was doing.

Therefore, when she saw his actions, her heart was immediately filled with shock. Her thoughts raced as she mused that this little skeleton was likely this amazing because his master also treated him differently. It looked like Han Shuo's mysteries didn't stem from his wondrous martial arts techniques, but rather his methods were indeed a bit different from others.

He turned his head to look at Phoebe and Emily with a smile, sweeping his gaze across a stunningly beautiful face and another quietly pretty face. He noted that they seemed to be in good spirits and asked with a smile, "Did you guys get a good rest?"

"Yes, we can keep going if that's alright with you?" Emily felt that she could levitate again for a while after some meditation and so she raised this suggestion.

The senior executives of the Dark Mantle had to learn of the information she held in her hand as soon as possible. They needed to execute their plan against Bob Ascher as soon as possible. As a Dark Mantle member, Emily knew that the timing of action was paramount and that time could have a heaven and earth difference on the results. This was why she was in such a hurry.

"Alright, then let's go." Han Shuo didn't say any incessant chatter, as he grabbed the little skeleton's waist and flashed to where Phoebe was. He reached out another hand and grabbed her soft waist, that was devoid of any fat, flying through the air.

The sun was rising again and its rays dyed everything a faint red, adding some color to the silver world beneath it. It was akin to a fair skinned girl suddenly blushing from shyness.

A towering mountain and valley sprawled out beneath them. Some magical creatures, unafraid of the cold, emerged from cover and probed with their sharp claws. Life began to appear in the mountain valley beneath the warmth of the winter sun.

Last night's chill was chased out of Emily's body thanks to the effects of the sun. Her beautiful face was upturned towards the warm light as she revealed a sweet smile. She looked with interest at the scene below her, seeming to want to imprint the view into her heart.

“It’s so beautiful!” Phoebe said softly in Han Shuo’s grasp as her eyes sparkled.

Han Shuo also took a quick glance at their surroundings upon hearing her words, grunting with agreement and then flying forward in silence. Waxing eloquently in front of a beautiful scene was something women liked to do. He only wanted to get to the stronghold as quickly as possible and complete his mission.

After several more hours and traveling over two small mountain valleys, Han Shuo cast his eyes ahead again. The sun was high in the sky at this point and the mountain valley was no longer covered in snow. The ground was clean and neat, with short buildings of all sorts of architectural styles scattered in rows in the small mountain valley.

Different looking humans, orcs, and elves were walking out of their homes onto the clean and neat streets, thoroughly bundled up in an assortment of interesting styles of dress.

“We’re almost there, let’s travel the rest of the way on foot!” Emily could easily see this from afar thanks to the bright sunlight. She called out softly in obvious joy.

This place was similar to the town of Drol, just a bit more complex. Although there were hotels and places where one could enjoy themselves, the adventurers and merchants within Drol were all basically from the Lancelot Empire and governed by the Empire’s soldiers.

The adventurers and merchants here, however, were from the Lancelot and Kasi Empires as well as the orc tribes. There were also those from further away, or minorities that called the Kerlan Grand Canyon their home. Of course, such a diverse place was naturally not under the jurisdiction of any single country.

“The one maintaining order is the greatest power within the Valley of Sunshine. They’re in charge of protecting everyone’s interests in transactions and preventing the incursion from thieves. In this regard, all three countries have their own spheres of influence here. When one side is strong enough to the point where the other two have no objections, that sphere will take over in maintaining order and exact heavy tolls from the merchants and adventurers to run this town.”

“However, this status quo isn’t set in stone. If another side can prove that they are stronger than the other two, then the one upholding order will change. Currently, the ones upholding order is the Cairo mercenary band from the Kasi Empire!” Emily explained to the other two as they landed and proceeded on foot to the Valley of Sunshine.

“If the ones upholding order act on behalf of their country, then won’t that infringe on the rights and profits of adventurers and merchants from other countries?” Han Shuo asked after thinking over this briefly.

“Don’t worry, no matter which country they were originally from, they would never act on behalf of their own country when they become the power upholding order. Otherwise, they will be ostracized by all the adventurers and merchants and will never have the right to regain power again. There are no nationalities within the Valley of Sunshine. Not participating in conflicts between countries is the first rule that they must follow!” Emily smiled faintly as she explained this to Han Shuo.

He nodded to express his understanding, privately thinking that this was quite an interesting place. All sorts of people were here for their own interests. The fees gained from the transactions conducted between the three countries must be quite a sum indeed.

Han Shuo naturally wasn’t too familiar with these common sense rules, so Emily and Phoebe took turns in explaining them to him along the way. Han Shuo listened carefully until they reached the border control office of the Valley of Sunshine. High fences of metal were erected here as knights in gray armor patrolled behind them with distant expressions.

Han Shuo gleaned from Emily and Phoebe’s conversation that these were the members of the Kasi Empire’s Cairo mercenary band. It was rather astonishing that there were two to three thousand people in this mercenary band!

There were experts of all professions who practiced diligently day and night. Their battle strength was even stronger than the standing army of other countries. They had a strict code of conduct and proper division of duties. In the year that they'd been assigned to the security of the Valley of sunshine, they'd beaten back raids from robbers several times, displaying a competency that the merchants and adventurers within the valley were rather satisfied with.

"Where are you three coming from? Do you have passage tokens, or do you need to apply for them now?" A tall, somewhat handsome knight walked over from the metal fences and was quite polite when he saw Phoebe and Emily walk over. A trace of a mesmerizing smile played about his lips as he asked gently.

"I'm from the Boozt Merchant Guild and they're with me. This is my token!" Phoebe's expression was coldly aloof as she took out a token from her space ring, handing it over coolly.

The mature knight reached out respectfully to take Phoebe's token and took a close look at it. He handed it back with a smile and said urbanely, "No problem, the Valley of Sunshine welcomes your arrival. Our Cairo mercenary band will ensure your safety and the security of your belongings."

Phoebe took out a bag of gold coins and threw it onto a table near the fence with a thunk. She had her usual distant and reserved manner when dealing with outsiders. "Our fees!"

Phoebe turned to look at Han Shuo afterwards and reached out with her slender, jade hands to wrap them around Han Shuo's arm. The proud haughtiness faded from her face as she smiled, "Let's go, we can go in now!"

Seeing such a stunning beauty such as Phoebe paid no heed to the men around her and even gave off an aura that rebuffed all attempts to approach her, then suddenly underwent such drastic change in attitude to wait upon Han Shuo immediately drew looks of admiration and envy from the mercenaries.

However, those looks changed to ones of odd puzzlement when they saw Han Shuo tug along the little skeleton in his wake. They didn't say anything however, seeming to be used to seeing a lot of weird characters. It didn't seem too out of the ordinary that an adventurer had a dark creature in his wake.

Everyone was a bit vain at heart. When he saw the others look at him with such admiration, Han Shuo also felt quite proud. Phoebe is really showing me some face here!

"Come on, let's go you!" When Emily saw Han Shuo stop where he stood, wreathed in smiles, she knew exactly what he was thinking about and couldn't help but roll her eyes at him. She snorted in laughter and pushed him from behind.

Han Shuo laughed heartily as he crossed through the fence while being subjected to endless looks of envy, walking into the Valley of Sunshine.

Chapter 193: Place of extreme water

Han Shuo took a stroll around the entire valley and discovered that the Valley of Sunshine was formed by interestingly shaped buildings. These buildings were built from different materials such as durable, gray rocks or wood from hundred year old trees. Some were round and others pointy with a chimney.

It was because so many merchants and adventurers from various countries co-existed here that caused the architectural style to also be heavily influenced in a multitude of different ways.

Early in the morning, inhabitants walked out of their homes to shovel away snowfall that had accumulated from the previous night, clearing the space in front of their door. This was also similar to a small city, as there were all sorts of vendors and stalls here, displaying their wares from a variety of countries.

“These stalls all belong to small merchants. The larger merchants only spend a few days here because they have long since been in contact with their business partners, and are just here to conclude the transactions.” It wasn’t Phoebe’s first visit to the valley. She held onto Han Shuo’s arm with her slender fingers and explained in a soft voice.

“Alright, you guys have fun shopping, I’m going to take care of business first. When you tire later, you can rest in the last store on this street, I’ll arrange for someone to meet you there!” Emily’s thoughts were completely preoccupied by the mission.

Nodding, Han Shuo understood that she was quite anxious and said, “Go and take care of business, we’ll come find you later!”

A thought struck Phoebe after Emily left as she suddenly recalled, “Oh right, I haven’t had time to collect the materials on the list that you gave me. There are many rarities here from other countries. Why don’t we take a look around? Maybe we can find some of the materials you need.”

Han Shuo finally recalled that he’d once asked Phoebe to help him collect the materials he would need to refine a wood elite zombie. The yin demon cave and earth elite zombie were operating without a hitch back in the cemetery of death, but he had yet to obtain all the materials required for the wood elite zombie. Han Shuo readily agreed to Phoebe's suggestion.

Thus, Han Shuo followed behind her and started making his way through shops, starting with the first stall.

Phoebe was patently very happy to have Han Shuo's companionship. As the leader of a guild, once she started conducting a transaction, she would transform into a very shrewd person. She was able to identify the true price of ingredients that Han Shuo needed amongst the stalls they passed without a flicker in expression.

She paid seven thousand gold coins without hesitation just to get Han Shuo a vital ingredient that he had been lacking. When Han Shuo took out his crystal card to pay, Phoebe served him with a fierce glare, saying, "You still have some gold coins stored with me, what are you taking your crystal card out for?!"

Han Shuo was speechless and decided to stay out of this matter. He continued to stand by Phoebe's side and watched her barter with several merchants with a distant expression.

There were indeed many rare materials within the Valley of Sunshine. Two vendors had stock of black iron ore and black gold ore that couldn't even be found within the Empire. There were even a few items, that had been banned by the country's governments, that were openly placed on stalls to attract customers.

There were a few strong aphrodisiacs, as well as powder that could melt corpses with a pinch. There were even strong weapons that had just been developed, along with the cores and bones of some strong magical creatures. Everything that one would want could be found here.

Some of the owners of the stalls were humans, while others were orcs or elves. There was even an interesting merman laying half submerged within the water. Because they all used the human language to communicate, there were no barriers of communication. When the two had made a full circuit of the premises, they both felt that this trip had been worth it as some rare materials had gotten added to their space rings.

“Alright, that’s good, let’s go meet up with Emily first the day. We can’t possibly finish perusing all the stalls in the valley in a single day. As long as we pay particular attention, I think we should be able to collect all the ingredients you need!” Phoebe was a bit fatigued after entering more than a dozen stalls and bargaining heatedly with all their owners. She raised this suggestion to Han Shuo after they walked out of the latest stall.

The skies over the valley had darkened due to the setting sun, unbeknownst to either of them. The entire valley was cloaked in a red light as dusk began. Han Shuo felt that Emily was most likely done reporting her matters after so much time had past and he too was eager to find out how they’d gone. He directed Phoebe to the place that Emily had mentioned when she raised her suggestion.

Because he didn’t know what danger the little skeleton had met in the other dimension, Han Shuo didn’t send the little skeleton back and kept the latter by his side. There were all sorts of unconventional characters within the valley, so Han Shuo didn’t stand out that much with a little skeletal warrior by his side.

On their way to Emily’s predefined place however, the little skeleton suddenly stopped in front of a stall without moving, its empty eye sockets staring at the door, seemingly attracted by something at that very moment.

“What’s wrong?” Phoebe also stopped when she saw that Han Shuo and the little skeleton had stopped. She paused and looked back in surprise.

“Something inside is calling out to him!” Han Shuo’s expression was quite bizarre as he looked at Phoebe and then shifted his gaze back at the little skeleton.

Phoebe had only been a bit confused when her perplexed expression immediately turned into one of shock. She looked around and walked over to Han Shuo when she confirmed that no one was paying attention to them. She looked at the little skeleton with incredulity, “You mean, he has his own thoughts?”

Nodding, Han Shuo said firmly, “Yes, I’m sure this is the case. I don’t know what’s going on either, so don’t ask me anything, because I don’t know when this happened either!”

Phoebe was even more befuddled with Han Shuo’s words as bewilderment suffused her expression. When she raised her head to look at the store, she exclaimed in surprise. Han Shuo looked back at her for an explanation. “Why is it this store? It’s not my first time in the Valley of Sunshine, but I’ve never seen this store open for business. I think that those inside aren’t willing to sell anything, otherwise they wouldn’t be concealing their front door.”

This was indeed the case. All the stores and stalls on this broad street strived mightily to invite and attract customers to visit. Only this one covered its front door, like no one was home, and appeared quite at odds with everything else on this street.

The little skeleton suddenly walked towards the store without Han Shuo’s order. He raised his hand to push open the door. Contrary to his expectations, the door lightly creaked open and revealed a stone paved hallway.

Phoebe blinked and said with some hesitation, “It’s against the rules to enter someone’s store against their volition!”

“Is there someone inside? Is there someone inside??” Han Shuo nodded and followed behind the little skeleton. He suddenly started talking loudly, as if to ascertain if someone was inside or not.

Sadly, he received no response after calling out a few times, and the little skeleton naturally didn’t understand what rules were. He hurtled deep into the structure.

Spreading out his hands, Han Shuo said, “There’s no one in here anyways, it shouldn’t matter if we go in and take a look.” He turned and shut the door that the little skeleton had opened, casting a glance Phoebe and taking her by the hand to walk inside.

The little skeleton made straight for a round well in the back garden. He stood by the well and looked inside, seeming to be looking at something.

When Han Shuo and Phoebe drew close, Han Shuo suddenly felt a frosty, evil presence exuding from the well, as if an enormous demon was inside.

“Something’s wrong.! The temperature is too low here, even I feel a bit cold!” Phoebe’s body suddenly trembled as she looked at Han Shuo.

“That’s right, this is a place of extreme water, a place that I need to refine water elite zombies. The thick water qi within has been absorbed by wraiths and transformed them to water demons!” Han Shuo was overjoyed.

He sensed closely and could clearly feel the thick water qi within and two currents of frosty, sinister water qi. Han Shuo immediately understood that the water elements within were being absorbed by the two water demons.

Chapter 194: Battling the blood water demons

The round well was so deep that it could hide a person's body. The green colored stones that formed it were cold to the touch, the biting chill travelled deep into his bones.

Han Shuo could feel the abundant water qi within the well as he stood next to it. The two sinister presences within also stirred to action, possibly because they sensed the presence of living beings.

Han Shuo was absolutely overjoyed to discover that a place of extreme water was located at the bottom of a deep well in such a place. If he was able to refine all of the zombies of the five elements, then the "Great Formation of the Divine Zombies and Five Elements" could be formed and devastating power could be brought forth. Han Shuo had already located places of extreme earth and wood. If he added this place of extreme water, then he'd be one step closer to successfully reaching his goal.

As Han Shuo was rejoicing, Phoebe suddenly frowned, "It seems to have gotten colder. You said this is a place of extreme water, what did you mean by that?"

Two bone piercing waves of cold suddenly crept out from the deep well. The well had been calm before the water became agitated and splashed out all over. Clouds of white mist rose from the well and covered the yard.

"They're coming!" Han Shuo snorted coldly and grabbed Phoebe. He said seriously, "The water demons are coming out to make trouble, be careful!"

The qi within the place of extreme water was extremely concentrated. If anyone drowned here, their soul wouldn't disperse immediately. With the water qi sustaining it, it would have to absorb only a small amount before forming a water demon.

When water demons absorbed water qi, the strength of the soul would greatly increase and it could then use specialized powers to manipulate the water qi and attack living creatures that approached.

Han Shuo understood all of this when he researched the ways to refine the elite zombies. Therefore, when he sensed the two sinister presences within the well, he immediately understood that two water demons had been somehow created.

However, what he didn't understand was why the little skeleton could sense this. What was it that existed here that could've attracted him?

The little skeleton wielded its bone dagger and stood next to the deep well, his eyes staring into it. Han Shuo didn't know what he was waiting for and what he'd planned on buying.

The water qi crept throughout the yard in the form of a thick, dense mist. The scenery in the surroundings were also affected and grew increasingly blurry and indistinct. The water qi was encompassed in the same sinister presence. It'd been cold to begin with, and now temperature decreased even more rapidly.

"I can't see anything!" Phoebe cried out in surprise.

"This is the water demons manipulating the water qi to form a water curtain. They'll attack us through the cover of the curtain!" Han Shuo said calmly from the side, calming Phoebe's madly thumping heart.

Phoebe's vision was only on the level of an ordinary person. Even though she'd trained her fighting aura, her eyes were barely sharper than that of an ordinary person. There was a world of difference between herself and a demon practitioner such as Han Shuo.

Therefore, although her vision was obscured, Han Shuo's eyes weren't affected at all. There seemed to be silver lightning flashing through his eyes as he looked calmly through the white mist.

Suddenly, the bubbling water within the well shot out like a fountain. The clear water droplets seemed to have a life of their own as they formed columns that churned towards Han Shuo and Phoebe.

A sinister and chilly presence emanated from the well. Even with Han Shuo's durable body, he too began to feel a hint of coldness. The water-formed columns were in a state between liquid and solid, reaching for Han Shuo and Phoebe's body like a pliable eel.

"Looking for death!" Han Shuo grinned a rather ruthless grin.

Red spellfire suddenly flared to life in his hands like evil fire looking to incinerate everything in its path, standing at attention in front of Han Shuo and Phoebe's bodies. The surrounding frosty presence immediately started cracking and popping as soon as the red spell fire appeared, and its fiery heat spread throughout the vicinity, immediately warming Phoebe's body.

The several hundred eel-like columns evaporated as they neared Han Shuo's red spellfire.

Two ugly, low roars sounded from within the well, like the final cries for help of a drowning person. Two red figures shot out from within, seemingly formed of red blood and continuously distorting in the air. They finally settled into the figure of a man and a woman, but a shade was still a shade in the end, and they possessed no visible features.

"Water blood demons!" Han Shuo started and looked askance at the two shadows.

Water demons resided in places of extreme water. If they harmed too many lifeforms, they would absorb the blood as well.

Blood was also a liquid and had the same characteristics as water. The boiling blood of a lifeform near death held another sort of wondrous power. The water demons would absorb this blood, and when enough blood was absorbed, they would be able to evolve into the more powerful and cruel blood water demon.

When the water demons formed blood water demons, not only would they be able to manipulate the water qi within places of extreme water, but they would even be able to manipulate the blood of living beings. They were very difficult to face off against, and Han Shuo was quite surprised to see two blood water demons appear in front of him.

Contrary to other bloodthirsty creatures, the blood water demon could cover the scent of blood on their bodies with the power of water. This was why Han Shou hadn't smelled the blood even with his sensitive nose.

The two blood water demons emerged from the well and wavered in the air, pouncing towards Han Shuo and Phoebe like two bloody clouds. The evil power suddenly suffused the area around Han Shuo and Phoebe. Han Shuo immediately felt the blood in his body boil and it seemed to want to break free of his control.

He turned to see that Phoebe was in even more dire straits. Two streams of blood were already flowing out of her nose and her charming face was quite bedraggled.

Cursing under his breath, Han Shuo grabbed Phoebe and threw her outside with all his strength, roaring, "Leave now!"

Phoebe had been flung out whether or not she'd consented. As a swordmaster, Phoebe had incredible strength and Han Shuo wasn't worried that she'd be injured upon landing. He was more worried that she wouldn't even have the chance to make a move against the two blood water demons before dying of blood loss first.

The blood within his body raged out of his control and surged towards his orifices. Han Shuo brought out the Demonslayer Edge, but as it howled and stabbed into their bodies, it caused them no injury.

The blood water demons were formed of liquid, and no matter how sharp the Demonslayer Edge was, they would easily reform after he hacked them into various segments.

The two water demons continued to advance towards Han Shuo after coalescing again. With the blood water demon's abilities, they would be able to suck him dry of his blood in an instant once they covered his body, turning him into a dry husk.

As a demon cultivator, the power within Han Shuo's blood wasn't something any ordinary person or expert in this world could measure up to.

The blood water demons also seemed to have sensed this and had set their sights on Han Shuo as their greatest source of nourishment, completely ignoring Phoebe. Not a single iota of their attention was split out for her as they all focused completely on Han Shuo, proving the emphasis they placed on him.

His blood churning madly, the magical yuan preventing blood from flowing out of his body with all its might. The two forces restrained Han Shuo's body as his blood frothed, preventing Han Shuo from moving that much.

However, the strength of the magical yuan was also demonstrated in this moment. As a swordmaster, Phoebe had no defense whatsoever and her blood was already flowing freely out of her. However, Han Shuo could use his magical cultivation to firmly prevent his blood from flowing outwards. Although the defense was a bit difficult, he'd been able to accomplish the fact that none of his blood had flowed out of his body up until now.

The greedy blood water demons were finally about to cover Han Shuo. Being confined and unable to bring his magical cultivation to bear, he could only rely on his necromancy magic. The bone spear, arrows, and corpse explosion spell were released one by one, but had no effect on the demons.

Han Shuo suddenly understood that the two blood water demons could only be harmed by high temperature flames. However, his magical yuan was completely preoccupied in prevent his blood from geysering out and none could be spared for the "Mystical Glacial Spellfire".

Freaking hell! Am I going to die by the hand of two blood water demons? I really don't want that! Forget it, I should be able to deploy the "Mystical Glacial Spellfire" even if my blood is streaming out of me. Since I've formed the demon infant, even if all my blood and body is lost, I can still be reborn using it. I'll just be gravely injured, but it'll be a lot better than dying.

These thoughts ran through Han Shuo's mind as he made up his mind and decided that he would kill the two blood water demons even if he would be left gravely injured.

A mysterious message was suddenly transmitted from the little skeleton at this time, as if he understood Han Shuo's intentions. The little skeleton sent a conscious feeling over that anxiously asked Han Shuo to stop.

There were no concrete words or language, just a message for Han Shuo to stop that he could clearly feel. He'd planned on immediately making a move, but actually froze, thinking furiously.

There were only five or six meters separating him and the blood water demons. He couldn't move and could only stare ahead, unable to see a trace of the little skeleton.

If he didn't act now, he might be covered at any moment by his two enemies and have his blood sucked dry in an instant. His body would lose life instantly and the demon infant would likely be unable to escape as well. His entire being would vanish without a trace.

The little skeleton anxiously asked Han Shuo to stop, making him uncertain if he should proceed with his plan or not. As he watched the two blood water demons close in on him, he sighed lightly and made a decision that he didn't know was right or not – he would trust in the little skeleton!

His eyes suddenly grew resolute as he threw his previous plans away. Han Shuo stood where he was and didn't make any move, just waiting for the little skeleton and taking a gamble on his life.

The two blood water demons finally enveloped him and Han Shuo could no longer control his blood from splurging out of his orifices like tidewaters.

A deep wave of despair suddenly grew in Han Shuo's heart, but he didn't hate the little skeleton, but rather trusted the latter instead. He didn't have any regrets even if he truly died here.

Suddenly, Han Shuo's rapid loss of blood halted like someone had stepped on the brakes. The mysterious power controlling his blood suddenly vanished without a trace, and Han Shuo's magical yuan once again flowed smoothly throughout his body. All returned to normal as his blood settled down again.

The two blood water demons started thrashing violently in front of him. Han Shuo could read from their violent twists and struggles the expression they wanted to express – fear!

Han Shuo's body could move about freely now after his blood had returned to normal. He looked up and saw some bone spurs sticking into the two blood water demons. The little skeleton was looking at him with empty eye sockets as his body was slightly crouched, two leg bones stamped firmly on the blood water demons as all seven bone spurs were stuck firmly within them.

Streaks of bloody splendor flowed swiftly into the little skeleton's body through the seven bone spurs. The seven bone spurs, that had seemed to dull, flared with bewitching red light as the broken ribs in front of the little skeleton rearranged themselves with a speed that Han Shuo could see, also gleaming with a bloody light.

In contrast, the two blood water demons, that had been a vivid, blood red, suddenly dimmed as their color surged rapidly towards where the bone spurs were stuck in their bodies. The two blood water demons slowly turned ghastly white and Han Shuo could feel all the qi that they'd collected over who knew how long flow swiftly into the little skeleton's body, along with their life force and blood.

This situation wasn't maintained for long. When the blood water demons had thoroughly turned a ghastly white, their bodies transformed into two puddles of water with a splashing sound and fell to the ground.

The mist that had suffused the yard was swept away by the wind, and the waning moon shed a red light over the yard, giving it a few hints of a desolate beauty.

Clunk. The little skeleton fell down from midair because he'd lost his support after the two blood water demons disappeared.

Reaching out a hand to rub his head, the little skeleton's empty eye sockets met Han Shuo's. A surge of joy traveled into Han Shuo's heart from the little skeleton, and his originally vividly red body started changing once again. Each bone had had blood red splendor sparkling over it, but it'd now turned back into its originally pure white color.

Since the little skeleton had been summoned and refined as a magical treasure, his skeleton had gone from inky black to blood red. Now, he'd changed back, but the stark white of the little skeleton's bones were obviously greatly different from that of a normal skeletal warrior.

His bones were translucent and as pure as beautiful jade. It even seemed to be sparkling with eye catching light, making various thoughts rise in Han Shuo's mind.

Han Shuo finally understood now why the little skeleton had stopped in front of the shop and hadn't moved. He must've been attracted by the blood water demon's energy!

Han Shuo recalled that last time, in Bob Ascher's slave trading house, the Calamity Church necromancer Clarendon had used fresh blood to summon the three eyed demon god. The blood had been absorbed by the little skeleton in the end. Perhaps it was because of this that, although the blood water demons could conceal the scent of blood from Han Shuo, they couldn't do the same to the little skeleton and this was why he'd stopped in front of the shop.

As Han Shuo thought silently, another wisp of consciousness came from the little skeleton once more. He was actually strongly requesting to return to the other dimension, and Han Shuo could clearly feel his ardent desire to exact revenge.

Having absorbed the strength of the two blood water demons, the little skeleton had undergone a significant transformation. Not only had his injuries from the previous battle been recovered, he seemed to have heightened his abilities as well. This was why he was so confident now.

The little skeleton's fighting spirit and requests were quite strong. Han Shuo hesitated for a moment, and felt that no particular problems would arise if he kept part of his mind on the situation. He then used the necromancy spell to once again send the little skeleton back to the mysterious plane.

Chapter 195: Promotion to the Dark Moon division

Apart from the moonlight spilling into the yard and the two puddles of water around the well, there were no other traces of anything else within the vicinity.

Scattered footsteps suddenly sounded from outside. They rapidly approached as Phoebe and a band of ten others appeared in front of Han Shuo.

Worry filling her face, Phoebe's clear eyes landed on Han Shuo's body and visibly relaxed when she saw that he was unharmed. However, she didn't relax her grasp on her longsword as her pale neck swiveled, surveying the surroundings, seeming to want to detect if there was any danger hidden elsewhere.

There were a dozen armored Cairo mercenary band guards apart from Phoebe. It would seem that she had led them here. Their eyes were alert as they cautiously patrolled the surroundings.

"Are you alright?" Phoebe breathed out a sigh of relief when she took a look around and saw nothing out of the ordinary, nor any danger.

Shaking his head, Han Shuo cast a glance at Phoebe and smiled in comfort, "Don't worry, I'm fine."

"My apologies Mr. Harris, I think we must've seen an illusion just now. The danger I spoke of earlier doesn't seem to have appeared." Phoebe understood that Han Shuo must've taken care of matters and wore an embarrassed expression on her face, speaking to the stern, aloof guard captain.

This person was in the prime of his life. Swarthy, with a head full of short, brown hair that was messily askew, he carried a double headed battle-axe in his right hand and naturally emanated the violent aura of someone who'd weathered multiple battles. It was obvious that it had been formed through slaughter.

“This shop is a place that’s been cursed by a demon. All the owners who have taken charge of this shop have died of unnatural causes over the years. No matter who enters, whether man or beast, they will all die from this curse. There has never been any exceptions, so no matter how you entered, I recommend you leave immediately.” Harris’ eyes roved over Han Shuo and Phoebe’s bodies as he spoke coldly.

He waved his hand and didn’t wait for Han Shuo and Phoebe to say anything before he accompanied his band of a dozen soldiers out of the yard, seemingly unwilling to linger even another second in this area.

“Harris is a battle fiend who’s weathered hundreds of battles and the vice chief of the Cairo mercenary band. When I said there was danger here just now, he still paid a visit even though he was a bit unwilling. It looks like there is indeed something here that people are wary of. I didn’t have any strength to fight back earlier even with my level as a swordmaster!” Phoebe went over Harris’ identity in a perfunctory manner after he’d left. She then changed the subject and stared at Han Shuo, “What happened just now?”

Smiling dashing, Han Shuo reached out a hand to stroke the well and said happily, “The two blood water demons have been taken care of, so no more odd things will happen here in the future. In addition, I’m going to buy this shop no matter how much this place costs!”

Phoebe’s beautiful, clear eyes looked at Han Shuo with a look of surprise on her face as she said confidently, “You must have a great deal of assurance since you’re saying this. Don’t worry about the shop, I’ll take care of the negotiation with the Cairo mercenary band. I think such a cursed place won’t be worth much money.”

Nodding, Han Shuo walked over to Phoebe and wrapped his arm lightly around her, putting his mouth close to her ears and saying softly, “Thank you so much, Phoebe!”

Her face suddenly flushing red, Phoebe turned back and hugged Han Shuo fiercely, pursing her lips to lightly kiss Han Shuo’s. She then pulled back and stared deeply at Han Shuo, saying passionately, “I’m the one who should be thanking you! You threw me out first when danger was in front of us!"

The danger with the blood water demon earlier had made Phoebe go through a life and death experience. Even Han Shuo's soul had been almost scattered to the four winds. Having survived these two disasters, the two felt a unique sense of the joy of life as they looked at each other now.

As the moon shone down on them, it added a few traces of beauty to Phoebe's stunning features. Her eyes shone with light and Han Shuo fell deep into them.

He tightened his grasp and held her tightly, feeling her shake slightly in his intimate grasp. A sense of happiness and contentment filled his heart.

Before he'd arrived in his world, Han Shuo had been just an ordinary person who had only dared to think evil thoughts. He didn't dare act upon them. His personality was one that was a bit timid. He'd lived twenty years and hadn't paid much attention to anything. He'd never had any women and had lived routinely through twenty years.

But thanks to Chu Cang Lan's maneuverings, he'd successfully arrived in this foreign world with the heritage of magical cultivation. He'd amassed great strength within a short amount of time, gotten quite a bit of riches, and won the hearts of two beauties.

The affairs of the world changed thus greatly and unexpectedly. What had been farfetched daydreams twenty some years ago had all become part of his grasp in such a short amount of time. An unbelievable feeling rose in Han Shuo's heart as he sometimes felt that all of this was still an unrealistic dream. However, his encounters with danger and pain again and again reminded him that this wasn't an illusion.

"Alright, I think Emily must be waiting for us. We should hurry up and make our way there!" Han Shuo looked at the fading light in the sky after a bout of reflection and spoke tenderly to Phoebe.

Seemingly enjoying this moment of peace and romance that belonged to the two of them, Phoebe assented softly and allowed Han Shuo to hold her smooth, soft hand. The two of them walked side by side to the location Emily had previously mentioned.

Before long, the two of them had appeared in front of the shop. There were no longer any customers because night had fallen. A hale and hearty elderly man walked up merrily after Han Shuo had walked inside, “Are you Sir Bryan?”

“I’m not a sir, please just call me Bryan!” Han Shuo bowed humbly to the elderly man and took out his identity token, handing it over with both hands.

The elder took Han Shuo’s iron token and glanced at it, then returned it with a smile. He then said a bit apologetically to Phoebe, “My apologies Miss Phoebe, please wait here a moment. These are the Dark Mantle’s rules that no one may enter if they are not of the Dark Mantle.”

As the shadowy organization beneath the king’s hands, the Dark Mantle naturally had its rules that everyone must follow. The fact that Phoebe, an outsider, could’ve accompanied Han Shuo to this place was already an exception. She naturally couldn’t proceed further.

When faced with such a polite and benevolent old man, Phoebe didn’t maintain her usual aloofness and nodded with a smile, sitting down willingly.

“Let’s go, I’ll lead you inside!” The elderly man stooped slightly and led Han Shuo in. They walked through a hallway and stopped in front of the living room. The old man pointed inside, “Mistress Emily is inside!”

The old man returned along the original route when Han Shuo walked in, seemingly back to his post at the head of the shop.

“Is it Bryan?” Emily’s voice sounded from somewhere as soon as he set foot inside. A piece of the living room flooring then opened up into a hole, a mechanism similar to what Han Shuo and Emily had seen in Bob Ascher’s room last time.

Emily walked out in casual clothing from the hole. There was a fireplace in this living room and the temperature was quite comfortable. This was why Emily hadn't continued to bundle herself up warmly.

"How are things? Was everything taken care of?" Han Shuo walked towards Emily with a smile when the hole closed up.

"No problems at all. My brother is taking over and our mission is done. We succeeded! Heh heh, do you want to know how much of this was thanks to you?" Emily's alluring cheeks held a trace of mischievousness as she looked at Han Shuo.

The mix of a youthful playfulness and an adult's maturity in Emily gave her an unusual allure at this moment. Han Shuo's heart lurched as his hands reached out and grabbed Emily while he sat down in a chair. His hands roved naughtily around her breasts as he chuckled, "Little hussy, I haven't even punished you for what you did in the tree hole earlier!"

"Humph!" Emily threw back her head and glared at Han Shuo, saying huffily, "How dare you mention that! You started doing that with Phoebe right in front of me, were you thinking of me at all? Don't think I couldn't see anything because it was dark. Humph, Phoebe was panting so loudly and the both of you were trying to put on a normal act!"

He suddenly lifted Emily's legs up and shifted her around so that she was kneeling on his thighs. Her well rounded butt was thrust high into the air and, much to her surprise, he started to spank them harshly. Emily began to beg for mercy amidst the pain.

"Alright alright! I won't say anything about what you do in the future, you big villain!" Emily played along and suddenly switched to a serious tack, "After this time's mission, you've advanced from a Third Dark Star to a First Dark Moon. You've skipped a few levels again."

Han Shuo started, stopping his motions and looking at Emily with confusion. "Sometimes completing several missions wouldn't be enough for one to advance one level. Why did I advance several after completing only one mission? You didn't do anything for me behind the scenes, did you?"

Rolling her eyes at Han Shuo, Emily didn't know whether to laugh or be angry. "Remember, you went up against Bob Ascher of the Gryphon Legion. The difficulty of this mission, compared to the usual scouting for information or arresting some fugitive nobles, is completely different. According to your contributions this time, it wouldn't have been out of the ordinary to directly promote you to Second Dark Moon. However, you've only been in the Dark Mantle for half a year and promoting you to First Dark Moon was already astonishing enough. That's why we didn't go further."

Han Shuo understood after he thought briefly about Emily's words and then remembered Chester. "Oh right, Chester should still be in the Valen City Dark Mantle branch, what treatment is he receiving?"

"Thanks to you, he's already a Fourth Dark Star. This kid is smart enough to be able to be promoted to it just by delivering messages. I never ran into anything that easy when I was running missions!" Emily responded with a smile.

"Oh right, when will Elaine and Belinda arrive?" Han Shuo was happy for Chester when he heard of his circumstances and then thought of Elaine and Belinda again.

"I almost forgot! Belinda was an unexpected gain. If we deliver her to the headquarters and she undergoes interrogation at the hands of the experts there, we'll be sure to obtain a lot of information about the Calamity Church. We'll be rewarded according to the level of intelligence we gain from her!" Emily chuckled lightly and spoke happily.

"Oh right, what kind of different treatment can I enjoy after advancing to First Dark Moon?" Han Shuo thought for a bit and immediately asked. This was what he was most concerned about at this moment.

"First of all, you'll receive an increase in your monthly stipend from 70 gold coins to 150 gold coins. Of course, I think you don't care about this at all. Apart from that, you can use your current level to obtain all information that corresponds to your level from all Dark Mantle strongholds within the Empire. You can use the transportation matrixes in all the cities of the Lancelot empire, and don't need to pay any fees. You can command a troop of soldiers in any of the military organizations, not to exceed 100 people. In addition...”

Han Shuo finally discovered that there was a significant increase in all areas of his benefits after advancing from Dark Star to Dark Moon. He was already enjoying so many privileges at the Dark Star division, then being part of the Dark Moon level or even one of the three heavyweights would surely come with much higher benefits.

No wonder so many people wanted power! It looked like it really was a nice thing!

Chapter 196: Sharing one room

Phoebe obviously couldn't take up residence within the Dark Mantle, and now that her relationship with Han Shuo was out in the open, he naturally needed to stay with her.

Han Shuo finally left with Phoebe after dining with Emily and sweet talking her quite a bit, intent on finding a hotel for the two of them.

Hotels of various sizes could be found in great number in the Valley of Sunshine. Because there was a high number of traveling merchants and adventurers coming and going, the amount of entertainment facilities were no less than that in Drol.

Brightly colored, hazy lights shone out from each hotel onto the streets, alternating with ladies clothed in sexy or innocent attire, casting come-hither eyes at passersby on the streets, trying to lure customers in.

Han Shuo walked next to Phoebe and didn't look anywhere else. She was quite satisfied with that, but it was actually because Han Shuo had already vented his energy on Emily's voluptuous body earlier, so he didn't have any evil thoughts in his mind right now.

After a while, Phoebe stopped in front of a luxurious looking hotel. She tugged on Han Shuo with her little hand and walked inside with him. The small, skinny owner was already smiling fawningly at them in front of Phoebe before she'd even opened her mouth, saying ingratiatingly, "Noble Miss Phoebe, will it be the same room as last time?"

Nodding, Phoebe had an aloof expression on her face as she handed her crystal card over without saying a word.

Judging from the owner's expression, it was obvious that this wasn't Phoebe's first visit here. It looked like she'd traveled to many places in her travels to and fro for the Boozt Merchant Guild.

Retrieving her crystal card and key, Phoebe turned her head to smile at Han Shuo and tugged on his arm, leading him inside.

It was nicely warm inside the hotel and completely different from the brutal cold outside. Bright lights hung in the hallways and shed ample light throughout the entire hotel.

The solid wood floors gleamed like a mirror, and shoes sounded out clearly when they tapped against the floor. The sounds were actually quite pleasing to the ear, so it was apparent that these floors weren't ordinary.

Han Shuo realized that Phoebe hadn't arranged another room for him, and some ambiguous motions grew in his heart as they continued walking down the hallway. Phoebe's not planning on sharing a bed with me, is she?!

Han Shuo couldn't help but cast a look full of passion at Phoebe as they walked.

Phoebe's long brown hair naturally fell down towards the floor like a waterfall, swaying around her translucent cheeks and long neck as she sashayed. Her brows were like the waxing moon and her skin gleamed richly with the splendor of the stars. Her lips were as red as cherries, making one want to give them a fierce bite.

"You big pervert, what are you looking at?" Phoebe suddenly stopped and glared at Han Shuo with slightly flushed cheeks.

Han Shuo's gaze had been fiery, with a strong sense of possessiveness within. Phoebe was stupid. She could naturally see all of it clearly and couldn't help but speak up as her heart beat in panic.

"No, nothing!" Han Shuo returned to himself and immediately concealed the lecherous look in his eyes. "Why aren't we walking anymore?"

"We're here, what nonsense are you thinking of? Don't you see that the door is right in front of you?" Phoebe's clear eyes were bashful as she glared at Han Shuo again, pointing at the door.

Indeed, Han Shuo noticed a tightly shut door when his gaze followed her jade arms. This was also the end of the hallway, and it seemed like it was the most quiet room in the hotel.

"Nothing much, just thinking of you!" Han Shuo chuckled evilly and looked straight at Phoebe.

“You bad jerk, you only know how to fob me off with sweet words!” Sweetness rose in Phoebe’s heart as she spoke softly.

“Nuh uh, I really was thinking of you just now!” Han Shuo said, aggrieved.

“Then you weren’t thinking nice thoughts. Judging from the way you were leering earlier, you must’ve been thinking something dirty!” Phoebe naturally wouldn’t believe anything at this point and snorted softly as she flicked a glance at Han Shuo.

He had indeed been thinking of nothing nice just now. Han Shuo could only chuckle dryly after Phoebe had hit the nail on the head and then hurried Phoebe, “Hurry and open the door. I’m really tired after such a long day, let’s go in and shower and sleep.”

Phoebe didn’t continue questioning as she took out the key to open the door. She moved aside to let Han Shuo in and then closed the door behind him.

A spacious living room greeted them with several fur couches placed on top of a soft carpet. Out of the four rooms, there were two bedrooms, one bathroom, and one storage room for clothes and random knickknacks.

“Do you think I didn’t know what you’re thinking of? Humph! There are two rooms here and each of us will have one. I will run through whoever barges into my room again!” Phoebe threw back her head and threatened Han Shuo as she lit the fireplace, making the internal temperature slowly rise.

“Heh heh, what if whoever barges in runs into a beauty having a wet dream and then throws herself into his arms!” Han Shuo chuckled evilly.

“You dratted, damned bastard! How dare you mention that!” Phoebe’s face turned bright red as she ran angrily up to Han Shuo and reached out her slender hands to give him a fierce pinch around the waist.

He first played along and cried out painfully, then yanked her arm around her back and kissed her unceremoniously. Han Shuo explored and ravaged her mouth like a dragon in the ocean as she grunted in protest.

Phoebe struggled symbolically for a bit before slowly weakening, and her hands, that'd formed fists that pounded Han Shuo's chest, suddenly twined towards his neck like snakes, her tongue entangling with Han Shuo's.

Han Shuo laid her down on the soft carpet and tasted her sweetness while rubbing his hand over her pert bottom.

When Han Shuo's hands finally started fondling her chest, Phoebe suddenly started struggling and pushed him away fiercely. She then glared at him with embarrassment as she said with great allure, "It looks like I need to be careful or you'll take advantage of me whenever I let my guard down. Ugh, after running for so long, my body stinks. I need to take a shower, you stay out here!"

Phoebe escaped to the bathroom after saying these words and shut the door with a great bang. The sounds of water flowing came from inside afterwards. It looked like she was indeed in a great hurry to wash away the dirt from her body.

Bam bam bam... bam bam bam...

Knocking sounds suddenly sounded at this moment. Han Shuo blinked and wondered if it was Emily looking for them. He walked over in confusion and opened the door. A bouquet of brilliant fresh flowers was shoved in his face. It looked like there were at least a hundred of them as they emanated a wonderful fragrance.

The bouquet was abruptly pulled back and a handsome face revealed itself in front of Han Shuo. His eyebrows were dashing and his eyes clear. A broad forehead, firm nose, and apart from somewhat skinny cheeks, this face could be labelled uncommonly handsome.

The charming face had been wearing a disarming smile when it suddenly drew together into a frown and the face became covered in clouds. He looked at Han Shuo in an unfriendly manner. "Who are you? Where's Phoebe?"

"She's showering. And who are you?" Han Shuo blanked and then reacted. This must be one of Phoebe's admirers. He too showed the fellow a rather unfriendly face.

“Showering! Then what are you doing here?!” When he heard that Phoebe was showering inside and Han Shuo was inside the room, his expression grew even uglier.

“I’m Florida, chief of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band. I’m Phoebe’s good friend! I naturally have something to discuss with her, so don’t block the way!” He stared at Han Shuo angrily and roared lowly, magical pulses emanating from his body.

When Han Shuo heard that he was Florida, chief of the Rainbow Sickle, Han Shuo was immediately startled and looked at this person with more than a hint of wariness.

The Rainbow Sickle mercenary band was just as famous as the Cairo mercenary band. However, the Rainbow Sickle was made up mostly of those from the Lancelot Empire. The Rainbow Sickle had been the strongest within the Valley of Sunshine a few years ago and had been in charge of order. However, the original chief unfortunately fell when defending the valley against robbers once. This was why their fortune had suddenly fallen.

It was rumored that this person was a light archmage and seemed to have something to do with the Church of Light. His strength was unfathomable, and although he was an upright person, he was decisive and vicious. He never had any mercy for his enemies and had a great reputation within the mercenary band.

Han Shuo hadn’t thought that such a person would be one of Phoebe’s admirers. Although Han Shuo felt a bit of a headache knowing the other’s identity, he wasn’t afraid. Han Shuo said coldly, “Sorry, I’m Phoebe’s boyfriend. She can’t see you at the moment, so you can come back next time!”

Han Shuo snorted coldly after speaking and slammed the door shut!

Chapter 197: Making a decisive move

Florida was far more domineering than Han Shuo would've thought. He could feel a dangerous pulse of magic the instant he shut the door. Han Shuo immediately sprang backwards.

The door exploded with a tumultuous bang as the room wreathed itself in white light. Large pieces of wooden slats flew across the room as Florida's handsome face once again appeared in front of Han Shuo.

He still clutched the bouquet of fresh flowers tightly, with a strongly pulsating magic staff embedded with a red, blue, and yellow crystal in his right hand.

"I said, I want to see Phoebe. Didn't you hear me?!" Florida looked harshly at Han Shuo as he bit off his words.

At roughly 25 or 26, Florida's age was similar to the deceased Clark. The two of them had many similarities, both having the same high level of strength and charming exteriors.

However, although Clark was devious, he wouldn't flaunt it so boldly. He at least understood that his identity as a noble; conscious he had to conceal his emotions, he made his moves in the dark. On the other hand, Florida looked like a completely lawless person, with an even more brash style, seemingly having no reservations at all.

"And I said, don't disturb our rest!" Han Shuo snorted coldly and flashed to Florida's side like lightning. He raised a fist with magical yuan circulating within it and smashed it towards Florida's face.

Han Shuo's sudden move was outside of the other's expectations as panic suddenly appeared on his face. He threw out the bouquet in his hands and swiftly backpedaled.

Han Shuo's punch whistled through the air as it smashed the bouquet to pieces. Petals flew everywhere as a floral fragrance wafted through the air.

When this punch had obliterated the bouquet and seemed like it would land on Florida's face, a strong magic pulse suddenly burst from his body.

A rainbow colored, glass-like magic shield suddenly enveloped him like an enormous light bubble.

Bam. Han Shuo's fist connected with the shield. He felt like he was punching cotton candy as the shield distorted at the point of contact. The impression left by the fist deepened until Han Shuo's blow stopped right above Florida's well defined nose, unable to proceed any further.

Completely flustered, Florida was forced back a few steps, bringing the force field with him and widening the gap between him and Han Shuo. Disarrayed, he looked at Han Shuo with an even more unfriendly glint, as if Han Shuo had become his mortal enemy.

"You dared to attack first!" Florida's voice was as distorted as his expression as he roared furiously at Han Shuo.

Han Shuo shook his hand and retracted his fist, pointing at the shattered room door. He said coldly, "You trespassed the moment you broke through the door. I'm just defending myself!"

Nodding his head with a frosty smile, Florida cast a dark glance at Han Shuo. "Very good, you've got some guts. However, you won't get a chance to come near me again now that our distance has been increased. Let me see what you're made of now!"

Florida once again stepped back after he spoke and raised the staff in his right hand, planning on facing off with Han Shuo. In response to Florida's move, Han Shuo solemnly brought out the Demonslayer Edge from his space ring and prepared to take Florida's attack.

As a light archmage, his strength was certainly uncommon. Han Shuo had tested him just now and had noticed that his reaction was swift and movements agile. It was obvious that he'd weathered hundreds of battles. Han Shuo hadn't even been able to harm him just now with that punch, despite their proximity. Now that they were separated, Florida would be able to deploy his advantage as a mage and would be difficult to deal with.

Hasty footsteps sounded at this moment and seemed to approach the room. Just as Han Shuo and Florida were about to really get into it, vice chief Harris from the Cairo mercenary band suddenly appeared with a few soldiers.

“Isn’t this chief Florida? What are you doing here, creating a mess in territory that’s under the Cairo mercenary band’s protection instead of staying in yours?” Harris’ voice was filled with obvious sarcasm as he maintained the same remote expression from earlier in the day.

The splashing sounds from the bathroom suddenly stopped. It seemed that after these disturbances, Phoebe had finally discovered something was happening outside after having her hearing affected by her shower.

The wildly posturing Florida looked back at Harris when he heard the latter’s voice. He put away the staff in his hand and said with an aloof expression, “I came to visit Miss Phoebe and hadn’t expected to be blocked by some blind kid.”

“If you’re here to be a guest, then I welcome you on behalf of the owner. However, I hope you don’t try to start a fight here, or else our Cairo mercenary band will definitely get involved. You surely know the rules after being in the Valley of Sunshine for so long!” Harris snorted coldly when he saw Florida retract the staff in his hands.

“Humph! Today was your lucky day!” Florida said coldly to Han Shuo and turned to leave. He halted when he passed by Harris, saying with his back turned to Han Shuo, “In the near future, I will definitely retake control of the valley. Then, I won’t be as polite to you as I am now!”

Florida laughed heartily after throwing down these words and walked out with large strides, not waiting for Phoebe to come out.

Harris had an ugly expression on his face and a vein began to throb on his forehead. He looked like he would go berserk at any time. In fact, Han Shuo knew that he was a berserker, It was said that a berserker’s strength was quite astonishing. They were able to use a mysterious method to provoke themselves into a mad state, increasing their strength exponentially and giving them incredible destructive power.

Han Shuo rather wished Harris would go berserk as he looked at the latter. If Harris couldn’t control the fury in his heart, he would immediately attack Florida until one of them died.

It was a pity that Harris quickly regained normalcy and Han Shuo's daydreams didn't play out. Harris cast a detached glance at Han Shuo and said, "You still need to pay for the door. Florida's group has great power in the Valley of Sunshine, so you need to be careful after offending him. You can come find us if there's anything you need from the Cairo mercenary band."

Although his expression was still aloof, Harris seemed to have undergone a change in attitude towards Han Shuo because of their newly acquired common enemy. There were even traces of concern in his words.

Han Shuo hadn't planned on paying for the door because it'd been Florida that had broken it, but his thoughts completely changed after seeing Harris' attitude shift. He did still have need of the Cairo mercenary band to obtain the shop with the place of extreme water, so he laughed decisively and said, "No problem!"

Nodding, Harris didn't say anything else and waved his hand, departing with his guards.

The room to the bathroom creaked open after Harris left and Phoebe came out wearing a bathrobe, like a flower emerging from the water. Her wet hair was plastered all over and a small expanse of reddened, fair skin was revealed at her chest. Her red lips were full and wet as she flicked her eyes towards the door. "They're all gone?"

"All gone. What's going on with that Florida?" Han Shuo looked at Phoebe and asked unhappily.

Chuckling lowly, Phoebe hiked up the bathrobe a bit and wrapped her legs tightly. She walked up to Han Shuo and batted her wet eyelashes, looking at him with interest. She teased, "What, are you jealous?"

"Yeah I'm jealous! That kid doesn't look too bad and came looking for you with a huge bouquet! He even told me, the boyfriend, to get out of the way. I'm very pissed off right now!" Han Shuo was quite direct as he looked irritably at Phoebe.

Her body softening, Phoebe sat on Han Shuo's legs and chuckled softly. "I used to come to the valley a lot and had business dealings with the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band. But it's always been him pursuing me, I've never had anything to deal with him."

"Alright, alright, don't be mad. I'll explain things to him next time so that he doesn't bother me in the future. How's that?"

"No point in explanations, I don't think that brat is the kind to accept such things. I didn't like him from my first impression of him, but I think he thinks the same of me. I think our grudge has been well and truly formed!" Han Shuo shook his head.

"Then what do we do? The Rainbow Sickle mercenary band has great power in the valley and is second only to the Cairo mercenary band. It's said that they've been recruiting in recent times and have even hired a group of experts from the Church of Light. They seem to want to replace the Cairo mercenary band. It will be very troublesome to stay in the valley if we've offended them!" Phoebe was startled and spoke with some worry.

"We'll deal with matters as they arise. He's not the sole ruler of the valley, he won't be able to do anything to me!" Han Shuo snorted coldly and spoke without fear.

Chapter 198: Conduct oneself well

Florida had broken the door with his appearance, and so, Han Shuo and Phoebe had no choice but to occupy another room. They paid twenty gold coins as compensation for the door, and Phoebe asked for two rooms so that Han Shuo would have no opportunity to get up to any shenanigans. He didn't remain idle when Phoebe returned to her room to rest.

He located the room's closet and set up the transportation matrix, then adjusted his mental strength to release a dark mist spell within the closet before stepping into the matrix.

The cemetery of death was as desolate as ever. Han Shuo immediately saw Gilbert's enormous true form as soon as he stepped out. He was fast asleep amidst piles of bones and hadn't noticed Han Shuo's arrival at all.

Gilbert had taken on a great responsibility in the past two days and was likely truly tired after being injured again. Han Shuo didn't disturb him and went to where the earth elite zombie and yin demons were being refined.

He first went to the yin demon cave to infuse it with more magical yuan. He noticed that there were only nine wraiths left in the cave now. After fighting every day and every night, the day at which he could collect the yin demons drew closer and closer.

The earth elite zombie exuded an immense presence of life. The earth qi that circulated around the entire cemetery of death was thinning out. Balls of grey qi spread out from the center of the place of extreme earth, and slowly coalesced into one place as if a large hand was tightening its grasp on them.

A marvelous connection emanated from the earth. Han Shuo started as an exuberant feeling flowed into his heart. He sensed carefully and discovered that this joy was coming from the earth elite zombie that was buried deep in the ground.

It looked like Han Shuo's arrival had caused the earth elite zombie below to become quite joyous. After the long duration of time in which it'd absorbed earth qi and nourishment from the resources that Han Shuo had spent an enormous sum to acquire, the earth zombie was no longer just a simple zombie, but had simple, instinctual feelings.

Now that Han Shuo had located the places of extreme earth, wood, and water, he was also confident in gaining all the materials that he needed through Phoebe's merchant guild. He'd be able to refine the earth, wood, and water elite zombies. When these three elite zombies were formed, Han Shuo's personal strength would greatly increase as well.

As long as he could find places of extreme metal and fire as well, he'd be able to put a frightful formation with all five elemental zombies together. He would have even more of a right to speak in this world after that.

Han Shuo didn't wake Gilbert when he saw all was functioning normally here. He returned soundlessly to the hotel in the Valley of Sunshine and sat cross legged on the bed, meditating. He relaxed his entire body and slowly sank into meditation, not letting up on the slightest bit of time to increase his mental strength.

Phoebe came over early in the morning with her hair tied up. Her long blue skirt made her appear even more elegant and graceful.

She naturally tucked her hand into the crook of Han Shuo's arm as she walked over and tugged him outside, saying, "Come on, let's keep shopping in the valley today and collect all the materials you need!"

Han Shuo readily agreed. He'd planned on collecting materials only for the wood elite zombie before, but now that he'd discovered a place of extreme water, he needed to start collecting the materials required for refining the water elite zombie as well. As it bordered three countries, the Valley of Sunshine saw an endless parade of merchants through its borders and all sorts of strange materials could be obtained here. Han Shuo and Phoebe did indeed locate many of the needed items through some patient searching.

The noon sunlight filtered down from the sky into the Valley of Sunshine, basking the entire valley in its light. Its warmth was quite comfortable, and Phoebe's hand started rubbing her stomach after they finished perusing the most recent shop. She turned to smile at Han Shuo, "I'm a bit hungry, let's go get some food."

"You're familiar with this place and know where all the good food is. Just lead me to it!" Han Shuo responded with a smile.

It was said that at certain levels of magical cultivation, cultivators could go without eating or drinking and just make use of the energy within their body to maintain their lives for a hundred years. They had no need for food to nourish their bodies. However, Han Shuo had yet to reach that stage and apart from nourishment, food was also an enjoyment to him.

Phoebe led the way in the front as the two walked into a small storefront. A few one meter tall dwarves walked out from within and enthusiastically led them to their table.

The shop wasn't too big and the decorations weren't that luxurious. There were only a few simple chairs, but it was incredibly crowded. Some merchants wearing rich furs, with diamond rings sparkling on their fingers, sprawled lazily over narrow chairs and tables, shoveling food into their mouths without a thought of their images.

The two sat down in a quiet corner near the window. Phoebe didn't ask Han Shuo for his opinion before she said to a dwarf waiting on the side, "The best food in the store!"

The dwarf smiled faintly and bowed urbanely, then quickly left to busy himself.

"Dwarves are quite an odd race. Some of them are adept at forging weapons, others crafting beer. There are those who like cooking as well. Whenever they fall in love with a craft, they always bring about some surprises in their work."

"The dwarves in this shop were from a remote mountain valley of the Kasi Empire. Their joy in life was to cook all sorts of delicious food. The dishes made by their hands are so tasty that it's hard to forget about them." Phoebe smiled faintly and explained to Han Shuo.

Having come from another world, Han Shuo had grown up with the delicacies of Chinese cuisine. He'd tasted the food of that world and had always felt that there was a world of difference between the food here and the illustrious history of food culture in China.

To be honest, Han Shuo didn't truly believe that the food here would be that much more exquisite or tasty compared to what he'd had in hotels before, so he didn't hold too much hope and only went along with Phoebe's words with a smile.

Business here was good. One could see from the numbers of customers and their identities that these high class customers didn't disdain this place because of its scale. From the way some noblewomen were eating, Han Shuo could see that they were greatly enjoying the food on their plates.

As Han Shuo smiled and chatted with Phoebe, the little dwarf brought over two plates of odd looking food and placed it lightly in front of the two.

It looked like a strange sort of meat that had been cooked to a bright gleam. An interesting smell wafted into Han Shuo's mouth and nose and rather surprised Han Shuo.

Phoebe, in front of him, had already started digging in with a knife and fork in hand. It was apparent that she also greatly enjoyed the food. When Han Shuo cut into a piece of meat and placed it in his mouth. His brow suddenly uncreased as a delicious taste suffused his mouth. It was like a wondrous magic spell as the deliciousness of food continuously circulated in Han Shuo's mouth and nose.

His appetite completely expanded, Han Shuo immediately dug in with a vengeance after tasting that small bite. He devoured the food like tigers or wolves swallowing their prey. Han Shuo belched when his stomach bulged. He complimented, "This really is something alright. No wonder there's so many people trying to squeeze into this small restaurant."

"Friend, we meet again!" Florida walked in through the door at this time. He stood there in his white magic robes and looked coldly at Han Shuo.

Phoebe was in the midst of enjoying her food when she lifted her head to look at Florida. She then hailed the dwarf and threw down a bag of gold coins on the table. She rose and said to Han Shuo, "Let's go!"

Han Shuo's expression was remote as he waved a hand, "I have nothing good to say to him. You can explain things to him directly. If he keeps bothering you, I'll be happy to have a go or two at him then."

Having exchanged a few blows with him yesterday, Han Shuo understood that Florida's strength was mysterious and unfathomable. However, Han Shuo had both magical cultivation and necromancy magic, as well as the mysterious little skeleton and the almost formed earth elite zombie and three yin demons. All of this combined made it so that he had no fear of Florida. As his magical cultivation improved each and every day, he had no need to lower his head in front of anyone.

Phoebe started when Han Shuo spoke thus and then flashed a smile, "I understand."

She moved and walked over to Florida, cold arrogance replacing her smile from a moment ago. When she reached the door, she pointed at Han Shuo and said to Florida, "He's my boyfriend, I think we have nothing to talk about. Business is business, but you have no right to interfere in my life. I hope you won't disturb me in the future!"

Although he was mentally prepared, Florida was still momentarily dazed when he heard these unkind words from Phoebe's mouth. The stiffness on his face faded away when he faced Phoebe, and he even spoke very gently. He stared tightly at Phoebe, "Where does this kid come from, what can he give you? Why choose him?!"

"Sorry, this has nothing to do with you. I hope you conduct yourself well!" Phoebe expression was remote and she also spoke frostily.

Nodding, Florida barked out a ghastly laugh. He looked at Phoebe and then at Han Shuo in the distance, saying, "Alright!" three times in a row. He then turned and left.

"Give me another plate!" Han Shuo snorted coldly and then turned to the dwarf by his side with a smile.

Chapter 199: A marvelous sensation

After filling their stomachs and walking out of the shop, Phoebe and Han Shuo shopped for a bit longer amidst all the various stores in the Valley of Sunshine. Phoebe then went to find the proper members of the Cairo mercenary band to negotiate for the shop that contained the place of extreme water for Han Shuo.

Han Shuo walked alone towards the shop in which Emily was located in, planning on asking Emily to investigate Florida's background.

The same elderly man was still watching the door. This shop sold the armor in the style of Lancelot Empire knights, and because night had yet to fall, there were indeed a few wearing the armor of knights flipping through the wares located towards the front of the store.

The elderly man indicated to Han Shuo with a slight smile when he saw Han Shuo walk in. He pointed to the backyard. Han Shuo understood and made a show of picking up a set of clothing, walking over to the door that led to the backyard and walked through it.

"How did you run afoul of Florida?!" Emily was noticeably taken aback when Han Shuo started asking her about Florida with a ruthless expression on his face.

"Apart from the information everyone knows about him, do you have anything else? I know the Dark Mantle must have some other information on him!" Han Shuo glanced at Emily.

Emily's brow creased faintly as she looked at Han Shuo. "Just what is going on here?"

Han Shuo recounted what had happened last night, going over events simply. Emily then said angrily, "I've long since heard that Florida is arrogant and cocky. I hadn't thought that he would really be so domineering. The Valley of Sunshine isn't in the hands of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band anymore. How dare he act this way!"

When he saw Emily also grow angry with him, Han Shuo's originally ticked off feelings were suddenly smoothed over. He then asked tenderly, "So what is this Florida's background?"

"The Dark Mantle stronghold located here, within the valley, is to collect local information. Florida is neither of the Lancelot Empire nor the Kasi Empire. He comes from a vassal state to the Lancelot Empire, and his grandfather is grand magus Ferguson of the Church of Light. He has a lofty status in the Church and it's said that he has an extremely high chance of advancing to magister."

"Florida grew up in the Church of Light and was personally taught by his grandfather. Apart from light major magics, he's also practiced many thunder magics. These are secrets that most don't know. Since his grandfather taught him personally and his potential is uncommon indeed, he became an archmage at a young age just three years ago. The Dark Mantle once kept an eye on him and felt that he would become one of the preeminent experts on the Continent."

"However, he didn't join the Church of Light and suddenly left a few years ago to come to the Valley of Sunshine, joining the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band shortly afterwards. Because he had such great power, he quickly won chief Jason's trust in an exceedingly short amount of time. Jason even entrusted his only daughter to him. However, old Jason fell in battle against robbers once, and his daughter also went missing as well."

"It's said that this had something to do with Florida."

"However, no one has solid evidence of this. Florida naturally took control of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band after Jason's death. There was a group that suspected Florida had something to do with this and left the band and the valley out of resentment and anger. This was how the Cairo mercenary band grew to strength."

"At the same time, the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band has indeed developed well in Florida's hands these years, and it's gradually recovered all the strength that it'd previously lost. It's now become Cairo mercenary band's greatest opponent, and they really might regain control of the valley under Florida's hands!" Emily contemplated with a furrowed brow for a bit and conveyed all she knew.

After Emily had finished sharing her knowledge, Han Shuo said lowly. “A strong enemy indeed. This person’s thoughts are vicious and devious to make a move even against his benefactor. These methods are completely against the mission of the Church of Light. It looks like I’ll need to be careful.”

“Bryan, the Valley of Sunshine is different from other places and is under the jurisdiction of no country. Whoever has the most strength here is king. I know your strength is certainly not inferior to Florida’s, but Florida has the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band in his hands and you will be hard pressed to fight against multiple enemies with your fists alone. I don’t think he’d make any moves in the valley thanks to the restraining pressure from the Cairo mercenary band, but you better not venture out easily so that you don’t give him any chances to make a move!” Emily was obviously very cautious of Florida as she spoke bracingly to Han Shuo.

“Don’t worry, I know!” Han Shuo’s expression was calm as he responded gravely. He paused and said to Emily, “Oh right, why hasn’t Elaine brought Belinda after such a long period of time. I left a drop of blood essence in Belinda, so she won’t be able to do anything at all. Has something happened along the way?”

Emily shook her head with a wry smile after Han Shuo’s words as she responded, “I was worrying as well. Elaine should’ve arrived in the valley by now. Has something really happened to her?”

“Forget it, I’ll take a trip and search the roads around the valley for a bit.” Han Shuo thought for a bit and answered.

“No, you offended Florida so you probably shouldn’t leave the valley for a while. He has great power in this area and if he knew that you left the valley, he would definitely try to make trouble for you.” A look of panic grew on Emily’s face as she tried to stop Han Shuo.

“It’s going to be fine. You know how perceptive I am. I’ll leave immediately if I discover any signs of danger. In addition, I placed a drop of blood essence on Belinda and only I can sense her within a certain distance. I must take this trip in order to conclude this mission perfectly!” Han Shuo smiled dashing and paid no heed to the threat of Florida at all as he spoke quite at ease.

“Since you insist, then let me go with you!” Emily spoke resolutely to Han Shuo when she saw that she couldn’t sway him.

Shaking his head, Han Shuo rejected Emily’s suggestion and turned to step outside. He spoke with his back to Emily, “Emily, you should trust me and not try to take care of everything for me like I’m a child. That isn’t the kind of life I want. If Florida actually does act, then I’ll actually be quite excited.”

Emily had already started moving, but sighed when she heard Han Shuo’s words. “Alright, but you have to be careful. Elaine and Belinda’s well being is nothing compared to your own. You must remember to protect yourself first.”

“I will!” Han Shuo responded.

The sky was already darkening by the time he walked out of the store. The various shops on the streets were already closed at this time, and the bright, multi-colored lights of many places of entertainment replaced the setting sun.

Han Shuo ignored all the calls and pleas for attention from the thickly made up faces around him, striding towards the valley border. Some procedures were needed in order to enter the valley, but none were needed to leave. No one asked Han Shuo anything, but the two Cairo mercenary band knights look at him with some surprise, seemingly perplexed why the two beauties weren’t leaving with him.

Han Shuo’s sharp perceptions noticed that someone was surveilling him as soon as he had stepped out of the valley, but he paid them no heed. There was no need for further thought. It was either members of the Cairo or Rainbow Sickle mercenary band who were keeping an eye on him. It wasn’t difficult for Han Shuo to shake them, of that he was extremely confident about.

He’d been walking slowly since leaving the valley, but abruptly picked up his speed. Han Shuo's body was like a shooting star as he streaked through the dusk sky. He'd covered several hundred meters in a few breaths and pulled ahead of those keeping an eye on him.

When that feeling of being watched disappeared, he suddenly took to the skies and flew close to the lush, silver trees, making for Valen City.

He sent out a mental command as the demon infant's mystical power mysteriously circulated. Waves of mystical power rippled out from the demon infant and covered the distance in front of him. There was a connection between the demon infant and the drop of blood essence. Han Shuo would immediately feel it if the drop of blood essence appeared.

As he concentrated his attention on the demon infant and cast his senses out in an attempt to search for the blood essence, a marvelous feeling suddenly grew in his heart. He could suddenly feel the presence of any small or large life forms. As Han Shuo inwardly started with shock, that sensation suddenly disappeared.

He once again concentrated his attention and bent his mind to finely sense the feeling that had surged into his heart just now. He discovered that he could feel the lifeforms of the various bugs and small mammals that were hibernating around him. Although this sensation faded in and out and was rather blurry, he was still quite shocked by this.

The demon infant suddenly shifted slightly at this point and the location of the blood essence was transmitted to Han Shuo in the next second. Overjoyed, he abruptly picked up his flight speed and sped to where that drop of blood essence was.

When he reached his destination however, he saw Elaine fallen on the ground beneath a large tree, her body covered in blood. Her neck was bent at an unnatural angle, as if she'd been forcefully choked to death by a strap. Her body seemed to have been hit by wind blade spells as multiple bone deep lacerations had sliced through her shirt. The blood was mixed into the accumulated snow and had melted into bloody water. It looked like she'd died not too long ago.

Suddenly, a strong sense of danger suddenly exploded in Han Shuo's heart. He started and immediately tried to back up rapidly from Elaine's body.

Chapter 200: Dog eat dog

An explosion rang out from Elaine's body as her profusely bleeding body suddenly exploded into bloody chunks as a momentous force vented in all four directions.

Two finger bones and three arrows of blood made directly for Han Shuo with ferocious and frightening power. In that critical moment, the quickly retreating Han Shuo immediately chanted out the spell for the bone shield and a pile of stark white bones immediately formed a white bone shield a meter wide and 1.5 meters tall that floated in the air in front of Han Shuo.

Cracking sounds rang out crisply as the white bone shield couldn't hold up beneath the tremendous impact it had just received. It exploded into numerous bone fragments that flew every which way, as splendid as fireworks.

If it'd been anyone else, they may not have sensed the danger lurking in Elaine's body and would've been caught unaware by this attack. They likely would've scrambled to face it. However, Han Shuo was perceptive and his thoughts moved quickly. A bolt of enlightenment had suddenly struck his heart and he'd felt the latent danger in Elaine's corpse just now. This was why he'd barely been able to react and retreat in time.

Being in the true demon realm, Han Shuo's brain had undergone a savage bout of training and the speed at which he could concentrate and release his mental strength at a speed far faster than ordinary mages. This was why he could chant out the white bone shield spell with such miraculous speed in such a crucial moment.

After retreating more than ten meters and the white bone shield now lying in broken fragments, Han Shuo had successfully evaded this obviously premeditated attack.

When he cast another glance at Elaine, there was nothing remaining apart from some fresh blood and chunks of flesh. A strong sense of bloodshed suddenly permeated through the air.

Han Shuo suddenly sensed a stifling feeling, and he immediately knew that this was bad. He'd been catching his breath but started circulating the magical yuan in his limbs without another moment's thought.

The trickles of magical yuan made a circuit of his limbs as it wiped away the scent of blood that Han Shuo had just sniffed into his lungs. Han Shuo had been feeling a bit woozy and tired, but now felt strength surge back into his limbs.

A vicious plan, a devious enemy!

He went over what had just happened and was certain that the blood essence he'd placed in Belinda's neck had been tampered with and transferred into Elaine's body.

The enemy had then killed Elaine and used her body as bait, setting two traps to ensnare him. They'd first used a spell similar to corpse explosion. Elaine's body had been filled with chemicals so that the moment her body exploded, her fresh blood, that was laced with chemicals, would become a second round of attack.

Such cruel methods that made use of a corpse could only be the brainchild of those fervent cultists of the Calamity Church!

Belinda must have been saved by others, or she would've never awoken from the shackles of the blood essence through her power alone. Han Shuo immediately planned on leaving this place when his thoughts traveled here, but two sets of footsteps started drawing close to where he was. One of them was heavy and the other soft. Han Shuo could judge from their weights that the oncomers were a male and a female.

A thought struck him as his mind raced furiously. He was weighing up what was the most appropriate method and best timing to handle the two.

However, he needed an opportunity to create the best timing! Han Shuo looked around and noticed that there was no good terrain to take advantage of, nor was there any good timing present. He couldn't help but sigh in his heart!

Han Shuo's originally upright body then suddenly softened to the ground. When his eyelids covered the sharp look in his eyes, his heartbeat and breathing became uncommonly calm. It was as if he were in a deep coma with no awareness whatsoever.

Two people gradually drew close. Belinda's face was covered by her black veil as usual. Her bright eyes stared tightly at Han Shuo without blinking.

The other person was rather elderly as the tips of his hair was a gray brown color. Fine lines wizened his face like moats as he wore a thick, gray cotton jacket. He held onto a knobbed cane in his left hand as his gray white eyes seemed without energy. He walked slowly over, keeping an eye on the surroundings as well and paying attention not only to just Han Shuo.

"Wait, Belinda!" Just as Belinda was about ten meters from Han Shuo, the old man immediately called out with a low, raspy voice.

Belinda had been staring intently at Han Shuo when she immediately stopped upon hearing this call. She turned in confusion and looked at the old man, "What is it Master Edwin?"

The man called Edwin was from the Calamity Church. His gray white eyes circled the surroundings again and again before finally settling on Han Shuo. He rasped out, "There's no blood on his body and there are no obvious signs of injury. He likely wasn't injured by that exploding corpse. Judging from the distance, he may have fainted from the chemicals, but we need to be more cautious."

"Then according to your opinion, what should we do?" Belinda not only stopped approaching Han Shuo after these words but actually started backing up until she was side by side with Edwin.

"Shoot an arrow into him. If he's truly in a coma, he won't have the slightest sensation of it!" Edwin responded.

Han Shuo cursed inwardly. This old fart was devious and vicious alright! He could come up with such a savage plan. This man gave Han Shuo a strong sense of danger, but from his body's condition, Han Shuo was well aware that this person wasn't a swordsman or a knight. He must be a marvelous mage despite his decrepit body, otherwise he wouldn't be afraid to approach Han Shuo!

Belinda laughed softly and agreed when she heard Edwin's instructions. She took out a bow and arrow and shakily notched an arrow to the string.

Belinda was noticeably not a marksman. Her two arms were shaking as her notched arrow shook in Han Shuo's direction as well.

Because they were so close, Han Shuo could sense Belinda holding the bow and arrow even with his eyes closed. Her shaking hands made soft sounds when her arms brushed past her thick clothing. This made Han Shuo panic a bit as he weighed whether or not he should take the gamble.

If he suddenly exploded into action, he wasn't confident in his ability to kill both of them given their distance from him and the fact that they were both on guard. Han Shuo didn't know anything about what methods this Edwin possibly had either, so it was very unwise to take this risk in attacking.

Han Shuo hardened his heart in the moment that Belinda notched her arrow and decided to just take the hit no matter what. Han Shuo understood that they didn't seem to want to kill him from their conversation. This was what caused him to make up his mind.

"Do it!" Edwin's voice was low as he pressed Belinda.

"Alright!" Belinda agreed and released the arrow with a "whoosh".

The arrow landed in the snow by his left arm as Han Shuo lay there nervously. It hadn't touched him at all! It looked like Belinda's shooting skills were beyond crap, which cause her to miss even at such a close range. "No worries, we have plenty of time, you'll get the hang of it after shooting a few more arrows." No emotion could be heard in Edwin's voice as he spoke slowly.

His eyes lit up as he spoke and he focused on Han Shuo's body, wanting to glean some clues from it.

"Alright, I'll try a few more times!" Belinda responded and shot out another three arrows. All three of them missed yet again.

Belinda was obviously a bit irritated as she huffed out lightly and took out another arrow. She didn't aim at all this time and shot it directly towards Han Shuo.

However, the one arrow which she hadn't aimed at all actually turned out to be miraculously accurate. It flew straight towards Han Shuo's calf and sank in with a small pfft. Bright red blood oozed out slowly from his pant leg.

This kind of pain had long since become nothing to Han Shuo. His heart rate and breathing stayed the same as did the dull expression on his face, as if he'd truly sunk into the depths of a drugged coma.

"Things should be fine!" Edwin nodded and said lowly after observing for a while.

Belinda and Edwin then relaxed their guard against Han Shuo and approached his position. Han Shuo focused his concentration and prepared himself to kill at any second. He would make a move to immediately kill Edwin as soon as the old man approached. As frightening as Belinda was, she was only a threat in group fights thanks to the destructive powers of her golem. Han Shuo didn't fear her at all if they were to fight in a place like this.

Just as Han Shuo made his preparation, more sounds came from the distance. They quickly approached this area, surprising Han Shuo as he feigned death on the ground. He wondered who was arriving now.

"Chief, that person's here!" A loud yell suddenly sounded as a band of a dozen travelled swiftly through the frosty winter wind.

"To think he left the Valley of Sunshine of his own accord, he doesn't want to live anymore!" Florida's voice suddenly rang out in Han Shuo's ears, completely contrary to his expectations.

"Chief Florida of the Red Sickle mercenary band!" Belinda suddenly exclaimed in shock.

"No matter who you two are, give me that kid immediately!" Florida announced peremptorily as usual when he arrived.

Calm restored itself in the eyes of the man called Edwin. He flicked a glance at Florida and the others approaching, first cackling oddly and then rasping out in a voice full of hate. "So you're Florida, it looks like I was right to come to the Valley of Sunshine this time!"

As Edwin spoke, an immense pulse of magic suddenly emanated from his body. The presence of dark magic suddenly permeated the air towards Florida. Three enormous black hands materialized in the air, slamming down upon them with a ferocious force that could cleave the heavens and ground open.

All the trees and boulders exploded into dust within that area in the span of a second. Towering trees first creaked audibly and then fell beneath the onslaught of that force.

The enormous dark magic spell, "The Hand of Death", had been released, and three ten meter wide hands had appeared. As the terrifying force covered the ground, four of the Rainbow Sickle mercenaries couldn't dodge in time and were pounded into bloody mincemeat.

"Did your grandfather Ferguson not teach you how to treat your elders?" Edwin's voice was suffused with a cruel smile as he spoke to Florida.

Edwin and Belinda were already by Han Shuo's side now, and if he wanted to, he could make a sudden move and harm Edwin. However, judging from these enormous disturbances, Han Shuo understood that Edwin seemed to hate Florida even more. He was trying to kill him after just meeting the man, and his strength was much stronger than Emily, who was also a user of dark magic.

On one side was a killer from the Calamity Church, on the other was enemies from the Rainbow Sickle. These two groups were both people that he would have to make moves against in the future, and it was all to Han Shuo's advantage that they had suddenly started fighting. As opposed to him making a move now, he might as well continue to play dead and have them dog eat dog.

"Just who are you?" Florida and the rest of the Rainbow Sickle mercenaries had swiftly taken refuge on higher ground and was looking back at Edwin in shock.

“Heh heh, you may not know me, but your grandfather has known me for many years. Perhaps you’ve heard of the name Edwin!” Edwin’s voice still sounded rather noncommittal.

“Grand magus Edwin of the Calamity Church, it’s you old monster!” Florida cried out with shock as he swept his gaze over Han Shuo’s body. He waved his hand, “Retreat!”

The Rainbow Sickle mercenary band members completely obeyed Florida’s orders and retreated swiftly, obviously greatly afraid of Edwin.

“Want to run? It won’t be that easy!” Edwin’s voice sounded again.

He quickly chanted a profound magical spell. Two enormous Grim Reaper blades materialized in his left and right hands. They were even larger than the previous hands of death. The sharp blades flew quickly through the air and cut through towering trees like they were slicing through tofu. They broke apart into various chunks of wood after the blade had passed through.

The presence of death emanated towards Florida and the others. Two brawny and tall senior swordsmen flanking Florida had no defense against this at all as they were carved into various pieces of meat by the blades and scattered down onto the ground in a bloody mess.

Such frightening effects made Florida and the others move even faster.

The appearance of such an unlucky omen had obviously disturbed Florida’s previously laid plans. Even Han Shuo was quite surprised as the ghastly wails continued to commentate a play by play of the casualties.

“Tie him up first, I’ll take care of these people!” Edwin turned to speak to Belinda when he saw Florida and the others fleeing towards the Valley of Sunshine for their lives. He took out a vial of powder and gave it to Belinda, “Smear this on his throat, he’ll answer all your questions as soon as he wakes up!”

“Don’t worry, I’ll make him pay!” Belinda responded resolutely.

Nodding, Edwin turned to leave and planned to pursue Florida and the others. Han Shuo suddenly made his move as the Demonslayer Edge howled through the air, shooting straight for Edwin's back.

Han Shuo had planned on staying quiet for a while longer, but now that he'd witnessed Edwin's strength and realized that he was departing his attack range, he didn't plan on observing any longer. Han Shuo decided to use this opportunity to take him out first.

Edwin was stronger than Han Shuo had assumed, as an instinctual response kicked in even when the Demonslayer Edge pierced towards him at such high speed in this short distance. A magic shield-like black metal flared up, protecting the area that the Demonslayer Edge was piercing towards.

Pfft. Blood sprayed everywhere.

The Demonslayer Edge sank a few inches in after piercing through the thick magic shield and was then halted by an enormous force, unable to move a single bit forward.

At the same time, Han Shuo leapt up like a panther from his original position on the ground, flying past Belinda to shoot towards Edwin with the speed of lightning, purple spellfire sparkling from his left hand as his hand formed a blade, drawing it across Edwin's neck mercilessly.

Chapter 201: Hurry up old dog!

Grunting beneath his breath, the dark grand magus Edwin soared into the sky like the branch of a willow tree whipping into the air. As he did so, Han Shuo's sharp knife-like palm cut through the air.

Stuck in Edwin's heart, the Demonslayer Edge seemed to be under the draw of an immense force and forcefully flew out of his body, flying through the air.

Fresh blood dripping from his back, Edwin's expression was an ugly grimace as he chanted a magic spell. Another hand of death appeared in the air and started hurtling down upon Han Shuo like a mountain. An enormous aura covered Han Shuo's body, making it very difficult for him to breathe.

A thought grew in his mind as the Demonslayer Edge flew towards Han Shuo like a rainbow. He suddenly activated the "Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens" and shot through the enormous aura surrounding him as the hand of death reached his head. He shot towards Florida's escaping group.

When the second blow missed, Edwin distanced himself from Han Shuo. The speed at which he flew towards the horizon was clearly much nimbler than Archmage Emily.

Perhaps Han Shuo would have been able to meet him head on if the opponent had been Florida. But Edwin was a dark grand magus. Such potential was most definitely sufficient to overwhelm Han Shuo. So once the situation turned ugly, he needed to withdraw immediately.

"Treacherous little brat. Your death is certain!" Edwin bellowed hoarsely from above. Unexpectedly, he ignored Belinda entirely as he shot straight towards Han Shuo.

Defeating him was out of the question, but as for escaping... The flexibility and speed of the "Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens" instantly displayed its power, gradually increasing the distance between Han Shuo and Edwin.

Suddenly, a group of ten or so people appeared before him. Florida hovered midair, his long hair billowing. Below him, a few elite members of the Rainbow Sickle Mercenary Band sprinted through the thick shrubbery at lightning speed.

This time, Rainbow Sickle's target had only been Han Shuo in their trip from the Valley of Sunshine. Therefore, they had only mobilized some experts. But who would have thought they would be so unlucky as to run into Edwin, someone with a grudge against Florida's grandfather, and fall into such a miserable state.

Even though they were escaping in the same direction, Han Shuo's speed had clearly surpassed Florida's group. The fact that he would be able to catch up to these people had also been part of Han Shuo's plans.

Laughing coldly, Han Shuo approached them from behind, using the flexibility granted by the Art to leisurely suspend himself on the bodies of Florida's group. With Han Shuo's chant, lance after lance of bone spears pierced towards Florida like arcs of electricity flashing in midair.

"Damn it!" Florida, in the midst of running for his life, suddenly heard the whistling sounds of bone spears breaking through the air. He turned his head back and discovered a sinisterly smiling Han Shuo looking down at him with a cold smile. In that moment, Florida couldn't help but swear.

A ball of eye blinding light shot out from Florida's staff. A "Radiant Slash" spell was flung out and pulverized the three bone spears. At the same time however, the difference between the levitation spell and Han Shuo's Art was made apparent. They had both chanted spells, but Han Shuo's speed hadn't been affected at all, whereas Florida's originally swiftly moving speed had decreased by a third.

A strange wind sound quickly approached from the distance and Han Shuo understood that Edwin was swiftly catching up. A mocking smile hanging from his lips, Han Shuo once again slowed down and clung to Florida's trail like a ghoul. He chanted the bone spear spell again as another three bone spears flew out.

Florida wasn't afraid of Han Shuo, but he was inordinately afraid of Edwin. If it hadn't been for Edwin's pursuit, Florida would've absolutely stopped and brought his significant prowess to battle Han Shuo. However, he also obviously didn't want Edwin to catch up to him because of Han Shuo. Therefore, he could only continue his defense and reduce his speed again and again.

"Chief, we'll hold him off for you, you get out of here!" At this moment, some of the Rainbow Sickle experts out in front of Florida suddenly halted as one of them yelled loudly.

They'd all witnessed Edwin's strength just now. If they stayed, they might be able to hold back Han Shuo, but they'd never be able to defend against Edwin. Speaking these words at this moment meant that they'd already made their plans to die.

"Alright, I'll get revenge for you!" Florida was a ruthless person alright. Although he was a bit pained, he still decisively accepted their suggestion and glared ferociously at Han Shuo, then turning and dashing forward.

Two crossbows suddenly locked onto Han Shuo as two mercenaries' sharp eyes gave Han Shuo a prickling feeling of danger. Two sounds pierced through the air as two bolts brought a terrifying air current with them. They shot towards him with a speed and accuracy beyond Han Shuo's imagination.

The quickly advancing Han Shuo had to rapidly back up. He didn't dare rush another step forward. In this process, some of the archers notched their bows and took aim at Han Shuo. Their skill was in stark contrast to Belinda's methods just now. Since Han Shuo had already taken to the sky, he was hard pressed to evade the danger from below and had to back up once again.

Han Shuo hesitated and planned on immediately changing direction. At this moment, the Rainbow Sickle mercenaries beneath him suddenly started panicking. A milky white, resplendent severing aura suddenly shot out from their midst as Trunks appeared on the back of his manticore. He was waving his sword around with a cold expression and forced the mercenaries back so that they had no energy to spare for Han Shuo.

“Trunks!” Up in the air, Han Shuo was flabbergasted by the disturbance below and he couldn’t help but dive down to exclaim in joy.

“Fly through the air to keep harassing Florida. I’ll handle these traitors on the ground who should’ve died a thousand, ten thousand times! We’ll chat when we get back to the Valley of Sunshine!” Trunks threw back his head and flashed a brilliant smile. The charming, handsome Trunks was attacking the experts of Rainbow Sickle from the back of his manticore.

“Trunks, don’t you bully others to the extreme!” The expert who had spoken before suddenly glared ferociously at Trunks.

“Bully others to the extreme?! Haha! The old chief was so good to you and none of you guys said anything after that animal Florida took control. You just blindly followed behind him. How dare you say these words to me now!” Trunks laughed as if he’d heard something hilarious, but his smile was even colder than the frosty night wind and his tone spoke of a hatred etched bone deep.

Edwin’s figure was drawing closer, drawing a cold laugh from Trunks. Trunks lifted his head once again and urged Han Shuo on, “Bryan, hurry and go. Take advantage of this opportunity to kill Florida!”

“Alright, that old monster behind us is a tough bird. Run away immediately if he draws near and don’t meet him head on!” Although Han Shuo didn’t understand why Trunks hated Florida that much, he guessed it must have something to do with the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band. The experts present here seemed to be acquainted with Trunks, and so this meant that there was some type of relationship between them.

Han Shuo realized that he wouldn’t be able to measure up to Trunks’ strong belief in him if he didn’t immediately give chase. He darted through the air like lightning and shot for Florida. Edwin arrived shortly after Han Shuo’s departure as well.

He cast a glance down and didn’t linger when he noticed that both Florida and Han Shuo were absent. He followed Han Shuo’s trail and seemed to be completely unconcerned with Trunks and those of the Red Sickle mercenary band below.

Han Shuo had already gotten a taste of Florida's abilities earlier, he definitely wouldn't be able to live in peace if the latter didn't die. The place of extreme water was located within the valley, so he needed to stay here for a while longer. If Florida didn't die, he'd have no end of trouble in the future. So even if Phoebe hated him for it, Han Shuo needed to kill him!

The flying art of a demonic cultivator enabled Han Shuo to slowly catch up to Florida when he circulated his magical yuan to the utmost, even after lingering halfway.

When the bone spears once again whistled through the air, Florida almost wanted to spit blood in his anger. He now knew that Han Shuo wanted to go down with him and have them both die to Edwin. In his irritation, he truly wanted to stop and fight Han Shuo to death.

"Just what do you want? When that old monster Edwin catches up to us, neither one of us will be able to escape!" Florida roared out furiously at Han Shuo, as the scene from earlier repeated again; Florida used the Radiant Slash to hack Han Shuo's bone spears into pieces.

"Heh heh, it strikes my fancy today that I'll die with you!" Han Shuo had an incredibly refreshing and relieving feeling after venting the dejected feeling he'd felt from being suppressed by Florida in the last two days.

Even with Edwin catching up to them, Han Shuo was confident that he could make use of his magic to get away. With Han Shuo's understanding of mages, he could also be certain that Florida wouldn't be able to maintain flight for too long, and thus this was why he'd done this.

"Crazy, a f*cking madman!" Han Shuo's words finally caused Florida to start cussing.

Because Florida and Han Shuo's speed had decreased, Edwin's figure appeared from behind them at this moment and his odd cackling traveled to them first."

"Hurry up old dog! I'm waiting for you!" Han Shuo even had the time to laugh wildly and look back at Edwin, egging him on with his words.

"You better pray that I don't catch you, or I'll make you regret that you've ever lived!" Edwin was absolutely incensed by the mention of "old dog". Even the injury on his back seemed to throb with more pain after hearing that.

Han Shuo had long since pulled out the arrow that Belinda had shot into his calf, and this was when his durable body showed off its capabilities. His blood had stopped flowing out of the wound, and apart from some minor pain, there was no impact to Han Shuo's movements.

When the three bone spears once again shot out, Florida had to reach out a hand and defend himself. Han Shuo made use of this time to release a dark mist spell. It was night to begin with, and there was no other light in the sky apart from a crescent moon. When the dark mist spell appeared again, it shrouded Han Shuo and Florida in a patch of darkness in which even one's own hand couldn't be seen.

"Damn it!" Florida emitted blinding light from his magic staff, but could only illuminate a small patch around him. He scrambled to defend himself against the bone spears and thereby decreased his flight speed even more.

"Kid, I'll take your life first to pay back some of your grandfather's debt to me!" Edwin had finally caught up to them, but Han Shuo slipped away like a bit of smoke and vanished in the direction of the Valley of Sunshine, leaving behind only Florida who'd been obstructed by the three bone spears.

Han Shuo wouldn't be so stupid as to conceal his traces in front of a dark grand magus. When the mental strength of a freak like this covered everything, even someone truly dead would be revealed to him. Therefore, Han Shuo could only use the advantage of his speed to leave this place of danger as soon as possible and leave Florida behind to bring up the rear.

As Han Shuo's figure slowly faded into the distance, the dark mist magic also started to dissipate. When Florida once again saw the clean moonlight reappear in the desolate night sky, he was also greeted with the sight of Edwin, enraged to the point where steam was spewing from his face.

"In the name of the God of Light, bind all darkness, Shackles of Light!"

Florida panicked when he saw Edwin and didn't think at all before he released the light magic spell, Shackles of Light.

Hula hoops of light sparkled with clean, pure light and rolled beneath the bright moonlight, surrounding Edwin. The bands of light were filled with the purest of light elements and had an enormous restraining power.

"This little fellow has such a high grasp of comprehension in light magic at such a young age. He will surely become a thorn in the side of our Calamity Church in the future. It looks like I can't allow you to leave alive today!" When faced with the shackles of light, the dark grand magus Edwin neither panicked nor grew frantic, and his angrily scowling face from earlier regained its peace.

He chanted out a dark magic spell and waved his staff at the approaching Shackles of Light. A boundless surge of energy seemed to want to rip into everything as it churned the two bands of light closest to him into pieces.

Suddenly, the remaining bands of light all formed into one string as lightning started sparking and crackling all over the bands of light. The Shackles of Light had originally only be able to restrain enemies, but it had suddenly turned into an enormously strong killing machine in the span of a second and tried to churn Edwin into pieces.

"Heh, you've got some skills alright to be able to combine thunder magic with the Shackles of Light." Edwin exclaimed softly as he was completely enveloped in the radiant flashes of lightning and bright light.

An inky black magic shield covered Edwin, and three Hands of Death appeared in the air, grabbing the Shackles of Light. They pulled apart the bands of light with brute force and the violently sparking lightning found it completely impossible to injure the Hands of Death.

"Pfft." Florida spat out a mouthful of fresh blood and then ran blindly away, seemingly unwilling to spend another moment there.

Melding together the light and thunder magic was obviously out of his control, and he'd been hit with the backlash of expending too much magic. That had resulted in immediate, significant injury. However, Edwin had easily broken through such a strong blow, displaying that the differences in their strengths were indeed too hard to cross. Florida knew that he would be hard pressed to escape death if he stayed for another moment.

Although Edwin had broken through Florida's spell, it had taken him some time to do so. When Edwin then cleared away the remnants of the magic, he discovered that Florida had once again disappeared.

Florida was wavering through the sky in flight at this moment due to expending too much mental strength. However, the valley had finally appeared in front of him, and he'd be able to make it to safety before long.

No matter how much the Cairo and Rainbow Sickle mercenary bands were at odds with each other, the Cairo mercenary band still had to follow the rules of the valley. So once Florida entered the valley, whoever tried to kill him would face the attacks of all the assembled powers.

Add to that the fact that most of the Rainbow Sickle band was stationed within the valley, Edwin would be able to do nothing to Florida once he made it inside.

However, when he saw the border of the valley, Han Shuo's coldly smirking figure appeared at the same time and blocked the way that he needed to take, obviously not planning on letting him make it inside alive!

Chapter 202: I'll remember you

If a person expressed the attitude of wanting to kill you at all costs, then the only way for you to live was to kill him before he killed you!

Han Shuo and Florida hadn't seen eye to eye from the very beginning, and the matter with Phoebe had magnified this enmity even more so. Not only had Florida expressed his desire to kill Han Shuo from the very beginning, he'd also taken actual action. Han Shuo would naturally not sit there and patiently await his death.

A day's worth of pursuit had now extended into the depths of the night. The bright moon hung high in the sky like a giant, a cold eye looking down on everything beneath it. Strong gusts of chilly wind shook the towering trees and blew away the thick snow cover on the ancient branches, the falling snow whispering in people's ears.

Han Shuo was standing in the air, carrying the Demonslayer Edge in his right hand with a cold expression on his face. His gaze stern and emotionless, he seemed to be a lofty mountain range obstructing Florida's path of hope.

Florida only had the chance to live if he made it past Han Shuo!

"If you step aside now, I promise to never go up against you in the future!" Caught in the throes of a magical backlash, Florida had greatly expended his energy in his desperate flight for life. His injuries were now severe and his strength far depleted. A tinge of resignation colored his words as he looked at Han Shuo.

A charming smile was plastered across his face, yet Han Shuo's laugh was as cold as an icy cavern. He looked meaningfully at Florida and shook his head, "I'm sorry, I think your corpse is much more reassuring than your promise!"

When he heard those words, Florida knew that there was no way out for him. His face darkened as he said, "My grandfather is the grand magus Ferguson of the Church of Light! There's nothing in it for you if you become enemies with me! Even if you can kill me today, my grandfather will never let you off the hook!”

Even if Florida was injured, he still tried to create the illusion of strength with these words. But for Han Shuo, with his current strength, not only was he unafraid of Florida bringing out his grandfather to threaten him, he was now even more certain that Florida had nothing left in his tank. Otherwise, Florida wouldn't have wasted all this time talking to him.

“If I don't kill you today, I'll face danger from both you and your grandfather. But if you're dead, I only need to face your grandfather. Therefore, go die!” His words icy, Han Shuo readied himself to kill.

A pile of stark white bones appeared beneath the pristine moonlight as Han Shuo chanted. Gleaming coldly, the bones quickly assembled into a bone prison that was three meters wide and four meters tall, contracting rapidly around Florida.

Han Shuo suddenly shot towards Florida with a merciless expression when the bone prison had completely formed, moving through the night sky like lightning.

Even if his strength was greatly spent, Florida was still a light major archmage, particularly as he'd also dual majored in thunder magic. Han Shuo had seen everything quite clearly in the distance when Florida had faced off against Edwin, and knew that his strength was quite frightening.

Therefore, with Han Shuo's advantage in magical cultivation, the smartest thing for him to do was to close the distance between him and Florida. No matter how strong Florida was, Han Shuo was confident that he'd be able to kill him if he was within close combat range.

A light major spell suddenly exploded out with Florida as the epicenter. The eye piercingly strong light brought with it the pure, divine strength of light. The spell formed sharp ripples as it crashed onto the bone prison in front of him.

Light major had always been a natural counter to necromancy magic. When the pure and divine strength of light collided with the bone prison, the originally gleaming white bones seemed to undergo a hundred years of corrosion as they started to crumble. The strong defenses had become so brittle that they wouldn't even be able to withstand the slightest blow, and so exploded into pieces when Florida struck fiercely with his magic staff.

Although he'd broken out of the cage, Florida's face was even more drained of blood than before. It was obvious that he'd expended too much mental strength and had taxed his body beyond its limits. At that moment, Han Shuo suddenly appeared next to him, the Demonslayer Edge sparkling with a murderous light. He slashed at Florida's neck, utterly determined to end his life with one deadly strike.

The magic staff in Florida's hand suddenly exploded with white light as an enormous power within suddenly erupted. Florida hurled his staff at the Demonslayer Edge.

A metallic clang rang out as the two connected, and the magical yuan infused Demonslayer Edge ripped a large hole through Florida's staff of unknown materials. However, the power within the staff obstructed Han Shuo for a slight moment, making him falter involuntarily in the air for a moment.

On the other side, frothy blood was now running down from Florida's mouth, trailing down his neck to dye his chest a vivid red. His handsome face was now as pale as paper and the blood by his mouth made him appear even more frightening. At this point, he wasn't so much flying to the Valley of Sunshine, but swaying his way to it instead.

High quality magic staffs could store a portion of the caster's magic within it and release it at critical moments. Florida's actions just now had obviously been that. The magical elements within the staff had acted as a catalyst to cause an explosion and make Han Shuo pause for a second.

By the valley's fence, the Cairo mercenary band's vice chief Harris seemed to have received some sort of message and was looking in that direction with some of his experts at his side. They had long since seen the battle going on outside, but was casting a dispassionate eye upon things and hadn't intervened.

Everyone in the valley knew of the enmity between the Cairo and Rainbow Sickle mercenary bands. The Cairo mercenaries had an obligation to interfere as long as Florida set foot within the valley. However, Han Shuo and Florida's fight was taking place outside the valley at the moment. Additionally, with Harris' hatred of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band, he likely was passionately wishing for Han Shuo to kill Florida.

Pausing for a moment, Han Shuo saw that Florida was about to enter the valley. Behind him, Edwin had once again reappeared as well. Han Shuo immediately circulated his magical yuan to its utmost and shot across the sky, leaving a smoke trail as he made for Florida.

Suddenly, a fire dragon rose into the air and shot out from the valley's fence, churning towards Han Shuo. Han Shuo had wanted to kill Florida, but was forced from his path in order to evade. He first used the dark mist spell to create cover and then summoned a zombie to substitute for himself in the face of the fire dragon's wrath.

Han Shuo looked down at the dark mist and noticed that a fire mage had appeared by the valley border. There was a rapidly approaching cavalry troop in the distance wearing the uniform of the Rainbow Sickle mercenaries as well.

"Damn it, why are they here?" Harris growled in anger.

"Chief, chief, are you alright?!" The Rainbow Sickle mercenaries immediately surrounded Florida when they drew nearer and asked anxiously.

Florida was still suffering from immense shock and fright, and finally breathed a huge sigh of relief at the sight of his own people. He turned his head to point viciously at Han Shuo, "Kill him!"

Florida's body fell into a dead faint as soon as he'd finished speaking. It looked like the trials he'd suffered along the way had caused him great trauma.

The appearance of the Rainbow Sickle mercenaries made Han Shuo understand that he no longer had any opportunities to kill Florida. However, since Florida had fainted, Han Shuo understood that even though he hadn't died, he was half dead anyways. It would take him a long time to recover from this.

Han Shuo didn't wait for the Rainbow Sickle mercenaries to make their move, but shot into the valley from above and landed a few meters in front of Harris.

According to the valley's rules, even if one had the ability to fly, one couldn't enter the valley using flight.

However, Han Shuo's earlier fight with Florida had been completely witnessed by those in the Cairo mercenary band. The enemy of one's enemy was a friend, and so not only did Harris very magnanimously forgive Han Shuo's actions, but immediately gestured for his men to form a wall in front of Han Shuo.

"I'm sorry, now that he's entered the valley, fights cannot occur in the Valley of Sunshine, or our Cairo mercenary band would intervene!" Harris' expression was calm as he grasped his double headed battle-axe tightly, radiating a willingness to explode into battle at any moment.

Chief Florida's grave injuries were a large blow to the Rainbow Sickle mercenaries, not only in terms of strength, but also reputation. The eyes of the mercenaries all spat fire as they looked in Han Shuo's direction, but Harris had expressed his intention to abide by the rules, and so they were caught in a dilemma.

"Let's stabilize the chief's injuries first. They'll pay as soon as the chief is alright!" The fire mage who had attacked Han Shuo earlier cast a glance at Florida's face and suddenly opened his mouth to speak.

This person likely had a very high position within the mercenary band as no one else said anything after his suggestion. They all glared furiously at Han Shuo, leaving quickly with Florida in their care.

"Friend, you must be more careful. Florida will not let you off easily after he wakes up. Although our men patrol all over the Valley of Sunshine, we still can't fully prevent people from making some mischief. I think you know what I mean?" Harris' attitude was much warmer compared to the first time he'd seen Han Shuo. The cold lines of his face had softened as he spoke a word of warning to Han Shuo.

Florida's grave injuries greatly benefited the Cairo mercenary band, and as Florida's rival, Han Shuo was the Cairo mercenary band's friend. No wonder Harris' attitude was so friendly towards Han Shuo.

The Cairo mercenaries were on patrol all throughout the valley, but their energy was limited;. It was impossible for them to keep an eye out all the time. When the fuming Florida woke up, he would absolutely pursue revenge at all costs. Even if he was in the Valley of Sunshine, he would likely pick the perfect time to make his move, so Han SHuo wasn't truly safe within the valley as well.

Nodding, Han Shuo spoke with a slight smile, "Thank you, it's not that easy to kill me either!"

Edwin had also made it over at this time and landed on the ground near the border. His gaze fixed itself tightly on Han Shuo as he said, "I want to enter the valley, what procedures do I need to take care of?"

Han Shuo's head began to throb at these words. The arrival of such an old freak was an even greater threat to him than Florida. However, the Valley of Sunshine had its rules as well, and they wouldn't turn away such a god of wealth.

"Kid, you're called Bryan aren't you? There are fewer and fewer people who can inflict injuries on my body as the years go on. I'll remember you!" Edwin rubbed his aching back as he completed went through the appropriate procedures. He threw a ghastly smile at Han Shuo, the various crevices and moats on his face scrunching together to appear quite stern.

"You should forget me instead, I don't want to see you again!" Han Shuo smiled ruefully in response, walking into the valley nursing a headache and thinking of how to prepare appropriate measures.

Edwin came from the Calamity Church and had the strength of a dark grand magus. He was a significant force to be reckoned with across the entire Profound Continent. That such a character hadn't been immediately killed meant that he would have an almost unimaginable amount of trouble in the future. Han Shuo was now besieged with an enormous headache and wanted to leave the valley immediately.

Everything could wait until he returned to the cemetery of death through the transportation matrix.

The end of the night had arrived unknowingly and Emily was rather sleepy when Han Shuo returned to the Dark Mantle.

When she saw Han Shuo reappear in front of her, the slightly confused look in her eyes slowly cleared up. She said gleefully, "You're alright! Did you see Trunks?"

Nodding, Han Shuo said with surprise, "How did you know Trunks is here?"

"The Dark Mantle has a small intelligence network within the valley. Trunks entered the valley by himself shortly after you left. I know that the two of you are close, so I had a chat with him when he entered the valley. When he learned that Florida was making a move against you, he immediately left again and rushed in the direction of Valen City. I didn't go with him because I had to stay here and wait for news from my superiors." Emily explained.

"Elaine's dead. I fell victim to a trap and almost got killed!" Han Shuo sighed and sat down.

When she heard of Elaine's death, a sad expression appeared on Emily's beautiful face and she grew very quiet. After a while, she sighed heavily and softly said, "Although big sister Elaine didn't know how to fight, she was very capable. She'd operated her small hotel in Valen City for many years and supplied us with valuable advice many a time. She's helped us so much, but died because of us!"

If Han Shuo and Emily hadn't appeared, and if they hadn't given Belinda over to Elaine's care in their rush, Elaine wouldn't have died either. It was because Han Shuo didn't have a deep relationship with Elaine that he wasn't hit with any particularly tragic feelings. When he saw Emily's grief stricken expression, he patted her shoulder lightly and spoke a few words of comfort.

Emily's mood improved as Han Shuo comforted her in a low voice. It was then that she remembered the true task at hand, "Just what happened?”

Han Shuo recounted the events in great detail, making Emily shudder in fright when she heard of the dangerous happenings on this trip. She cheered for Han Shuo’s escape and prayed for him during his dangerous encounters.

Emily was still caught up in the shock from what had happened after Han Shuo had finished, and lifted his pant leg to see the now clotted wound. “Don’t take such risks in the future, if Belinda’s arrow hadn’t landed here, then you would’ve been in a lot of danger.”

“Don’t worry, if the direction of her arrow was more dangerous, I naturally wouldn’t have sat there just to be hit by it. I would’ve immediately evaded and escaped as far as possible.” His actions had brought certain results in the end. Although Edwin’s back injury wasn’t as severe as Florida’s, it would be enough to cause him grief for some time.

“We’re in trouble now. Florida is already a tough person to shake off, and now we have Edwin to deal with as well. He has a high position in the Calamity Church and is quite vicious and brutal. You’ve even hurt him, I don’t know whether to be proud or worried for you!” Emily sighed with a look of worry on her face.

“Don’t worry, if it comes down to it, we can return to the cemetery of death. As long as we stay in a place where no one can find us, we’ll be able to defend ourselves or attack after we set up the transportation matrix!” Han Shuo held a rather optimistic view as he smiled to comfort Emily.

At this time, the old man looking after the Dark Mantle stronghold walked over and knocked on the door, “Mistress Emily, chief Laureton of the Cairo mercenary band requests that you and master Bryan pay a visit.”

“Understood, Grandpa Camby!” Emily responded lightly and looked at Han Shuo. “It looks like we may have allies!”

Chapter 203: Forcing a fight

The sky had completely brightened and the air had grown cooler. The sun, the size of a disc, was slowly rising in the sky. A resplendent sunrise stood tall and upright over the inky blue clouds and sparkled with a soft red light, ripping apart the clouds that covered the heavens.

Small groups of people traveled on the morning streets in the Valley of Sunshine as they wandered out of the dens of temptation from the various alleys off the streets, yawning with sleepy expressions. It was apparent that they'd expended great effort on the bodies of women last night.

"There are truly so many disgusting fellows with no taste!" Emily wasn't in the best of moods as she flicked a cold glance at those walking out of the alleys with untidy clothing, a look of distaste on her face.

Han Shuo wasn't overly tired by the chase that had lasted all night. He looked around interestedly but didn't respond.

"Oh, right, Phoebe came to find you last night, I said you were out on business!" Emily drew her coat together tightly by the neck and turned her head to speak to Han Shuo.

"She didn't say anything?" Han Shuo started slightly and thought of what Phoebe had gone to do.

"No, she likely doesn't have anything to say to me!" Emily responded, paused, and suddenly drew close to Han Shuo in a gossipy fashion. She lowered her voice, "Did you do... that to her?"

Shaking his head, Han Shuo was all business as he said righteously. "How could I do that? We've only met for a few months. Am I someone in that much of a rush?"

"Pfft, you violated me the day you met me through raping me, you shameless villain!" Emily was quite disdainful of Han Shuo's response and snorted with contempt.

Han Shuo couldn't help but laugh at her words. He didn't feel awkward, but rather retorted, "Our circumstances were rather special. Besides, you were so alluring, how could my hot bloodedness withstand your temptations?”

“Villain! All you know is how to talk nonsense!” Emily’s breath was caught in her anger, but she was rather satisfied by his answer and didn’t continue the conversation.

When he saw some happiness marking Emily’s brows, Han Shuo knew that she wasn’t actually angry. He suddenly thought of a problem and asked, “Oh right, how did the Cairo mercenary band know of that place? Do they know that Dark Mantle controls the shop?”

Contrary to Han Shuo’s expectations, Emily actually nodded. She explained when she saw his look of befuddlement. “The Valley of Sunshine is different from a town or city of the Empire. The Cairo mercenary band holds sway here. Since there’s limited land around here, they’ll thoroughly investigate any comings and goings. It’s a completely unrealistic thing to want to stay here and remain a secret.”

“However, although they know that we’re the Dark Mantle, they don’t interfere with our operations at all, because we target those with designs against the Lancelot Empire and won’t purposefully make trouble for them.”

“Bryan!” Han Shuo and Emily were walking towards the Cairo mercenary band when they heard Trunks’ voice.

Han Shuo turned his head to see the manticore riding Trunks appear from the direction of the entrance to the valley. There were some indistinct traces of blood on him and the manticore. Behind them, the Rainbow Sickle experts had on looks of anger. It seemed like they’d come off worse in a fight.

Han Shuo ran sharp eyes over Trunks’ body, but didn’t discover any traces of ripped clothing. It looked like the fresh blood on him and the manticore were from those of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band.

“Are you alright?” Han Shuo asked with a slight smile when Trunks had made it over on his manticore.

“Just a few cowardly traitors, how could they possibly harm me? Oh right, how did it go on your side? Did you kill that pathetic Florida?” Trunks responded confidently and looked closely at Han Shuo.

Spreading his hands out with a resigned expression on his face, Han Shuo sighed, “His men saved him at the entrance to the valley. However, I think he’ll have to spend at least a month or two to fully recover from his injuries!”

“Haha, that’s good enough. I came to the Valley of Sunshine for his life this time, and it looks like you’ve already done half the job for me, I thank you!” Trunks laughed heartily and then looked back at the Rainbow Sickle members behind him with an imposing expression. “Traitors, go back and tell Florida that I, Trunks, have returned again. I must take revenge for Annie this time, he’ll die by my hands!”

The Rainbow Sickle mercenaries all had looks of hatred and anger when they heard these words, but they seemed to know that Trunks wasn’t someone to be trifled with. They only snorted coldly a few times and circled past Han Shuo and the others, moving towards another direction.

“Trunks, why are you here, and what enmity do you have with Florida?” Han Shuo couldn’t help but ask at this point.

The merchants had already awakened on the streets of the valley and the streets had begun to bustle a bit. Trunks looked around with a slightly dismal expression, saying, “This isn’t a place to speak, let’s find a place where we can chat and I’ll tell you in greater detail!”

“Alright!” Han Shuo nodded.

“Wait, Laureton of the Cairo mercenary band has reached out to us. Why don’t you have a good chat after we return?” Emily couldn’t help but speak up in reminder when she saw that Han Shuo and Trunks seemed to want to immediately find a quiet place to chat.

Han Shuo only reacted after Emily had spoken and said to Trunks apologetically, “Laureton of the Cairo mercenary band sent people to find us early this morning, asking us to pay a visit. Why don’t we chat later?”

Nodding understandingly, Trunks walked side by side with Han Shuo and said dashing, "Let's go, I happen to know Laureton as well, let's go together."

"You know him?" Han Shuo started and asked Trunks with surprise.

"Of course, I spent some time in the valley back in the day and I know many people here!" Trunks responded matter-of-factly. Emily revealed a surprised expression and looking thoughtfully at Trunks.

There were no established streets of shops within the valley, just a few soaring cliff faces and some towering trees that blocked the sky. Trunks seemed very familiar with this area as he led Han Shuo and Emily inside.

"The terrain is quite precarious within the depths of the valley, but there's a vast plain after making it through a narrow tunnel in the cliffs. The strongest power within the valley has always lived there. It used to be the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band living there a few years ago, but if it wasn't for Florida's evil scheme in killing the old chief, the Cairo mercenary band wouldn't be forced to live elsewhere at this very moment!" Trunks started introducing the area around them as they walked.

There were members of the Cairo mercenary band standing guard at certain intervals along the path. However, the distance between the guards was large enough, and they weren't afraid of others hearing their words.

"Right, Trunks, just what kind of enmity is there between you and Florida?" Han Shuo couldn't help but ask when he saw that the surroundings were quiet enough.

"I was actually part of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band to begin with, and I was a senior swordsman then. The old chief had always taken care of me and the chief's daughter Annie treated me like a brother. I was very comfortable in those days, until Florida appeared. The young Florida brought with him a dazzling aura and enjoyed special treatment as soon as he joined. Not only did the old chief value him highly, but even Annie quite admired him. I myself had good relations with him as well."

"However, Florida's goal in coming to the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band was to fully control it. Even though the old chief had already given Annie over to his care, he still felt that the old chief had too many days in front of him. He colluded with robbers and revealed our movements to them, causing great losses to the band. The old chief died when surrounded by the robbers, and Annie vanished as well. It's likely that she met with a bad fate as well."

"I was lucky enough to escape and personally witnessed the conversation between Florida and the head of the robbers. That was when I understood everything. From that moment forth, I swore to get rid of Florida one way or another. Sadly, when Florida took control of the Rainbow Sickle mercenaries, he also invited a source of power from the Church of Light and consolidated his influence over the situation in an exceedingly short amount of time, thoroughly grasping the mercenary band."

"I was only a senior swordsman then and attempted to assassinate Florida with some injured mercenaries loyal to the old chief. We ended up getting thoroughly defeated and fleeing for our lives. Many of my closest friends died in that battle. I entered the Dark Forest to train myself, ever nursing the determination to take revenge. I waited for three years, and when I heard that the fight over the title of the strongest in the valley was about to take place, I knew that Florida wouldn't shy away. He would certainly contend with the Cairo mercenary band. I thought that I had a chance, and so I've come back!" Trunks unemotionally recited the tales of a time gone by as they walked.

His expression was indifferent from beginning to end, as if describing something that had nothing to do with him. However, as the audience, Han Shuo and Emily could discern from the events themselves the endless hate buried deep within Trunks' heart.

When Trunks had finished, Han Shuo looked deeply at Trunks and flashed a brilliant smile, "It looks like we can team up again. Without a doubt, Florida's going to die this time!"

"Of course! He's definitely going to die." Trunks said confidently, and then looked at Emily interestedly, switching his gaze to Han Shuo afterwards. He asked a bit oddly, “And what’s the deal with the two of you? If I recall correctly, this lady was captured by you, but why are the two of you walking together now?”

Chuckling heartily, Han Shuo winked at Trunks and said, “Sometimes, it’s an easy thing for enemies to become friends, particularly between men and women!”

“I understand, haha!” Trunks burst out laughing and nodded in understanding.

“Two silly fellows!” Emily was a bit angered and embarrassed by their words. She rolled her eyes at them and huffed.

They’d passed through a narrow tunnel as they chatted, arriving at an open plain. Black boulders dotted the landscape in abundance, alongside tall buildings. These buildings were neither exquisite or beautiful, they just extremely practical. They seemed durable, sturdy, and would hold up well under an assault.

There was a large parade ground on the way to the buildings and several muscular mercenaries were practicing with various weapons. Some mages were releasing spells in a dense forest not too far away, and there were others meditating in the distance.

“This place is large enough and the buildings sturdy enough. Because there’s only one path leading here, it’s very safe, and has always been the valley’s last line of defense throughout the years.” Trunks kept explaining on the way over.

“Eh, Trunks, what are you doing back here?” Harris of the Cairo mercenary band was standing on the parade ground in great spirits, seemingly waiting for Han Shuo and the others. He was quite surprised to see Trunks and couldn’t help but call out.

“Harris, long time no see! You look even more fierce now! But Florida is still thriving throughout these years, it looks like you didn’t get your revenge!” Trunks spoke to Harris from afar with some mockery on his face.

“Humph, you also fled with severe injuries, what right do you have to talk about me?” Harris’ expression was stiff as he said irritably.

“Forget it, I have nothing to say to you. Let’s go, take me to Laureton!” Trunks frowned as he twitched his lips, urging Harris to lead the way. Harris led the three of them through the parade ground to a tall building. Rumbling crashes traveled from the inside of the building, and the three of them were greatly surprised by the scene in front of them when they walked in.

A bald, fierce man about two meters tall stood in front of them, wearing only a pair of shorts. The muscles of his naked upper body were raised upwards, each as tough as iron ore. The blood vessels over his body throbbed as they filled with frightening explosive power.

There was a black boulder the size of a small mountain on his back. It was three times the size of him as he shouldered the boulder. He leaped backwards, sending the boulder crashing against a stone pillar that was as thick as three people wrapping their arms around it.

Sweat flowed like rivulets down the lines of his muscles as his dark skin sparkled with healthy vigor. His gleaming head didn’t have a single strand of hair on it. His body trembled continuously amidst the thunderous collisions, and the entire building shook from the violent impacts, making one worry that it would collapse at any time.

After Han Shuo and the others arrived, he collided five more times before finally throwing away the boulder on his back away to the side. The ground trembled like an earthquake had struck it, and the thunderous roaring sounds permeated the entire building.

He raised his head and focused his eyes in their direction. A crushing force of presence slammed down on Han Shuo. Han Shuo’s heart couldn’t help but seize a bit, seeing how strong this person’s body was. He had used only external training methods to train his body to the point where it naturally produced such a thick, forceful presence. This alone fully explained the frightening aspects of this person.

“Trunks, what are you doing back here?” A strange light shone in the big man's eyes as he looked askance at Trunks.

“Long time no see Laureton, it looks like your physical body has almost been trained to the pinnacle. You could become berserk twice over previously, and it looks like you've improved even more. I wonder if you can become berserk thrice over to reach the legendary third realm of the berserkers?” Trunks revealed an interested expression as he stared at Laureton.

Grinning oddly, Laureton didn't respond to Trunks' question and switched his attention to Han Shuo. “You're the fellow who almost killed Florida?”

Nodding, Han Shuo smiled faintly. “That's right, what might Chief Laureton be summoning me for?”

“I want to discuss a spot of business with you, but you need to eat one of my punches first. I need to see if I can measure your strength and see if you're worth me handing over that shop to you!” Laureton laughed loudly as a fist the size of a fan blasted towards Han Shuo with a fierce, dominating aura.

Han Shuo was slightly startled at the suddenness of his actions, but quickly realized that this punch embodied a berserk force as it drew closer. This greatly shocked him, and what was even more surprising, was that when this strength surged forward, it blocked off all his avenues of retreat, making it impossible to dodge.

Han Shuo was struck dumb with amazement as he immediately focused and deployed his magical cultivation to the maximum, planning on directly taking this punch.

Chapter 204: My own power

An iron fist swung over with the momentum of wanting to cleave through mountains and split open rocks. The strong force rippled audibly through the air as an unbounded dominance spilled forth like the tides, making Han Shuo's hairs stand on end.

Han Shuo took a deep breath in and circulated his magical yuan to his right hand, deploying his magical cultivation to its extreme and turning his hand into the color of black jade. His very bones seemed to be made of black jade as his hand sparkled with a faint light. A cloud of purple magic circulated in the palm of his right hand, appearing as spellfire.

Trunks and Emily had been shocked by the sudden development and was about to intervene when they saw Han Shuo's right hand suddenly change. They all stood there, flabbergasted, and didn't say a word.

After his hand had changed, Han Shuo suddenly shot out from his defensive position at an unparalleled speed. He then pulled his right hand back and materialized a purple-black streak of lightning, smashing it into Laureton's oncoming punch.

A thunderous crash that was even louder than when Laureton had crashed into the pillar with the boulder sounded, the collision reverberating throughout the entire hall.

An overwhelming force traveled up Han Shuo's right hand into his body. The strength was beyond his imagining. If it wasn't for the perverse level of durability his body was at, his right hand would've absolutely shattered and exploded from this touch.

Even so, his body couldn't help but fly backwards and crash into a black boulder in front of the hall doors with an audible crack. His body sagged to the ground, as chief Laureton stood firmly rooted like a boulder. However, an icy cold presence spread from his fist throughout his body and froze the small trickles of sweat running down his body into gleaming, translucent pearls. White smoke rose from his body as the frosty air covered him.

“Are you alright?” Emily flashed over to Han Shuo in the blink of an eye, reaching to help him up.

His arm was numb from his fist up to his shoulder, and it was still trembling lightly even now. Han Shuo panted heavily as his heart filled with shock, full of astonishment at Laureton’s strength.

“Laureton, it looks like your strength has improved once again. Don’t think I can’t tell even though you’ve held back some of your strength. You may have already materialized the level of being berserk thrice over!” Light danced in Trunks’ eyes as he stared at Laureton’s body.

Han Shuo had been about to comfort Emily when he heard Trunks’ words. The shock in his heart grew even greater. From Trunks’ words, Han Shuo knew that perhaps that blow just now may have been fierce, but it still hadn’t been Laureton’s true strength. Based on the domineering strength from that blow, Han Shuo was certain that Laureton wasn’t any less inferior to earth rider Clark or swordmaster Phoebe.

This wasn’t even his true strength! If Laureton truly brought his full strength to bear, then it’d be even more astonishing. No wonder he was the chief of the Cairo mercenary band and controlled the order of the Valley of Sunshine. Ice had covered Laureton’s body when cracking sounds suddenly sounded over his body. The frozen beads of sweat scattered down from his body down to the floor like gleaming pearls, shattering into shards of ice when they came in contact with the stone ground.

Shivering involuntarily, Laureton sneezed and wrapped a fur cape around himself tightly, then looking at Han Shuo with surprise. “What kind of technique was that? I couldn’t sense any fighting aura or magic, but why did it have the power of the two combined?”

“I couldn’t feel any ripples of fighting aura or magic from you either, but your strength isn’t any less than a swordmaster and his fighting aura. This is nothing to be shocked about!” Han Shuo shrugged and responded with a smile.

“Us berserkers have a special way of training, and a very specialized method at that. You're not a berserker, how can you do this? This is truly very strange!" Laureton looked askance and shook his head.

"Alright, I think this wasn't your point in inviting us here?" Han Shuo walked leisurely to the front and sat down on a stone seat not too far from Laureton, also calling out to Trunks and Emily as well.

After the blows they'd just exchanged, Han Shuo understood that Laureton was likely stronger than himself. The Cairo mercenary band's greatest enemy currently was the Rainbow Sickle mercenaries, so Laureton definitely hadn't invited them to come so he could act against them. Therefore, Han Shuo was quite at ease.

Emily and Trunks also walked over carelessly when they saw Han Shuo so relaxed, pulling over a stone stool each for a seat.

"Harris, what's Florida's condition now after returning to the Rainbow Sickles?" Laureton revealed an approving look at Han Shuo and the others' nonchalance and lifted his head to look at Harris.

"Florida suddenly fell into a coma at the door in front of the valley and was brought back to the Rainbow Sickles. According to our reports, he should still be comatose, so we don't know his condition right now either." Harris displayed an appropriate amount of respect in front of Laureton and responded quickly.

Nodding, Laureton rubbed his gleaming, bald head and seemed to contemplate something. He looked at Han Shuo after a while and said loudly, "Your strength isn't bad, I'd hoped that you would consider joining our Cairo mercenary band, but since you know Trunks, you likely won't be willing to."

"I know Florida's strength, and I tested you just now. I think it'd be impossible for you yourself to harm him to that degree, not to mention that he had some experts by his side. Can you tell me what happened?"

"An enemy helped me. Edwin, who entered the valley today, happened to be enemies with Florida's grandfather. Florida bumped into Edwin along the way and the two fought first, I just happened to take advantage of the situation." Han Shuo responded honestly since the truth was easy enough to decipher, and there was nothing worth concealing about it.

“Edwin... Dark archmage Edwin of the Calamity Church—that old monster has entered the valley?” Laureton was startled and he turned his head to look at Harris.

“That would be him. Another masked woman entered the valley after a while and is staying with him for now.” Harris nodded and responded to Laureton.

“This person is very difficult to handle, he’s your enemy?” Laureton smoothed over his gleaming head again and appeared a bit troubled.

“Laureton, I haven’t heard that you were afraid of anyone all these years. Can it be that an old man is frightening you? It looks like the stronger you are, the more cowardly you’ve become!” Trunks seemed to know the meaning behind Laureton’s head rubbing and couldn’t help but mock him.

“I’m not afraid of him, I’m afraid of the Calamity Church behind him. This is the most evil cult in all of the Profound Continent, and they never adhere to any rules or logic. Their power is incredibly vast as well. They won’t rest if you provoke them, and all the kingdoms on the continent are quite scared of them, not just our Valley of Sunshine.” Laureton rubbed his head and spoke with some worry.

The Calamity Church was the disaster and nightmare of the entire continent. They nursed some unreasonable, fervent ideals and tried to use their power to destroy all those who didn’t agree with them. Even the Lancelot Empire would react as if facing an oncoming enemy when they heard of the Calamity Church, not to mention a mid sized mercenary band. From this point alone, it was apparent to see that the Church was very terrifying indeed.

“Edwin is my enemy and Florida’s as well. Now that he’s within the valley, I think he’ll be making a move!” Not much expression could be seen on Han Shuo’s face as he opened his mouth to speak dispassionately.

“I’ve heard that Miss Phoebe of the Boozt Merchant Guild is buying a shop for you. That shop is in a forbidden zone within the Valley of Sunshine. It’s rumored that it’s been cursed by an evil god. Any who’ve bought that shop in recent years have all died from having their blood drained. Do you really plan on buying it?" Laureton didn't keep asking about Edwin as he raised the next topic of interest.

"Indeed, I've never believed in any curse from an evil god. I hope chief Laureton will sell that shop to me?" Han Shuo admitted and responded.

"Bryan, why do you want that shop? I've heard of that place as well. Many died there when the Rainbow Sickles were in charge. We even made an investigation once, but found nothing. That's an unlucky place, don't take that risk!" Trunks was quite startled when he heard this and immediately turned back to frown at Han Shuo.

Emily was also startled. She turned to fix her stare on Han Shuo. "No, don't take the risk! I've heard of that place too, there's an incredible curse there. You can't take that!"

This chapter has been stolen if it's not on volarenovels. Don't support theft.

"There are still some unclaimed shops within the valley. I just want to know, why that one?" Laureton obviously didn't care about Han Shuo's wellbeing. He only wanted to know Han Shuo's intentions, which was why he was questioning Han Shuo.

"I have no comment about this, but I hope you can give the shop to me. I'll pay you a reasonable price!" Han Shuo could understand from Laureton's words that Phoebe hadn't succeeded yesterday. Laureton looked all brawn and no brains, but Han Shuo knew that he certainly wasn't as simple as he appeared on the surface. If he was, he would've sold that cursed land to Phoebe a long time ago.

"Of course, I have no right to interfere in your personal matters, but I do have the rights over the shop in the valley. I have the authority not to sell it to you." Laureton put on a dashing air and laughed heartily.

Taking a deep breath in, Han Shuo said, "Alright, I won't push it if you don't want to sell it to me. If there's nothing else, I think we can leave. There certainly doesn't look like there's much left for us to do in the Valley of Sunshine!"

“Perhaps you do need to leave, but Trunks will likely stay. Heh heh, is that right, Trunks?” Laureton looked at Trunks with a look of confidence on his face.

Snorting coldly, Laureton had indeed touched up on a matter important to Trunks as the latter threw out a ferocious glare.

Han Shuo was absolutely confident in obtaining the place of extreme water. He’d pretended he was going to leave only because he wanted to haggle with Laureton. However, it’d seemed like Laureton had seemed to understand something and had seized on Trunks’ weak point.

Laureton had been observing Han Shuo and Trunks’ expression since they’d walked in and was certain that they had a deep friendship. When he’d tested Han Shuo, Laureton had mentioned the matter of the shop. Han Shuo had then taken out his full strength in response. This made Laureton understand that Han Shuo cared a great deal about this shop.

“I said in the very beginning that I wanted to talk about a spot of business with you. I tested your strength just now, you do indeed have the right to sit down and talk with me. Now with Florida in the mix, this matter will be a bit easier to handle. This is a win win situation, I wonder if you’re interested?” Laureton was completely unafraid that Han Shuo wouldn’t accept as he chuckled.

“Speak, what kind of business?” Han Shuo sat down lazily on the chair and flicked a glance at Laureton.

“Very simple. You continue about your business, which is to kill Florida. Our Cairo mercenary band will supply intelligence and can also guarantee that the Rainbow Sickles won’t send forth their troops against you. After the deed is done, you can get that shop for free and Trunks will have gotten his revenge. There will also be one less threat to us. Isn’t this great joy all around?” Laureton raised a very alluring proposal. It seemed like a win – win – win no matter how one looked at it, with no one being the worse off.

However, Han Shuo still didn’t immediately agree to it. Rather, he remained silent for a while and suddenly said, “You need to provide men as well to help us handle Edwin. Otherwise, our safety isn't guaranteed with this person around."

"Friend, don't ask for too much. Actually, if we go find Edwin, we may have a better partnership effect with him." Laureton shook his head and declined with a darkened expression.

"Alright, then go cooperate with Edwin!" Han Shuo spread out his hands and couldn't seem to care less.

The Calamity Church wasn't made of kind people. Anyone who cooperated with them had to worry about going up in flames, particularly as Edwin was a dark archmage. If Laureton cooperated with him, it wasn't completely assured that Laureton could maintain control over the situation.

In addition, the Calamity Church had always been an organization on the continent that was hated by men and gods alike. If the Cairo mercenary band cooperated with Edwin, this would become a lethal blow to their reputation if this matter was leaked. All of the merchants within the valley would surely be incensed and the Cairo mercenary band's position within the valley would be subject to great challenge. Han Shuo had correctly deduced this point.

"We can't help you fight Edwin as it's not a wise move to offend them for Florida's matter, but we can use our advantage in the valley to supply you with intelligence of Edwin's movements. We'll tell you in advance no matter where he wishes to go. This way, your safety will increase as well. This is the best we can do, otherwise we really have no deal!" Laureton said slowly.

"Alright, then it's settled!" Han Shuo understood that this was the most that Laureton could do. The threat from the Calamity Church was so great that the Cairo mercenary band wasn't willing to make enemies of them.

"Very happy to be working with you. If you're willing, please stay for lunch first!" Laureton seemed to be in a great mood having settled the matter and made this suggestion with a hearty laugh.

"No thanks, we have other matters to discuss." Han Shuo demurred and then walked out with Emily and Trunks.

“Bryan, are you familiar with Miss Phoebe of the Boozt Merchant Guild?” Trunks’ expression was a bit strange on the way back and he suddenly stopped in a quiet corner to ask Han Shuo.

Nodding, Han Shuo said, “That’s right, our relationship is very good. She’s my girlfriend, what of it?”

Trunks’ handsome face revealed a strange light to it beneath the rays of the sun. He looked deeply at Han Shuo, “Bryan, look. The Valley of Sunshine is a marvelous place. You can start your own power if you have enough ability and if we develop using the Valley of Sunshine as our center of operations, we can have our own faction as well.”

“You have Miss Phoebe as your friend, and so you’ll definitely have enough gold. I have some seasoned mercenaries on my hand. We can absolutely use these resources to form our own mercenary band and form our own power. If we hold greater power in our hands, we’ll be able to obtain more and won’t have to be restrained by others anymore.’

“Honestly, with Lauren’s strength, he doesn’t need to fear that old monster Edwin. Add to that his Cairo mercenary band, it’s not difficult if he wants to kill Edwin. He fears the Calamity Church behind Edwin. He’s also on his guard against Florida not because of his own strength alone, but the Rainbow Sickles that follow him as well.”

“After all, one person’s strength is insufficient to contend with a faction’s. As long as we work hard, with the combination of our advantages and the peculiarities of the Valley of Sunshine, we can absolutely form an independent power. This way, no matter where we are in the future, others will definitely have to carefully weigh our words!”

This suggestion was filled with a fervor that filled Han Shuo’s mind like the finest cream. He suddenly understood something, as a heart that had never been willing to be ordinary suddenly started beating even more fiercely.

“You mean that the two of us should build a power that belongs to us alone?” Han Shuo’s voice sounded a bit emotional, at complete odds with his usual indifference.

Nodding his head firmly, Trunks continued. “Indeed, some of the original Rainbow Sickle brothers are hidden in the mountain ranges around the valley after receiving my news. However, although their talents are extraordinary, life has been a bit difficult for them because they’ve lost the halo of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band. However, their strength and quality are without a doubt the best.”

“I’ve been hunting all sorts of magical creature cores in the Dark Forest these years and have created a small stash of wealth with my greed. However, it’s still a bit difficult to satisfy the needs of the operations of a mercenary band. But you have a deep relationship with Miss Phoebe, and if we obtain the support of sufficient gold, we can absolutely form a mercenary band with my current network. When our operations are large enough and we have our own reputation, not only will we not need additional gold, but we’ll be able to amass our own wealth through various missions. We can also use those methods to slowly strengthen our power.”

“If our mercenary band can take control of the valley like the Cairo mercenary band to protect the profits of the merchants, we’ll have several hundred thousand gold coins in fees every year. With such a power in our hands, our identity will be different in front of any person or country!”

“Bryan, Trunks’ suggestion is sound. The organization won’t mind another identity. In fact, the stronger your other identity is, the more useful you are for the organization. The speed of your promotion will increase according to your organization’s size; it’s a good complement. If you reach a certain scale, then maybe the upper levels will send someone to help you so you have even more power!” Emily was also an ambitious woman and her voice had become charged with emotion the more the conversation progressed.

“Come, let’s go back and thoroughly discuss this!” Han Shuo’s decision had already been made. He spoke lowly with a strange smile on his face.

Chapter 205: Then call it Soul Destroyer!

After a short conversation, Han Shuo understood that Trunks had already gathered several dozen original Rainbow Sickle mercenaries to take on Florida. These people hadn't entered the valley yet, but were staying in a mountain cave on the outskirts of the valley and waiting for Trunks' orders.

Trunks was part of the Rainbow Sickles before and had a treasure trove of experiences being a mercenary. He was well versed in the operations of a mercenary band, and only lacked the funds to register a mercenary band and to maintain its daily operations. Phoebe controlled the Boozt Merchant Guild, and there were many opportunities to earn money from the that guild alone. In addition, the Boozt Merchant Guild was quite well off and it could certainly temporarily fill in the gap of capital.

Emily had an enormous intelligence network within the Dark Mantle. With her position and role, she could absolutely supply much valuable information to Han Shuo and Trunks.

Not only was Emily quite excited about their conversation, but so was Phoebe highly interested as well. Han Shuo was well acquainted with Trunks' abilities and strength. Han Shuo knew that once the mercenary band was created and running, their business wouldn't be too poor.

"Trunks, give me an estimate of how much gold you're still short on?" Han Shuo looked at Trunks and asked.

Han Shuo and Phoebe had both expressed strong interest up to the point. As the owner of the Boozt Merchant Guild, it wasn't difficult for Phoebe to resolve the issues with lack of funding. Now that Trunks heard Han Shuo ask the critical question, he responded with some excitement, "Registration depends on the number of members, and each member's salary, equipment, weapons, and horses, as well as the band's facilities will need gold coins."

"Only fifty to sixty people have currently come forth to the Valley of Sunshine. They were all the key members of the Rainbow Sickles before.

Using them as a base to form a new mercenary band, we'll need to put forth only twenty thousand gold coins in the beginning. We may need to add to that in the future according to member strength and numbers, but once our mercenary band's reputation is set and we have stable partners we work with, not only will we not need to further invest in more gold, we'll be able to save money and slowly increase our strength!"

Han Shuo looked at Phoebe and then at Trunks, smiling faintly, "I had great gains during our last trip in the Dark Forest. I think I can set up the mercenary band with the wealth I amassed last time."

Han Shuo had obtained large amounts of gems and crystals from the dark elves and lizard men during his trip to the underground world. Not to mention his last haul of jewels from the Forest Trolls' sacred ground, which had been even greater than the last batch he'd handed over to Phoebe. When Han Shuo took out all the wealth he'd collected during this time, Phoebe, Emily, and Trunks were all stunned and flabbergasted!

The many splendid colors sparkled from the gems and beautiful jade beneath the light of the lamps. There was a small mountain's worth of wealth, and even wealthy folk such as Emily and Phoebe were momentarily stunned by the sight.

"Oh, my gosh, where did you get all this? Emily cried out in astonishment as shock was written all over her face.

"You already offered a pile of treasure last time, and this time's has been even greater. Exchanging this amount of treasure into gold coins would net you fifty thousand gold coins at a minimum, where did you get this from?" Phoebe was similarly surprised.

After being momentarily stunned, Trunks shook his head with a wry smile, "I spent three years in the Dark Forest and hunted hundreds of magical creatures, but only made less than ten thousand gold coins. You kid are certainly impressive!"

"Change all of this into gold coins for me, then take thirty thousand as the initial investment into Trunks' mercenary band. Keep the rest with you so that you can collect the items I need!" Han Shuo smiled faintly and spoke to Phoebe.

Han Shuo had already quite trust Phoebe before they'd confirmed their relationship, and now that they'd had touched each other intimately, he naturally had even fewer reservations. Phoebe also felt that Han Shuo's trust was quite par for the course, and nodded in acceptance. She laughed softly, "Don't worry, I'll handle everything for you. The Valley of Sunshine is the best place to conduct transactions, I'll turn all these items into gold coins for you over the next two days!"

When Emily saw that Han Shuo had handed over such an enormous amount of wealth without reservation to Phoebe, she became noticeably jealous. But she knew that as the owner of the Boozt Merchant Guild, it was most reasonable for Phoebe to undertake this matter, so there was not much else she could do.

"Eh? Where did you get this bow?" Trunks suddenly walked over with an odd expression on his face as Phoebe was putting all the items away into her space ring. He picked up a bow with bizarre patterns and turned to ask Han Shuo.

Han Shuo suddenly remembered that this bow was from the dark elves when Trunks posed this question to him. The original holder had expended all his life force to shoot one arrow and cause great injury to Gilbert. After Han Shuo had obtained this bow, he didn't come to any conclusion after some research. Add tot that his lack of desire to expend his life force in shooting the bow, he'd thrown it into his space ring without further question.

"I got it from the hands of a dark elf family in the underground world. This bow is quite odd, it seems to be able to absorb one's life force to shoot a frightening arrow!" Han Shuo explained.

"Oh my gosh, legends speak of a bow cursed by Rose, that should be it! The legends say that the evil goddess Rose of the dark elves once cursed this bow so that it would absorb the life force of the wilder to shoot out an arrow of terrifying force. Usually, only perverse folks who wish to seek revenge at the cost of their own life would use it!" Emily exclaimed as she'd heard of the legends of this bow.

“Indeed, this is the bow. However, I heard that this bow was a marvelous treasure that could increase thunder magic before it was cursed. If thunder mages held the bow, they could use it to shoot out astounding electricity with great power.” Trunks explained to Han Shuo as he held onto the bow.

“Keep it, maybe someone will be able to cleanse it of its curse in the future. If the curse is removed, then this bow will become a treasure that thunder mages fight over!” Emily thought for a moment and said to Han Shuo.

It wasn't likely that many would dare buy a bow that absorbs the wielder's life force anyways. As a magical cultivator, Han Shuo would be able to use his own magical yuan to create formations and forge magical weapons as his strength increased. Perhaps he'd be able to cleanse the curse on it in the future.

Therefore, Han Shuo nodded to Emily's words and put the bow away, “Alright, perhaps we can possibly use an altar in the future to communicate with the evil goddess so that she'll remove it. Let's try in the future!”

After obtaining Clarendon's memories, Han Shuo understood a bit about communicating with evil gods. The basic principle was that as long as you could supply something that the evil god wanted, you'd be able to receive a corresponding boon from the evil deity. This was actually just a sort of business transaction.

The sparkling and gleaming jewels had been stored into Phoebe's space ring in a short span of time. Han Shuo thought for a moment and took out another set of dwarf forged weapons, handing over a heavy battle axe to Trunks. Han Shuo smiled, “What do you think about this quality?”

Trunks' eyes had already started gleaming when Han Shuo had taken out the weapons. He picked up the battle axe without another word. As he waved it around once, a howling sound emitted from the battle axe's shining surface. There was a natural wave of cold killing intent emanating from the battle axe as Trunks held it in his hands.

“This is great! Where did you get it?” Trunks was delighted as he looked at Han Shuo.

“The dwarves forged all of these weapons. Perhaps there will be something within this pile that’s suitable for our comrades!” Han SHuo smiled faintly.

“Haha, I think they’ll like it. Dwarf forged weapons are renowned in the lands. I knew these were no ordinary items when you took them out just now!” Trunks happily accepted these weapons and placed them into his space ring.

He was quiet for a bit and then looked seemingly carelessly at Han Shuo, smiling, “Chief, everything is ready now, and we just await a striking name from you!”

Han Shuo started after hearing these words, then smiled and waved his hands, “I just need to be vice chief, that’s enough for me. The real chief should be you, you decide the band’s name!”

Trunks had been wreathed in smiles just now when he suddenly grew serious and declined gravely, “You must be the chief of the mercenary band. This matter isn’t open for discussion. I’d rather decline your good intention if you refuse and nothing we’ve talked about before will count for anything.”

Emily and Phoebe had actually wanted to ask a long time ago who was the owner of the mercenary band. However, it wasn’t the thing to do to actually open one’s mouth and discuss this, so they’d kept things in and had planned on taking some time out to discuss with Han Shuo.

To the two girls, they would only help the mercenary band if the band was Han Shuo’s. They were unfamiliar with Trunks, and naturally didn’t have any relationship with him. Although Han Shuo and Trunks seemed close, they were naturally unwilling to put their lives on the line for Trunks.

The two girls paid a great deal of attention after Trunks brought up what was troubling them. Their beautiful eyes looked between Han Shuo and Trunks continuously, anxiously waiting for their decision.

“Trunks, I know nothing about the formation and management of a mercenary band. It’s a bit inappropriate if I’m the chief!” Han Shuo truly didn’t know what a mercenary band needed.

“No worries, you just need to give general guidelines orders. I can take care of everything else for you as vice chief. Bryan, Miss Phoebe and Madame Emily will help me only if you’re the chief. I don’t have the charisma to obtain their support!” Trunks self deprecated and winked at Han Shuo.

“Eh, since this is the case, don’t continue to decline!” Emily wasn’t awkward at all, as if Trunks’ words had been quite ordinary.

Phoebe also nodded with a remote expression and turned to Han Shuo, “That’s right, I’ll only help this mercenary band unconditionally if you’re the chief.”

“Alright, men should be more decisive. Hurry and decide on the mercenary band’s name so I can go register it and officially give my brothers a new home!” Trunks looked at Han Shuo and urged him onwards.

Han Shuo was actually more aware than anyone of the circumstances at hand. When he saw that all that needed to be taken care of had been decided, he no longer hesitated and nodded his head in agreement.

“Alright, then call it the Soul Destroyer mercenary band!”

“You’re so fake! You even thought of the name already and said you didn’t want the position. You had to make a show of declining, so shameless!” Trunks couldn’t help but laugh and yell at Han Shuo when he heard Han Shuo immediately give out a name.

Emily and Phoebe both looked askance at Han Shuo. They too hadn’t expected that Han Shuo would think of a name so quickly. They then understood that Han Shuo had long since had intentions of taking control of the mercenary band, and he’d put on a show of declining just now.

“He’s always been this shameless!” Emily and Phoebe both deeply agreed with Trunks’ words and actually opened their mouths to say the same thing.

When they finished speaking, they discovered that they’d actually voiced the exact same words. This made them quite amused as they started giggling softly.

“Alright, let’s call it the Soul Destroyer mercenary band. I’m going to go about my business now, you guys can too!” Trunks said.

Chapter 206: Transformation

Once things were settled, the hotly fired up young folk with money started to move very rapidly.

Florida's injuries were quite severe, and news from the Cairo mercenary band indicated that he was still in a coma. Edwin's every move and gesture was under close surveillance after entering the valley. He stayed within the hotel, seeming to want to take care of the wound in his back first.

Trunks left the Valley of Sunshine after he'd had settled matters with Han Shuo, saying that he wanted to discuss future plans and the good news of Florida's injuries with his brothers.

Phoebe moved about the Valley of Sunshine the next couple of days after receiving Han Shuo's enormous wealth. She called upon her connections to talk to several merchants and also helped Han Shuo collect materials to refine the wood and water elite zombies.

Emily stayed within Dark Mantle and seemed to be communicating with the executives. The senior levels of the Dark Mantle seemed to want a large operation this time to take down Bob Ascher.

As someone in the know, Trunks was the one busying about forming a mercenary band. There wasn't much for Han Shuo to do after the issue of funding had been taken care of. He used the two days of downtime to return to the cemetery of death.

Han Shuo wasn't actually too worried about Edwin's threats. After all, he had a dark dragon in the cemetery of death as backup. Through some communication, Han Shuo understood that if Gilbert wanted to recover quickly, he'd need to absorb some creature cores.

It was because he understood this, and that he did indeed need Gilbert's strength, that he'd brought Gilbert along with him over the past two days into the Dark Forest to hunt down some high level magical creatures.

The two killed seven wind blade wolves, four frost eagles, and one medusa in two short days. With Han Shuo's current strength and Gilbert's help, the high level creature medusa was defeated after the two joined forces.

Gilbert mostly recovered from his injuries after absorbing these creature cores as well as the medusa's valuable blood, and his strength was no longer affected by his injuries.

Gilbert had absorbed all the cores but had left behind the teeth, skin, and flesh. Han Shuo took all those and threw them into one of the warehouses in the cemetery of death.

On the eve of the second night, Gilbert stayed within the cemetery of death to digest the cores. As for Han Shuo, he left to visit the broad and swift moving waterfall near the cemetery.

The waterfall dived down like the universe emptying itself, bringing with it a ferocious strength that swept away all obstacles in its path. It seemed to be falling directly from the heavens. Han Shuo sat down cross legged underneath the falls, positioning himself close to an enormous boulder near the center and enduring the crushing force of the waterfall.

The parts of his body exposed to the waterfall had all turned a bright red. Han Shuo had seemed to become part of the boulder as he sat there without moving an inch. He seemed to be a lifeless sculpture.

However, the magical yuan was circulating with the speed of ten thousand horses galloping ahead. All muscles, tendons, and bones in which the magical yuan circulated past were refined over and over again. The demon infant started bouncing slightly in his abdomen as a small figure exactly the same as Han Shuo emanated vigorous life force.

Han Shuo had continuously achieved new heights during this time. He'd finally completely absorbed all of Johnny's soul. Bits of information floated randomly through Han Shuo's mind. All sorts of disordered memories were in the mix as well, appearing as clouds of mist that no one could see clearly.

Han Shuo understood that these scattered bits of information were the memories that Chu Cang Lan had left in his mind. Han Shuo had been only able to obtain small parts of this information before reaching the true demon realm and having his brain fully developed. The majority of the information had been locked in his mind.

Now that he had reached the true demon realm and his mind developed, Han Shuo had seen great increases in his memory, comprehension, and thinking abilities. Those previously hazy, indistinct, and scattered memories were swiftly casting off their veil and becoming clearer beneath Han Shuo's full examination.

All sorts of bizarre secret magical arts, parts of profound incantations, refinement methods to create magical treasure, demon generals, and formations were running through Han Shuo's mind at high speed. They were becoming part of Han Shuo's memories that would never be destroyed.

He suddenly awoke after who knew how long. There was hard to conceal excitement, pride, and confidence in that pair of eyes beneath the rush of the waterfall. It was as if he'd been reborn as he was filled with a heretofore unseen confidence.

The solid realm, open passages realm, molded spirit realm, true demon realm, bloodlust realm, separate demon realm, carnal realm, nine changes realm, and omen realm were the nine levels of cultivation that would enable a mortal to ascend to a level of existence that was as omnipresent as the gods. A frightening strength that could cleave open the heavens and earth, would grow to being able to move mountains and oceans, as well as grant the holder immortality in the end drew a magnificent and mysterious blueprint in front of Han Shuo.

The blueprint had been unfurled now and Han Shuo was the brush, able to trace his unbounded future according to his desires. This power that could reforge, fly through the heavens and earth, be indestructible, and surpass the wheel of rebirth truly did exist!

A thought struck him as all the pores of his body expelled goutts of dark grey, murky air out of his body. This murky air had been the dredges from Johnny's soul, and had remained in Han Shuo body after the demon infant had absorbed the strength from the former's soul.

Han Shuo's body wavered as he took off, shooting across the sky. He landed solidly atop an enormous tree, put on a warrior's dark green outfit and flew towards the cemetery of death.

"Eh? Master, you seem a bit different from normal!" Gilbert looked askance at Han Shuo as soon as the latter had returned to the cemetery of death and couldn't help but speak out.

"Oh? What's different about me?" Han Shuo looked at Gilbert and smiled faintly.

Shaking his head, Gilbert said, "I can't express it. Your eyes seem a bit more mysterious and your aura as well. Mm, you seem more confident, the confidence of having grasped the situation and being assured of victory!"

Han Shuo understood. After obtaining all of Chu Cang Lan's memories, he now knew many magical arts like the back of his hand. He'd be able to take on Edwin even without Gilbert's help now. But because he lacked sufficient strength, it'd be a bit troublesome for him to do so.

"Since your injuries have healed, leave with me!"

"Wonderful! Are you taking me to do some sneaky and underhanded things again this time?"

"Shut up, do what I tell you!"

"Master, I seemed to have seen that patch of dirt shift slightly after you left today!" Gilbert first pouted and then suddenly remembered something as he pointed at the area where the earth elite zombie was being refined.

Han Shuo started and turned back to look at the place of extreme earth. He suddenly discovered that the center had indeed sunk in. The earth qi that had been circulating the area had all vanished without a trace. Overjoyed, Han Shuo laughed heartily, "Very good, it looks like he's thoroughly absorbed all of the earth qi. He'll be able to emerge from the dirt after a few more days!"

"Humph, just a zombie, what's so good about it!" Gilbert flicked a dismissive glance over and grumbled.

Just as Gilbert finished speaking, the place he was standing on suddenly collapsed as an enormous crack appeared out of nowhere after a series of earth shattering rumbles. It caught Gilbert unawares and closed on him. The crack seemed to be alive as it kept closing, squeezing Gilbert's body and making him curse loudly.

Original and most updated translations are on volare. If you're reading this anywhere else, you're supporting a thief. ☹️

"Alright alright, let him go!" Han Shuo could feel the earth elite zombie's dissatisfaction from deep within the ground and knew that he must be behind all this.

The originally retracting crack suddenly sprang open like a spring. When the immobile Gilbert discovered that the earthquakes and shifting of the ground was due to the earth elite zombie below the ground, he couldn't help but wear an expression of extreme shock on his face. He hastily climbed out when the crack loosened.

"He was formed here and has been absorbing the earth qi here. This place is his territory. He's able deploy strength several times his own as long as he's here. He can move the earth and mountains, crack the ground, form the earth into a cage to trap you, or coalesce an earth dragon to attack you. This is all incredibly easy for him."

"Remember, don't fight him in his territory. He's basically invincible deep in the ground. He may not be able to manipulate everything according to his will when he leaves, but any bit of land here can be transformed into his weapon!" Han Shuo looked at the scrambling Gilbert with a supercilious smile as he explained faintly.

The elite zombies would be able to greatly increase their strength in the area that they were formed. Whoever irritated them in their own territory was committing a foolish action.

Gilbert had offended him with a word and the earth elite zombie had immediately struck back tit for tat, allowing Han Shuo to understand that the earth elite zombie wasn't a low level zombie that could only listen to his commands. It looked like it was the same as the little skeleton, having gained his own sentience.

When he saw that Gilbert was behaving himself after clambering out of the crack, Han Shuo spoke in the earth elite zombie's general direction, "Refine the earth qi well and emerge sooner rather than later!"

A beam of thought was sent into Han Shuo's mind. The earth elite zombie had obviously heard his words and sent over "understood!".

"Come, let's leave!" Han Shuo walked towards the center of the cemetery of death as he looked at Gilbert. When he passed by the yin demon cave, he noticed that there were only five wraiths left. It seemed like the three yin demons would be formed soon as well.

"Just what's with that zombie, why is he so strong?" Gilbert couldn't hold back the questions in his heart when they'd left the earth elite zombie and arrived at the transportation matrix.

"You wouldn't understand even if I explained to you. He's just different from any other zombie warrior you know. His existence began to change the moment he started absorbing the earth qi. Remember, you should try to avoid provoking him in the cemetery of death. He's much stronger than you can imagine in here!" Han Shuo smiled faintly and instructed Gilbert.

Han Shuo pushed Gilbert into the middle of the transportation matrix as he spoke and then activated it, returning to the Dark Mantle's stronghold in the Valley of Sunshine.

Han Shuo put the six magical sticks away when he walked out of the secret room and lifted a piece of wooden floor above him. A hallway leading upstairs appeared and the two walked up.

"Bryan, you're back!" Emily suddenly called out when she saw them emerge.

"Hi, beautiful woman, we meet again!" Gilbert smiled at Emily in greeting when he walked up and was greeted with an enormous eyeroll from Emily.

"What's wrong?" After receiving all of Chu Yang Lan's memories, Han Shuo was now full of confidence about the future. He believed that if he worked hard enough and advanced his magical cultivation, he'd be able to obtain strength that would make everyone respect him. It was because of this that he hadn't terribly minded some of the difficulties and setbacks that he was encountering and asked Emily rather carelessly.

"The Cairo mercenary band just sent word that Florida has awoken, and that he called for a meeting as soon as he woke up. He plans on moving against us with no thought of anything whatsoever, and wants us to be on our guard. In addition, Edwin and Belinda seems to have made a trip to the Cairo mercenary band these days. This is information we gained ourselves. No one from the Cairo mercenary band told us about this." Emily responded quickly.

Nodding his head in understanding, Han Shuo thought with a furrowed brow and then smiled slightly, "We'll deal with things as they come up. If Florida dare comes to his death, then I'll make sure he doesn't get off easily. Don't worry about Edwin for now. I think Laureton won't be so silly as to create trouble for us now. We're something he can leverage now. He'll wait until Florida is dead before creating trouble for us."

"In my estimations, Edwin went to meet with the Cairo mercenary band possibly to obtain some information about Florida, but Laureton may not have necessarily agreed to help him against us. He also won't choose to cooperate with Edwin against us. Don't be too bothered by it. What we need to do now is to defend our current stronghold."

Emily was stunned momentarily by Han Shuo's words, and then looked at him oddly. This was when she discovered that Han Shuo had worn a remote expression on his face all along, as if no danger would shake his confidence. His eyes were even more profound and mysterious, and his entire demeanor had changed. He was full of an unexplainable feeling, making Emily feel a bit surprised.

"What, why are you looking at me so oddly?" Han Shuo rubbed his nose and laughed when he saw Emily stare at him unblinkingly with her beautiful eyes.

"Bryan, has something happened to you these past two days? Why do I feel like you're different from before?" Emily didn't conceal the thoughts on her mind and asked directly.

"Indeed, master is a bit different from usual. I've discovered it as well!" Gilbert also couldn't help but murmur loudly at this point. His eyes kept looking over Han Shuo, trying to figure out what was different about him from usual.

"Heh heh, nothing much, just that I've received a large amount of memories over these past couple of days. They've helped me understand a lot of things." Han Shuo wore a mysterious expression on his face as he explained to Emily.

Emily still felt Han Shuo was mysterious beyond belief, and that the things that happened to him were marvelous and illogical. He had a little skeleton that wasn't afraid of dark magic, could fly without making use of magic and fighting aura, and had an amazing weapon that moved according to his thoughts. These were all out of Emily's range of comprehension.

"Forget it, I wouldn't understand if you explained either. I just need to know that you're alright!" Emily shook her head and gave up further questioning. She suddenly remembered what Han SHuo had said last and asked, "Oh right, you said you wanted to defend our current location. How are you going to?"

Han Shuo paused silently with a bit with a mysterious expression, then voiced a word that Emily was completely unfamiliar with, "Formation!"

Chapter 207: A hundred ghosts in a frenzied dance

The ability to set up a formation that could seize the wonders of the heaven and earth using the mystical rules of nature and a few special ingredients, was a secret skill that all magical cultivators could grasp.

Han Shuo was no longer content staying passive after digesting all of Chu Cang Lan's memories. Even if his current cultivation level wasn't up to par, he'd be able to take a more active role by using some magical formations.

Using a strategy of acting first and reporting later, Han Shuo took over the shop with the place of extreme water. He used Florida as an excuse to fob off Harris when he came by later.

The Cairo mercenary band was in charge of everything in the Valley of Sunshine, so they weren't afraid of Han Shuo getting up to any tricks. The shop would unconditionally be returned over to Han Shuo anyways, once Florida was dead. Han Shuo was just taking possession of his property earlier.

A storefront wasn't the same as other items, capable of being taken away and easily stored. If that had been the case, Harris probably wouldn't have been willing to hand over the store that early, since he would've been concerned that Han Shuo would've taken the items away. But since the store was immobile, this concern didn't exist for Harris. Not to mention, the deed was still in his hands. Thus, Harris didn't say anything after listening to Han Shuo's explanations, tacitly approving of what Han Shuo had done.

The storefront rumored to be cursed was larger than Han Shuo had imagined. It was roughly four hundred square meters and had an eighty square meters courtyard. There were many small and large rooms, including various tables, chairs, beds, lamps, and assorted furniture. It was because this was an ill omened place that all of the items inside had become unlucky after the owner had died. No one would take anything from this store and potentially bring trouble down on their heads. Apart from lacking blankets and other daily necessities, as well as a thick layer of dust due to lack of occupants for a long time, there wasn't much that the storefront was missing.

Han Shuo had already explained the peculiarities of this storefront earlier when talking about forming the mercenary band. Although Emily and Phoebe didn't quite understand his explanation, they understood that Han Shuo had already cleaned out the unclean thing within this store. Out of their trust for Han Shuo, although the two girls were a bit uncomfortable with this place, they didn't protest and allowed Han Shuo to take up residence within.

Since he'd decided to set up a formation, he had to make the necessary preparations. Han Shuo made a list and put Emily and Phoebe in charge of collecting some necessary items of cold to form the foundational materials.

Due to consideration of their safety. Han Shuo had Gilbert follow behind them. With such a strong and extraordinary dark dragon following behind, and the two girls being an archmage and a swordmaster respectively, they likely wouldn't come off worse for the wear if they ran into Edwin.

Once everyone had been sent on their way, Han Shuo chanted a necromancy magic spell and summoned ten skeletal warriors. He gave an order, and they all picked up brooms and dustbins and started sweeping from room to room.

The "Shura Soul Formation" was a formation that trapped victims in a realm of illusions. This formation needed the death auras from a hundred ghosts to support it, as well as the bones from lands of cold to form six Shura pillars, and the blood of virgins as ink. Once magical glyphs were written onto the pillars, a piece of floating rock infused with five drops of blood essence from the caster would form the eye of the formation and complete it.

Once the formation was formed, any enemies who didn't understand formations would be attacked by the death auras of a hundred ghosts as soon as they walked in. They would become disoriented and see illusions, discovering a spectral clone of themselves that wanted to kill them at all costs. Fear would cause him to sink into madness in an instant. Furthermore, no matter how strong their heart was, it was a very difficult thing to triumph over one's heart.

The well in the middle of the place of extreme water had been slightly modified by Han Shuo so that he could make full use of it. He was using the well as the eye of the formation and had added some of the materials he'd picked up these days to form a small scale "Kelpie Possession Formation". Each wraith had been planted with a jellyfish and had been transformed into a kelpie in the well through use of secret arts. Anyone who neared it would be possessed by the kelpies and dragged into the well.

After setting up the two formations, Han Shuo suddenly reflected that he'd been wise alright, to combine the use of Chu Cang Lan's magical cultivation and the necromancy magic of this world. It seemed that they did indeed give rise to unforeseen effects when combined.

The "Shura Soul Formation" ghosts could be replaced by wraiths, and the bones of cold could be replaced by ordinary skeletal warriors. The "Kelpie Possession Formation" also made use of wraiths. If Han Shuo hadn't known necromancy magic, he'd have to collect all the materials himself from cemeteries.

However, with the identity of a necromancer, he merely needed a few chants to collect all the materials. It'd saved him no end of effort.

After busying about for a day, Emily, Phoebe, and Gilbert were quite surprised by what they saw in front of them when they returned to the shop late at night.

Six stark white bone pillars were stuck in six different corners of the courtyard. Cold aura wafted from the center of the courtyard. There were clouds of foggy wraiths in the air, posturing and making faces as they danced through the air. A sinister feeling filled the surroundings.

Several white, foggy clouds were floating intangibly around the well in the center, forming leering and grimacing faces. A blood red stone was placed within an indentation next to the well. Some of the wraiths floating through the air were circling around the stone, with their bodies dyed red as a result.

Han Shuo was sitting down cross legged in front of the stone, with beams of black splendor emitting from the palms of his hands. His hands had turned into an inky black as hazy light circulated around his body, making his entire being appear quite evil.

The doors to all the rooms around the courtyard had been opened, and all the dusty rooms had been thoroughly cleaned. The light within them was cozy and inviting, with none of the cold air in the courtyard drifting into the rooms. "Oh, my gosh, what did you do?!" Emily exclaimed in surprise as she turned on the spot. Curiosity filled her eyes and she reached out a hand to touch one of the Shura pillars.

"Don't move!" Han Shuo suddenly opened his eyes and called out softly to Emily.

Emily's jade hand had been about to touch the pillar when she hastily yanked it back, as if she'd been frightened. Phoebe and Gilbert were still a bit flabbergasted at the moment. They'd never have thought that this place would've been transformed so utterly within the span of a day.

A strange presence suffused the courtyard, making them instinctively uncomfortable. They'd never seen this setup of straight things, and had no idea what they were for. Their minds were full of questions at the moment.

Smiling faintly, Han Shuo stood up from his cross legged position and dripped a drop of bright red blood into the stone. The breezy courtyard whipped up even stronger winds as the wraiths danced and howled with the addition of the blood. Bouts of cold air of death made everyone feel incredibly frightened.

"Did you get everything I wanted you to purchase?" Han Shuo smiled faintly.

"Ask him, he was the one who collected the most important thing!" Phoebe pointed at Gilbert with a reddened face.

“Gracious master, why are you collecting the blood of virgins? You are too shameless and dirty!” Gilbert griped and looked at Han Shuo with a disdainful expression, yet he appeared quite excited.

“Oh shut up, did you get it?” Han Shuo glared angrily at Gilbert.

“Heh heh, I did I did. There’s nothing that can’t be settled without gold coins! I spent only fifty gold coins and took a spin around the small alleyways of the valley to get what you needed.” Gilbert took out a bottle the size of a palm as he spoke.

Emily and Phoebe both snorted coldly when he took out that bottle, splitting off into two directions and heading for the rooms.

Original and most updated translations are on volare. If this is being found anywhere else, it has been stolen. Don’t support theft. ☹

“Why are you two snorting at me? I wasn’t the one who wanted to do so, it was all master’s orders! Did you think I wanted to? All those stupid women inside looked at me like they were looking at a huge pervert! If I hadn’t taken out the gold coins, I probably would’ve drowned from them spitting at me!” Gilbert appeared quite aggrieved when he saw that both Emily and Phoebe were looking down on him, and couldn’t help but complain loudly.

There were some crudely wealthy customers within the red light district who liked to be waited upon by virgins. In order to lure these customers, those in charge would spend a great deal of money to purchase virgin slaves. Han Shuo had sent Gilbert there precisely because he knew this.

Although Han Shuo had a thick enough skin, he still couldn’t set aside his face enough to purchase these things. After all, if someone with no idea of what was going on saw his actions, they would think his actions were dirty enough indeed.

“Alright alright, go about your business, don’t bother me!” Han Shuo rather understood Gilbert’s complaints, but didn’t bother comforting him.

Han Shuo had used the Demonslayer Edge to carve various complicated drawings on the six Shura pillars. He now hauled a bucket of spirit water from the place of extreme water and diluted the bottle of virgin blood within it.

He used a spoon made from the wood of a peach tree to stir it, then picked up the bucket and flew upwards, landing on top of the first Shura pillar, and poured the liquid on top of the pillar.

Emily and Phoebe exited their warm rooms when they saw Han Shuo start his work. Their clear eyes were full of curiosity about Han Shuo's actions.

The reddish liquid flowed down the pictures that Han Shuo had carved earlier. Amazingly, none of the liquid dripped to the ground. They filled the cracks within the pictures as if being tightly attracted by a surge of power.

Han Shuo threw the empty bucket away to the side after he poured the liquid over the six pillars. He then flew to the blood red stone next to the well and sent black sparkles soaring up from his palm, forming a magical formation and branding it into the center of the blood red stone. The six pillars suddenly glowed with a red light as the faces of all sorts of howling and wailing ghostly faces appeared in the pictures carved onto the Shura pillars. The hundred wraiths that had been flying around the courtyard sped towards these pictures as if sparrows returning to a nest.

The originally intangible wraiths melded with the twisting shapes of the ghosts as they sank into the Shura pillars. The ghosts seemed to come alive as they started thrashing and dancing on the Shura pillars, revealing fanged and bloodthirsty mouths. Successive bloodcurdling wails of desperation rang in the night sky, terrifying the nearby people.

This is bad! Han Shuo was greatly startled. He hadn't thought that such frightening screams like the cries of ghosts and howls of wolves would sound after the formation was complete. He immediately formed another spell and threw it into the floating rock that had absorbed five drops of his blood essence.

In that instant, all the wraiths were sucked into the Shura pillars, and the pillars that had hundreds of ghosts dancing madly over them became lifeless, as the wraiths within seemed to be frozen in the drawings of the ghosts.

“Give me the rest of the materials. The formation should be completed first. Even if that old monster Edwin pays a visit, I’ll make sure he doesn’t get off easily!” Han Shuo laughed madly as he spoke to Emily and Phoebe.

Their two faces were full of shock at the moment. When they heard Han Shuo’s words, they handed over the items of cold that they’d purchased in a morass of confusion. When all the materials had been collected, Han Shuo started flying rapidly around the courtyard amidst the three people’s befuddled gazes. It was then that the three discovered that many large and small ditches that could perfectly hold all of the items in Han Shuo’s hands.

Han Shuo retreated from the courtyard when all was ready and summoned Gilbert to his side, where he was standing next to Phoebe and Emily.

He gave a mental order and a beam of red light soared to the sky from within the courtyard. Wind howled in the courtyard for a moment as an extreme feeling of cold from the hundred dancing ghosts on the pillars suffused the other three’s hearts.

The three understood that a simple courtyard had turned into a place of lethal danger after Han Shuo’s preparations!

“Everything will be flawlessly perfect as soon as we erect a soundproof forcefield around the area!” Han Shuo turned to look at Emily with a mysterious smile.

“Leave that to me!” Emily understood his meaning and released a dark magic. Magic ripples suddenly appeared over the courtyard, coming down like a formless dome.

“What happened, did the curse of the evil god flare up?” Harris’ call suddenly sounded from outside as hoofsteps echoed. Harris and others of the Cairo mercenary band appeared in front of the store on horseback, with Harris knocking on the door and calling out.

As the eye of the formation, the floating rock also had five drops of Han Shuo's blood essence on it. Therefore, Han Shuo could easily control the entire formation through the floating stone with a simple thought.

When he heard Harris' shout from the outside, Han Shuo slightly changed the formation and made it revert back to normal. There were no other changes apart from the six Shura pillars.

"Nothing much, has Mister Harris come by to tell us of some news?" Harris opened the door to let Harris in as he responded easily, beaming widely.

Harris looked around with his sharp eyes after entering, sweeping them through every corner of the shop. He asked Han Shuo with a bit of confusion, "Why have six strange pillars suddenly appeared?"

"Oh, we plan on making this a long term residence, and created this six pillars for support because there's no place to hang anything out to dry. What brings Mister Harris by?"

"A bloody light flared just now, and others in neighboring shops heard frightening wails come out from here. They said that they were terrified and wanted us to come over to look at the situation. I was also worried that something had happened to you, so I came by to take a look!"

Laughing easily, Han Shuo joked, "These people are quite cowardly. We were just practicing magic just now. We've several people here and wouldn't be afraid even if the curse kicked in. Don't worry!"

"Eh, the fellow collecting virgin blood is also your friend?" Harris nodded and was about to leave when he suddenly discovered Gilbert. He couldn't help but ask Han Shuo.

"Eh... you could say that!" Han Shuo felt a bit awkward as he turned back to glare at Gilbert. The latter was about ready to erupt in anger, when Han Shuo indicated for him to be quiet and then turned back to explain to Harris.

"Why do you have this kind of friend? He's so disgusting!" Harris looked at Gilbert with extreme disdain and seemed unwilling to stay longer as he hastily took his men and left.

“The hell! It’s all master’s orders, what the hell does it have to do with me!?” Gilbert finally couldn’t keep it in after Harris left and roared, smoke coming out of his orifices.

Chapter 208: The Purple Demon Eye

After Han Shuo's actions, the storefront had indeed turned into an incredibly dangerous place. Anyone who tried to enter without Han Shuo's guidance would be attacked by the formation. Those who lacked a sufficiently strong will would try to kill themselves as their minds grew confused.

After thoroughly remaking the store, Phoebe, Emily, and Gilbert all stayed there that night. Having seen the oddities of the yard, the three were on edge all night long, deathly afraid that something bad would happen to them as they slept.

Fortunately, all was fine that night and Trunks returned at noon the next day. He had learned from the Cairo mercenary band as soon as he set foot into the Valley of Sunshine that Han Shuo had actually moved into the cursed storefront.

When he swung by, he noticed the six starkly white pillars that had appeared in the courtyard. He was quite surprised, and had no idea what was going on.

"I heard Harris say that something out of the ordinary had happened here yesterday. Did you guys run into something?" Trunks asked after sitting down in the living room of the storefront.

Smiling faintly, Han Shuo explained, "We did run into a few things, but it was something I cooked up rather than the evil god's curse. There's no need to worry about anything. There's lots of rooms here, I left you one!"

"Forget it, I think I'll be safer elsewhere. When I was in the Valley of Sunshine a few years ago, I saw many owners of this store suddenly die spontaneously. Although you've already defused the danger, this place still makes me uneasy!" Trunks noticeably had some psychological trauma from this location and waved his hands with a wry smile.

"Who is this kid, how dare he not trust the master?!" Gilbert was already ticked off from being labeled a pervert. When he heard Trunks hem and haw and refuse to take up residence within, he couldn't help but speak up.

“And who are you?” Trunks started and suddenly looked at Gilbert.

Trunks had been acting a bit oddly since he'd come in on the back of his manticore. The manticore had been unafraid of anything beneath the heavens and on the earth, but was instinctively on his guard against Gilbert and tried to keep his distance from Gilbert.

The manticore was a sentient being and could naturally sense the enormous presence of the super rank dark dragon. Even though Gilbert was currently in human form, the manticore still didn't want to draw close to Gilbert. It was the fear brought about from the difference in levels.

As the owner of the manticore, Trunks had spent many years with the manticore and was well acquainted with its temper. When he saw the manticore's abnormal behavior, he started keeping an eye on Gilbert and couldn't help but question now.

“I am of the mighty dragon race, their future king, Gilbert!” Gilbert had an arrogant look on his face as he proudly proclaimed this with the tones of a ringing bell.

“Just like your manticore, he's my magical pet, a perverted little black dragon!” Han Shuo quelled Gilbert with a warning look and explained to Trunks.

Trunks was incredibly shocked when he heard that Gilbert was a dark dragon. He couldn't help but sigh, “You've got some skill alright. I'd thought taming a manticore was something to be proud of. To think you could tame a dark dragon! It looks like you're stronger than me!”

“It's nothing to do with me, I just so happened to get lucky. It's this dark dragon who shamelessly begged me!” Han Shuo shrugged and said humbly. He then paused and changed his tone, asking Trunks, “Right, you didn't run into any trouble on your trip out of the valley this time, did you? How did everything go?”

Trunks' expression also became serious when he saw that Han Shuo was chatting about serious matters. He responded lowly, “Don't worry, I'm more familiar with the terrain of the valley than even Laureton or Florida. It won't be easy for most people to hurt me within the valley. I met some of my old friends and they were highly interested in forming a mercenary band. I've already sent someone to register the name of Soul Destroyer. We'll be able to have our own official name before long."

Nodding, Han Shuo said, "That's for the best. This will be our stronghold in the future. I'm sure that with Florida's ability, he'll be able find out where we are soon. We don't need to be a rush, we just need to wait for him to attack us!"

Since the formation had been set up, Han Shuo just wanted to test it out using Florida's men, and see if it was as magical as he saw in Chu Cang Lan's memories!

Surprisingly, whether it was Florida or Edwin's men, no one came to bother them over the next two days. Han Shuo and his crew stayed here both days and only shopped a bit on the busy streets during the day.

All the materials to refine the wood elite zombie had finally been collected. Phoebe used these couple of days to discuss some transactions with some of the merchants. She turned two thirds of the jewels and crystals that Han Shuo had given her into forty thousand gold coins. He very trustfully gave all forty thousand gold coins to Trunks and allowed him free rein over this sum to form the Soul Destroyer mercenary band.

Han Shuo trained silently in his room. He hadn't left the store at all over the past two days. After a low incantation broke the silence, the bright sun was suddenly covered by black clouds, and the entire courtyard was plunged instantly into darkness.

The sinister black clouds completely blocked off the sun's rays, and a strong sense of death spread rapidly throughout the courtyard. The wraiths sealed within the pillars seemed to sense this marvelous presence and wanted to stir to action.

This particularly dark magic spell could cause the presence of death to permeate the surroundings. Dark creatures that were located within it would have their attacks greatly strengthened, and enemies caught in the range of the "Canopy of Necromancy" would be weakened thanks to the effects of this spell.

At this point, not only had Han Shuo fully grasped all the spells that an adept mage should know, he could also use them skillfully. If he returned to the Academy and made use of this strength, Han Shuo was confident that he could easily advance to adept mage.

When he thought of Fanny's promise with him and the right he'd have to go out with her once he advanced to adept mage, Han Shuo felt quite excited by the thought of a steamy night with Fanny. Although he already had Emily and Phoebe now, his feelings for Fanny were something that the two would be unable to replace.

Han Shuo had never become lax about his magical cultivation, but the stage that demon infant was at meant that it needed the strength from souls to become stronger. Hard training alone wouldn't be enough to obtain improvement within the short term. Therefore, Han Shuo had also been waiting for an opportunity to obtain some stronger souls to nourish his demon infant.

The sun was setting, and Han Shuo suddenly heard the little skeleton's call in the midst of his cultivation. An anxious, panicked feeling suddenly traveled from a plane far away as the little skeleton's urgent cry for help brought with it overtones of a hasty flight for life.

After last time's experience, Han Shuo immediately knew that the little skeleton must've met with some danger again. He didn't give it much thought as he immediately chanted the incantation, attempting to summon the little skeleton from the far away plane with the connection they shared.

When the incantation was complete, the air in front of him tore open as if a knife had sliced through it, and a little gleaming skeleton with seven flapping bone spurs shot out of the crack like lightning.

The figure of an enormous six meter tall knight, mounted on a flaming horse and wielding a two meter long broadsword, was suddenly illuminated in the crack behind the little skeleton. An enormous rotting air spread from the enormous figure, as an overwhelming presence of death suffused the area, making one's heart palpitate.

The dark creatures of the other dimension were bound by the laws of space. They could only display an enormous shadow. When the little skeleton was standing in front of Han Shuo, the crack in the air went back to normal and the enormous presence vanished without a trace.

The little skeleton had yet to recover as he clutched his bone dagger in his left hand and the eyepatch in his right. After losing the eyepatch, the purple demon eye from the statue of Datara sparkled with purple light as the little skeleton looked dumbly at Han Shuo.

An enormous strength suddenly exploded out of the little skeleton's purple demon eye. This power suddenly surged out with the purple demon eye as the center. It entered the little skeleton and Han Shuo's body, attempting to take over their bodies.

Just like in the forest troll's sacred place, the power from the purple demon eye was full of a violence that wanted to ravage everything. This power would always awaken after the eyepatch was removed, like Datara had truly left a bit of his consciousness behind in the eye.

"Put the eyepatch on, hurry!" Han Shuo roared out violently as his body trembled in the throes of pain as several sharp knives seemed to stab his brain.

The little skeleton was likewise rolling on the ground in pain. After receiving Han Shuo's order, his hand bone shook as he slowly lifted the eyepatch.

Miraculously, the enormous power that had invaded the two vanished without a trace when the eyepatch was placed back on.

However, just as Han Shuo was breathing a sigh of relief and was looking at the little skeleton, he saw purple light shoot out of the little skeleton's left eye as the eyepatch that had been covering it ignited, going up in flames!

Chapter 209: The Purifying Strength of Soul

When the eyepatch that sealed the Purple Demon Eye had burnt to ashes, the eye embedded within the little skeleton's eye socket once again discharged an eye piercing purple light.

In that instant, that soul wrenching pain once again invaded Han Shuo and the little skeleton's body. The bone deep pain made both Han Shuo and the little skeleton tremble all over.

Han Shuo couldn't help but let a growl under his breath, and the little skeleton's stark white jaw bone also clattered together as the two were invaded by a mysterious power.

Suddenly, the demon infant residing in his abdomen surprisingly generated an enormous suction power. Han Shuo had the sudden impression that the demon infant had turned into a black hole in that instant. His entire body seemed to turn into a great spider web, with the demon infant at the center, and all his meridians had turned into the durable fibers of the spider web.

Thanks to the absorption force, the force that had invaded Han Shuo's body streamed towards the demon infant along the meridians of the spider web, like streams returning to the ocean.

The heart wrenching pain decreased by quite a bit when his body morphed into this state. The invading power in Han Shuo's body was sent to the demon infant. Just like how Johnny's soul had once been digested and absorbed, this power was being turned into nutrients to aid a crazy rate of development for the demon infant.

As the pain in his body slowly came under control, Han Shuo saw that the little skeleton was still rolling continuously on the ground. He struggled to make it to the little skeleton's side, and aimed the palm of his left hand at the skeleton's left eye socket, releasing the "Demonic Art of Assimilation".

Magical light suddenly sparkled from his left hand as beams of faint purple light flowed into his body through Han Shuo's arm. They were sent via the meridians to the demon infant, just like the surge of power in his body had been treated.

This was when Han Shuo was certain that the power from the Purple Demon Eye was one of the soul. Judging from the close relation between the forest trolls and their protector Datara, this might very well be the vestiges of soul power left by the demon Datara on this plane.

Compared to Johnny's soul, the soul from the Purple Demon Eye was even stronger. The violent, rampaging presence held within was met with no resistance from the demon infant. Instead, the demon infant circulated the power from that soul madly, slowly purifying it.

Looking in on the demon infant, Han Shuo could see that the demon infant now looked like a sun burning with black spellfire, sending out piercing magic light in all directions. At the moment, Han Shuo's body was also glowing with light, as beams of a violent, chaotic, and evil magical aura wreathed his body. From the distance, it looked like Han Shuo had suddenly gained countless black arms that were dancing wildly around him.

After who knew how long, Han Shuo suddenly relaxed as a crisp cracking sound rang out. Something seemed to have broken in the Purple Demon Eye as it suddenly lost its light. A cloud of purple smoke leaked out from the little skeleton's left eye as the demon infant kept furiously circulating the power from the soul. The power that he'd gained from the Purple Demon Eye was heads and shoulders above the amount that they'd obtained from Johnny a few days ago. When Han Shuo felt that all the power had been absorbed into the demon infant, he gave the little skeleton an order to protect him. After that, Han Shuo sat down crosslegged to enter a meditative state to digest everything.

The power within the Purple Demon Eye had been completely absorbed by the demon infant. The little skeleton sat dumbly on the floor for a while when he was released from his agony. After the mysterious power had vanished, the Purple Demon Eye embedded within the little skeleton's left eye socket rolled around adroitly, giving the little skeleton a trace of life.

“What’s going on?” Emily and Gilbert detected that black magical aura had exploded out of Han Shuo’s room, and they couldn’t help but come forth to investigate.

The little skeleton had been sitting on the floor when he heard the knocks from outside. He straightened his calf bones and stood up, walking to open the door as his eye rolled a bit.

When Emily and Gilbert saw that a short, white skeleton had appeared in front of them when the door was open, and that there was a purple eyeball in his left eye socket whirring busily, both of them hastily took a few steps back in their fright.

Reaching out to point his left finger at Han Shuo, the little skeleton’s eye rolled in a circle as his hand reached for his mouth and made a shushing gesture. His meaning for Emily and Gilbert was that, “He needs quiet, don’t disturb him!”

Emily and Gilbert stared dumbly back at this little skeleton that was telling them to be quiet. They instinctively felt that the scene in front of them was too much of a challenge for their minds. A dark creature had made such a human gesture in front of them, and there was even an life-like eyeball rolling around in his left eye socket. All of this seemed unimaginably fantastic.

It was a good thing that it wasn’t Emily’s first day knowing Han Shuo. When she’d fought Han Shuo, she’d come up short against this little skeleton. Thus, when she looked carefully at the little skeleton and noticed the seven bone spurs on his back, she immediately understood that while the bone spurs color had changed, this little skeleton was still the same marvelous skeleton that’d been immune to most dark magic and had relentlessly chased her.

“I think your master must be having some sort of marvelous advancement this time again. We won’t disturb him then!” Taking a deep breath, Emily shook her head at Gilbert and indicated for him to leave with her.

After the earth elite zombie's sudden rage in the cemetery of death, Gilbert understood that his master's dark creatures were different than the ones that he knew. If there was a zombie could form a large crack in the ground to attack him just for one sentence, then it wasn't too difficult to understand a small skeleton that made such human gestures.

"I think it'll be very interesting to follow such a master!" Gilbert looked at the little skeleton curiously and waved his hand goodbye, turning to speak to Emily after closing the door.

"I think so too, but you must continuously improve yourself, or you might find one day that you can't even defeat one of your master's dark creatures!" Emily had learned from Han Shuo that the dark creatures he refined had the unlimited potential to evolve by themselves. She'd been a bit skeptical at first, but was a firm believer now that she'd seen the little skeleton's performance.

Han Shuo had been wholly unaware of Emily and Gilbert's visit. The enormous power from the purple eye was making him focus his concentration to the utmost, and he was impervious to all distractions from the outside world.

Some magical cultivators needed to find an exceedingly quiet area to meditate behind closed doors when training some sort of secret art or refining some treasure. They would also set up multiple layers of heavy defenses, in order to prevent disturbances. So much caution was taken because this was when a cultivator was most defenseless. Not a single bit of distraction could happen during this process, or one would run the risk of a cultivation deviation or waste of previous effort.

Two days and nights passed. Han Shuo stayed within his room during this time, and Phoebe, Emily, and Trunks all busied themselves with setting up the mercenary band, or continuing to talk business into selling more of Han Shuo's jewels.

On that night, the crew was staying within the store and discussing how best to use the gold as well as the most efficient way to handle the mercenary band's affairs when a member of the Cairo mercenary band suddenly knocked to say that a group of people were on their way over.

The mercenary left immediately after delivering this message, saying that they needed to report this to the chief or vice chief of the Cairo mercenary band. He warned them to be careful, and informed them that their men would arrive in half an hour.

“It looks like the Rainbow Sickle mercenaries are on their way over. Bryan can’t be disturbed at the moment, and we don’t know when he’ll wake up either. We’re in a bit of trouble now!” Emily said with a small frown when the mercenary left.

“We’ll give whoever dares come a thorough beating if they dare trespass!” Gilbert was obviously not thinking much of this matter as he blustered offhandedly.

“They’re not that easy to take care of. Florida’s experts are as numerous as the clouds, and the Church of Light has sent some reinforcements as well. You may not be able to win even if you turn back into a dragon.” Trunks also said with a deep frown.

“Bryan can’t be disturbed right now. The dark creature is protecting him right now, so he probably can’t leave. We must protect him if he’s here. As long as we can stall things for a bit so that the Cairo mercenaries come, then all should be fine!” Phoebe thought silently for a bit and then responded.

Dull hoofbeats sounded in the quiet night air. One could judge from the sound that the hooves of these battlesteeds had been wrapped by cotton cloth or something soft.

“Be careful, let’s protect Bryan’s room first!” Emily called out softly and said to the others.

Chapter 210: A whirling bone dagger

The enemies had come swifter than they'd thought. No sooner had hoofbeats sounded in the distance, did strange noises start coming from the roof.

"Go, leave the rooms, go to the courtyard!" Trunks maintained a calm expression as he hefted a longsword and walked towards the courtyard with the manticore.

There was a wide courtyard in the middle of the storefront, with various large and small rooms around its perimeter. If the enemy attacked and pierced through the walls, and then used fire magic to set the rooms on fire, it would force Trunks and the others to be on the defensive.

In addition, Han Shuo had once told them after he'd painstakingly made his preparations that enormous danger lurked within the six pillars. But if they stood in certain positions next to the pillars, they wouldn't be affected by the formation. The formation wasn't active now, but once the six pillars were violently attacked, the formation would have a natural reaction even without Han Shuo's orders.

"We're not familiar with the things inside the courtyard, so let's not make a thoughtless move unless we have to. If we really can't defend ourselves, we'll hit the pillars and then quickly hide into the six safe areas and gamble!" Emily said to the other three while she took out her staff and walked into the courtyard.

It'd been two days since Han Shuo had cast the "Canopy of Necromancy", so there wasn't much of an effect left from it now. The starry sparkles were like diamonds embedded in the night sky, and the light from the myriad actual stars in the sky added a few traces of scattered light in the night. The light was just enough for those in the courtyard to roughly make out their surroundings.

A sound suddenly howled through the air as a little bone dagger with a coldly flashing handle started traveling over the roof like a lost soul.

The howling from the little bone dagger ripped through the quiet of the night sky. Its gleam was particularly eye catching as it brought a cold, harsh presence of death. It flew over the tops of the roofs in a marvelous trail with no discernible pattern to it.

Several soft sounds echoed from the dark corners that the little bone knife flew past. Suddenly, agonized screams rang out from those hard to view corners. Three dark shadows then fell off from the roof into the courtyard in an exceedingly bedraggled manner.

Trunks and the others immediately knew what had happened when they saw this. When they saw three people lying on the ground not far from them, bleeding profusely, they didn't even think before rushing up to finish them off.

The three on the ground had been struggling to their feet when they were laid back down in eternal slumber beneath Trunks and Phoebe's two flashing swords.

The group looked in surprise towards Han Shuo's room when the three were dead. They saw a corner lifted from the window blinds, and the whirling purple eye in the little skeleton's left socket, sparkling with a sinister purple light. There seemed to be a purple ball of ghostly flame dancing around behind the window.

His sparkling clean hand bone waved continuously. The weaving bone dagger seemed to be manipulated by his hands as it danced around with no pattern whatsoever.

"Frightening little skeleton!" Trunks looked and couldn't help but shake his head.

"Look over there!" Gilbert suddenly shouted out. The other three looked over accordingly and saw that three clouds of gray mist were floating out of the three would-be ambushers' heads. The gray clouds seemed to be attracted by some sort of power as soon as they left their bodies and were soon absorbed by the two closest pillars.

"If I saw correctly, those three grey clouds were the souls of the three who'd just died. Ordinarily speaking, people's souls return to the earth after they've died, and most people won't be able to see them without the effects of magic!” As a dark archmage, Emily’s knowledge in this area was a bit more broad than others, and she explained to the rest with a furrowed brow.

“Then why can we see it, and why did the three pillars absorb the grey clouds?” Phoebe asked in bafflement.

Shaking her head with a wry smile, Emily turned to look at Han Shuo’s room. “How would I know the reason behind all this? If you want to understand everything, wait for him to wake up first. This courtyard is full of oddities, and it’s all his doing!”

“I don’t think I’d understand if he explained it either!” Phoebe was just as hard pressed to understand Han Shuo’s mysteriousness as Emily was. She shook her head ruefully after Emily’s words.

The little bone dagger was still twirling without rest as the four were chatting. The three who’d wanted to ambush them hadn’t even clearly taken in their surroundings before they were counter-ambushed, and died ignobly. This had been so unjust!

However, those three were just a scouting party. Although they had died, it didn’t affect the enemies in the rear.

When the dull hoofbeats suddenly quieted, Trunks and the others knew that the true battle was about to begin.

The little bone dagger’s howl suddenly grew more fierce. When the four looked over, the little bone dagger had already left the vicinity of the roof and was flying towards the sky in the distance. Two faint figures slowly became clear in the direction that the bone dagger was flying in. They seemed to be two masses of floating clouds in the starry night sky, being sent on their way by the wind.

“It’s two archmages, we need to be careful!” Emily started and issued a grave reminder.

A fiercely burning flame suddenly sprang up in front of the little bone dagger as soon as Emily had spoken. The dagger shone with even more of a cold light beneath the light of the fire, and it sent an eye piercing ray in all directions.

Several crossbow bolts suddenly came shooting from the front. Five had been shot out, but only one accurately connected with the little bone dagger. The whirling dagger was knocked off its path and dropped down, landing with a clank on the streets not too far away.

At that moment, the sound of the doors being broken down echoed as a fast patter of footsteps quickly approached. Roughly a dozen armored people immediately filled the courtyard, wielding all sorts of swords, spears, axes, and bows.

Two archmages floated down to the roofs. Now that the dagger was no longer a threat, they cast a cold eye down on the proceedings.

“Trunks, you’re here alright!” The cold voice of the fire archmage who’d saved Florida at the gates to the Valley of Sunshine last time sounded, one of the two standing on one of the rooftops.

“Andy you traitor, how dare you come see me. The old chief treated you well, and that staff in your hands was something that the old chief spent a great deal of money to get someone to refine for you. To think that you’d still be with that swine Florida after the old chief died!” Trunks pointed the longsword in his hand at Andy and hectored coldly.

“The old chief’s death was an accident. He died at the hands of robbers in the surrounding mountain ranges, and had nothing to do with Florida. You envied Florida sitting in the seat of the chief of the Rainbow Sickles, that’s why you’re framing him.” Andy looked disdainfully at Trunks and mocked him.

“I think that with your intelligence, you’ll be able to see what’s really going on here. I’ve come back this time to make sure all you traitors pay the price!”

Andy first laughed jeeringly and then looked at Trunks with a gaze full of pity. “Today is when you’ll die, you won’t have the chance to in the future!”

“Stop wasting time with him, Laureton’s men may show up at any time.

We need to kill them immediately!” The other archmage who’d come with him said expressionlessly.

There was the emblem of lightning on this person’s magic robes. It looked like he was a thunder archmage. He seemed about 30 years old and had grey-brown locks. He was as thin as a bamboo pole as he paced back and forth on the roof.

“I know!” Andy said impatiently. He didn’t seem to have cordial relations with this thunder mage. He then cast a slightly odd look downwards and said with an equally odd tone, “Do it?!”

The enemies in the courtyard were comprised of swordsmen, knights, and archers. The weakest amongst them were sergeant knights or journeymen swordsmen. There was also one completely covered in a green robe, wearing a pointy hat. His features couldn’t be made out in the darkness, but there was an enormous presence from him.

Andy had been looking and not really looking at this person when he spoke earlier. His tone didn’t sound like he was giving an order, but more like he was asking his elder’s opinion.

When Andy’s question concluded, this person suddenly moved as an enormous, harsh silver sword aura suddenly emanated from his body.

As he moved and the harsh sword aura cut through the air, the pointy hat on his head flew backwards, revealing a face that Emily and Phoebe were very familiar with.

“Gabriel, it’s you!” Emily couldn’t help but cry out in surprise.

Gabriel was Clark’s master and possessed the extraordinary strength of a great swordmaster. He was Bob Ascher’s right hand man, but had popped up here instead!

Chapter 211: The formation activates

Gabriel flicked the longsword in his hand and sent silver fighting aura splitting through the air, accompanied by a vicious, icy killing intent that pierced one down to the bones.

As Emily gasped in shock, Trunks and Gilbert had already charged to intercept Gabriel. Trunks had an inscrutable expression as he brandished his sword on the back of his manticore, forming a round, milky white fighting aura circle in front of him.

Gilbert held a dark long spear in his hand. He had no martial arts foundation, and so flung his spear forward with the inborn strength of a dark dragon tribe descendent.

There was a string of metallic clangs and explosions. Trunks grunted and evaded swiftly with the manticore. Gilbert's spear was broken into two as his chest was marked by the fighting aura, revealing a large patch of dark skin.

Great swordmaster Gabriel refocused his attention, his impassive face like it was carved out of stone. He was in no hurry to attack, but turned his gaze to where Han Shuo and the little skeleton were.

The howl of the bone dagger suddenly grew in intensity, and a gleaming bone dagger shot out from the direction Gabriel was looking in. The little skeleton behind the curtain had focused his purple eye on Gabriel and was waving the five finger bones of his left hand.

Trunks was heavily panting, and Gilbert had been shocked into a cold sweat as they both reacted to Gabriel's strength. A simple swing had forced Trunks to dodge and evade like he'd faced an avalanche of attacks. The immensely strong Gilbert had simply thrown out a spear because he hadn't understood any martial techniques, only to have it hacked into two by the silver aura. If he hadn't shifted in time, his chest would've been cut open by the fighting aura as well.

Just as the two were fretting over how to handle Gabriel, support from the little skeleton arrived. Gabriel couldn't help but treat this gleaming dagger carefully.

The ability to deploy a magical treasure was an incantation unique to magical cultivators. Gabriel had obviously been shocked by this incredible attack, which was why he'd given up the chance to further beat down on Trunks and Gilbert and had turned his attention to fully sensing how the little skeleton was manipulating the bone dagger.

The silver fighting aura was radiant and stunning, and it seemed like glorious clusters of fireworks beneath the starry sky, erecting an impregnable defense around Gabriel. The little bone dagger circled around him, emitting ear piercing howls as it tried to give Gabriel a lethal blow.

Small collision sounds continued to sound around Gabriel along with sparks, and the little bone dagger's path became more and more unpredictable.

"What are you standing you there? Attack!" Andy suddenly roared from above.

The mercenaries had been staring, flabbergasted, at the little bone danger's unbelievable attacks. They were finally awakened to their senses by this yell and either raised their bows to find their targets, or wield their swords, circling past Gabriel to charge at Trunks and the others.

Andy and the other thunder mage on top of the roof also got to work when they saw the swordsmen and knights start charging below. They too used magic to attack Emily and the others.

In the span of a moment, three fiercely burning fireballs as big as records started descending down to where Emily and the others were, rolling violently with the heat of their flames. Several bolts of lightning also ripped through the sky and crashed down, sparks flying everywhere.

"Oh dear!" Emily exclaimed and released a dark magic spell she'd prepared in advance.

An enormous, oily green net appeared over people's heads as she chanted. When the net formed, it delayed the three enormous fireballs, but the thunder attack went through the holes in the net and still came crashing down.

Emily and the others kept continuously ducking and weaving, evading the lightning strikes. The ground within the courtyard kept crackling and popping as two of the Shura pillars were also hit by lightning, piercing the darkness with light.

A clang sounded from Gabriel's direction. He'd gotten a grasp on the bone dagger's pattern of attack and used his sword to connect solidly with the bone dagger, sending it clattering to the ground.

"The friend within the house, your marvelous techniques are quite amazing, but your preferred style of hiding yourself and ambushing others is a bit shameful! Since you have such a marvelous technique, you should walk out forthrightly from the house and meet with me in battle!"

Great swordmaster Gabriel naturally thought it was the reclusive Han Shuo manipulating the bone dagger. Although he too had seen the little skeleton and his somewhat bizarre hand motions, he wasn't willing to believe that such a wondrous method of attack originated from a lowly dark creature.

However, the little skeleton's next moves completely wrecked his understanding of the world!

The little skeleton's purple eye flared with light as he jumped out of the window with a twist of his body, landing to face Gabriel's provocation.

He curled the five fingers of his right hand and the bone dagger lying on the ground suddenly flew upwards, landing in his hand like lightning.

Gabriel couldn't react for a moment as he stared incredulously at the little skeleton, his mind short circuiting for a bit. An even more stunning thing happened at this moment as the little skeleton bent over slightly, making the seven bone spurs on his back suddenly fly out and shoot towards Gabriel like seven bolts of lightning.

"Oh my gosh!" A cry of astonishment that only Gabriel could hear flew out of his mouth.

He was once again forced to become passive, defending himself by concentrating his silver fighting aura onto his longsword and expending all his focus on parrying the seven bone spurs' aerial attacks.

The little skeleton raised the bone dagger and crashed into the attacking mercenaries in a mass of flailing limbs. He revealed his cruel side as he bent and flexed his leg bones, landing into the group of mercenaries like a flash of lightning.

He shot out his empty left hand and connected with a soft splurting sound, ripping out five bloody gorges in the chest of a journeyman swordsman and creating a bloody fountain.

His right hand brandished the bone dagger and flourished it wildly, sending a nearby mercenary's head flying off his neck at high velocity. Bloody sprayed everywhere from the severed neck, dyeing the little skeleton's clean skeleton in an eerie red.

Two crossbow bolts whistled and dinged into the little skeleton's back and chest with metallic sounds. The two bolts clattered to the ground as two white traces appeared on his bones.

The two bolts hadn't harmed the little skeleton, but he had indeed been affected as his originally swiftly moving body couldn't help but waver a bit from the crossbow bolt attacks.

Some of the mercenaries nearby took advantage of this opportunity to send their spears and swords at the little skeleton. Multiple dings rang out from his skeleton as these strings of attacks seemed to daze the little skeleton, and his control over the seven bone spurs also suddenly ceased.

The bone spurs had been flying around Gabriel and attacking him whirled uncontrollably and crashed into a nearby Shura pillar.

It was as if a powerful inhibition had been triggered. Winds gusted through the courtyard and a thick sense of death suddenly spread to all four corners. The night sky was covered by this deathly aura, and not even the slightest hint of starlight made it through this shroud. Only a beam of evil red light rose to the sky from the center.

The stark white pillars had been deathly quiet until now, when horrifying wails and screams suddenly rang out. The cries of ghosts and howls of wolves drilled into one's brain, making the scalps tingle with numbness. It was like a vicious ghost was crouched next to one's ear, sticking a tongue out of its blood red maw to lick at one's earlobe.

The ghostly drawings on the pillars abruptly came back to life as they all capered and caterwailed. The pillars seemed to turn into demons with hundreds, no, thousands tentacles that continuously waved around, attacking all life around them.

"Hurry and take cover!" Emily shouted when she saw that the formation had been triggered.

The others had actually already started moving before Emily's shout. They hastened to stand in the safe spots that Han Shuo had told them about before.

Footsteps once again sounded outside, as the couple dozen Cairo mercenaries, originally surrounding the shop on the outskirts, couldn't help but charge into the courtyard when they saw that Han Shuo's group hadn't taken care of the attackers after so long.

On a large tree three shops away, the dark grand magus Edwin and female alchemist Belinda of the Church of Calamity stood atop a large tree. They looked at the blood red light in the distance, and the center of the location where a hundred ghosts were wailing and screaming while strange winds were blowing.

"Can it be that the legendary evil god's curse has truly taken effect?" Belinda's eyes were filled with shock as she spoke to Edwin.

"I don't know, the presence within is quite odd, even I don't know what's going on. Let's not draw near for now and see what's going on first!" Edwin shook his head with some confusion.

Chapter 212: Slaughter

“What’s going on, what’s going on here? I can’t see anything!”

“Someone’s attacking me, what’s going on in this courtyard?!”

“Everyone be careful, this is the most sinister place in the Valley of Sunshine. It must be the evil god’s curse taking place!”

“Retreat, everyone leave the courtyard! No one can leave this place alive when the evil god’s curse takes effect!”

Panicked screams rang out from the mouths of the Rainbow Sick mercenaries who’d entered the yard. These people had all heard of the legend of the store, and when they saw abnormalities happen, they all tried to immediately leave in great haste.

However, when the formation had been activated, the first formation of illusions had already taken effect. Apart from Emily and the others standing in safe zones, all the other mercenaries who’d brashly intruded could see nothing of their surroundings as the thick sense of death permeated the air.

Several foggy shadows suddenly shot out of the well in the center of the courtyard. When the kelpies sensed the presence of living humans nearby, they began to attack the mercenaries without hesitation.

In an instant, the mercenaries suddenly felt their bodies grow cold, and it seemed like something liquid had entered their bodies. Their minds were hazy and befuddled as a voice seemed to take control of them, forcing them to wander involuntarily to the well and jump in.

Three splashes echoed, as the mercenaries plummeted into the well amidst disorientation. The ice cold well water immediately restored their mind’s clarity, but their efforts to crawl out of the well at any cost were stymied. Their bodies were no longer under their control as they began to sink slowly into the depths.

Three despairing screams suddenly rang out from the well. As their voices filled with terror and despair, the scalps of all the other mercenaries in the courtyard grew ever more numb!

It was then that they finally realized there were many unknown dangers in this courtyard. This flash of enlightenment caused them give up any further thoughts of aggression, as they frantically tried to navigate the courtyard according to their memories, attempting to leave this evil and dangerous place with the fastest speed possible.

However, the modestly sized courtyard seemed to stretch on for an eternity in every direction. They retreated according to their memories, and their speed should've taken them out of this area a long time ago, but they never seemed to be able to find its end, and cries of agony rang out in succession next to their ears.

The illusion suddenly changed as another them suddenly appeared in front of them. These apparitions were wielding sharp weapons and leering at them, attacking the real one mercilessly. The fear brought about from this phenomenon destroyed their willpower in an instant, thoroughly defusing their fighting spirit.

Screams of fear and helpless sobbing echoed as all the mercenaries sank into a state of frenzied violence, randomly flailing their weapons about. Even the most stout hearted mercenary found it hard to accept a double attacking them ruthlessly, and they were all equally scared, lashing out at everything and anything.

And like this, all the Rainbow Sickle mercenaries who had entered the courtyard went insane in a matter of moments. They fought against each other enthusiastically as cries of mental breakdowns, anguish, pain, and the clang of weapons rang out from all corners of the courtyard.

Emily and the others in the safe zones had their lines of vision affected by where they were, so they couldn't see what was going on in the courtyard. However, the various sounds and shouts from those trapped within allowed them to understand that the Rainbow Sickle mercenaries were caught in a situation that they would find hard to forget for the rest of their lives.

Whenever a wail cut off suddenly, it meant that another life had been lost. They would then see another wisp of grey sucked into the Shura pillars next to them. As each soul vanished, the souls inhabiting the Shura pillars would provide more evil power to the pillars, making the wind howl even more fiercely within the courtyard and spreading the presence of death even more quickly.

Andy and the thunder mage could do nothing but watch the changes in the courtyard. The thick presence of death obscured the sky, and apart from a blood red beam rising into the sky from the center, there was nothing else that entered their eyes.

Like Emily and the others, the cries of helplessness and despair rang continuously in their ears. Contrary to the feelings of Emily and the others, Andy and the other mage felt their scalp grow numb as their hearts palpitated in fright. They didn't dare randomly cast fire and thunder spells because they couldn't see the situation clearly. They could only stand anxiously on top of the roof and scratch their heads, attempting to find a more appropriate way to help.

Although everyone's vision had been affected, the little skeleton was standing in the center of the courtyard, with his purple eye sparkling fiercely like an elegant gentleman. He walked leisurely, as if taking a stroll through the ballroom and walked with light steps with the bone dagger in his hand. He ambled at ease through the courtyard of madness, walking at the side of the mercenaries randomly waving their blades.

He made a grasping motion with his left hand bones and created bloody gauges in the mercenaries or just directly twisted their necks. The bone dagger sparkled with cold light as it drew beautiful arcs, cutting off agonized wails and reaping yet another life.

When the attacking mercenaries had all fallen one by one, the great swordmaster Gabriel had become the little skeleton's final target. Gabriel was much more difficult to handle than he'd imagined. Silver fighting aura filled the area around him as his brows jumped up and down on his face. It was obvious that he too was feeling the effects of the formation, but he was in no hurry to attack his surroundings and had focused on defending his area instead.

It was because of these conservative actions that only the weakest attacks had drawn near him. Those mercenaries that were closest to him were all blocked by the fighting aura, but these mercenaries were all busy killing each other or had been easily slaughtered by the little skeleton. Apart from the enormous drain of his fighting aura, Gabriel hadn't suffered at all from the formation.

The little skeleton drew near to Gabriel and wanted to keep using the same easy method to reap his life, but it wasn't that easy. Since Gabriel was holding onto the mindset of being willing to forgo achievements as long as he could protect himself adequately, he'd used his silver fighting aura to form curtains around him, thoroughly defending himself.

The little skeleton couldn't penetrate the great swordmaster's method either when he arrived. The little skeleton rubbed his head in frustration as he stood by Gabriel's side, his purple eye rolling around busily as he tried to figure out the best way to handle the situation.

"Who dares ignore the presence of the Cairo mercenary band and attempts to commit murder in the Valley of Sunshine!" Laureton's explosive roar crashed in from the distance like a great wave from the sea. Heavy hoofbeats sounded from afar with his shout.

"This is bad, that Laurmonster is coming. We need to retreat!" The thunder mage on the rooftop suddenly said lowly.

"But, Gabriel is still down there!" Andy also had a panicked look on his face as he looked anxiously downwards.

"No time for all of that. If we don't leave now, we won't be able to when Laurmonster makes his way here. But if you want to die that badly, I won't make you leave either!" The thunder mage said coldly, without a glance at Andy. He used a levitation spell to lift himself up and flew off into the distance.

Andy looked blank for a bit and finally shook his head with resignation. He stomped his foot and also used a levitation spell to float upwards, vanishing into the night behind the thunder mage.

When Andy and the thunder mage had left, Edwin and Belinda also left their post from a great tree not too far away and followed them soundlessly.

At this moment, the six Shura pillars quickly sucked in the presence of death and ill winds within the courtyard. In a couple of moments, starlight once again shone down onto the courtyard. As the formation's effects withdrew, it left behind only a ground littered with bodies and Gabriel, still waving his sword around.

"Kill him!" Gilbert yelled and grabbed a battle axe from the body nearby, charging towards Gabriel.

Phoebe and Trunks also knew that this opportunity was uncommon as they too brandished their weapons, charging towards Gabriel with the fastest speed possible. They combined their efforts with the little skeleton to issue a strong attack towards Gabriel.

Gabriel reacted very swiftly as soon as the formation's effects wore off. He took a quick look around and understood that his operations this time had failed completely. He moved without hesitation and leapt for the rooftop.

Gilbert and the other's attacks arrived at this time, only to be met with a rock from the roof as Gabriel's longsword flicked with a silver flash of fighting aura, batting it into the path of the attacks coming at him from behind.

An explosion sounded as the flying battle axe was halted by the large rock. The bone dagger howled as it broke apart the rock, directly threatening Gabriel. Gabriel swept his longsword in an arc and finally sent the little bone dagger flying to the side.

However, Trunks and Phoebe's fighting auras also arrived in front of Gabriel at this time. A ghastly scream spilled from his lips as his swiftly flying body suddenly paused, with a criss crossing pattern of blades appearing on his back. It was obvious that he'd suffered great injury. As he fled in a panic, he spat out great mouthfuls of fresh blood.

Emily used the levitation spell to fly upwards and was about to chant a dark magic to give him the final blow when a fierce arrow flew out of nowhere like cold lightning. It brought with its speed a frosty chill, something that she felt before it even drew near her.

Emily choked off her incantation halfway through and suddenly dropped out of the sky. However, that cold arrow still doggedly clung to her path and shot towards her neck like a lethal flash of lightning, embodied with a fearful chill and ruthlessness.

There wasn't even enough time to chant a spell at this moment. Gilbert and the others were all within the courtyard and had just sent forth an enormously vicious blow. Whether in terms of personal speed or fighting aura, there was nothing that anyone could do for Emily at this time.

The person who had sent out this arrow had an exquisite grasp of timing, understanding the right moment to strike. They'd melded ice magic into this arrow, and the swiftness and cruelty of this shot was one that greatly frightened onlookers.

Despair filling her face, Emily's hopes vanished at this moment. There was only one thought in her mind. ...was she going to die like this?

However, nothing is ever absolute in life! In that moment of certain death, a red light ripped through the dark sky and appeared next to Emily, crashing into that lethal arrow with irrefutable accuracy.

The missile broke apart on contact, and the frosty air scattered as it was unable to concentrate into one place.

Emily had snatched her life back from the jaws of death, and the glee of living after a disaster filled her heart. When she focused her eyes to the front again, she saw the Demonslayer Edge flying in front of her!

In that moment, an indescribable feeling of bliss filled her heart like an enormous wave. In that instant, the love that she had for Han Shuo was as deep as the boundless ocean.

"You won't be that lucky next time!" A clear shout traveled from exceedingly far away. A thin figure danced on top of some rooftops like a swan elegantly dancing on a lake.

Trunks and the others were enraged as they all leapt up to land on the roofs, planning on taking down this extremely dangerous female archer.

“Don’t chase her!” Han Shuo’s low shout traveled from within the house at this time.

Original and most updated translations are on volare. If you’re reading this anywhere else, it has been stolen from the translator. Don’t support theft. ☹️

The room door was open as a sinister looking Han Shuo stepped out. Blood red light emanated from his body as a thick killing aura condensed around him. His eyes were blood red, and his expression sinister and filled with the utmost cruelty. It was as if he was a demon from hell, having endured millennia to break through his shackles and arrive in the world of humans!

Emily and the others were absolutely shocked by Han Shuo’s current appearance and aura. They subconsciously halted their footsteps and looked at the somewhat unfamiliar Han Shuo.

The current Han Shuo’s presence and expression were all much too malevolent. He was simply too different from usual!

Chapter 213: A bloodthirsty urge

Han Shuo took a deep breath in and slowly repressed his aroused desire for blood. A slowly stirring urge to engage in slaughter was slowly calmed after a few deep breaths.

Under the gaze of Trunks and the others, Han Shuo's original distant and bloodthirsty appearance started to slowly revert to normal after he took in a few deep breaths. The blood red light and that cruel aura all slowly disappeared until he returned to the form they were familiar with.

"What happened to you?" Emily finally breathed a sigh of relief when she saw Han Shuo return to normal. Her beautiful eyes looked anxiously at Han Shuo.

"My techniques were elevated to a new stage just now, and this new stage is incredibly difficult to control. I'm not that familiar with this new stage yet and lost my composure!" Han Shuo revealed a faint smile when his mindset returned to normal and explained to the others.

"I was so frightened. Your expression and aura earlier were really evil and scary. Even I felt terrified!" Trunks looked deeply at Han Shuo. His heart was pounding even now.

Of those present, only the little skeleton wasn't reacting out of the ordinary. He started capering happily when he saw Han Shuo appear, and pointed at the corpses on the ground every now and then, seeming to be relaying his battle score to Han Shuo.

Chuckling lightly in gratification, Han Shuo could feel the little skeleton's desire to show off, excitedly awaiting for Han Shuo's compliments.

"Hey you brat, c'mere. Well done!" Beckoning his hand, Han Shuo stroked the little skeleton's gleaming skull when the latter walked over docilely with his bone dagger. The little skeleton's purple eye rolled around as his jaw bone clattered together, appearing quite at ease.

"Honored master, you're truly prejudiced. You've never treated me this kindly!” Gilbert complained when he saw Han Shuo drown the little skeleton with love.

The little skeleton had been by Han Shuo’s side when the latter was still an errand slave. He’d started off throwing trash away for Han Shuo, and took care of a lot of random, irritating matters. When the little skeleton had grown stronger, it had protected Han Shuo a few times. This were deeds which Gilbert couldn’t measure up to.

Flicking a glance at Gilbert, Han Shuo was about to say something when he suddenly frowned and turned his eyes to the entrance.

Laureton of the Cairo mercenary band walked in through the doorway like a metal tower. Harris and a group of experts followed close behind him. Laureton’s body was built very robustly, and he was likely even a bit heavier than a battlesteed. His footsteps echoed dully on the ground as he walked.

“What’s going on, where are the Rainbow Sickle mercenaries?” A voice that rang like a bell sounded from Laureton’s mouth.

Pointing at the corpses littered over the ground, Han Shuo smiled faintly, “Aren’t these them?”

Laureton’s brow drew together as he looked at the ground, listing out names as though he were counting up his family’s treasures. “Angero, Tulije, Jelina...” Shock blossomed on his face as he spoke. When he finally lifted his head to look at Han Shuo, shock was all that was left on his face. “You guys killed all of them?”

“Possibly. Or maybe it was the curse of the evil god that helped us!” Han Shuo smiled mysteriously and shrugged his shoulders as he answered carelessly.

“These people are indeed of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band, and some of them are their core members. To think you’ve managed to killed so many of them, this is a big help to us!” Harris was hard pressed to conceal his joy after he walked in, and his voice seemed more emotional than usual.

“What’s going on here?” Laureton was thoroughly confused by Han Shuo’s response and could not help but ask.”

“Laureton, you came too late! You only arrived after the fighting had finished. Looks like the efficiency of the Cairo mercenary band isn’t as good as we thought!” Trunks flicked a glance at Han Shuo and spoke before the latter could speak.

“Trunks, you also know that there are many areas in the valley that need to be protected. Our mercenary band can’t possibly station that many of our men here.” Laureton said and then snorted coldly with an irritated expression. “To ignore our existence like this, Florida has become way too cocky! The ones who launched a sneak attack on you didn’t even conceal their features. This is an obvious dismissal of us!”

“Chief Laureton, I hope you guys can be more timely next time. The matters here have already ended and there’s probably nothing here that’s worthy of your attention left.” Han Shuo said and then suddenly remembered something. “Amongst those who attacked us this time was a great swordmaster called Gabriel. This person works for Bob Ascher, chief of the Gryphon Legion in nearby Valley City. I don’t know if the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band is in leagues with Bob Ascher. I hope you’ll keep an eye out for this!”

“Great swordmaster Gabriel!” Laureton exclaimed in shock as he obviously didn’t know of this matter. His expression grew grave.

Nodding, Han Shuo said, “That’s right. This person is the master of Bob Ascher’s eldest son, Clark and has always been by Bob Ascher’s side. I hadn’t thought that he’d leave Ascher’s side this time and be with the Rainbow Sickles.”

“Don’t worry, I’ll investigate things thoroughly. Alright, we’ll be leaving now, if there’s nothing else.” Laureton seemed to be contemplating something with a darkened face as he spoke rather anxiously.

“Wait, I’ve been away from the valley for too long and don’t know enough about Florida’s strength. You should give us detailed information about all the experts of the Rainbow Sickle mercenaries and their strength. A thunder mage appeared today, as well as a female archer with amazing shooting skills. One of our companions was almost injured this time. We need detailed information on the Rainbow Sickles!" Trunks hurriedly said when he saw Laureton about to leave.

"Female archer!" Laureton cried out once again and said gravely, "That would be the female elf Maxine. She's a sharpshooter versed in the water, thunder, and wind magics. She can combine all three magics into her shooting and send out incredibly frightening shots."

"This woman is very difficult to deal with, it's said that she's the fiancée that Florida's grandfather located for him. She's very mysterious, and doesn't seem to have good relations with Florida. She's rarely in the valley these days, but will always help whenever the Rainbow Sickles meet with danger. It looks like she's come back!"

"Who was the thunder archmage?" It was Emily's turn to ask this time.

"His name is Asa. He only joined half a year ago and I'm not too sure of his background. Vicious and cruel, he gets along well with Florida. He's taken care of most of the band's underhanded dealings this past year, and is deeply trusted by Florida!" Laureton was quite familiar with the experts of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band and began to explain in great detail without hesitation when Trunks and Emily asked him.

"Apart from these two, have any other experts joined the Rainbow Sickles these past few years?" Trunks continued to ask.

Laureton's brow creased as he thought silently for a moment, then turned his head to look at Harris. "Give him a copy of our intelligence."

Harris started and then nodded, taking out a scroll from his space ring and handing it over to Trunks. "The information regarding the Rainbow Sickles in here is likely going to be more detailed than what Miss Emily has."

It looked like Harris and the others already knew of Emily's identity. They were the ones who held true power within the valley, and the identities of those they watched over would naturally not escape their eyes.

Trunks nodded after scanning this scroll, then smiled at Laureton. “Very detailed. We’ll take care of Florida for you before the struggle for power begins!”

“If this is the case, I will thank you all greatly. Not only will this shop be unconditionally yours, Miss Phoebe’s guild shall be exempt from all taxes in the valley in the future.” Laureton laughed heartily and strode outside with great steps.

Harris, who followed closely behind Laureton looked at Trunks and reminded, “The terrain of the Rainbow Sickle quarters is drawn behind the scroll. There are detailed descriptions of their open and hidden outposts. Destroy this scroll after reading it, don’t let it fall into the hands of others and give rise to unnecessary trouble!”

Trunks nodded understandingly and laughed coldly, “Don’t worry, I know what to do!”

Harris and Trunks were old acquaintances and naturally knew that Trunks and Florida had a death feud. Harris left with the parting words, “Good luck!”

When Laureton and the others had left, Han Shuo said lowly, “Laureton is trying to take advantage of us! But we want to find our footing in the valley as well, so we won’t move according to his plans! The Cairo mercenary band and Rainbow Sickles aren’t the only powers within the valley. There are some others that aren’t weak either, and I’m sure they would love to replace the Cairo mercenary band and hold power in their hands as well!”

Trunks blinked and asked Han Shuo, “What would you like to do?”

Chuckling sinisterly, Han Shuo looked at the sky and murmured to himself, “The winds are strong and the night dark today. The Valley of Sunshine has been chaotic for a while now. Let’s make use of this opportunity to make things even more messy!”

Chapter 214: The four great powers

Apart from the strongest Cairo mercenary band in the Valley of Sunshine, there were two other slightly weaker factions of the House of Menlo and the Katar orc tribe.

The House of Menlo had originally been a minor noble family in a small kingdom. They had their own private army and had attempted a coup, but had failed when their plans were revealed.

They'd fought with the royal army of the small kingdom and fled, discarding their armor along the way. They'd finally arrived in the Valley of Sunshine with vastly decreased strength.

They only possessed three hundred soldiers then, but the House of Menlo had made off with quite a sum of riches from the small kingdom during the chaos of civil war. They used this fortune when they arrived in the valley to attract a thousand experts of various professions, and their strength was now second only to the Rainbow Sickles.

The House of Menlo was now the richest power within the valley, and the head of the house Sawyer Menlo always dreamed about becoming the most powerful within the valley, recruiting more soldiers and going back to their home, obtaining the authority over that kingdom.

The Katar orc tribe was a small tribe that had originally lived in frosty desolation. They'd overcome countless hardships to immigrate to the Valley of Sunshine and take up residence within one of its mountain ranges. There were only five, six hundred orcs within this tribe, but all of them were highly capable warriors that were tough to take on.

The orcs of the Katar tribe mainly functioned to protect the merchants and put their earnings towards taking care of their family and elderly.

This faction wasn't weak, but the chief of the tribe was also constantly thinking about controlling the valley in order to gain more benefits and gold.

The Cairo mercenary band, the Rainbow sickle mercenary bound, the House of Menlo, and the Katar orc tribe were the four strongest forces in the Valley of Sunshine at the moment.

This information wasn't hard to obtain. Han Shuo had just arrived in the valley not too long ago before learning all of this from Emily. Everyone was aware that the four powers had uneasy relations, and that each of them wanted to take over the Valley of Sunshine to leverage its resources and quickly increase their own strength.

The Cairo mercenary band had only had a thousand people to begin with. After they'd taken control of the Valley of Sunshine, their numbers had doubled in just a few years. This was all because they'd obtained enormous amounts of gold after controlling the Valley of Sunshine and attracted even more numbers of experts to join.

To the Cairo mercenary band, it was a wonderful trade if they could immensely decrease the Rainbow Sickles without harming their own strength. A mere storefront compared to the entire valley, it was a worthwhile trade no matter how one looked at it.

It was because Han Shuo understood the situation within the valley that he was full of ambition and began to think for himself, trying to plot a profitable path for the mercenary band he'd just formed.

"Trunks, take your old comrades and go for a walk around the House of Menlo tonight. Conceal your faces and cause some trouble. Kill some people and set some fires!" Han Shuo looked at Trunks and smiled slightly.

"You mean, make the House of Menlo think that another faction did it?" Trunks' expression changed as he asked.

"They won't suspect us anyways when they're attacked, because we don't have the strength and have no reason to be enemies with them. They'll suspect the other three factions in the end." Han Shuo explained.

Trunks nodded and a sinister smile appeared on his face. "I think I can do this well. I was used to the covert and open struggles between the factions when I was still in the Rainbow Sickles!"

“Then good, be careful and don’t expose yourselves. Cause as much destruction as you can!”

Trunks made use of the night and said nothing else, leaving hurriedly. It looked like he was planning on making some moves tonight.

After Trunks had left, Han Shuo said darkly to Emily and the two others. “Since the Rainbow Sickles have already made a move against else, we can’t take that long down, can we? Come, let’s go take a walk ourselves and see if we can kill some people at the Rainbow Sickles!”

Han Shuo’s group now enjoyed exceedingly good relations with the Cairo mercenary band. It was very convenient for them to enter and leave the valley. However, they didn’t exit from the main entrance this time, but made use of Gilbert’s flight ability to fly out of a quiet corner in the valley.

There were rules in the valley as well. Under ordinary conditions, even archmages who could fly couldn’t levitate themselves in and out of the valley. If they were discovered by the Cairo mercenary band, they would be immediately detained for questioning.

The moonlight shimmered like water as it cascaded down over the white ground. The accumulated snow had yet to melt, and the snow covered mountains and towering trees were inordinately beautiful beneath the rays of the moon.

The Rainbow Sickles were located within a small mountain valley to the north of the Valley of Sunshine. When Han Shuo’s group arrived, they could see row of low houses made of red tiles when they peered into the mountain valley. There was a sizable hot spring cluster within the valley, and hot mist was arising from the waters, shrouding the mountain valley in white mist.

There were many fresh flowers and grass planted around the hot springs, and because of the heat from the springs, the flowers and grass in the surroundings weren’t afraid of the bite of winter. Many vibrant flowers were blooming all over the area.

Stout looking mercenaries were stationed at outposts all over the mountain valley. They were looking around alertly, always on their guard against the intrusion of enemies.

Han Shuo had Gilbert stop on a cliff over the valley and looked downwards. Han Shuo smiled coldly, "Someone else may be making a move before us this time!"

Phoebe and Emily revealed confused expressions after his words. They looked in bafflement at Han Shuo, with Phoebe asking, "What makes you say that?"

"When we were at the storefront earlier, dark grand magus Edwin and the female alchemist Belinda of the Calamity Church were observing not too far in the distance. I sensed their position before I stopped, and the two of them followed after Andy when he left."

"Edwin and Belinda were the first to break off from the pursuit, and then it was Gabriel and the female archer Maxine who left. Edwin and Belinda should in the mountain valley below now. If they're here to kill Florida, that will be a huge help for us!" Han Shuo said slowly as he looked down into the mountain valley below.

"Then what should we do?" Starting at some unknown time, Emily had already grown accustomed to Han Shuo deciding everything when he was present.

Lifting his head to look at the sky, Han Shuo said, "Only half of this long night has passed. We still have plenty of time, let's wait for a while!"

Time passed quickly as roughly half an hour later, violent magic pulses suddenly emanated from one of the most magnificent red tile buildings. A metal golem in the shape of the three eyed demon god abruptly appeared out of thin air beneath the cool moonlight.

The golem began body slamming the magnificent building as soon as it appeared. Its thick metal tail swept across the scene and sent red tiles flying everywhere, shaking all the buildings as well.

At the same time, strong magic pulses accompanied the rumbling sounds of the earth shaking and mountains moving. Three hands of death appeared out of thin air and floated into the magnificent building through the windows, destroying its insides with abandon.

“Edwin and the others have made their move, we can’t sit idly by!” Han Shuo chuckled coldly as the air of bloodlust gathered around him again. The evil and ruthless expression from earlier once again floated onto his cheeks.

“What should we do, honored master?” Gilbert was once again excited as he rumbled in his deep dragon voice.

“Bear them on your back and fly over the mountain valley. Destroy all the buildings in this valley to the best of your abilities, and spray out poisonous flame. If you run into any attacks that may injure you, fly away immediately and don’t wait for me. No one will be able to stop me if I want to leave!” Han Shuo laughed loudly with a grimace and a coldly stern expression. He rushed down like a diving hawk, a blood red light emerging from his body as his eyes were turned a deep blood red.

“Will he be alright?” Phoebe had already discovered Han Shuo’s peculiarities before he’d flown down, and couldn’t help but voice her concerns to Emily.

“Do as he says!” Emily responded and kicked Gilbert in the sides. “Dark dragon, move out!”

A thin figure followed behind Han Shuo in this moment, floating downwards through the air.

The little skeleton capered wildly as he flew like a kite with a broken string. When he reached halfway, the seven bone spurs on his back shook consecutively and his body regained balanced. He followed closely behind Han Shuo with a strange trail and dived down towards the mountain valley.

Chapter 215: A frenzied slaughter

Cultivators easily became violent and angry in the bloodlust realm. One could only comprehend the wonders of this realm in the midst of bloodthirsty battle, and only through such slaughter could a cultivator understand himself better. Continued slaughter was the fastest shortcut to breaking through this realm.

However, it was exceedingly easy for one to veer into a cultivation deviation during the slaughter. It was incredibly hard for a cultivator to regain their reason once they accidentally lost it, and they would become a crazed monster that only knew how to wreak mass slaughter. Therefore, this realm was quite difficult to exercise self control in. Slaughter was the fastest way to ascend from it, but it was also a one way path.

As Han Shuo flew down from the cliff, his hatred towards Florida was infinitely magnified, including his anger towards the female archer Maxine who'd almost caused a fatal blow to Emily. His originally calm heart began to pound at a much faster rate than usual, and the magical yuan filled the demon infant with a thriving life force.

When the demon infant had absorbed the pure power of the soul held within the purple demon eye, it'd help Han Shuo break through his stalemate in the true demon realm. When he'd reached the bloodlust realm, although he would occasionally have the thought of rampaging around killing everything in sight, his strength had indeed taken leaps and bounds forward.

An inky black shadow landed from the sky amidst large rumbling noises. An thick sense of killing intent arose, one that couldn't be ignored by anyone. When the panicking Rainbow sickle mercenaries, in the throes of gathering their men and horses to respond to Edwin and Belinda's threat, discovered the abnormalities in the sky, they sent arrows, spears, and javelins howling with lightning into the sky.

However, none of the dozen or so attacks could approach the dark shadow. The descending figure swiftly recited a necromancy magic incantation, and a black light flashed through the skies. A troop of gargoyles appeared out of nowhere. They were wielding bone spears and lined up in a neat formation in front of the dark shadow, blocking all the arrows, spears, and javelins.

Suddenly, an enormous black canopy expanded quickly from the dark figure. It covered the bright moonlight and enclosed a third of the valley in the canopy.

A thick presence of death abruptly spread out. All those who moved around in its vicinity felt that their body was moving around much more stiffly than normal. The dark shadow landed in the valley beneath the cover of the canopy and dark creatures started popping into existence shortly thereafter.

The moonlight was blocked by the black clouds, making one unable to tell time and not knowing how much time there was until daybreak.

The Canopy of Necromancy was a spell that had been lost long ago, and it adversely affected the battle strength of all enemies caught within it. All dark creatures would be strengthened in the range of this canopy, and their strength and speed would be increased after absorbing the thick presence of death around them.

This was an evil magic that wore away at the opponent's strength and increased the strength of one's own dark creatures. It'd been forgotten by humans on the continent since the cemetery of death had vanished.

When Han Shuo's magic materialized, the dark creatures all began excitedly attacking their surroundings. Not only did the Rainbow Sickles feel the limberness of their bodies affected, their eyes also felt abnormally dry and their vision was likewise affected.

"Belinda, apart from Clarendon, has another necromancer come by this time?" Edwin had been releasing dark magic when he saw the moonlight become obscured by the black clouds. He asked a gleeful question to Belinda, who happened to be manipulating her golems off on the side, when he saw the dark creatures enthusiastically attack the mercenaries.

Shaking her head, Belinda's expression was perplexed as she responded, “Clarendon’s already been killed. There should be no other necromancers other than him!”

Edwin started when he heard those words and smiled faintly, “Then perhaps our superiors sent more people over. Even I have never seen such mysterious necromancy magic. I don’t think that there’s any other necromancers apart from our Calamity Church who would grasp such magic!”

“Of course, only our Calamity Church would have such mysterious magic. He must be one of our.” Belinda had full faith in Edwin’s words. It would seem that they had an unswervable confidence in the strength of the Calamity Church.

“I’m Edwin, which friend has come by?” When Edwin saw that the dark creatures were helping them after Han Shuo had appeared, he couldn’t help but call out in a friendly manner when he saw the dark creatures head off some of the mercenaries.

His enormous amount of mental strength had been mostly depleted after releasing the canopy of necromancy and summoning fifty to sixty dark creatures of different levels. When the dark creatures began to attack with wild abandon under the cover of the canopy, Han Shuo became a cruel shadow locked in the depths of bloodlust and began to vent his violence every which way.

A craving for fresh blood cascaded down like the endless river waters, pushing Han Shuo into a boundless frontier of slaughter. Wherever the dark shadow passed, the mercenaries with insufficient strength were all hacked to pieces by the sharp Demonslayer Edge, and fresh blood splurged everywhere.

His eyes dyed blood red, Han Shuo’s hard to control desire to kill everything led him to kill all those in his path. He was as if a machine reaping lives, and all the mercenaries in his vicinity kept being subjected to frightful attacks.

His body halted slightly after hearing Edwin’s words, but he ignored them. When he looked around again, he discovered that apart from the little skeleton hot on his heels, there was no one else there.

Now in the bloodlust realm, the durability of Han Shuo's body had reached its peak. He could instinctively sense the danger around him as he fought, and could even clearly perceive the fear and trembling of those far away. Whenever he killed someone, the fear of his victim upon imminent death and his resentment after death would form a cloud of air hard to be seen by the human eye, to be absorbed by the aura of killing intent around Han Shuo.

As more and more mercenaries were slaughtered, the killing aura around Han Shuo became more and more thick. A strong scent of blood even began to emanate from his pores. Han Shuo's body and magical yuan kept being continuously refined in this process, and he could feel his strength increasing bit by bit in this process.

In contrast, Han Shuo's mind became more and more torpid the more his body and magical yuan improved. When the fear and resentment cause from killing others was attracted to his vicinity, this enormous amount of information seemed to affect Han Shuo's mind, making the blood vessels on his brain pulse and giving him the feeling that he was entering a cultivation deviation.

He realized that this was bad and scanned Chu Cang Lan's memories, immediately realizing that in the bloodlust realm, once the brain had this kind of torpid sign and wanted to kill and destroy everyone and everything in sight, this was a sign of one about to enter a cultivation deviation.

His tried and tested willpower proved to be useful now. Han Shuo recalled the Demonslayer Edge back into his storage ring and attempted to calm his rampaging heart whilst he still had some semblance of reason left. He ignored the chaos around him and sat down crosslegged.

The little skeleton had been at Han Shuo's side and helping him reap lives when he suddenly saw his master sit down. His purple eye flashed as the little skeleton waved a hand at some of the dark creatures nearby.

The purple eye flashed on and off with an evil, purple light like a broken light bulb. There seemed to be a mysterious power compelling the dark creatures. Several zombies and hate warriors walked over fearfully as the little skeleton beckoned to them, giving the little skeleton the respect that subordinates would give to their superiors.

When they faced Han Shuo, they could only move stiffly according to instinct, due to being summoned by a spell. But when Han Shuo had sat down cross legged and was summoned by the little skeleton, they displayed fear and respect when they carefully surrounded Han Shuo. They seemed deeply afraid that the little skeleton would be unsatisfied and become angry at them. They behaved like the most humble servants and slaves.

This kind of performance seemed to indicate that they'd long since known the little skeleton, or heard of the little skeleton's dominance and wondrous achievements. Otherwise, in the vast and boundless other dimension, how would an ordinary skeletal warrior incite so much fear and respect from them?

Perhaps, in the other dimension, the little skeleton with the seven bone spurs, wielding a bone dagger and boasting of a purple eye, had already grown into his own and become a famous and illustrious character!

Chapter 216: Shock

A third of the mountain valley had been enclosed by the canopy of necromancy. Black clouds obstructed all light, and a thick sense of death floated everywhere, making the mercenaries within feel extremely uncomfortable.

In the center of the canopy of necromancy, having undergone a slaughter, Han Shuo was finding his desires hard to control. The aura of killing intent around him created a scene in which his mind was starting to run out of control. Thankfully, his long honed willpower hauled back on the reins at the most critical moment, forcefully halting his further descent into madness.

He sat down cross legged and ignored the chaos around him. Han Shuo calmed himself and concentrated, slowly placating his deep desires. Three zombie warriors, two hate warriors, and seven to eight skeletal warriors stood around him. The little skeleton wielded a bone dagger as his purple eye sparkled. He was as if a general leading thousands. He stood with a puffed up chest plate and looked towards the front, silently protecting Han Shuo.

The most magnificent building in the valley finally collapsed with a roar beneath Edwin and Belinda's concerted efforts. The earthshaking explosion shook the entire mountain valley. All of a sudden, whether it was mercenaries living further away in the valley, those meditating or practicing, or yet others sparring with each other, all members of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band realized that their old nest was under attack and surged towards the valley.

In a place exceedingly far away, a knight wearing gleaming silver armor charged over on the back of a warhorse clad with silver armor whilst wielding a three meter long javelin.

A thin, black figure moved adroitly amongst the branches of trees with thick accumulation of snow, swiftly making up for her tardiness in arriving. A loose, black dress and several colorful ribbons concealed her face as she moved. Only two long, tipped ears indicated her identity as an elf.

Andy and the thunder mage made use of the moonlight to fly through the air from another direction. They too were rushing over to render aid, panic and shock written all over their faces.

“Who dares come wreak havoc in the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band!” A furious roar shook the earth from the knight clad in silver armor. Even though his head was covered by a silver helmet, this roar still echoed throughout the entire valley.

“The Knights of Light are here! It looks like we should retreat!” Belinda cast a look into the distance and turned to speak to Edwin.

Edwin nodded and suddenly pointed at the horizon in shock, “Eh? Who’s that?”

Belinda followed the direction of Edwin’s finger and looked at the sky. Although there was the cover from the canopy of necromancy, gouts of flame still enable the two to identify an enormous black figure through the light of the flames.

“It’s that person’s magical pet, a young dark dragon. To think that they followed us here as well!” Belinda seemed to remember her earlier embarrassment and responded with a heavy tone.

“Heh heh, then that’s perfect ,we don’t need to be in a hurry to leave!” If it wasn’t for Gilbert and the others, then all of the Rainbow Sickle mercenaries’ attacks would’ve been targeted at Edwin and Belinda. Now that Gilbert and the others were here to divert attention away from them, they naturally wouldn’t have to bear the brunt of the pressure.

Gilbert made use of his fast flight speed over the valley to haul Emily and Phoebe around, spewing out red hot flames at the buildings below and drowning them in a sea of fire.

Gilbert would send a stream of green poison down to wherever a concentrated group of people were. The mercenaries all screamed in agony and dodged away to all sides. If any were splashed with even a hint of the green poison, they would lose their lives in the span of a moment.

“Lowly lives, you shouldn’t have angered us. This is the punishment that I, dark dragon Gilbert, am visiting on you for your lowly actions!” Gilbert’s resonant voice sounded out as he passed over the mountain valley. He was dancing in his excitement and proud of the destruction that he had wrought.

“Oh noble God of Light, hear my calls. Disperse all darkness—Radiant Glory!” A wizened voice suddenly rang out in the chaotic mountain valley. All sorts of cries, shouts, and collision sounds were unable to bury this chant.

An exceedingly strong beam of light ripped through the sky, and the pure, divine elements of light suffused the valley. The black clouds formed by the canopy of necromancy was diffused in an instant and vanished without a trace.

The resplendent and stunning light scattered down over the valley, intermixing with the soft light from the stars. When the divine power of light shone down, the presence of death was swiftly banished and all the mercenaries in the valley were no longer affected by the darkness.

Apart from the little skeleton being unafraid of the light, all the dark creatures that Han Shuo had summoned began to rot in an exceedingly short amount of time. They displayed expressions of great pain and hurriedly began to find cover.

The dark creatures that had been protecting Han Shuo under the little skeleton’s orders were also all in great pain, but they seemed to fear the little skeleton greatly. Although their bodies were fast decomposing, they didn’t leave. They all looked pleadingly at the little skeleton, waiting for the little skeleton’s forgiveness.

The little skeleton finally waved his hand, allowing the dark creatures to disperse. They all hid beneath roofs or found a random hole in the ground to burrow into, attempting to evade the rays from the Radiant Glory.

The injured mercenaries saw their wounds miraculously come under control beneath the radiant beams of light. They all recovered some of their energy like they'd been quickly healed.

When the element of light filled the valley, it immediately turned the situation around. Shortly thereafter, an old man wearing the accoutrements of a priest of the Church of Light with greying hair but in good spirits, started patrolling the valley with a benevolent gaze in his eyes.

"He's here alright. When Florida was injured so heavily, I thought he might go back. Let's go, Florida must've been transferred elsewhere. Otherwise, the building that he lives in wouldn't have had only that little bit of defense!" Edwin looked viciously at the light archmage Ferguson as he stood in the shadows of a house and spoke lowly to Belinda.

"Yes, we'll find it hard to leave soon if we linger any longer!" Belinda understood just how strong Ferguson was. She didn't hesitate. The golem had already transformed back into a beam of white light as soon as she'd finished speaking, disappearing into her scroll.

On the other side, the bellowing Gilbert fled swiftly into the skies without another sound when he saw that this old man had used a single light magic to change the situation as soon as he'd appeared.

Ferguson frowned as he saw Gilbert about to leave and chained a basic Radiant slash spell. The light element surrounding the mountain valley suddenly coalesced into three swords of light, swiftly shooting towards Gilbert.

Gilbert turned his head back and spewed out a gout of flame, hauling two of the swords. Emily hastily released a hand of death and blocked the other sword of light. It was only after that that the dragon and two girls finally made it out of the mountain valley.

After Ferguson had release the Radiant Slash, a strong pulse of light magic formed, resulting in ripples of magic spreading out from the epicenter. The ripples screeched through the air as cracks grew swiftly in the ground. A building roughly fifty square meters was in the path of these ripples. It was instantly crushed to rubble and stone shards flew through the sky.

“Edwin old friend, I could feel that hateful presence from you from a far distance away! Come on out!” Ferguson called out in the direction of his attack after releasing the light magic.

It looked like Gilbert wasn't Ferguson primary target. Otherwise, he wouldn't have left so easily. As someone on his level and an opponent he was quite familiar with, Edwin was Ferguson's true target.

“Heh heh, it's so good to see you. However, this place isn't suitable for me. Good bye!” Edwin's sinister laugh traveled from the pile of rubble as a dark figure slowly faded after these words were delivered, disappearing from the wreck.

“I'll find you!” Ferguson's face was calm. He didn't look happy or sad, and there were no ripples of anger in his voice either.

“There's another one down there, and he actually looks unafraid of death!” Thunder mage Asa looked askance below and called out with surprise.

There was a figure shimmering with a blood red light in the center of the ruined mountain valley. He sat there like a boulder, as unmoving as a mountain, ignoring all that was going on around him. A figure that was slightly shorter, wielding a bone dagger with seven bone spurs on his back and a purple left eye stood by his side, unswerving in his loyalty and looking like he was protecting the other.

“It's him, the person ho almost killed Florida at the border of the valley!” The fire mage Andy immediately cried out after flicking a glance down.

Everyone was shocked after these words! They all looked at Han Shuo, perplexed, not understanding why he hadn't left at this time.

Could it be that he wanted to use his own power alone to fight against the entire Rainbow Sickles mercenary band? Didn't he know that there was a light grand magus in the mercenary band?

“Surround him, I want him alive!” A trace of anger finally colored Ferguson's voice. It was unknown whether or not he was angry that Han Shuo had injured Florida, or that Han Shuo was ignoring all of them.

“Understood!” The Knights of Light immediately surged forward from all directions after hearing Ferguson’s order, surrounding Han Shuo with three layers.

Up in the sky, archangels Andy and Asa as well as grand magus Ferguson and sharpshooter Maxine also surrounded Han Shuo as well. By this point, it was likely that only a magister or a divine knight or swordmaster would be able to leave at will.

Han Shuo was obviously not at that level of existence!

As everyone focused on Han Shuo, a stunning light suddenly lit up light archmage Ferguson’s eyes. His calm face was suddenly filled with a bizarre expression. His brows were knit together, the furrows in his forehead twitching as his mouth opened and closed. Incredible shock filled his expression, as well as a few traces of worry and fear.

“Grandpa Ferguson, what’s wrong?” Maxine looked at Ferguson with an odd expression not too far away.

Maxine’s features were comprised of an exquisite, flawless face like she was a perfect work of art. She had all the advantages that a beauty of the elves should possess. A long and limber body, an ethereal bearing, gleaming green tresses that were like a waterfall, and a heart stopping face. All of this had come together in a marvelous combination to form an elfin beauty that would cause cities to go to war for her.

On a cliff on the other side of the valley, where Han Shuo and Gilbert had stood, Edwin and Belinda were now standing side by side.

The expression on Edwin’s face was incredibly similar to Ferguson and the others below. A stern light flowed out from his eyes, focusing on the little skeleton wielding his bone dagger. His expression encompassed a few gleeful traces of obtaining a heavenly treasure amidst unparalleled shock, and his lips trembled uncontrollably.

“Master Edwin, what’s wrong?” Belinda looked oddly at Edwin, asking the exact same question as Maxine.

“That little skeleton isn’t afraid of the Radiant Glory!” Ferguson and Edwin said at almost the same time with exceedingly different emotions.

“I don’t know how that person has done it, but he must die now. He can’t live for another second!” In all these years, it was the first time that Ferguson had made up his mind to kill someone. An unquestionable resolution filled these words.

On the other side, Edwin took a deep breath in and said gleefully, “He must stay alive no matter what! In the last thousand, hundred years, light magic has always been the bane of dark magic. If the dark creatures no longer need to fear the rays of light magic, then the Calamity Church will completely change the situation and the Church of Light will no longer be able to halt our footsteps forward!”

Belinda immediately woke to her senses after hearing these words as her eyes were also filled with shock and delight. She then looked at Edwin, “What should we do?”

“We need to save him no matter what. He absolutely can’t die!” Edwin said firmly. He’d never wanted to protect someone as bad as he did now!

Chapter 217: A bloody explosion

“Knights of Light, kill them immediately! This person and dark creature cannot be permitted to stay in this world!” Ferguson’s expression was grim as he called out lowly.

The group of knights who’d just surrounded Han Shuo and were about to take him alive were rather surprised by this sudden change of heart. However, they only paused for a second, still intending on executing Ferguson’s orders.

Up on the cliff, Edwin didn’t waste time hesitating, and shot down towards Han Shuo with Belinda. He planned on saving Han Shuo, whatever the cost, and get to the bottom of why that dark creature was unafraid of light magic.

At the same time, Han Shuo suddenly opened his eyes and swept a cold glance around his surroundings, revealing a bizarre smile.

He chanted out a simple necromancy magic, and the little skeleton who’d stayed by his side all this time, vanished without a trace as a beam of black light broke through the skies.

“Farewell, everyone!” Han Shuo smiled after the little skeleton had disappeared.

The blood red light that had been circling around Han Shuo suddenly shot to the heavens after his words, and an enormous explosion rang out.

Increasingly loud explosions, with Han Shuo’s location as the epicenter, began to shake the ground and skies. The entire valley trembled, and the knights closest to the center were blasted to shreds, blood and flesh flying out like shrapnel.

Edwin and Belinda had been descending rapidly when they saw the sudden explosion from below, accompanied by the ear numbing explosions. Waves of evil, blood red light blasted towards their location in the sky, shocking the two of them.

Edwin slammed on the brakes, skidding as he used the levitation spell to grab Belinda. They floundered around in the sky in order to evade the light, and then cast urgent looks to the enormous change down below. Stunned stupefaction filled their face as they looked down incredulously.

When the dust had settled, an enormous hole six meters deep and ten meters wide had appeared where Han Shuo had been sitting down cross legged. A thick sense of blood slowly floated out, along with dark red clouds of air. The only things left were a pockmarked surface and the mangled bodies of some knights by the hole.

Han Shuo had vanished without a trace, and no matter how grimly those remaining searched, they couldn't discover a single trace of him.

Taking a deep breath in, Ferguson restrained his anger and said, "Stop searching. Although I don't know how he did it, that person's left already!"

"Then what should we do now?" Thunder mage Asa asked respectfully when facing Ferguson.

"I need to know everything about this person as soon as possible. As detailed as possible!" A trace of rare anxiety colored Ferguson's tone as he looked back at Asa.

"Understood! We'll do this immediately! Asa responded.

Female archer Maxine roughly understood why Ferguson had lost his composure thus at this time. That someone who could turn the situation around like this had appeared on the Continent meant that this might bring nightmarish effects to the Church of Light.

Therefore, as an important person in the Church of Light, Ferguson would be sure to use all resources available to kill this possibility before it even formed.

"Nice going kid, he's got some moves alright to be able to escape so miraculously!" It was a good thing that Edwin had stopped his descent. Otherwise, he might've been embroiled within it as well. He was delighted to see Han Shuo's miraculous escape and couldn't help but compliment him.

"Master Edwin, this person is enemies with our Calamity Church.

Clarendon died at his hands, and he even killed Johnny!” Belinda couldn’t help but speak up when she saw Edwin’s attitude undergo a 180 degree change.

“What do these grudges matter as long as he’s willing to work with us! All humans have weaknesses, and we can give him whatever he needs. Not to mention that Ferguson’s discovered his peculiarities today, the Church of Light will try to kill him at all costs. Ferguson himself will be helping us in making this person work with us!” Edwin laughed heartily and took Belinda higher up in the skies, slowly leaving the mountain.

There was a lake with a thick layer of ice roughly ten li away from the Rainbow Sickle mountain valley. On this frosty winter day, the lake had been frozen into ice cubes, and the smooth mirror surface glistened beneath the moonlight.

However, a bolt of red light streaked through the sky and descended from the heavens like a falling star crashing down to the earth, slamming violently onto the sturdy ice.

The lake exploded outwards as a huge crater appeared on the mirror smooth lake surface. The waters of the lake began to spurt through the cracks of the ice as the ice began to crumble under the impact.

A slender figure shot out of the crater in the next breath. Han Shuo was sopping wet as he landed on a piece of ice that hadn’t cracked. He immediately sat down and began to adjust his breathing.

Han Shuo opened his eyes after roughly fifteen minutes and huffed out lightly. Dark red, muddy air floated out of his pores like string, and vanished with the gusts of the chilly winter wind.

Han Shuo stood up from his cross-legged position and changed into a dry shirt. He once again took to the air and gathered his bearings, before flying swiftly towards the Valley of Sunshine.

After fully grasping all of Chu Yang Lan’s memories and having reached the bloodlust realm, Han Shuo could now deftly utilize some secret arts.

The “Blood Explosion Shield” was an art that helped one escape. It was usually triggered with blood essence to form a series of explosions, enabling the cultivator to move their body and escape the place of danger in the ensuing sound and chaos.

However, most cultivators wouldn't use this method that would consume a lot of blood essence if they didn't have to. That was because once this was cast, the cultivator would exhaust a great deal of energy due to consuming blood essence and would find themselves in a disadvantageous situation.

However, this hadn't been the case with his casting this time. Having reached the bloodlust realm, Han Shuo's body had naturally produced a violent killing aura after engaging in the massacre in the mountain valley. The aura had naturally attracted the fear and resentment from the mercenaries he'd killed and concentrated it in his body.

The stronger this power became, the harder it became to control. This impending lack of control was what had caused Han Shuo to immediately prioritize his mind's recovery, even in the middle of the battlefield. After suddenly awaking in the middle of recovery, he'd immediately understood that he was surrounded by a group of experts.

At the moment, the violent aura around him was still disorderly and hard to control. He suddenly recalled the "Blood Explosion Shield" in this moment of danger and a thought struck him. He turned this aura into energy and used the energy he'd absorbed as a foundation to cast this art.

In this way, not only had he created a commotion that had shaken the heavens and earth, brutally killing some knights who hadn't had time to react, Han Shuo had also left unhurriedly from the encirclement of the various knights. At the same time, he'd been able to release a power out of his control, and he hadn't harmed himself at all.

When he had again returned to the Valley of Sunshine, Han Shuo felt that his body had once again been miraculously tempered in the slaughter of the Rainbow Sickle mercenaries. Perhaps it was because he'd cast the "Blood Explosion Shield" and consumed the random, disorderly power, but there was a tiny bit of pure power left at the very end that had miraculously been absorbed by the magical yuan.

“It looks like adventuring is needed in order to pick up the pace of improvement!” Han Shuo couldn’t help but murmur to himself when he felt the changes in his body thanks to the fight against the knights earlier.

The metallic sound of battle caused Han Shuo to pay close attention to his surroundings. Coming to a halt in midair, he began to carefully investigate the situation around him.

Having fully developed his brain due to magical cultivation, Han Shuo was quite familiar with the layout of the nearby terrain as he’d committed the entire map to memory. When he listened carefully, he quickly realized where the sounds were coming from, and where he currently was as well.

The clashes were coming from the House of Menlo. This matter might even have something to do with Trunks and the others.

“I should go take a look at the strength of my unknown troops.” Han Shuo murmured to himself and changed his flight path, making for the House of Menlo’s territory.

Chapter 218: A cry from the heart

The House of Menlo was located within a small mountain in the Valley of Sunshine. The center of the mountain had been hollowed out into caves, all interconnected to form a matrix of astonishing defense.

Han Shuo came in from the air and stood on a towering tree tens of meters tall, looking towards the source of the noises.

He saw the caves where the House of Menlo stored their weapons on fire, with thick smoke rising into the air. Tongues of flame flicked out from some of the entrances. It looked like everything was on fire.

These caves each had many stone chambers hewn into them. Each was a room, with all the necessities of life inside. Many of them were even more luxurious than some of the shops within the Valley of Sunshine, so it was very normal for the whole thing to go up in flames once a fire dragon spell was lobbed inside.

A group of masked people were moving swiftly around the entrance to the small mountain. There were some fire mages amongst them who occasionally chanted fire spells, sending gouts of flame towards the mountain entrance.

Their movements were swift and highly coordinated. The fire mages would release fire, the wind mages call up winds to push the fire along, and several archers would force those of the House of Menlo who dared poke their heads out back inside again.

Nevertheless, the small mountain was actually quite large after it had been hollowed out. With so many caves and stone chambers, this band of marauders could only target a section of the mountain. Once Menlo reinforcements arrived, they would immediately split up and conceal their movements, hiding into the surrounding shrubbery for cover. They were obviously very familiar with the surrounding terrain and well versed in these guerrilla tactics. They would quickly retreat whenever someone discovered them and then circle around, coming in from another side to continue wreaking havoc.

Under normal circumstances, this group of people would've been dead without a doubt if they hadn't retreated after the first wave of attacks.

However, the House of Menlo was completely preoccupied at the moment. This group of troublemakers wasn't the main target. Their main focus was on a group of heavily equipped robbers around 500 strong. The robbers' motives were unknown, but they were besieging the mountain and attacking anyone who walked out of it. These two sides were locked in heated battle.

Han Shuo stood in the distance and looked out for a bit, doubled over in laughter as he saw Trunks' men taking advantage of the chaos and adding further confusion. He hadn't thought Trunks would be talented in this regard. The House of Menlo mission this time had only been to make this power suspect the other factions. Han Shuo was a bit surprised at how things had developed.

Even more cavalry with gleaming armor, wielding sharp weapons, came galloping from a path in the distance. Their adornments clearly identified them as those of the House of Menlo. There were roughly six hundred of them, each with an uncommon air to them. They were likely the elites of this house.

The direction that this group was charging in happened to be where Trunks and the others were. Yet to detect the danger they were about to encounter, they were currently planning on causing another round of mischief. Han Shuo finally couldn't sit still any longer and flew to where they were.

The sky was already lightening, and the stars had hidden behind the depths of the night at some point. It seemed like daybreak would come soon. Just as Trunks was about to start on his final round of mischief, a black shadow landed with a "whoosh" in front of him.

He started badly, but breathed a sigh of relief when he discovered that it was Han Shuo. "What are you doing here?"

"I happened to be passing by and saw that the elites of Menlo are about to return. They're going to pass through here. Let's hurry and leave?" Han Shuo smiled slightly and explained the situation to Trunks without further ado.

When he heard that the elites of Menlo were returning, Trunks shouted lowly and gestured at the mercenaries off in the distance.

These fellows were covered from head to toe and immediately understood Trunks' hand gesture. They didn't gather together to leave en masse, but actually spread out even further and made use of the terrain to conceal themselves, slowly vanishing without a trace.

"Let's go!" Trunks didn't remain idle as he turned his head to smile at Han Shuo, darting into the thick undergrowth.

Snow lay heavily on the branches of the towering trees, blocking the sky's light. The densely packed branches made it hard to trave, but Trunks wasn't the least bit bothered. He took Han Shuo down several twisted paths, emerging far away from the House of Menlo's mountain roughly half an hour later on the path to the Valley of Sunshine.

"Those were all old Rainbow Sickle mercenaries. Everything within the valley was under our control when the old chief was still here, and we're so familiar with the terrain that we can navigate it with our eyes closed, so don't worry about their safety." Trunks said to Han Shuo when they'd left the mountain.

Han Shuo had observed the group's operations when he was on high ground earlier. They showed a high degree of collaboration and were all quite strong. Most of them were journeyman swordsmen or sergeant knights, with a few adept mages and swordsmen mixed in. There were many of them with uncommon bow and arrow skills. It looked like things were as Trunks had said, they were the old mercenaries of the Rainbow Sickle band.

With such a group of people and Trunks' plans, the Soul Destroyer mercenary band would have an easy path forward in the future.

"Right, what happened with you, why did robbers come knocking on the doors of the House of Menlo?" Han Shuo couldn't help but ask.

Trunks couldn't hold his laughter in when he heard this question. "We happened to see this band of robbers on our way to the House of Menlo. They were about to rob a caravan. We pointed out the proper path after fighting with them, and they attacked the House of Menlo with our guidance."

"When they finally disturbed those guys inside, the robbers started fighting them. We took advantage of the chaos to create more havoc everywhere else. We'd thought that the robbers would be immediately defeated and had made plans to retreat early, but who would've thought that the elites of the House of Menlo were deployed elsewhere on some unknown business?"

"When the robbers saw that the elites weren't surging out to attack them, they grew more bold and continued to attack. We stuck around a bit longer, and you saw the rest!"

"So that was the case. Are there many groups of robbers like those in the mountain ranges around the valley?" Han Shuo nodded and asked with a faint smile.

"Of course. Since the valley sits where three nations' borders meet,, many merchants seek to do business in the Valley of Sunshine. Therefore, there are many bands of robbers in the vicinity as well. Two of them even number in the thousands, and they're made of wanted fugitives from the three nations."

"The leaders of the two bands of robbers are a man and a woman. The man is called Gustav, nicknamed the Butcher, an infamous criminal in the Kasi Empire. He kills without blinking and is exceedingly brutal. If a merchant caravan runs into his crew, then they're truly unlucky. If his mood is fair, all the goods and beauties will be taken away, but if his mood is ill, no one is left alive."

"Florida cooperated with Gustav that year to scheme against our old chief, killing him and causing my little sister Annie to disappear. I'm going to kill him sooner or later!"

"There's another woman called Janet. Eh, she's basically inherited her father's business. Her father was a robber, her grandfather was a robber, and her great grandfather was also a robber. They're a notable family of robbers in these mountain ranges. She's been raised as a robber as soon as she was born, and although she's not a kind sort, she still has certain principles. As long as the merchants who run afoul of her don't resist, they're usually able to retain their lives!"

"Apart from these two, there are about a dozen small to mid-sized robber groups in the mountains. Their scales of operation are smaller and they're not as famous as these two." Trunks explained.

Han Shuo listened for a bit and then asked further about the strength of the robbers before nodding, "It looks like the robbers and mercenaries in the Valley of Sunshine mutually depend on each other. Whether it's the robbers or the mercenaries, both of these are vital for the ecosystem of the valley!"

"What do you mean?" Trunks asked.

"Merchants won't need protection if there are no robbers. Therefore, the mercenaries won't be able to make any money. Without mercenaries, the merchants wouldn't dare come here, and thus the robbers won't have anything to take. Therefore, it's completely logical that both mercenaries and robbers can be found within the valley."

"With the strength of the four factions in the Valley of Sunshine, they should have the ability to destroy the robbers. However, perhaps it's because they understand this that they haven't done so and have allowed the robbers to exist." Han Shuo smiled and explained.

Trunks chuckled after his words, "That's right, the old chief understood this back in the day, to think you'd understand that so quickly as well!"

Nodding, Han Shuo looked at the sky, "Let's go, it's late. We should hurry back to the valley, I want to take a look at some things as well."

Ever since the Rainbow Sickles had left, Han Shuo had felt a voice calling him from afar. He'd thought that it was the little skeleton running into trouble again at first, but after some careful probing, realized that this wasn't the case.

When he focused his attention, Han Shuo discovered that the voice was coming from the Dark Forest. They weren't too far away from the Dark Forest, and the cemetery of death was within it as well.

When he realized that this call was coming from the Dark Forest, Han Shuo immediately understood that the earth elite zombie had successfully broken out of the earth. However, it was confined by the boundary of the cemetery of death and couldn't exit find Han Shuo. It could only passively send out this message to its master.

Chapter 219: Don't worry, I'll take care of him!

Han Shuo and Trunks returned to the Valley of Sunshine.

Gilbert, Emily and Phoebe had already returned to the store that contained the place of extreme water. They were currently anxiously waiting for Han Shuo, afraid that some mishap may have befallen him.

"Are you alright? I didn't think that old guy, Ferguson, would also be part of the Rainbow Sickles mercenary band. Luckily, his main target wasn't us or we might not have returned so easily with Gilbert," Emily exclaimed upon seeing Han Shuo's safe return, a trace of fear lingering in her heart.

"Mm, contrary to what you think, Ferguson minded the events of tonight very much. There is no way the Rainbow Sickles mercenary band will quietly endure the losses they suffered tonight. We must be more careful!" Han Shuo understood that the Rainbow Sickles mercenary band were not weak; the reason the chaos in the valley had happened then was because none of their high-level experts had been present. Otherwise, it would have been impossible for them to stir up such a massive disturbance.

"What happened afterwards?" Phoebe and the two others had left early so they were unaware of what had transpired later. She couldn't help but inquire after seeing Han Shuo come back safe and sound.

"Nothing of significance. After you left, I also escaped under the cover of the chaos," Han Shuo replied.

Continuous pleas tugged at Han Shuo's mind and heart, emanating from the distant Dark Forest. Since there was nothing else to address, Han Shuo could no longer resist his curiosity so he said shortly, "There shouldn't be any problems during daytime. Everyone has worked hard throughout the night. While the skies haven't completely brightened, take a short break!"

The moment these words left his mouth, Han Shuo hastily returned to his room. He recited a spell and the small skeleton that had been faithfully guarding him appeared before him, bone dagger in hand.

Han Shuo gave a command and brought out the magic sticks that led towards the cemetery of death. He set up the formation and hastily set a foot inside, activating the formation with his mental strength.

A brilliant flash of white light blinded him as the scenery around him shifted radically in the blink of an eye. Han Shuo stepped out into the hall of the cemetery of death, his eyes greeted by mounds of dirt protruding from the ground. Under the murky darkness of the sky, the dense earth element kept congregating in this bastion of extreme earth.

Like the tumultuous ocean currents, the ground trembled softly as though it were made of waves. One by one, the mounds of dirt bulged and dissipated as the firm dirt turned as soft as sand. There was a deep hole in the center as the dirt seethed, as though an enormous mudfish was twisting and tossing.

The cemetery of death was protected by a special boundary. Without the Eye of Darkness that Han Shuo grasped in his hand, there was no way for any person to enter or exit this place. The moment the earth elite zombie was born, it followed its instincts to search for Han Shuo.

As it turned out, Han Shuo's current location, the Valley of Sunshine, was not too far from the Dark Forest. Hence, the moment the earth elite zombie sensed Han Shuo's presence, it immediately strove to get closer, but was unfortunately blocked by the barrier. Irritated at not being able to leave, the zombie had been churning the ground as though it wanted to use its special abilities to exit the cemetery through the ground.

However, it was obvious that the cemetery of death was indeed a marvelous place with wondrous powers. Despite being a favored son of the earth and having the ability to travel through the earth as it desired, the earth elite zombie could not overcome the restriction. This sufficiently proved that the status of the cemetery of death as a sacred ground for necromancers was definitely not a name given in vain.

"Come out!" Han Shuo immediately called out after he stepped into the cemetery.

Immediately after he spoke, a slightly yellow shadow abruptly emerged from the ground in the center and stood stiffly at attention in front of Han Shuo.

It was still an ordinary zombie warrior, but its appearance had undergone quite a change after being refined by the secret arts of demonic cultivation. The original dark green of its face had faded to a yellow pallor, and its entire body was covered by armor slicked with yellow oil. A faint light flickered its way through it, and a thick sense of earth spirit emanated from the armor.

The yellowish armor had slowly formed after the earth elite zombie had absorbed the earth qi of the land and mixed the qi with several uncommon materials that Han Shuo had provided. The earth elite zombie had refined the mixture along with his body, and so the armor covered all of its skin. The durability of the body was vastly greater than before, and he could use the earth qi to form all sorts of attacks. He could also fly through the earth to conceal his movements or suddenly attack enemies.

The earth elite zombie stood at 180cm with an ordinary, unremarkable face. Its face was split into a wide open grin at this time, revealing an odd smile that was a bit simple. It was looking delightedly at Han Shuo. Like the little skeleton, although the earth elite zombie had a soul, it wasn't able to directly communicate with Han Shuo. He could only make use of the mysterious connection between the two to communicate. The earth elite zombie grinned widely at Han Shuo and waved his enormous hands around, calming the furrows in the earth and restoring calm to the area.

"Alright, I know your abilities, stop showing off!" It was like a mischievous kid, eager to show off its abilities. Han Shuo understood that the earth elite zombie had just formed and that its intelligence was quite low. He'd need to keep infusing it with knowledge so that it would understand more.

The earth elite zombie moved its lips after Han Shuo had spoken and jumped into the center of his hiding place with a flip of his body. The ground shook slightly as the earth elite zombie reappeared, clutching three vaguely shifting shadows.

“Oh, the three yin demons have formed as well!” Han Shuo was surprised and immediately activated the magical yuan in his delight. He sent a beam of black light towards the vague shadows and shouted, “Yin demons, take your places according to my order!”

When the black light hit the three indistinct shadows, strands of black aura appeared around them, making their forms clearer and more distinct.

They had long tails, sharp fangs, and was as large as vicious, wild monkeys. All three had two sharp horns and a pair of bat-like meaty wings. Their faces had evil, deep green eyes that sparkled with a frightening ruthless light. This was the true form of the yin demons.

When their forms grew clear, they flew out from the earth elite zombie's hands and through the air like lightning. Their forms shimmered between tangible and ghostly, changing their shapes at will in the air and emitting soul wrenching howls as they moved.

The three yin demons circled around Han Shuo once and entered his body through the back of his neck with a thought, vanishing without a trace in the blink of an eye.

Han Shuo then smiled and gave his body a shake. Four Han Shuo's appeared in thin air. Apart from his own body, the three were formed by the yin demons. They were truly marvelously incredible.

The earth elite zombie hadn't the slightest clue of what had transpired and was obviously confused. He stood there unmoving, looking dumbly at Han Shuo.

After a while, the earth elite zombie grinned bashfully and moved his stocky figure, instantly standing next to the leftmost Han Shuo. It reached out a left index finger to point at Han Shuo, meaning “I found you!”

There was a marvelous connection between the two, so Han SHuo didn't find it odd that the earth elite zombie could identify him. As he watched the earth elite zombie look at him with an honest smile, Han Shuo's thoughts moved again as the three yin demons transformed back into three beams of black light and returned to Han Shuo's body.

Han Shuo continued to practice quickly transforming the three yin demons into replicas of himself. He repeated this a dozen times until he had a solid grasp on this technique.

The earth elite zombie needed quite a bit of time to identify Han Shuo, but when Han Shuo kept practicing, the earth elite zombie used the connection between the two to identify the real Han Shuo with lightening speed as soon as replicas appeared.

The earth elite zombie thought that Han Shuo was playing a fun game with him and ceaselessly identified the real Han Shuo, not feeling tired or bored at all. It kept grinning with a silly, honest grin and didn't possess the cold ruthlessness that a zombie should have at all. This made Han Shuo some worry about whether or not the zombie could develop quickly.

Han Shuo wasn't Chu Cang Lan, so he couldn't bring this zombie warrior around with him wherever he went and attend all sorts of events. Therefore, Han Shuo thought for a moment and decided to send the earth elite zombie to the dimension that he'd come from.

He wasn't worried about the earth elite zombie's strength. After refinement from his secret arts, the earth elite zombie was certain to become a very useful helper to him. However, it'd just been born from the earth right now and seemed a bit naive and simple. It would need to grow quickly.

The little skeleton seemed to have grown into a strong, omnipotent presence in the other dimension; even Han Shuo wasn't sure of how strong the little skeleton was now. Eventually, one would run into some enemies that one would have to hide from, so it might actually be a very good idea to send the earth elite zombie back home.

"I'm going to introduce a friend to you. He has my presence on him, you'll definitely like him." Han Shuo thought for a moment and smiled at the earth elite zombie.

Han Shuo then used his connection with the little skeleton to chant an incantation, summoning the little skeleton. Once he arrived, the little skeleton and the earth elite zombie stared silently at each other.

The purple eye in the little skeleton was glimmering with vitality, and he seemed quite interested in the earth elite zombie. He walked up to it and reached out a stark white hand bone to pat the honest zombie's shoulder, and used the other hand to pound his own chest, making a hand gesture to Han Shuo.

He seemed to mean that, I'll take care of him, don't you worry!

Please support GDK on NU if you like the novel!

Chapter 220: Saving up for a rainy day

Both dark creatures had Han Shuo's life essence, so they naturally felt a sense of affinity towards each other. He could see threads of empathy slowly begin to flourish between them.

The little skeleton and the earth elite zombie were staring at each other, seemingly in the midst of a broken conversation. After a short moment, they both turned to stare at Han Shuo anxiously.

"Alright, I will send you guys back!" Han Shuo smiled slightly and replied when the two guys simultaneously expressed their desire to leave. With a spell, the small skeleton and the earth elite zombie vanished without a trace.

After the two of them departed, the cemetery of death fell back into silence. The ground settled into stillness, and with the birth of the yin demons, the yin demon cave stopped operating.

Han Shuo looked around and realized there was nothing of further significance in this place. He ruminated briefly before walking towards a valley where the dwarves resided.

"Han! What brings you here?" As soon as he entered the dwarf's valley, these guileless little dwarves displayed their passion and showered him with a continuous stream of friendly greetings.

The last time Han Shuo had come here, the dwarves had obtained a large amount of food and daily necessities from him. Now, all their elderly and young were adorned in thick, cold-resistant cotton-padded clothes, had cozy stoves to warm themselves and enjoyed an abundant food supply to relieve their hunger. Not even the freezing ice storms of midwinter were scary anymore.

Along the way, Han Shuo could detect the satisfaction and contentment brimming in dwarves' faces. When these dwarves saw Han Shuo, their faces exuded thankfulness and welcoming as they bellowed to one another, spreading the news of Han Shuo's arrival.

“Uncle Han, this is for you!” When he made his way to the center of the valley, a six-year old, snot-nosed dwarf kid ran up with a sugar hawthorn stick in hand. The kid presented a piece of barbequed meat, roasted to glistening perfection, in his delicate voice.

“Thank you, dear child!” Han Shuo smiled as he bent down and patted the head of the dwarf child, who was only a few dozen centimeters tall, while taking the piece of meat with his other hand.

The adult dwarves surrounding them all smiled kindly. The atmosphere was extremely harmonious, attesting to the deep sense of goodwill they bore towards Han Shuo.

When Han Shuo entered the center of the village, he saw the familiar faces of the dwarf warrior Bennett as well as the village chief Calvin. He smiled and asked, “Elders. How has everything been recently?”

“Dearest Han, you’ve taken the cold away from this winter! Everyone has warm clothes and enough food. No one will starve to death this winter!” Chief Calvin’s face was filled with gratitude. He faced Han Shuo and expressed his debt using dwarven etiquette.

In the beginning, Han Shuo hadn’t helped these honest dwarves out of the goodness of his heart. But the more he got to know them, the more he understood that these stubborn dwarves were actually very easy to get along with, and their generosity towards friends was unbelievable.

He had won their friendship at an unknown time, but the way they went about their business had also won them his goodwill. He’d planned on just using them in the beginning, but now treated them as good friends that he could depend on.

“That’s good, good! Let me know if there’s anything you need. I’m going to go back to the world of humans soon, and I’ll be able to bring you whatever you need!” Han Shuo had a kind smile on his face as he spoke leisurely with Calvin.

Calvin waved his hands, touched. “No need, we can easily make it through this winter already. We’ll use our own efforts to repay you when spring comes. You know that we’re a hardworking species. Children need to be raised thus since young and we need to avoid instilling lazy habits in them.”

Nodding understandingly, Han Shuo said. “I see. Ah, yes. I’d planned on asking you to refine some weapons and armor for me this time. Would that be inconvenient for you, elder?”

“Han, you’re speaking like an outsider. We’re friends, why would anything be inconvenient! Prey is scarce in winter, and there are very few places in the Dark Forest that we can freely move around in. Forging weapons is our hobby, it would be very fun to make use of our idle time to forge more weapons. This is no problem at all.” Calvin didn’t hesitate at all when he agreed, and he looked rather happy as well.

“Truly, Han. We’ve been wondering how to repay you during this time. Asking us to forge weapons for you now means that we no longer have to rack our brains anymore.” Bennett laughed heartily, expressing the dwarves’ sincerity to Han Shuo.

When he saw that the dwarves were still filled with gratitude at Han Shuo bringing them provisions, as well as their desire to not take advantage of their friends, Han Shuo felt a bit shamefaced at the dwarves’ kindness and honesty.

He’d approached them with ulterior motives at first, and was now rather embarrassed by their outpouring of genuine emotion.

“Mm, you don’t need to do anything for now because I haven’t thought of what kind of weapons I need. I’ll bring the raw materials over next time when I think of what weapons I need!” Han Shuo said.

After departing from the dwarves’ valley, Han Shuo didn’t linger in the Dark Forest but returned to the Valley of Sunshine through the cemetery of death.

When he retrieved the magic sticks and walked out of the room, he discovered that it was completely empty. He was a bit taken aback, and unsure of when everyone had left.

Han Shuo had completely handed over the matters of the Soul Destroyer mercenary band to Trunks, and matters of money to Phoebe. Emily was in charge of all the random Dark Mantle affairs, and Gilbert was Phoebe and Emily's bodyguard.

The setting sun on the horizon left the clouds in the sky afire as dusk loomed. The Cairo mercenaries were everywhere in the valley, taking care of security in shifts, so Han Shuo wasn't too worried about everyone's safety.

Seeing he was the only one left in the storefront and he had nothing else to do, Han Shuo took out the thick tome of necromancy from the cemetery of death and slowly started studying it.

He'd deployed the lost art of the Canopy of Necromancy to great effect on their trip to the Rainbow Sickle hideout last night. If it hadn't been for light grand magus Ferguson's timely arrival, the dark creatures in the vicinity of the spell would've been able to continue wreaking havoc and destruction, displaying uncommon battle strength.

Even after absorbing the memories of necromancer Clarendon from the Calamity Church, there had been no knowledge of the Canopy of Necromancy. He didn't have any knowledge of reviving corpses either.

This meant that the tome of necromancy in the cemetery was the pinnacle of necromancy magic. There was a vast amount of knowledge and spells contained within, including ones that had been lost.

These items were exceedingly useful to Han Shuo. After receiving Clarendon's memories, Han Shuo's understanding of necromancy magic had already reached the level of archmage. He could understand many of the obscure and profession-specific sentences within, and had no need to consult Fanny about anything anymore.

Time always passed by so swiftly when he was studying magic. The sky had grown completely dark in the blink of an eye, and soft footsteps from outside jerked Han Shuo from his reverie.

His thoughts raced as he sent the three yin demons flying outwards. His hasty surveillance revealed that it was Trunks and Gilbert returning together.

“Bryan, good news. I think you’ll be very happy!” Trunks said happily when he walked in.

Starting, Han Shuo was surprised. “What good news?”

“Remember Odysseus and the six others who adventured with you in the Dark Forest?”

“What about them?”

“I saw them enter the valley when I was returning today. Their strength is exceptional, and they have a deep relationship with you. Our mercenary band has only just formed and needs people like them. I think they’d want to join us if you invite them!”

Han Shuo was delighted when he heard Trunks’ words, “Good news indeed. Odysseus and Gordon are two senior swordsmen, with Aphrodite being a water archmage. The thunder journeyman mage, and the elven female archer Nia as well make up an altogether strong team.”

“If they join us, I think our band’s strength will be rounded out immediately. It looks like we are indeed quite lucky, heh heh!”

“They seem to be protecting someone this time. I spoke with them and they said they’ll come by tomorrow and catch up with you. It looks like there will be no problems!” Trunks smiled.

Han Shuo’s brow suddenly furrowed as he listened to Trunks. He looked at a tree not too far off in the distance and said lowly, “Mister Edwin, since you’re already here, come inside for a chat !”

Chapter 221: Refusal to the face

The yin demons had been released into the surroundings, so no movements around the storefront would escape Han Shuo's notice. Even if the other was a dark grand magus, it would be impossible for him to move about within Han Shuo's territory with no one the wiser.

When Edwin and Belinda had landed on the tree in the distance, Han Shuo had already used the yin demons to mark their movement, which had led to him calling them out without hesitation.

Even if Han Shuo had been alone in the shop, the formation in the courtyard would allow him to be completely fearless in front of Edwin, let alone the presence of Gilbert and Trunks by his side.

Edwin and Belinda were obviously stunned by Han Shuo's frightening perception. Dumbfoundness filled Edwin's face as he revealed himself through the thick cropping of branches, looking at Han Shuo in the yard. He called out, "How did you discover me?"

"Nothing is impossible!" Han Shuo shouted back coldly. He then shot a look to the two by his side, revealing a calm smile. He pointed elegantly at a few of the empty seats in the yard and threw his head back to say, "Since you two have the mind to, why don't you come over for a chat? I don't feel any killing intent from you, so it doesn't appear that you're here to kill me this time!"

Having reached the bloodlust realm, Han Shuo now had a keen sensitivity to the natural killing intent that would emanate from experts, perhaps also a function of his own increased desire for blood. Up in the tree, Edwin and Belinda were casting curious and cautious looks into the yard. Their expressions were calm with no hint of killing intent.

Edwin was even more astonished after Han Shuo's words. His look at Han Shuo was full of surprise and shock. He kept trying to read something from his face.

Edwin revealed a wry smile after a while and shook his head, "I'm here with sincerity this time, but I can't see if you harbor an intention to kill me or not. Your yard is too dangerous, so I won't come down for now. Otherwise, I may die thanks to this group of young but frightening children!"

He brought Belinda with him when landing softly on the shop roof, seemingly very concerned about the strangeness within the yard. The two of them didn't dare draw near the courtyard and seemed to be on their guard against any kind of sudden ambush.

To be honest, Han Shuo did indeed wish that the two of them would land in the courtyard. He could then use the formation as well as Gilbert and Trunks' strength to kill them, and save himself the effort of always being on his guard against an ambush from Edwin.

It was a pity that Edwin was a sly old fox and wouldn't easily fall into his trap. Edwin had already investigated the happenings in the shop of the previous night and deeply understood that this shop was fully capable of swallowing people. This was why he didn't dare land inside.

Since his plans had failed, Han Shuo didn't continue his good attitude towards them. His face dark, he said impatiently, "If you're not here to kill me, are you here to cooperate against Ferguson? He's a heavyweight in the church of Light and is now diametrically opposed to you. You're his true target."

"You're wrong! Perhaps you don't even know yourself, but you've become the hated enemy of the Church of Light! They'll spare no cost to make you disappear from this world now!" Edwin looked deeply at Han Shuo and said lowly.

"Oh? Is that so? Ferguson doesn't represent the entire Church of Light. I think my grudge with Florida isn't so deep as to make the entire Church of Light move against me. You're just saying frightening things to raise an alarm!" Han Shuo mocked.

Looking at Han Shuo with a pitying expression, Edwin said slowly, "Your miraculous performance last night made the Church of Light realize your terrifying aspects. Your little skeleton being unafraid of the radiance of light created even more trouble for you. Ferguson will make a move against you even if not for his grandson Florida now, because your existence strongly threatens the Church of Light.”

Han Shuo fell silent after these words. He wasn't stupid, but had simply never thought about this matter seriously before. When Edwin reminded him of this, Han Shuo recalled that the last couple of times necromancy magic had fallen, the Church of Light had seemed to play an important role every time.

Light magic had a fatal effect on the dark creatures of necromancy magic. When necromancy magic was at its peak, hordes and packs of dark creatures had ravaged the lands. The Church of Light had then sent out large numbers of believers to use the simplest of light magic to deliver a devastating blow by bathing the dark creatures in light magic.

Han Shuo thought carefully and quickly realized the truth in Edwin's words. He'd refined the little skeleton and zombies from his secret arts, making them impervious to light magic attacks. This was an intolerable truth to the Church of Light. It looked like he'd unwittingly become embroiled in enormous trouble.

When Edwin saw Han Shuo remain silent, his brows deeply knitted together, and his face becoming darker and darker, Edwin understood that Han Shuo had realized how serious things were. He smiled faintly and reached out a finger to point at Han Shuo. He spoke with an extremely bewitching voice, “I'm sure you know how influential the Church of Light is in the Profound Continent. Apart from the Calamity Church continuously fighting against them, there are very few powers that can withstand them.”

“Don't hesitate. As long as you join our Calamity Church, we can forget all our previous grudges. Our necromancers' study of dark creatures will reach unparalleled levels as soon as you join. Large armies of dark creatures will then raze and loot all the Church of Light strongholds, making everyone and everything fall under our rule.”

“And you, you will become the most respected person in the Calamity Church. You can have anything you want. Wealth, women, and power will all be within your grasp. What a wondrous thing! I'm sure that with your intelligence, you'll be able to imagine the glorious future ahead!"

"Honored master, he makes a lot of sense. Agree!" Gilbert became incredibly excited when he heard about wealth and women.

"Shut up!" Han Shuo glared fiercely at Gilbert and then looked back at Edwin. "My apologies, although your suggestion is tantalizing, I don't think I can agree. The Calamity Church has an awful reputation. I don't want to become a public enemy."

The Calamity Church was a power that everyone hated on the continent. This church hid in the shadows and was a force that no country could ignore.

They possessed a fervent faith to destroy, and a stubborn desire that was hard to understand. They were at odds with all kingdoms and religions on the Continent. If he did join such a church, Han Shuo would become the enemy of all the nations. This was something he was absolutely unwilling to see.

Not to mention that it was very difficult to use magic cultivation methods to refine dark creatures. He would need to expend an enormous amount of resources and manpower. He wasn't sure if he could mass produce light magic resistant dark creatures either. Even if he could, according to the Calamity Church's teachings and canon of destroying all, the Continent would then be enveloped in a shroud of blood and fire and ultimately become a wasteland. This was also something that Han Shuo didn't wish to see.

Han Shuo's unhesitating and resolute refusal perplexed Edwin. He'd planned on trying to further convince Han Shuo, but a beam of black light flashed through the air from afar and shot towards Edwin on the roof.

"You should all die! I'm going to get revenge for big sister Elaine today!" Like a furious tigress, an enraged Emily shattered the air as she sped towards Edwin, staff in hand and hair dancing wildly.

Casting a disdainful look at her, Edwin raised his hand and blocked all attacks with a wall of darkness. He then looked at Han Shuo and smiled slightly, “Don’t be in such a hurry to decline. I think you might change your decision when the Church of Light makes their move.”

Edwin didn’t continue to tarry after he finished speaking, vanishing without a trace with Belinda in the blink of an eye.

Edwin was a grand magus. If he wanted to leave through the air, no one there was capable of hindering him. Emily and Phoebe both refrained from foolish pursuit as they landed in the courtyard.

“What’s going on?” Emily looked at Han Shuo and asked.

He sighed softly with a wry smile. “I’m in big trouble!”

“What’s wrong? What kind of trouble could’ve given you a headache?” Emily had been with Han Shuo for so long but she’d never truly seen him at a loss.

When Han Shuo had described all that had happened, the two girls were also greatly shocked. They immediately understood the importance of the matter and frowned, looks of anxiety on their faces as no solutions seemed to present themselves.

The Church of Light was different from the Calamity Church. They were the most influential religious organization on the Profound Continent, and had a large network amongst the populace. There were a large number of believers worshipping the Church of Light in any country, and their combined influence was stronger than any small kingdom.

“If all of the Church of Light believers are like Ferguson, then I don’t think much of this church either!” Han Shuo sneered dismissively in the end.

“No, there are many who are kind and just in the Church of Light. At least, those I know have characters worthy of admiration. Ferguson isn’t a bad sort either, he just spoils his grandson Florida too much. He often ends up wiping Florida’s butt after some willful action or another. This is the reason for the slow shift in his character.”

“There are many necromancers in the entire Continent apart from the Calamity Church. I think the Church of Light won’t try to kill you as long as you don't join the Calamity Church. Not all believers of light are that unreasonable!" Emily thought for a moment and comforted Han Shuo.

"It's difficult to say. This matter is indeed a bit thorny. But if the Church of Light wants to make a move against me for no reason, I won't be merciful either. No matter what excuse they have, I'll kill someone first if they try to kill me!" Han Shuo thought for a moment and said resolutely.

"Master, no matter what you do, your loyal servant Gilbert will serve you faithfully!" Gilbert didn't miss an opportunity to fawn on Han Shuo.

"Trunks, the Soul Destroyer mercenary band will make all actions in your name in the future. Don't tell anyone the relationship between the mercenary band and me. Otherwise, I'm afraid that with my identity, it would bring unnecessary trouble to the band!" Han SHuo thought for a moment and suddenly said to Trunks.

"Bryan, do you think I'm afraid of some trouble?" Trunks was a bit unhappy and said coldly.

Shaking his head, Han Shuo responded, "Don't think random thoughts. The mercenary band is mine, but don't publicize that for now. You can announce that after I take care of this Church of Light matter. You have to know that our mercenary band has just started at this moment, and I want to expand more quickly as well, so I can't let this matter affect it at this time!"

Trunks' expression returned to normal after Han Shuo's explanation. He smiled faintly and nodded, "You're the chief, I'll do what you say. That's the rule of the mercenary band!"

"What were you two doing today? Why weren't you in the shop during the day?" Han Shuo looked askance at Emily and Phoebe, having settled Trunks.

"I brokered an enormous deal and disposed of everything you gave me. We now have seventy thousand gold coins. Apart from those needed to form the mercenary band, I'm temporarily holding onto the rest for you!" Phoebe said.

“Younger sister Cecilia, one of the three heavyweights in charge of all Dark Mantle matters outside of the Empire, suddenly arrived in the valley today. I immediately went to meet her, and was delayed because we decided to catch up for a while.” Emily looked at Han Shuo and explained. She paused, and smiled faintly, “Because I talked about my cooperation with you, she was very curious about you!”

Chapter 222: Making a move myself hurts the body!

Cecilia was one of the three heavyweights in the Dark Mantle, ascending to her position at a young age. She was legendary within the Dark Mantle, and was greatly admired by all members.

She'd had been traveling to various kingdoms all this time, in charge of foreign policy matters. She rarely made a trip back to the capital if there was nothing urgent.

As a central location between three countries, the Valley of Sunshine was a very special existence. That Cecilia was here meant that she must have an important mission, otherwise she wouldn't have dithered here.

Han Shuo didn't have many designs on this legendary woman, even if she was rumored to be very tempting. He was only a bit surprised when he heard Emily say that she was interested in him and didn't say much else.

"Bryan, I need to talk to you alone. Come find me later." Phoebe stretched and walked towards her own room, murmuring, "What a long day, let's take a bubble bath and relax first."

When Trunks and Gilbert saw Phoebe leave, they immediately started making faces at Han Shuo. Emily curled her lip and gave a very soft, low snort. She was likely a bit angry.

"Trunks, make a list of what weapons our mercenaries will use. I'll ask the dwarves to forge them soon." Han Shuo said to Trunks as he suddenly remembered.

"The dwarves live in a very mysterious place. How did you find them?" Trunks was quite shocked as he looked at Han Shuo with surprise.

"Thanks to some fortuitous occurrences I have a good relationship with a dwarf village, and can ask them to forge some weapons for me. Mm, I can bring this with Phoebe later. She can purchase some rare metals for me so that the dwarves can forge even sharper weapons."

“I see. Alright, I’ll think about it tonight and then give you a list tomorrow.”

Looking up at the sky, Han Shuo said, “Mm, it’s getting late. Everyone should get some rest.”

“Honored master, Miss Phoebe has just returned to her room and hasn’t even started filling the tub with water yet. Aren’t you a little anxious?” Gilbert sniggered lewdly, his voice laced with a double meaning.

“Gilbert, if you really are getting blue balls, I can give you some gold coins so you can go to those alleyways and take care of your issues!” Han Shuo looked sideways at Gilbert and suggested.

Trunks guffawed and clutched his stomach, gasping between laughs, “He already tried today, but even though he was willing to spend a large amount of money, all of the girls in the valley think that he’s an incredible pervert due to his previous actions, so no one dares serve him.”

When he heard that Gilbert really had attempted to go whoring, but hadn’t been able to find anyone willing to serve him, Han Shuo couldn’t help but laugh heartily, “A little lewd dragon is a little lewd dragon alright. It’s too bad he can’t be lewd even when he spends money! You’re truly sad!”

Gilbert’s look of dejection turned to a look of anger, complaining loudly, “It’s all because that you wanted me to collect virgin’s blood that I can’t get any girls. Now you even laugh at me! I feel so shunned!”

“How low, so disgusting!” Emily rolled her eyes at Gilbert with extreme disdain. She snorted coldly and walked off to her own room.

“Hey hey, are you getting something wrong here? Master told me to collect it, why aren’t you yelling at him?” Gilbert cried out loudly, aggrieved when he saw Emily scorn him so much.

“Alright, if you really can’t hold it in, you can fly to a farther city to take care of your needs. I know it’s the personality of you dark dragons. Master is willing to give you gold for whoring, don’t worry!” Han Shuo laughed oddly and ignored Gilbert, heading for Emily’s room.

Although Han Shuo and Phoebe were in a relationship in name, the two of them had yet to develop to that point. Han Shuo could only look for Emily when he had to take care of some bodily needs.

“Eh? Didn’t Miss Phoebe tell him to go visit her? Why did he go visit Madame Emily instead? Eh, is he walking to the wrong place?” Gilbert looked at Trunks and spoke in incomprehension.

Rubbing his chin, Trunks looked as Han Shuo entered Phoebe’s room, a thoughtful expression on his face. He smiled, “Stop poking your nose into your master’s affairs. You should uphold the principle of ‘Talk less, do more’.”

After Han Shuo had entered Emily’s room, he directed one of the three yin demons surveilling the shop to take up guard outside her room. He smiled cheekily and walked further in, laughing softly, “Alright alright, don’t be mad.”

“Go, go find your little Phoebe!” Emily said huffily as she glared at Han Shuo.

“Heh heh, I’d need to find my little Emily first. Phoebe can wait.”

Han Shuo walked to Emily, smiling as he didn’t wait for her to resist. He held her in his arms and his hands roved over her body, invading her luscious curves. When Emily was panting heavily, her emotions took over as she began voluntarily coordinate with Han Shuo’s actions. The two quickly shed their clothes and entangled themselves with each other with an air of familiarity.

When Emily’s body had softened into a ball of cotton candy, exhausted after Han Shuo’s multiple vigorous charges, the bit of ire left in her heart from earlier quickly vanished without a trace. Her skin was flushed red as she curled lazily in Han Shuo’s embrace. Her slender fingers tapped lightly on Han Shuo’s chest as she murmured lowly. “I know I shouldn’t be mad, but sometimes I can’t help myself.”

Running his large hand over Emily’s smooth back, Han Shuo said softly, “It only means that you care about me. You don’t need to explain. It’d be even more odd if you weren’t mad.”

Han Shuo was spooning Emily and murmuring sweet nothings to her, completely forgetting about the passage of time. He'd forgotten what Phoebe had said before. But in the other room, Phoebe had waited a long time after she'd showered and changed. She began to grow impatient when Han Shuo took his sweet time coming.

She put on her clothes and adjusted them, leaving her room and crossing the yard to walk towards Han Shuo's room. She knocked, "Bryan, can I come in?"

Han Shuo had discovered her movements when Phoebe had pushed open her own door. When he saw Phoebe make a beeline for his room, he hastily started putting his clothes on. "Damn it, I forgot what Phoebe said just now."

Deathly afraid of being caught in bed, Emily also had a panic stricken expression on her face as she hastily put her clothes back on and carelessly pulled her hair up into a bun. She urged Han Shuo on, "You should hurry on back. Things'll be bad if she discovers this."

Nodding, Han Shuo walked to a window in the back and jumped out, approaching his own room from the back wall. He then used his cultivation skills to open his window and flipped inside, casting a look over his appearance in the window and opening the door with an awkward expression.

"Why did it take you so long to open the door? I told you to come find me just now; why didn't you come?" Phoebe pouted at Han Shuo and asked suspiciously when she saw that his pants were loose. "What were you doing just now; how come you haven't zipped up your pants?"

Han Shuo's expression was a bit panicked because he felt guilty. Inspiration struck and he hurriedly responded, "No, nothing. I was going to the bathroom."

"I see!" Phoebe giggled and replied understandingly. Smiling, she walked towards Han Shuo and looked coquettishly at him. "You should still pull up your pants properly before opening the door. Look at you now, gosh!"

Contrary to Han Shuo's expectations, Phoebe stooped down with a faint smile as she spoke and reached out to pull up his pants.

However, a strong, odd smell hit her nose from his pants when she did so, assaulting her nose and mouth.

This strange smell made her immediately cover her nose and cry out, "What is this; why does it smell so weird?"

She looked closely at his pants as she spoke and noticed some white spots on the fabric of his thighs. It looked like some liquid had just dried.

Her stunning cheeks suddenly burned hot as she abruptly realized what those spots were. She was so embarrassed that she wanted to find a hole to hide in, standing there dumbfounded as she froze.

;Shit! Damn! I'm dead now! I forgot to clean myself just now. The only other woman in the store is Emily. It looks like the gig's up, Phoebe's definitely going to throw a tantrum.' Han Shuo was apprehensive when his thoughts spun wildly. "Eh... uh.... um... things aren't as you think!" Han Shuo frantically explained as he hurriedly pulled his pants up, unable to conceal the panic in his expression.

Phoebe stood up with a lowered head, as her cheeks and neck burned, not daring to look at Han Shuo. She turned and headed back outside, but suddenly found her voice and her sense of humor as she reached the doorway and murmured in an exceedingly low voice, "Bryan, it's been tough on you. I'm your girlfriend, but you still have to take care of such things yourself. Um... I'm just not ready yet. Give me some more time. Don't do this in the future. I've heard people say that it really harms the body to do this to yourself!"

Phoebe delivered these words with a reddened expression as Han Shuo watched, dumbfounded. She then left like she was fleeing, and rather seemed more ill at ease than Han Shuo.

"Hey hey, things aren't as you imagined!" Han Shuo didn't know whether to laugh or cry as he watched Phoebe's retreating back.

The next day. Morning

Phoebe, Emily, and Han Shuo all had on very awkward expressions in the morning. No one knew what to say.

Particularly Han Shuo. He'd been misunderstood by Phoebe but had no way of explaining himself. Explaining would land him in more trouble instead.

Trunks and Gilbert looked ambiguously at all of them, especially Gilbert. He kept chuckling under his breath and said to Han Shuo, "Honored master, did you have a wonderful night? Aha, I think it must've been one worthy of dreaming about again and again."

"Shut up!" Han Shuo flew into a rage and glared fiercely at Gilbert.

"Bryan, here's a list of weapons. If the dwarves can forge these, it'll definitely greatly increase our men's fighting abilities and passion!" Trunks handed over a scrawled list of weapons.

"Eh, I still have some matters to take care of. I'll be going now." Emily was alright, but she still felt a bit shy after the previous night's events, and so was the first to leave.

"I'm also going to leave too." Phoebe also expressed her intentions when she saw Emily leave.

"Phoebe, wait!" Han Shuo opened his mouth.

Phoebe's face suddenly flushed hotly as she didn't quite dare meet Han Shuo's eyes. She only flicked a shy glance at Han Shuo, "What is it?"

"Eh? The frosty Miss Phoebe can be so shy as well? It looks like what happened last night altered even Miss Phoebe's personality!" Gilbert finally 'confirmed' that something had happened between Han Shuo and Phoebe last night.

"Lewd dragon, don't think everyone is as shameless and perverted as you! I'll stab you with my sword if you keep spewing nonsense!" Phoebe was also enraged as she rolled her eyes fiercely at Gilbert, threatening him with a icy look on her face.

"I need all of these things, buy them for me." Han Shuo took out a list and handed it over to Phoebe, asking her to obtain the written items.

Taking Han Shuo's list, Phoebe assented softly and didn't say anything else before quickly leaving the shop.

Not long after she'd left, Han Shuo was discussing matters of the valley with Gilbert and Trunks when he noticed through the yin demons that Odysseus and his crew was looking around a bit cautiously at the surroundings. They were standing in front of the door, not having daring to enter.

It seemed like everyone in the Valley of Sunshine had heard of this storefront's infamous reputation. Odysseus and them were no exception as they adopted an exceedingly cautious attitude due to its reputation of a curse.

"They're here!" Han Shuo smiled faintly and stood up to open the door.

Chapter 223: Invitation

“Long time no see!” Han Shuo stood outside the door and greeted Odysseus’ group with a half smile.

All six of them cheered when they saw Han Shuo appear, their faces brimming with genuine joy. Odysseus and Gordon even barrelled towards Han Shuo to hug him.

“It really is you! What are you doing here?” The touchy feely Gordon looked at Han Shuo with surprise after he let go.

“Heh heh, come on in. It’s not as frightening as you think, it’s very safe here!” Han Shuo moved aside and gestured for them to come inside.

The six had been rather apprehensive about this place before they’d confirmed that Han Shuo was inside. After hearing his words, they stopped dithering and strode in, making for the center of the yard.

Odysseus’ crew was made of three warriors, two mages, and one archer. Odysseus was a senior swordsman; Gordon and Angelo, journeyman swordsmen; Aphrodite, a water adept mage; Bard, a thunder journeyman mage; and Nia, a female elven archer.

After their last foray into the Dark Forest, not only had they gained incredible treasures, but their strength had reached new heights. From their badges, Han Shuo could tell that Gordon had advanced to senior swordsman, and Bard to adept mage.

“Bryan, this place is Valley of Sunshine’s famous cursed shop. I’ve heard people mention the legends of this place the last time we were here. There’s a warning that no one should enter this shop. How come you’re living here?” Gordon was a straight shooter, completely unable to hide his thoughts. He looked around the yard when he entered the shop and asked Han Shuo as soon as he’d sat down.

“Legends aren’t necessarily real, and those curses could be manmade as well. We’ve been here for so long and haven’t run into any danger.” Han Shuo didn’t explain the blood water demons to them.

“How’ve you been?” As the captain, Odysseus was dependable and upright. He looked at Han Shuo and smiled in greeting.

“Not too bad. What have you encountered since leaving the Dark Forest? Gordon and Bard’s strength have greatly increased, not bad at all!” Han Shuo said.

“We went to Zajoski City after parting ways with you and sold what we’d gained in the Dark Forest. We obtained a sum of money and upgraded our equipment, as well as getting Bard a staff that enhanced his strength. After that, Gordon and Bard reported to their promotion exams since they felt they were ready. After passing the exams, we took some protection missions and arrived near the Valley of Sunshine. We entered the valley this time because we were protecting a merchant caravan.” Odysseus smiled slightly and slowly went over all that had happened since they’d parted ways.

Flicking a glance at Trunks, Han Shuo thought for a moment and looked at Odysseus. “We’re friends here, so I’ll speak candidly. Trunks and I have formed a mercenary band, and there’s only a few members right now. I would love it if you joined so we can increase the size of the band.”

Odysseus and the others were all taken by surprise by these words. They looked at each other, at a loss of how to respond.

Snapping his attention back after being dazed, Odysseus looked at Han Shuo and said, “Bryan, you’re not kidding are you? Why did you think of forming a mercenary band? You’ve always been a lone ranger, and you don’t seem the sort who’d want to form a mercenary band?”

“That’s very true. But we’ve already registered the name. I think if the band is run well, the future will be quite bright. Would you guys be interested in joining?” Han Shuo smiled at Odysseus and asked him with great sincerity.

“Just what’s going on, can you tell me about things?” Odysseus seemed interested, but knew that he couldn’t be hasty and questioned Han Shuo closely.

Han Shuo went over the origin and details of the Soul Destroyer mercenary band. He didn't purposefully conceal the points about Trunks' hatred or Han Shuo's recent run-ins with Florida.

The other five's expression noticeably shifted after Han Shuo had finished, having obviously not anticipated that so much would happen with Han Shuo and Trunks in the Valley of Sunshine in such a short amount of time. They were all very excited and itching to sign up. "I think I need to discuss this in great detail with them before giving you an answer." As the captain, Odysseus naturally needed to ask the other five for their opinions and thus couldn't give a response on the spot.

Nodding, Han Shuo smiled, "I understand, please take a few days to think about it!"

The six and Han Shuo fell into talking about the fun things in the Dark Forest. The six didn't leave until it was almost noon.

Trunks would occasionally toss in a word or two, but Gilbert felt a bit bored sitting there. His shifty eyes kept checking out Aphrodite and Nia. He only stopped, pouting, when Han Shuo glared at him a few times.

"Let's go out for a walk!" Han Shuo said to Trunks and Gilbert after the six had left.

"Where are we going?" Trunks was a bit confused and asked.

"The situation in the Valley of Sunshine is rather complex right now. Our original target was Florida, but now that Ferguson's joined the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band, I think we need to discuss his arrival with Laureton. We can also obtain more information from Laureton to decide our next course of action." Han Shuo said calmly.

This time, the group made their way easily to the Cairo mercenary band without meeting any obstacles. However, before they'd made it past the enormous square, they heard an earth shattering explosion from the depths of the Cairo mercenary band.

When Han Shuo and the others rushed over, they found that a building had toppled over, black smoke spilling out of it. Several charred, bloody corpses were scattered around the building. Standing in the center, the bald Laureton was similar to an infuriated beast, seemingly a step away from going berserk and emanating an exceedingly dangerous aura as he roared at his men.

Harris was standing not too far from the chaos with an equally darkened expression. He seemed to be in a awful mood and wasn't as polite as usual when he saw Han Shuo and the others walk over. He looked angrily and guiltily at the corpses on the ground and seemed to be blaming himself.

"Eh... it looks like we haven't come at the right time." Han Shuo pursed his lips after walking up.

Restraining the anger in his heart, Laureton sucked in a few deep breaths and turned his head to Harris, "Bury these brothers well. I'm going to find out who did this and rip him apart!"

Harris didn't say much as he nodded his head painfully, then started directing the mercenaries who were converging on all sides. They lifted the bodies carefully and started cleaning up the premises.

"Come with me." Laureton had a black face and snorted softly, walking towards the largest building.

It was obvious that the three had chanced upon the aftermath of an ambush on the Cairo mercenary band. They took a close look around but discovered no traces of any enemies, and so had no idea what was going on.

When Laureton entered his own house, he waved his hands randomly around to indicate for them to find a stone stool. He spoke with a darkened face, "The enemy wants to kill me. The room that exploded was where I usually take care of the daily matters of the Cairo mercenary band. I usually go there at noon."

"However, I was delayed by some matters today. When I was ten meters from the building entrance, I felt a strong magical pulse radiate outwards, with the explosion happening immediately. It looks like a magical device was set up beforehand, otherwise, it wouldn't have exploded so timely. I almost died inside."

“There are certainly those who belong to other factions in your mercenary band. This wouldn’t have happened otherwise. In addition, when I was fighting Florida in front of the gates to the Valley of Sunshine last time, the Rainbow Sickles shouldn’t have gotten there so quickly to save Florida. I started suspecting something then, and today, it seems like my suspicions were warranted.” Han Shuo thought for a moment and responded.

“That’s for certain. If I can arrange my men to infiltrate other factions, then the others can certainly do so as well. It was just too dangerous this time, I almost died. I wonder which faction did this.” Laureton growled with a darkened face.

Seeing that Laureton had his own thoughts, Han Shuo said no more. Although Laureton seemed all brawns and no brain, his mind was actually quite calculative. No wonder he could replace the previous Rainbow Sickle mercenary band to be the most powerful in the valley.

“Florida’s grandfather, Ferguson, the light grand magus of the Church of Light has arrived. Florida has also been transferred to another place and I can’t find an appropriate time to make a move against him. I’ve come to find you this time to figure out where Florida has been moved to.”

“Since you have men in the Rainbow Sickles, I think you might know this info. If I don’t know where Florida is, then I have no way to find the most appropriate timing to strike. I’ll need you to tell me where he is.” Han Shuo thought for a moment and told Laureton.

“I already know what happened last night, but since that sly old fox Ferguson has arrived, I think it’d be rather unrealistic to assassinate him now. After your attacks last night, Florida is certainly even more well protected now. Even if you know where Florida currently is, you won’t have the chance to make a move!” Laureton’s expression had completely returned to normal now.

Han Shuo understood Laureton’s words, but now that his three yin demons had formed and he had an earth elite zombie at his beck and call, Han Shuo had full reason to believe that he would still have a chance to succeed after he knew where Florida was, no matter how heavily guarded he was.

“I understand everything you’ve said, but I still hope you can tell me where Florida is.” Han Shuo laughed confidently.

It was obvious that Laureton felt that Han Shuo was overreaching himself. Although he understood Han Shuo’s strength was uncommon, he felt that even if Han Shuo leveraged the power of the Cairo mercenary band, he still wouldn’t have much of a chance to kill Florida.

“Alright, I’ll keep an eye out and send someone to notify you if I have news of Florida.” Laureton’s voice had grown cold as an impatient expression began to appear on his face.

Han Shuo knew there wasn’t much to discuss beyond that and nodded, leaving with Trunks and Gilbert.

“What the hell! We’re doing him a favor and his attitude is so vicious!” Gilbert started complaining loudly as soon as they’d left Cairo mercenary band’s territory.

“If you were almost blown to pieces, I think your attitude would be worse than his. It looks like Laureton was truly frightened today.” Trunks looked at Gilbert and smiled.

“Mm, Laureton was indeed in a bad mood today. I wonder if he’ll be unable to control himself and make a move shortly.” Han Shuo chuckled and paused. “It looks like chaos is growing in the Valley of Sunshine. I think we should change our plans. I’ve got a better idea now.”

Chapter 224: Counter assassination

“What should we do?” Trunks asked.

“The depths of the Valley of Sunshine are too murky, and our power is too weak. We don’t have the ability to fight against any side. No matter what the final result is, control of the valley won’t fall to us. In the end, our mercenary band is too weak.”

“As such, it’s not a wise move for us to become involved at this time. For now, we can set aside our feud with Florida. When they’re injured and bleeding from fighting each other, we can take advantage of that to recruit men to expand our power. The most important thing is to grow our strength and not become involved with them.”

“The shopfront that I need is rumored to be an unlucky place. No matter who’s in control of the valley, they won’t know how to use it, so it’ll remain empty with no one taking up residence. I’ll be able to obtain it sooner or later. There’s no need for us to be confined to one place because of it.”

“Not to mention that Laureton isn’t a kind sort. Our security is far from guaranteed during our stay in the valley. If Laureton loses his temper one day, then we might turn into enemies. At that time, it would be difficult for us to leave the valley.” Han Shuo continued calmly after careful consideration.

“You mean that we should temporarily leave the Valley of Sunshine?” Han Shuo’s comments had been long, but to distill it down in a simple manner, he was advocating that they take a seat on the mountain and watch the tigers fight. After some thought, Trunks was able to grasp his intention.

“We’ll leave the Valley of Sunshine, but not necessarily its sphere of influence. We can imitate the three other factions and expand our influence to the outskirts of the valley. With the gold and your connections, you can make use of this time to recruit more mercenaries. We can slowly increase our strength when they’re busy fighting each other.”

“In addition, I need to leave for a while as well. If I remain here and the Church of Light discovers me, I’ll bring unnecessary trouble to the mercenary band. I can make use of this opportunity to ask the dwarves in the Dark Forest to forge the weapons you need. I’ll pay the forest trolls a visit as well to see if I can get anything out of them.” Han Shuo’s mind was quite nimble as he quickly and calmly made plans.

When Han Shuo had finished, Trunks smiled and nodded. “There are a few more months until the fight for control of the Valley of Sunshine ends. Now that we have enough gold for our base, I can make use of this time to attract more experts to join. Perhaps they’ll be of some use in critical moments.”

“Yepp. Let’s go and discuss things with Emily. We should leave earlier rather than later.” Han Shuo looked at the sky and started thinking about what to do when they leave the valley.

As they made their way back, the streets were bustling. All sorts of bizarre and exotic wares were on display by merchants from various kingdoms, catching the eyes of passersby.

From stockily built orcs wearing thick furs, to beautiful elves with pointed ears, all sorts of races were looking at the items on the streets, trying to identify where their profits would come from.

Han Shuo was moving through the crowd when a sudden sense of danger rose in his heart. It was as if enemies from the shadows had locked onto him with killing intent, planning on giving him a lethal blow.

Having reached the bloodlust realm, Han Shuo had a frightening sensitivity towards other people’s killing intent towards him. Even though he was on the crowded and bustling streets, he could still clearly feel that concealed burst of killing intent. It was really quite incredible.

His thoughts moved as he sent the three yin demons flying out soundlessly, gusts of air drifting through the void, slowly dispersing and moving into the blind spots around Han Shuo, probing for the origin of that killing intent.

Thanks to the yin demons, Han Shuo could clearly see all around him within several meters. He quickly sifted through the people around him, trying to identify the source of the danger.

On the blind spots to the left of a shopfront, a flawless, exquisite face came into view. Like the edge of a blade, the female elven archer Maxine's eyes held a cold gleam. She was looking sharply at him and holding a strangely designed bow in her left hand. She seemed to be waiting for the prime opportunity to deliver a fatal blow.

Next to her stood thunder mage Asa. His face was equally ruthless as he gripped a magic staff in his right hand. He seemed to be ready to make a move at any time.

However, in this crowded and busy street, Han Shuo's group was surrounded by merchants of all nationalities. Conducting an assassination in such an area needed an exquisite, near perfect grasp of timing, or it would be impossible to succeed.

A cold smile suddenly appearing on his face, Han Shuo continued walking forward without a hitch. The three yin demons kept an eye on Maxine and Asa's movements as he considered how to handle their plans.

He suddenly dashed around a corner on the streets. Trunks and Gilbert also vanished without a trace.

Maxine and Asa had seen the three walk forward, but suddenly disappear around a corner. Slightly surprised, they looked at each other. Their hidden bodies couldn't help but join the crowds as they tried to take a look at what had happened around the corner.

"Where are they?" Asa scanned the corner when they arrived and asked with a slight frown when he didn't find them.

At that moment, the streets reverberated with a low howl. A jet black beam of light screamed through the air as it twisted through the crowd. A pair of glistening fangs, at the head of what looked like a gigantic snake winding through the air, came to bite down on the two.

The sudden change completely wrecked their plans. Maxine's thin eyes narrowed into a slit as the Demonslayer Edge shot towards her chest; she dashed upwards towards the roof and fled into the distance without a second thought.

Behind Maxine, a ghastly wail tore its way out of Asa's mouth. The cry galvanized the crowd, engulfing the street in chaos as everyone ducked and sprinted for safety, wanting to flee before the unknown danger arrived.

The mercenaries who were following the merchants and in charge of their safety immediately surrounded their employers before identifying what had gone on in the surroundings.

Thunder mage Asa's right hand, the one clutching the magic staff, had been chopped off because of Maxine's departure. The severed stump spewed blood everywhere.

The Demonslayer Edge sprang back into the air, circling back ruthlessly as it attempted to reap Asa's life as well. However, Asa was still an experienced mercenary. After that first shriek, he kept his mouth shut even in the midst of such horrifying circumstances.

He didn't hesitate. In a situation where he might lose his life in the next second, his empty left hand swiftly picked up his severed right hand as he deployed the levitation spell without pause. He took to the skies and a circle of lightning formed around him, turning him into a electric man.

The Demonslayer Edge once again flew towards Asa as the electric currents sparked madly. When the Demonslayer Edge closed in on his back, the electric currents invaded it, interrupting its charge and stopping it a hair's breadth away from Asa's body. At that moment, a series of crackles and pops resounded from his body.

The electric net that surrounded Asa poured into the Demonslayer Edge with fierce electric power. This threw the magical yuan that Han Shuo had infused into the Demonslayer Edge into disarray. With that, it didn't take Asa's life.

Although Asa hadn't been stabbed to death, the wildly rampant magical yuan within the Demonslayer Edge crashed into him like an enormous boulder. His body trembled like a kite with a broken string, almost plummeting from the sky with his violent swaying. He finally caught himself with a stumble and shakily flew into a room, crying for help.

“Let’s go. Asa’s injured even worse than Florida now. I think it’s becoming more and more unrealistic that the Rainbow Sickles will be able to win out over the Cairo mercenary band in this time’s struggle.” Han Shuo laughed coldly and walked out of an alleyway with Gilbert and Trunks.

“Devious master, why not take this advantage to kill him? We just need to stick him again and Asa will be dead without a doubt?” Uncomprehending, Gilbert looked at Han Shuo in confusion.

“Asa fell into a rest stop of the Cairo mercenary band. Even though the Cairo mercenary band and the Rainbow Sickles are covertly fighting each other, everyone within the valley is under the protection of the Cairo mercenary band. No matter whether the mercenaries want to or not, they’ll have to raise a hand to help Asa. We can’t kill Asa there or we’ll offend Laureton.” Trunks explained to Gilbert.

“Yep. When I ambushed Asa, the Cairo mercenaries didn’t say a word and no one came out of their rest stop to help him. This is already helping us out. You, stupid dragon, should use your brain more and not just think of dirty things from day to night.” Han Shuo lectured Gilbert in an exasperated tone.

“It’s a pity that Maxine escaped. That woman has a very finely honed sense of danger!” Trunks spoke with some regret.

Nodding, Han Shuo agreed. “Mm. It was indeed a bit of a pity that Maxine escaped. Perhaps it’s because she’s adept as she is in assassination that her senses are so keen. The woman hiding in the shadows is much more dangerous than Asa. You must be careful and not give her any openings.”

The three of them chatted as they made their way back to the shop. With the three yin demons around him, no one and nothing could escape Han Shuo’s observation, so they didn’t run into any further trouble.

There were some exotic flowers and grass placed in front of an orc's shop, as well as some exquisitely knotted small trees. One of them had three golden, glittering leaves and milky-white stalks. They were as durable as stalactites and shone with a faint, white luster, immediately catching Han Shuo's attention.

He'd observed this shop through the yin demons. He spoke to the other two, "Come, let's take a look at this shop."

Having long since grown used to Han Shuo's peculiarities, the two of them didn't say anything and followed behind Han Shuo, walking towards the orc's shop.

Several uncommon flora and fauna attracted Han Shuo's attentions. Some of them had refreshing scents, and others had bizarre shapes with vivid colors. Many of the small trees had translucent roots like a beautiful jade. It was a wonder how they'd grown.

Han Shuo drew nearer to the three golden leaves and leaned over to sniff them. A clean scent drifted into his nose and mouth, refreshing his mind. Han Shuo stared at those three leaves, examining them closely for a bit. He reached out and rubbed the rock-like roots, thinking of something with a furrowed brow.

Gilbert and Trunks were staring at Han Shuo with a peculiar expression. They didn't understand his actions at all, and didn't know why he was suddenly interested in such bizarre flora and fauna.

After a while, Han Shuo's eyebrows suddenly twitched as a crazed delight filled his eyes. He observed all of the strange plants even more closely afterwards, his whole being filled with an unspeakable excitement like he'd suddenly picked up some treasures.

Gilbert and Trunks looked at each other, unsure of what Han Shuo had discovered. They stood there and watched his strange performance, completely befuddled.

Sweeping his eyes over the wares in front of the door, Han Shuo took in a deep breath and said to Gilbert and Trunks, "I need these special plants. Come, let's see if there are other gains inside."

His excited expression slowly returned to normal after his words as he walked inside.

Chapter 225: A heavenly treasure

The shopkeeper was an old, yet tall and strong orc. Even in the heart of cruel winter, he just had on a thin shirt. Thick hair covered his coarse skin as he lazily rested in his shop.

There were many exotic plants everywhere in the shop. These strange flowers and grasses came in vivid colors, and the shop was filled with a refreshing scent.

Han Shuo only flicked a slight glance at the old orc as he walked in and started looking amongst the plant life himself, identifying them, and looking for what he needed.

In Chu Cang Lan's memories, he'd spent a lot of time researching the methods of pill refinement. He'd also refined some pills himself.

However, apart from a pill cauldron and a recipe being of the utmost importance in pill refining, the next most important thing were the ingredients. The more precious the pill, the rarer the ingredients. Most of them were heavenly treasures, and one needed them in sufficient quantity to refine the pills.

This time, the leaves glittering with a golden color in front of the old orc's shop with roots like rock had attracted Han Shuo's attention.

Using the methods in his memories, he began to closely examine the fauna in order to identify them. After careful scrutiny, he was able to confirm that these strange plants were the ones that only grew in caves with stalactites. These were Goldmarrow Grass that had formed after absorbing the rock essence within the caves for a hundred years as well as the yin qi of the heavens.

Goldmarrow Grass was a heavenly treasure of great yin. If combined with a couple of other ingredients, one would be able to refine the transformative Reform Pill—a pill that would thoroughly excavate all of a mortal's bones and meridians, completely transforming their body to make it suitable for demonic and magical cultivation.

There was also a small ruby-colored tree with several red fruits on its branches. The flaming fruits were round and translucent, sparkling with a faint crimson light beneath the sunlight. They each seemed to be like a miniature sun.

When Han Shuo looked at them closely, he grew even more certain that these were the fire attribute treasures, Sunblaze Fruits. If someone cultivating the fire attribute ate this fruit, then their strength would increase immensely for a short amount of time thanks to the power of the sun filtering down to them.

However, if someone not inclined towards the fire attribute ate the fruit, they wouldn't be able to hold up under the fiery power within and would be burned to a crisp by the fruit. When he turned to cinders, the spirit power of the fruit would slowly dissipate into the skies.

Apart from the Goldmarrow Grass and the Sunblaze Fruit, Han Shuo also discovered other treasures such as the Dragonfly Fruit, Hundred Year Vine Heart, and Extreme Frost Grass in this shop. These were all precious materials that pill refiners needed. Han Shuo naturally wouldn't let them easily out of his sight now that he'd discovered them.

After a while, Han Shuo laid out all the exotic spirit plants he knew on the counter in front of the old orc. He smiled, "Elder, how much do these go for?"

The old orc had been long since keeping an eye on Han Shuo's movements as he lazily sat there. He finally stood up when Han Shuo placed these items in front of him.

Contrary to Han Shuo's expectation, the stocky old orc didn't immediately name a price. He looked at Han Shuo with interest instead and asked, "Do you recognize these items and know what they're used for?"

The old orc's voice was raspy and resonant, seemingly a bit awkward when he formed the syllables of human speech. His two nostrils huffed with air as he spoke, looking a bit odd.

"No, I just think they're a bit strange and wanted to take them home for some further study.” Han Shuo smiled. The old orc was a bit disappointed when he heard that Han Shuo didn’t recognize them. He muttered self deprecatingly to himself, “Of course. So many pharmacists had no idea what this is, how would you know what they are?”

Pointing at the Sunblaze Fruit, the old orc said to Han Shuo, “Curious human youngster, these things aren’t fun at all. They grew out of an area of poor dirt in our home and no one dares play with them. For instance, this red fruit? Even if some fierce beasts eat these fruits, they’d be burned to death by poisonous flame.”

“And, these strange flowering grasses. You’ll be able to feel a bone deep chill if you place your hand on their leaves. Whoever eats them freezes into ice cubes. You’re not a pharmacist, so you should probably not try to mix them up. According to what I know, some pharmacists suffered great harm when they tried mixing these.”

It was obvious that the old orc didn’t know the marvelous effects of these heavenly treasures and treated them as scary poisonous grass. The Sunblaze Fruit and Extreme Frost Grass were treasures of utmost heat and cold. Ordinary people would indeed be injured if they ate them since they couldn’t digest the spirit power within. It was normal for him to have this kind of misconception.

Laughing lightly, Han Shuo smiled, “Don’t worry, I’m not using these myself. It’s just that I know a good pharmacist who’s good with exotic plants. I just want to give these to him. Of course, I’ll remember your reminders and tell him the peculiarities of these plants.”

“Then alright. It was very difficult for my children to bring them over from the far barren wastelands. Give me a hundred gold coins for all of these. This is a fair price. Some pharmacists would be greatly interested in them and be willing to spend a great deal of money to buy them.” It was obvious that the old orc didn’t know what these items could be used for in the hands of someone like Han Shuo. A hundred gold coins wasn’t even enough to buy one of their leaves.

In consideration of the orc’s kind reminders, as well as the possibility of obtaining more of these plants in the future, Han Shuo generously threw down five hundred gold coins. “Thank you for your reminder, elder. Your kindness was worth four hundred gold coins. Otherwise, my friend might’ve ended up in trouble. Mm, if you have more of these plants, please bring them from the barren lands. I’ll come over when I’m free and purchase them for high prices.”

“Oh, honored guest, your generosity will be rewarded. Thank you!” The old orc emotionally accepted a bag of five hundred gold coins. His gaze at Han Shuo was quite different as he spoke happily.

“Wait a second.” A clear shout suddenly came from outside the door as a beautiful girl, one that made all three guys sigh, sashayed in.

She had a tall and slender body that was covered by a light purple dress. Her brown hair flowed like a waterfall as a pair of limpid eyes lay gently beneath her delicately arched brows. She had a charming nose, and small red lips that dotted her face. Her flawless, tender skin and oval shaped face rounded out all the elements that a beauty should have.

She looked only in her early twenties, but had the air of one used to holding power and having weathered many a disaster. Although she wasn’t purposefully revealing it, she had a natural gravitas to her bearing, as if she could easily decide someone’s life or death.

“Hi, beauty, talking to me?” Gilbert blew a sharp whistle and looked at the lady with excitement as he flirted with her.

“Not you!” She flicked a glance at Gilbert and responded calmly without looking at him again. She walked towards Han Shuo and raised a slender finger to point at the Extreme Frost Grass. Her limpid eyes looked at Han Shuo as she said, “Can you sell that poison grass to me?”

Shaking his head, Han Shuo smiled, “I’m sorry, no!”

The beauty looked askance at Han Shuo after hearing his rejection. She hadn’t thought that Han Shuo would reject her so decisively. Her pretty brows knit together as she asked again, “I can pay a hundred gold coins just for this blade of grass!”

He shook his head again and confirmed, "I'm sorry, not selling!"

Having met with rejection twice, she knew that there was no chance she would be able to obtain the grass. She looked meaningfully at Han Shuo and said with disdain, "A man with no chivalry. It looks like Emily's words weren't that true." It was Han Shuo's turn to be surprised after hearing those words, "Are you Mistress Cecilia?"

Nodding her head coldly, Cecilia threw her head back and looked at Han Shuo, speaking proudly, "That's me. Mister Bryan, what will it take for you to give me the grass?"

"Nothing!" Han Shuo responded and smiled, "It's very nice to meet you, Mistress Cecilia. Good day!"

Han Shuo didn't even look at Cecilia after he finished speaking, circling past her to unhurriedly walk outside the shop.

Chapter 226: Violence

“Honored master, this doesn’t seem like your style. How come you’re suddenly so indifferent to a beauty?” Gilbert spoke, a look of utter confusion on his face.

“First of all, I have a use for the grass, so I won’t be giving it to her. In addition, Cecilia throwing her weight around in front of me just because her rank is higher than mine is the kind of attitude that really leaves a bad taste in my mouth, so she won’t get anything from me.”

He’d heard from Emily that Cecilia was a priest and had also focused on pharmacy. Her talent in the area of medicine was quite high. Although she didn’t take the front line in combat, an expert priest and pharmacist like her would be of the utmost importance in critical times.

A person like her could enable the warriors and mages to recover their energy swiftly in battle, and could use some priest magics and medicines to quickly stabilize wounds, allowing allies to return to the battlefield in short order.

Han Shuo didn’t tarry outside after leaving the old orc’s shop, returning to his base of operations. Phoebe and Emily were bathed in the setting splendor of the sun and sitting lazily on two large chairs in the courtyard, chatting happily about something.

When he walked in, all eyes shot to him. After a day’s passage of time, the two girls had natural expressions on their face and didn’t have the awkwardness from the morning. Beneath the rays of the evening sun, their charming faces were tinged with red. With eyes full of tenderness, and a blush on their cheeks, they looked like two stunningly cute wives waiting for their husband’s return.

In that instant, Han Shuo’s heart was suffused with warm contentment. He felt that both women were so beautiful, and if they could still interact so harmoniously after the truth was revealed, that would be wonderful for any man.

“What are you thinking about, standing there with a silly smile?” Phoebe would only appear friendly and down to earth when interacting with Han Shuo, that gentle tone only for him.

“No, nothing!” His beautiful wish could only be thought about at the moment. From Phoebe’s personality, she wasn’t the sort who would easily compromise. Therefore, Han Shuo maintained a natural expression on his face in case he made her unhappy.

“Bryan, I’m afraid I’ll have to leave first this time. I’ve just received a mission that I need to coordinate with younger sister Cecilia. I can’t stay in the Valley of Sunshine any longer!” Emily looked at Han Shuo longingly as she spoke apologetically.

He first blanked, and then thought deeply. Han Shuo understood that as a senior executive of the Dark Mantle, she did indeed have many things she needed to do and couldn’t stay in one place forever. Nodding, Han Shuo revealed an understanding smile. “I understand. It’s unsuitable for us to stay in the valley in the short term as well, so I’m preparing to leave too.”

As Phoebe and Emily stared in surprise, Han Shuo quickly repeated the reasoning he told Trunks and the others, laying out their gains and losses. Since his decision was correct, he quickly gained Phoebe and Emily’s agreement.

“Then, what should we do next?” Phoebe focused her beautiful eyes on Han Shuo’s body as she asked softly.

“Being in charge of the Boozt Merchant Guild, I don’t think you can keep staying in the valley either. Why don’t you go do your own thing? I’ll take care of a few matters and then go find you in the capital. Trunks has enough gold for now. I think with his abilities and connections, he’ll be able to build up his strength better staying in the outskirts of the Valley of Sunshine.”

“Alright. It looks like we’ll need to temporarily separate for now. Here, these are the items you needed. The Valley of Sunshine is a remarkable place. It looks like you can find whatever you want as long as you’re patient!” Phoebe took out a pile of exotic ores and some rare metals from her space ring and placed them in the center of the yard, smiling at Han Shuo.

These were the items that Han Shuo wanted to pass onto the dwarves to forge weapons, and some he wanted to keep for personal use as well. He was planning on refining some small treasures in his spare time. Phoebe had already given him the materials to refine the wood elite and water elite zombie earlier.

Now that all the materials for the wood elite zombie had been collected, it was a perfect time for Han Shuo to head towards the forest trolls' sacred ground and start the wood elite zombie in the place of extreme wood, aiming to form it as soon as possible.

"Oh right, Trunks. Keep an eye on Odysseus and the others. I don't know how long they'll need to consider. I think with your familiarity of the valley, you'll be able to contact them at any time. I've already explained the situation to them. It's up to them if they want to join the Soul Destroyers or not." Han Shuo said to Trunks after thinking for a bit.

"Don't worry, I know what to do. The Valley of Sunshine and the Dark Forest aren't too far away. I think it won't be too difficult for the two of us to remain in touch." Trunks smiled faintly.

Han Shuo and Trunks had already decided on a point of contact between the two locations on their way back. Han Shuo didn't tell him about the cemetery of death, but gave him a marker for the waterfall where he often trained.

The group of five thoroughly discussed the details again. Han Shuo and a few would slip out under the cover of night. Thanks to Gilbert, they wouldn't need to leave through the entrance and could slip away soundlessly. Only Emily would stay behind for another day as she needed to leave with Cecilia. She could also give Laureton a heads up as well.

The four immediately split up after leaving the Valley of Sunshine. According to Han Shuo's instructions, Gilbert flew Phoebe to the City of Zajoski, helping her use the transportation matrix there to safely return to the Empire's capital and then reconvene with Han Shuo at the cemetery of death.

Trunks bid farewell to Han Shuo and moved into the depths of the forest, vanishing without a trace in the blink of an eye.

Han Shuo strolled leisurely in the direction of the Dark Forest after parting ways with his group, not even employing the Art of the Demonic Ninth Heaven.

He was planning on purposefully revealing his movement this time so he could attract Ferguson's attention, so that the latter wouldn't keep pursuing Trunks because he didn't know that Han Shuo had left.

His expression was easy and carefree on the path out of the Valley of Sunshine. He traveled on foot, without any steeds, and seemed wholly unaware that he'd become a target beneath the pure moonlight gently falling from the night sky.

The four great powers in the Valley of Sunshine patrol everywhere at critical moments to prevent any accidents from happening. When Han Shuo took the initiative in exposing himself, everything seemed to fall into place. By using the three yin demons' surveillance, he easily found several groups of people trailing him.

When one of the pursuers seemed anxious and left swiftly with his companions, running towards the location of the Rainbow Sickles, Han Shuo understood that the Rainbow Sickles would arrive very quickly. Furthermore, Ferguson from the Church of Light was also guaranteed to drop everything on hand to deal with Han Shuo. He was the most dangerous "latent threat" after all. With the three yin demons at his side for surveillance, the little skeleton and earth elite zombie as backup, and being at the bloodlust realm, Han Shuo was confident that he could leisurely escape any encirclement with the extremely fast Art of the Demonic Ninth Heaven.

Therefore, Han Shuo acted very casually the entire time. He walked serenely towards the direction of the Dark Forest, waiting for Ferguson's group to hurry over. He would then move away from the Valley of Sunshine during their pursuit so that they would understand he was leaving the valley.

In the depths of icy winter, the accumulated snow on top of the mountains revealed a freezing world, wrapped in silver beneath the bright moonlight. It didn't seem overly dark even at night, as the reflection of the moon and snow caused the silvery white world to appear so silent and beautiful.

Under the moonlight, Han Shuo's lone figure cast a long shadow on the ground covered in the silvery white snow. Even some of greediest of merchants weren't willing to go out on such a cold night. Thus, even on the busiest roads, he didn't meet a single merchant caravan.

After leaving the main path, Han Shuo continued into the vast Kerlan Mountains. After he had walked for more than an hour and had arrived at a rather dense forest that was even more remote, Han Shuo discovered, through a yin demon, a small merchant caravan that was being furiously destroyed by cruel bandits. There weren't that many bandits, just a dozen or so, but each one of them was beyond vicious. They were shouting savagely, completely ignoring the merchants' pleading and slaughtering the men with sneers while they robbed the carriages. Several young women were stripped completely naked, and helpless screams wailed out as they were all forcefully pressed onto the trees beside the carriages as they were raped. To hear their cries was to feel one's heart bleed.

There were several muscular men that looked like mercenaries on the ground around the merchant group's carriages. They'd been decapitated and their blood had already dried, dying the ground in a dark red color. It looked like they were the guards killed in the first wave.

It was clear that the small merchant group had taken the risk to travel through the night, thinking they wouldn't be noticed by bandits in the dead of winter's night whilst taking such a silent and small path. Who were they to know that they'd made a mistake, and met with a small group of bandits. This was why such a cruel situation had arisen.

Han Shuo was not a very kind person. He had watched calmly as he once directed forest trolls to pillage places, but he'd never killed the innocent, and would never do anything atrocious like raping women. They say that bandits have their own morals, and Han Shuo did feel like he did as well.

However, the merchants had already given up all their merchandise, and were kneeling on the ground, begging while continuously kowtowing. Despite that, they were still decapitated by the laughing, sneering bandits. Han Shuo could not hold himself back after seeing this sort of situation, these wretched actions by the bandits that disregarded rules. This completely infuriated him.

Without any greeting or bullshit, Han Shuo, who had seen all the atrocious deeds through the yin demons, burst onto the scene. Due to his anger and intent to kill, a thick, demonic aura smashed onto the scene in a dominating manner alongside Han Shuo.

Han Shuo had a hideous expression on his face, his eyes crimson. His cold and ferocious expression was extremely terrifying, as his aura couldn't help but surge outwards. He used his hand to slice towards the neck of one of the bandits who was raping a woman.

The left hand that he'd chopped out with shone like dark jade, a shining sharp knife. With a "pfft" sound, the bandit's head flew upwards as his neck spurted blood everywhere.

"Ahhh..." A terrified scream rang out from the mouth of the woman underneath the bandit. The woman who'd been suffering through all this suddenly saw the person on her body lose his head, as blood splashed all over her. She couldn't help but scream in abject horror.

"Who is it that dares poke their nose into our business?! Don't you know that our boss is the Butcher?" A bandit with a mustache, that was just about to kill a merchant, suddenly turned his head back and roared.

As expected, it was Gustav the Butcher's people. Of all the bandit powers around the Valley of Sunlight, only Gustav the Butcher's bandits would be so savage and ignore the rules!

Han Shuo didn't wasting time blathering, letting his actions speak for themselves. His darkened face and flood of killing intent was frightening as he revealed the ruthless side of a demonic cultivator in front of these brutal robbers.

He charged the man and sent a fierce punch crashing down on him before he could react. The punch closed in like a sharp mallet, punching a hole through the mustached robber. When Han Shuo pulled out a fist dripping with blood, even the robber's crushed organs could be seen through the enormous hole.

Han Shuo's heart was filled with fury as he panted heavily, like a demon king who only had slaughter in his eyes. He used a violent, perverse ruthlessness to rip the robbers to shreds. He tore one robber apart with his bare hands, and crushed another's bones with one blow from his fists, hot blood spraying all over him.

A bloody whirlwind blew as the dozen or so robbers were turned into stray pieces of flesh. Compared to the innocents they'd killed, their downfall was so much more frightening. Not a single corpse remained whole.

Han Shuo made use of the yin demons to discover where Ferguson and Maxine had gone. He suppressed the bloodlust in his heart and walked heavily towards the Dark Forest, not spending another second in the carnage strewn scene.

Chapter 227: Leaving with ease

A broad river blocked the way to the front. The river's waters surged and frothed, rushing to a plane of lower elevation.

Han Shuo stood in front of a towering tree, panting heavily, barely managing to suppress the wild craziness in his heart. His eyes were blood red as he looked back at the two slowly approaching him.

Their figures gradually became clearer beneath the bright night sky. Ferguson was using magic to bring Maxine along with him. They appeared in Han Shuo's vision like two floating clouds.

"You're finally here, I've waited a very long time!" Killing intent billowed and weaved around him as a blood red light encircled Han Shuo's body. This crimson light was the strange energy of fear and resentment that had been naturally absorbed by his body when he killed the robbers just now.

"Although your methods are cruel, you did save those people just now, meaning you're not an immoral person. I've already investigated you and know you're not from the Calamity Church. But the matters that you hold in your hands are too dangerous for this world, so I must capture you and imprison you forever in the Church of Light. Rest assured, I won't take your life!" Ferguson's body flew to a nearby branch as he looked calmly at Han Shuo.

The female elven archer Maxine's charming body alighted gracefully, notching an arrow as she did so. As she took aim at Han Shuo, a feeling of danger suddenly surged in his heart and he couldn't help but cast a few more glances at Maxine.

"The Calamity Church has nothing to do with me, and I have no way of using my knowledge to reform large amounts of dark creatures. I can tell you clearly that I won't be joining the Calamity Church. In fact, we're actually enemies. However, if you keep pursuing me, I won't care if your reputation is good or bad, I'll kill whoever threatens me without a moment's hesitation." Han Shuo repressed the mad thoughts in his heart as he spoke viciously with a scowl.

“Sorry, not killing you is already my biggest concession. I can’t allow you to leave, because what you hold is too dangerous for us.” Ferguson shook his head and responded resolutely. It looked like there was no room for negotiation.

Laughing wildly, Han Shuo nodded. “Since this is the case, there’s nothing for us to talk about then. I won’t go easy on you if you dare make a move!”

Han Shuo rose into the air before he lost his reason and transformed into a beam of red light, flying towards the Dark Forest.

Whoosh!

Maxine shot out the arrow that she’d long since notched, and it fractured the air like a bolt of lightning. An ear piercing howl followed it as it closed in on Han Shuo like a shadow. It didn’t seem like it would stop until it tasted blood.

Grand magus Ferguson also didn’t remain idle. As Han Shuo’s body catapulted itself through the air, Ferguson waved his staff, sending a blinding light shooting towards Han Shuo. The current of energy gave Han Shuo a dangerous feeling.

He’d been shooting through the air when he felt the attack near. His charging body suddenly screeched to a halt as he activated the Demonslayer Edge with a thought, sending it careening out of his sleeve to intercept Maxine’s arrow. Han Shuo circulated his magical yuan and focused the violent aura around him onto his right arm.

A bloody glow radiated from his right arm as that enormous strength hurtled towards the beam of bright light with a force akin to the raging river beneath him.

A resounding explosion accompanied the resplendent clash of white and blood red light, blooming in the air like a wondrous firework. There was a strange and fey beauty to it.

Han Shuo’s body tumbled from the sky like a rock in the aftermath of this magnificent sight. He fell audibly into the river and was instantly swallowed by the raging waters.

Ferguson and Maxine hovered above the spot Han Shuo had impacted the water, waiting. They looked at the water, not quite sure what to do.

They waited for quite a while as the river churned and frothed. Han Shuo had seemingly vanished without a trace, with nary a hint of surfacing from the river waters. Ferguson and Maxine were both incredibly astonished.

“With the strength that he displayed, he can’t possibly have died that easily. Why hasn’t he floated up onto the river’s surface? There’s no way he can go so long without breathing!” Ferguson looked around his surroundings with astonishment as he faltered, uncertain.

“Perhaps he’s already dead. He would’ve surfaced a long time ago otherwise. No one can go that long without breathing!” Maxine was also greatly confused as she guessed hesitantly.

“He must’ve been swept downstream if he hadn’t died. Come, let’s go downstream!” Ferguson was certain that Han Shuo was no longer there after a while and flew in the direction of the river’s flow with Maxine.

After the two had vanished, dark grand magus Edwin and the female alchemist Belinda walked out of the shadows of a towering tree.

“It was a good thing that we were a ways away. Otherwise, we would’ve been discovered by that old fox Ferguson. It looks like Bryan’s met with a lot of trouble!” Edwin’s heart was still pounding.

“With Ferguson and Maxine both attacking him, he must’ve been knocked into the river. He hasn’t emerged for such a long time, perhaps he’s already dead!” Belinda guessed the same as Maxine as she looked down at the frothing waters.

Shaking his head with a smile, Edwin said resolutely, “No, he’s definitely not dead! Bystanders have the clearest sight, and I noticed a couple of details that were off while they fought. Although Bryan’s weapon also fell towards the river along with Maxine’s arrow after they clashed together, its path was steady. According to what you saw before, his weapon must still be within his grasp. This means Bryan hadn’t fallen into the river unconscious, nor is he dead, otherwise he wouldn't have been able to control his weapon!"

Belinda thought back with surprise after hearing Edwin's words, and agreed, "That's right, he must still be alive!"

"Heh heh, the stronger he is and the more he can protect himself, the more advantageous it is for us. We'll have the chance to grab him as long as he's not dead. He's certain to appear again. Before that, we'll need to understand all that we can about him. We must have him!" Edwin left with Belinda after a low cackle.

In a place far away from the spot where Han Shuo had fallen into the broad, surging river, a figure shot into the air like a sharp arrow, decorating the air with a spray of water. After getting its bearings, it shot towards the Dark Forest.

Edwin's judgement had been entirely correct. Han Shuo's concentrated aura on his right hand had completely defended against Edwin's strong light attack. He hadn't been injured at all. He'd recalled the Demonslayer Edge into his hand before he'd fallen into the river and flown along the depths of the river, avoiding Ferguson and taking to the sky again after.

Han Shuo had been planning on fighting Ferguson, but thanks to Edwin's haste and desire to see everything, he'd revealed himself to one of the three yin demons. This changed Han Shuo's mind as he then decided to hide in the river and hasten away from that place of trouble.

With Han Shuo's strength, as well as the little skeleton and earth elite zombie, plus his magical cultivation and necromancy magic, even though he might not have been able to triumph over Ferguson and Maxine, he was confident that he'd be able to leave at will. The two of them would never be able to stop him.

However, Edwin and Belinda's appearance made Han Shuo have to give up the idea of a pitched battle. To Han Shuo, those two from the Calamity Church were just as irritating. If they ambushed him while he was fighting Ferguson and Maxine, he'd be in a world of trouble.

Therefore, after weighing the gains and losses, Han Shuo felt that there was nothing to be gained in staying. So he decided to avoid them and use magical cultivation to make his escape using the bottom of the river.

The last time Fanny and the others had gone to the cemetery of death, they'd spent about ten days to reach the place. Thanks to the Art of the Demonic Ninth Heaven, Han Shuo saved a lot of time and only took a day and a night to fly there. He arrived in the cemetery of death on the evening of the second day.

Although he'd rested three times along the way, Han Shuo had still exhausted quite a bit of magical yuan reaching the cemetery of death. He was forced to rest and recover again.

He placed the three yin demons outside the cemetery of death to wait for Gilbert's arrival, meditating for the night. By the next day, he was completely recovered.

The cemetery of death was enshrouded by a powerful boundary, and those within never felt the rays of moonlight. It was enclosed within a dark and sinister atmosphere all year long, and stark white bones were piled all over the ground, making this a sacred ground for death.

When he saw that Gilbert had yet to return, Han Shuo had no choice but to take out the materials that Phoebe had given him and look over them one by one.

Han Shuo had asked her to collect materials that would be used in the dwarves' forging, but also items that he'd be able to use in refining some magical treasures of his own.

The demon infant had fully taken shape and he was now in the bloodlust realm. He could absolutely refine some treasures now. Not only did he want to temper the Demonslayer Edge all over again, he also wanted to craft some useful little baubles for himself.

Chapter 228: Murder weapon

Han Shuo stayed in the cemetery of death for two days in a row. He sat cross legged among the stark white bones. The Demonslayer Edge floated in front of his chest while bolts of blazing lightning surrounded it.

Han Shuo held his breath as he gazed calmly at the Demonslayer Edge, occasionally using his hands to release beams of the spellfire, or biting his finger to drip out a few droplets of blood essence. He slowly used the demon infant in his abdomen to wash the Demonslayer Eye over and over again with his magical yuan.

Han Shuo held some ores of rare metals in his hands as two balls of red, blazing flames slowly covered his palms. The scorching magical fire had a terrifyingly high temperature that slowly melted the durable metal ores, causing them to turn into colorful liquids that fell onto the hovering Demonslayer Edge.

Before Han Shuo had formed the demon infant, he didn't have the ability to refine magical treasures, that was why the basic shape of the Demonslayer Edge had been crafted by the famous dwarven smiths. After the dwarves had understood Han Shuo's intention, they'd worked on it for several days and nights as they mixed the sharpest metals into the Demonslayer Edge.

Experiences afterwards had shown that the Demonslayer Edge was beyond sharp. After all, Han Shuo had spent a huge amount of money for it and it'd been lovingly crafted by the dwarves. Normal metal weapons were always sliced in half without a doubt by the Demonslayer Edge.

However, it wasn't enough for a true magical treasure to merely be sharp. It would only count as a type of magical treasure if it had some special effects.

As a powerful weapon in Chu Canglan's memories, the Demonslayer Edge would only be able to display spectacular effects when used by a demonic cultivator of the bloodlust realm after it is successfully refined. The "slay" in Demonslayer Edge clearly described its effects, it was inseparable from massacre.

The truth was such as well. When the Demonslayer Edge was successfully refined, a demonic cultivator who's reached the bloodlust realm could absorb the terror and hatred of his victims when using the Demonslayer Edge to kill, forming a natural, demonic aura around him. If the Demonslayer Edge was deployed to its truest abilities, then the weapon absorb the terror and hatred of the deceased into the hilt of the blade.

When the Demonslayer Edge had absorbed enough of this strange power, the terror and hatred can naturally form a Demonic Soul within the Demonslayer Edge. This would cause the Demonslayer Edge to become a peerless, sentient weapon.

As the bearer kills more and more, the Demonslayer Edge would more absorb increasing amounts of negative energy. When the Demonic Soul finally forms, just as the enormous amount of terror and hatred stored within the Demonslayer Edge could cause opponents to lose their minds, so could the Demonic Soul within the blade could shatter all confidence.

Apart from this, when the Demonslayer Edge becomes a powerful weapon and has its own consciousness, it will also have other unbelievable effects. Han Shuo could even turn the Demonslayer Edge to turn into another double for him, one that possessed the ability to continuously evolve and gain more frightening energy just like the main body.

However, quite a few exotic materials were needed in order to form such a powerful weapon. The amount of these materials were outside of Han Shuo's expectations. Aside from the rare metals mixed in when the dwarves were crafting it, Han Shuo now needed to continuously fuse even more rare materials into it. He had to ensure its formation by adding in magical yuan, blood essence, and using the demon infant to refine it bit by bit.

The process of refining the Demonslayer Edge was not fast. It was a slow one that slowly fused the materials into the Demonslayer Edge, a gradual process that required magical yuan, the demon infant, and blood essence.

It would not be accomplished within a day.

During these two days, Han Shuo merely slowly absorbed the materials that the Demonslayer Edge required into himself, and used the magical yuan, demon infant, and blood essence to build a closer link with the Demonslayer Edge in order to construct a good foundation for it.

In this way, when the Demonslayer Edge was not used, it could turn into a small ball the size of a grain of rice, and hide in the blood essence that Han Shuo used to nourish the demon infant, continuously providing the blade the energy it needed to be refined. When Han Shuo attacked and slaughtered others, the Demonslayer Edge could come out instantly and absorb the energy of the deceased from Han Shuo's victims.

Only when the Demonslayer Edge absorbed enough energy of the deceased and formed the Demonic Soul within its hilt, was it truly formed and a peerless weapon, a terrifying magical treasure.

Two days passed swiftly. On this day, Han Shuo was nurturing the Demonslayer Edge within himself and slowly recovering through meditation. He noticed through the yin demons that Gilbert was returning.

He came back to himself and stood up, taking out the "Eye of Darkness" and letting Gilbert in through the boundary. When he entered, Han Shuo discovered that Gilbert's eyes were darting too and fro, an exceedingly lascivious smile on his face.

"What happened? Look at the way you're smiling. With your speed, two nights and a day would've been enough for you to return to the cemetery of death. What too you so long?" Han Shuo looked askance at Gilbert and interrogated the other.

"Heh heh, I'm just a bit late, aren't I? What's the harm? I've already dropped off Miss Phoebe safely at Zajoksi City, don't worry!" There was an unexplainable element of lewdness to Gilbert's smile, making Han Shuo feel quite out of sorts.

Looking at the dark dragon suspiciously, a thought formed in Han Shuo's head when he saw that the dark dragon had a trace of weariness on his lewdly smiling face. He couldn't help but cry out, "Did you take advantage of this time to go whoring in Zajoski City?”

Gilbert didn't feel awkward when this question was asked as he nodded with a lusty chuckle. “Honored master, you're very smart. My grandfather was right. The taste of women is so marvelous! The two wenches were so thirsty, we rolled in the sheets all night long! That's why I was late.”

Indeed, the dark dragon race was known for their depravity. Just like looting and stealing were in the forest trolls's innate nature, so was lewdness in the dark dragons'. This was a characteristic specific down to their core that no one was able to change. Han Shuo understood Gilbert's actions, but was surprised to see his weariness. “It's rumored that you dark dragons are renowned for your dominating prowess in this area. Can it be that two women in one night was enough to tire you out so fully?”

“Honored master, this was my first time. I had a long time with both of them and then flew back. Is this kind of accomplishment not enough? I've heard that human males are really weak in this area, there's no one they could've been as amazing as me.” Gilbert puffed out his chest and said with great pride.

Shaking his head disdainfully, Han Shuo said, “If it was me, I could spend as long as I wanted with them and not only would I not be tired, I would become even stronger!”

“Psht! Keep boasting! Although you're very strong master, you're still a human. Human abilities in this area isn't as strong as us dark dragons!” Gilbert said scoffed dismissively and then proudly reaffirmed himself. It looked like this mindset was deep rooted in his brain, and wouldn't be something easily changed.

There was truth in Han Shuo's words. With his abilities in the bloodlust realm and some evil magic arts, he could make it so that he never flagged, and could even use evil ways to harvest yin to replenish yang and recover his energy. Not only would this not harm himself, but the act of intercourse would increase his strength. It was magical.

Some magical arts either harvested yin to replenish yang or vice versa. The “Chant of Thrills” was a happy way of dual cultivation that brought gains to both sides.

Han Shuo only understood these secret arts after he'd fully gained Chu Cang Lan's memories. He hadn't paid much attention to it, but suddenly thought that perhaps he could use the "Chant of Thrills" to bring gains for both him and Emily when they spent time together.

Therefore, when he thought about the secret arts, Han Shuo sank into temporary quietness. He thought back to those secret arts and slowly contemplated their possibilities. There were some that didn't require the internal essence or magical yuan from either party, and only made use of certain techniques to refine one's body.

There were also a few strong methods that needed a cooperation between internal essence and magical yuan. But only a little bit of each was needed. If they were deployed successfully, the the results of that time's lovemaking would be incredible.

"Lewd dragon, tell me honestly, if your tribe conducts these acts repeatedly, will your dark dragon bodies suffer harm in anyway?" Han SHuo thought for a moment and suddenly asked Gilbert.

"Of course, regardless of tribe, the body will be injured if too much of this is done. Us dark dragons are no exception. We particularly need to abstain from this when we need to evolve, or the damage to our bodies will be even greater. However, this is our innate nature to us, and there are many dark dragons who can't control themselves, still giving free reign to their desires when evolving. Not only do they not evolve, but their rank is decreased as well. This is nothing out of the ordinary." Gilbert answered truthfully when faced with Han Shuo's questions.

Dragons were the strongest, super rank magical creatures. However, there were also divisions amongst the super rank. There were five levels overall, with their ranking completely opposite of other magical beasts. The strongest was level five, and the newly born were level one.

For one such as Gilbert, having evolved not even once, he was a level one creature. The lowest amongst the super rank, he only had a few of the characteristics of the dragons and heightened attack power.

“Heh heh, little lewd dragon, you’ve followed me for so long and I haven’t given you anything at all. This time, master will make it up to you in one go. I’ll teach you a wondrous technique that lets you not exhaust yourself when you go whoring. It’ll make you stronger instead, and you can still do it when you’re evolving!” Han Shuo looked at Gilbert and cackled oddly.

“I don’t believe you, how could such wondrous techniques exist in this world? This isn’t true! Don’t lie to me!” Gilbert obviously didn’t believe Han Shuo and shook his head uncaringly.

“You’ll believe me alright!” Han Shuo walked towards Gilbert and placed a hand on his shoulder. A bit of magical yuan flowed into his body and slowly traveled to his abdomen.

“What, what is that!” Gilbert was shocked and cried out in surprise, “Why does it feel like a small snake has climbed into my body!”

“Don’t move! This is master investigating the makeup of your body!” Han Shuo shouted softly and prevented Gilbert from moving.

The magical yuan traveled in Gilbert’s body in a circle according to Han Shuo’s thoughts. He discovered that Gilbert’s anatomy was indeed a bit different from his. Han Shuo thought for a moment, and moved his magical yuan in Gilbert’s body according to a specific method.

Half an hour passed like this. Han Shuo flipped up Gilbert’s clothes and dripped a drop of blood essence onto his belly button. After which, Han Shuo said lowly, “Follow the trace of the snake’s movement, and try to control it. Slowly direct it into your belly button. If you can do this, you will be able to possess this sort of miraculous martial technique in the future.”

Han Shuo released the hand that he’d rested on Gilbert’s shoulders after saying this and looked at the dark dragon. Gilbert’s head was covered in sweat as he followed Han Shuo’s instructions with a face full of terror and nervousness. However, he was still unable to find the proper way.

Han Shuo could not guide him in this critical moment. Gilbert had to learn the trick of this himself in order to use it with familiarity. The drop of blood essence that landed on his belly button was like a seed that could use to turn the tides, it can provide a hiding place for the magical yuan that Han Shuo injected into him, allowing him to successfully use the secret arts of harvesting yin to replenish yang.

Han Shuo had done all he could, since Gilbert's body structure was different from a human's, his success was up to himself. Although it would theoretically work, Han Shuo wasn't sure, and so he measured up Gilbert in a perturbed manner.

Gilbert hurriedly gazed towards Han Shuo after a moment and shouted anxiously, "Alright, it's in, I did it! The little snake returned to my belly button." Han Shuo was quite glad to hear this, and asked quickly, "Then how do you feel?"

"Hard. I'm hard, very very hard!" There was a small tent on the lower part of the Black Dragon Gilbert's body as he responded frantically while looking at it, unsure of what to do.

"Hard is good, hard is good. Haha!" Han Shuo laughed, then said proudly. "Very good, lewd dragon, you did it!"

Chapter 229: Favored son of earth

With Han Shuo's tutelage, Gilbert had finally grasped the evil method of harvesting yin to replenish his yang after half a day.

Gilbert had been highly skeptical at first, but slowly started believing it was true when his body began to change. He still wasn't fully convinced of the magical effects until he really confirmed some things though.

"Remember, you can only steal a little bit of yin energy each time. You'll kill someone if you take too much though." Han Shuo reminded him gravely after Gilbert had fully grasped this new technique.

If the sinister methods of harvesting yin to replenish yang was used adequately and only on one woman at once, not much harm would come to the woman, but if this technique was used too often or an excess of yin energy was absorbed, it would harm the woman. In severe cases, her life might even be lost.

Gilbert seemed to understand after Han Shuo's repeated reminders, murmuring, "I know. Who knows if this is even useful? I'll let you know after I've tried it!"

Han Shuo and Gilbert then traveled together to the dwarves' valley. Gilbert stayed outside as Han Shuo entered by himself to chat with Calvin. He handed the list of weapons and all the materials needed to Calvin, and left the valley after concluding their discussions.

With Gilbert present, Han Shuo saved a lot of spare effort and rode on Gilbert's back. The two of them flew towards the forest trolls' sacred ground in the depths of the Dark Forest.

After flying for half a day, Han Shuo and Gilbert arrived at the place where they worshipped Datara.

The forest trolls guarding the place recognized Han Shuo and didn't stop him, letting him enter freely and took up the duty of protecting him.

Even though it was the dead of winter, the place of extreme wood generated the thriving air of spring in the forest trolls' sacred ground.

Lush undergrowth, towering trees, and high shrubs all grew exceptionally well. Flowers bloomed in charming shades of red and purple, filling the air of the valley with a fresh fragrance of greenery.

Only a vibrant green color, as far as one could see, met the eye. All the plants were growing so perfectly and incredibly strong. A thick earth qi suffused the surroundings. The towering trees covered the skies and the old roots of the tree tangled together with utmost force. This was why the forest trolls had built their sacred ground atop these trees.

When he arrived, Han Shuo told all the forest trolls to clear out of this area. He then took to the skies and observed the layout of the land and elements. He identified some crucial landmarks according to Chu Cang Lan's memories before landing on the roots of an ancient tree.

This tree was the most ancient and largest of all the trees in this place of extreme wood. It was several dozen meters tall. Its richly interlocking branches were filled with light green, life blossoming in abundance from its twigs. It looked quite old.

Han Shuo stared at this tree for a long and finally said apologetically, "I'm sorry, you've occupied the best spot. You must hand over the earth qi that you've been absorbing. I can only sacrifice you!"

He sent out a beam of light from his body, concentrating it in his hand and acted without hesitation, starting to dig at the roots of the ancient tree.

"Honored master, do you need my help? Gilbert asked enthusiastically as he saw Han Shuo start to dig at the roots of the old trees.

Han Shuo thought for a moment and nodded, halting the movements of his hands. "No need, but thanks for reminding me. With the earth elite zombie, I don't need to do any of this myself at all!"

He sang out an incantation as soon as he'd finished speaking, summoning the little skeleton and two other dark creatures.

The little skeleton's bones were translucent, as if they were made of jade. A faint light of the soul circulated through his purple eye. As he stood there with his bone dagger in hand, a natural sense of danger emanated from him. The seven bone spurs on his back gave others an exceedingly evil feeling, like they were seven weapons waiting to reap their lives.

The earth elite zombie's eyes were sparkling with the same yellow-brown light that emitted from its body. The light covered the armor of his body like a thick layer of dirt. It was blinking its eyes right now and seemed to be looking at Han Shuo with confusion. It seemed to be saying, "Why did you summon me?"

From the appearance of the little skeleton and earth elite zombie, Han Shuo discovered that the two seemed to be continuously evolving—particularly the little skeleton. He gave Han Shuo an odd feeling. Ever since the little skeleton had gained his own sentience, he had started acting with more and more purpose, forming an odd sort of demeanor with his bearing.

"I've a mission for you. Create 49 holes of the same size in the area and then connect them with moats!" Han Shuo thought for a moment and then spoke at the blinking earth elite zombie.

The honest zombie nodded shyly and before continuing to blink at Han Shuo, not making a move. He seemed to be waiting for further instruction.

Pausing, Han Shuo immediately reacted. He sat down cross legged and began rifling through his memories. His brain seemed to be a marvelous machine as the layout of the entire place of extreme wood immediately appeared in his mind, pointed out the location of all 49 holes according to Chu Cang Lan's memories, and overlay them onto the scene in front of him.

When Han Shuo had completed this process, there was a complete schematic in his mind. The earth elite zombie dived into the ground upon receiving Han Shuo's next order.

The entire place of extreme wood suddenly started churning violently, like a sinuous earth dragon was traveling underground. Earth shook and mountains trembled as hills were formed. The earth elite zombie was like a small dragon playing leisurely amongst the rippling waves of the enormous sea. A large or small hole would appear whenever he revealed himself from the ground.

The earth elite zombie was the most efficient and wondrous construction worker as he worked, accompanied by rumbling sounds. It perfectly recreated the scene in Han Shuo's mind using its own strength and its natural command over the earth.

Enormous changes had occurred in the entire place of extreme wood in a very short amount of time. 49 holes had appeared, and hundreds, thousand of ravines connected the network of holes.

It was an exact replica of the scene in Han Shuo's mind! To have done it so this perfectly in such a short amount of time, and with the power of one alone, the earth elite zombie was likely the only character to be able to do so.

"Amazing, too amazing. This fellow is too wonderful!" Gilbert looked at the earth elite zombie in complete shock. This fellow had caused such a thorough change in such a short amount of time!

"Now you know his strength, hmm? The earth elite zombie is the favored son of heaven. He can hide under the earth as an assassin, and can leave immediately through the ground if his attack fails. Even if someone evades his attacks, they'll be unable to capture him." Han Shuo laughed heartily with pride and glanced sideways at Gilbert.

Having done all this, the earth elite zombie surfaced from the largest hole. The thick clods of earth were as if pure air to him, unable to form the slightest obstruction to him. He seemed to be emerging from water, giving others an extreme visual impact.

He took out a large amount of material from his space ring and filled the empty ground in front of him. They were so many items that they eventually formed a small mountain. He then used his mental connections with the little skeleton and the earth elite zombie to place the numerous material into the holes, following a particular order.

After doing everything, Han Shuo sighed comfortably, "All of the ingredients have been placed inside, there's just one thing missing now."

“Why is that hole empty and nothing’s been placed in it?” Gilbert looked at everything happening around him with interest. He took a look around after Han Shuo had finished speaking and noticed that there was a hole, the size of a human, right next to Han Shuo. It happened to be next to the oldest and largest tree root.

“Duh, that hole is the center of the formation and only the master can enter it!” Han Shuo rolled his eyes at Gilbert and explained haphazardly.

He started chanting as soon as he’d spoken, summoning a few zombies and decided to use the same method of having them fight each other to select a suitable candidate.

Just when Han Shuo was about to do so however, the earth elite zombie hastily shook his hand and walked in front of Han Shuo, blinking frantically as he tried to convey something to Han Shuo.

He also waved at the little zombie as he did so, miming and gesturing as he conversed with the little skeleton, seemingly wanting the little skeleton to persuade Han Shuo as well.

Han Shuo was surprised and held his breath in concentration, looking carefully at the earth elite zombie and the little skeleton, slowly trying to understand the message that the two were sending over.

The earth elite zombie seemed to understand what Han Shuo was about to do and kept waving his hands around. After communicating with the little skeleton, the little skeleton also reacted and joined the earth elite zombie in explanation. Short, muddled bursts of messages kept being delivered to Han Shuo’s mind.

After a while, Han Shuo looked at the two in surprise. “You mean, you guys have a suitable candidate?”

The earth elite zombie and the little skeleton both nodded forcefully upon hearing these words. The little skeleton even walked next to the zombie warriors that Han Shuo had summoned and beat them up a bit, knocking them all into the ground.

The little skeleton then stood proudly in front of them and gestured nobly with a puffed out chest. He seemed to be saying these fellows are junk. They're not worthy of receiving such amazing treatment.

Han Shuo finally understood after watching for a while. He nodded and smiled, "Alright, I'll send the two of you back and give you some time to catch the zombie warrior of your choice. I'll try to summon you three together afterwards!"

The little skeleton and earth elite zombie all nodded their heads firmly after Han Shuo had spoken. He could feel the joy and excitement in their hearts.

Smiling, Han Shuo gave them a few reminders and chanted again, sending the two back to their old homes. His heart was full of surprise. He hadn't thought that the little skeleton and the earth elite zombie would behave so interestingly.

"These low level dark creatures have their own intelligence now?" Gilbert was mystified as he sighed with astonishment at Han Shuo.

"Don't voice those words in front of them, or they will definitely be mad. They might even beat you up. They're outside the range of dark creatures now. I think even high level dark creatures won't have the amazing powers that they have!" Han Shuo flicked a glance at Gilbert to warn him from voicing foolish words around them.

Han Shuo felt the little skeleton's summons from the other plane after a short while, and chanted the incantation again to resummon the two.

A light flashed by as the little skeleton and earth elite zombie carried a thin, frail, yet exceedingly tall zombie in their arms. He was as thin as a bamboo shoot and had a green countenance to his face. There was no light in its pupils. It was obvious that it could only obey commands.

The little skeleton and the earth elite zombie shouldered the thin zombie warrior over, despite the discrepancies in their heights. One was tall and the other short, they presented a comical sight.

The little skeleton pointed to the new zombie warrior amidst Han Shuo's surprise and gestured, seeming to say, "He's one of ours!"

Chapter 230: The little skeleton's faction!

Taken aback, Han Shuo stared dumbly at the tall, thin zombie warrior. His eyes roved over the little skeleton and earth elite zombie, finally asking with surprise. "One of ours? One of yours?"

Nodding, the little skeleton and the earth elite zombie seemed a bit proud. Their empty hands gestured at Han Shuo as a flood of messages bombarded Han Shuo like electromagnetic waves.

After he'd taken a while to sort through the information, his heart was filled with astonishment as he looked incredulously at the two fellows. "You mean, you have your own minions and domain in the other dimension?"

The two of them puffed out their chests at the same time with supremely proud expressions. They looked like they were guffawing with laughter as they nodded. Han Shuo had obviously hit the spot.

On the other side, Gilbert looked at Han Shuo communicating slowly with the dark creatures and also felt it to be incredible when he understood what was going on. He couldn't help but go "Eh?" to express his astonishment.

After he recovered from his surprise, Han Shuo's thoughts spun as he couldn't help but laugh heartily, "Not bad, not bad, both of you've done well!"

With Han Shuo's current knowledge of necromancy, he knew that as he continuously improved, he would eventually be able to directly surpass the limits of space one day and descend upon that miraculous dimension alongside the little skeleton and the earth elite zombie. Furthermore, if Han Shuo reached the level of a Magister necromancer, he could even use large-scale teleportation formations to directly connect the two dimensions and teleport personnel. In that case, if the little skeleton and the earth elite zombie developed a powerful faction in the other dimension, they would be able to completely share resources when Han Shuo's necromancy reached a certain level. The possibilities caused Han Shuo to become very excited.

The little skeleton and the earth elite zombie were both beyond happy at hearing Han Shuo's praise. The little skeleton pointed at the zombie warrior that he'd been supporting, and then pointed at the hole beside him, gesticulating Han Shuo to use this zombie warrior to refine into a wood elite zombie.

Han Shuo nodded and gave a faint smile to show that he understood. He waved towards the little skeleton and signaled him to drop the tall and thin zombie warrior into the hole.

When the little skeleton and the earth elite zombie carried the zombie warrior to the hole, the little skeleton placed it down, then looked up at it. Purple light continuously shone out from the purple eye, as if he was giving some sort of orders to the zombie warrior.

After a while, the little skeleton went on its tiptoes and comically tapped on the zombie warrior's shoulders, seemingly telling it to "work hard", just like a general encouraging its subordinates. It was as if the tall and thin zombie only had the intelligence to obey. After receiving the orders of the purple eye, the zombie warrior nodded stiffly, understanding the little skeleton's meaning and jumped down into the hole. It laid down in the hole in a docile manner and looked at Han Shuo, waiting for his next action.

Seeing that everything was set, Han Shuo took a deep breath, and familiarly dropped two droplets of blood essence onto the zombie warrior, then cast a Dark Seal spell, gaining a deeper connection with the zombie warrior.

After that, Han Shuo crossed his legs and sat down. He gave an order to the earth elite zombie, then sent out rays of black light from his hand into the prone zombie warrior.

After receiving Han Shuo's orders, the earth elite zombie dove into the soil, disappearing instantly like an eel. With the efficiency and speed of an earth dragon swimming around, it quickly filled in the forty nine holes, returning the area back to its former even plane.

When Han Shuo's final seals landed on the body of that thin and tall zombie warrior, the surrounding soil of the hole quickly flowed over his body, covering it as if guided by some sort of power. Then, the earth elite zombie rose up back up and dusted off its hands with a relaxed expression.

"Spirit power of wood, listen to my commands and immediately take your place!" Han Shuo formed two hand seals as he thundered, sending a cloud of black light into the tall, thin zombie.

Suddenly, the forty-nine holes that have been filled and flattened rose up. Natural, green strings gradually linked up together into a dense net, as if woven by spiders. The thin and tall zombie warrior's hiding place was at the center of this net.

In the blink of an eye, thick earth energy all gathered towards the center, as if linked by the green bonds. From afar, it looked like little streams flowing towards the river in the middle, resulting in a strong visual impact for spectators.

While this happened, some of the thick weeds further away were gradually wilting. Even the largest of the ancient trees, filled with powerful branches, slowly changed at a rate visible to the human eye due to the loss of earth energy. Everything was being absorbed by the thin and tall zombie warrior at the center. In order to create him, all the vegetation in the surroundings had to wilt.

"This, this is amazing! Master, how did you do it? Gilbert couldn't help but exclaim as he stared at the enormous changes around him.

"All of the plants around the place of extreme wood need to spit back out all the wood qi they absorbed over the years. The day that the wood elite zombie forms is the day they fully wilt and die. Survival of the fittest. Only the most superior survive in this kind of environment, that's their fate!" Han Shuo said cruelly.

Gilbert looked around and then stared at the earth elite zombie and the little skeleton, "What do we do now?"

"Nothing much, we'll leave and take a walk around the forest trolls' residence. With the protection of the forest troll warriors, there shouldn't be anything untoward. The changes in this area will become more obvious with the advent of time. I'll instruct the forest trolls not to bother about this."

"When the zombie absorbs all of the wood qi here and transforms into an wood elite zombie, he will naturally contact me and I'll come to wake him!" Han Shuo said faintly.

He left with the little skeleton and Gilbert, heading for the forest trolls' village, arriving after half a day's travel.

When Han Shuo arrived with the little skeleton, they were greeted by the atmosphere of a holiday. As their protector, the little skeleton was viewed as the materialization of the great god Datara in this world. The successful raid last time and Han Shuo's large supply of living necessities had made the forest trolls trust Han Shuo more and more.

The old forest troll priest presented himself in front of Han Shuo after a short while, kneeling down and kowtowing in front of Han Shuo and the little skeleton.

"Hello, how have things been lately?" Han Shuo asked with a faint smile after telling the priest to rise.

"Thanks to your noble and wonderful guidance, we have enough rations to weather the winter. No merchants are willing to pass through the Dark Forest in the cold of winter, so we're all resting in the village and haven't gone out to hunt!" The old priest responded respectfully and appeared quite at ease.

Nodding, Han Shuo said warmly, "Good. Train some more warriors and priest for the tribe this winter. Train them well, they'll be put to good use when spring comes again!"

"We promise to listen to the liaison's orders and train the children well! The old priest nodded and promised.

"Mm, send some more warriors to protect the sacred ground. The great god Datara will be resting within for a while. No one is to enter the sacred ground without my orders. All abnormal occurrences within the sacred ground are because of the great Datara. Don't be surprised."

Han Shuo knew that the formation of the wood elite zombie would cause the area to change. He notified the forest trolls beforehand just in case, so that they wouldn't disrupt Han Shuo's plans.

"Don't worry, we'll do as the liaison says and guard the area well!" The old priest didn't ask why before promising confidently. He appeared quite at ease when he didn't have to worry about daily life.

"Alright, if I have further orders, I may come myself or send this fellow. Heh heh, I think you must know who he is?" Han Shuo smiled and pointed to Gilbert behind him.

"Of course, this is the strong Mister Dark Dragon, the humble servant of the liaison!" The old priest had been with Han Shuo on his trip to the underground cave last time, and knew everything about how the dark dragon had formed a contract with Han Shuo. He naturally understood where Gilbert had come from.

When he'd thoroughly gone over all that was to be done, Han Shuo didn't tarry and left the forest troll village. After he sent the little skeleton back to his old home, Han Shuo rode on Gilbert and headed further into the depths of the Dark Forest.

There was a mysterious tribe in the furthest depths of the Dark Forest, full of very powerful and terrifying existences. Of course, in such a place, there would naturally be more ferocious magical beasts, mystical plants, as well as some natural treasures that only appeared in legends.

Han Shuo had wanted to refine some pills, so he wanted to try his luck in the depths of the Dark Forest, in hopes of finding some mystical grass in order to replenish some of his basic materials.

After flying for a while, Gilbert took the initiative to let Han Shuo down. He actually muttered with a hint of fear, "This Dark Forest really isn't right, just now, I felt like my back grow cold, as if something treated me as prey. It's too unbelievable!"

“Your feeling should be right, I too felt a very powerful aura that locked onto the two of us just now. However, I wasn’t able to find out what sort of powerful aura it was, or where it came from. It looks like the Dark Forest is truly beyond mysterious. Let’s not fly in the sky anymore, so that we don’t attract the attention of some powerful beings!”

When Han Shuo felt that powerful aura, he immediately sent out the three yin demons to scout. However, he was unable to determine where the aura came from. After the three yin demons had completed one scouting run, they weren’t able to find any irregularities. However, that didn’t leave Han Shuo at ease, but rather made him even more cautious.

What was surprising was that the depths of the Dark Forest didn’t seem to be affected by the cold winter. The freezing air gradually disappeared as the two of them ventured deeper, while the surrounding temperature gradually rose. Indeed, it bore similarities to the place of extreme wood. Here, the thick and dense trees reached for the sky. There were springs along the way as they walked in, several of them decorated with white mist rising out of them.

Thanks to the vision from the yin demons, Han Shuo saw all sorts of fierce, high level creatures along the way. Harpies, deepwater pythons, frost eagles, medusas, manticores... all of these rare creatures continued to appear in the yin demon’s vision. Sometimes, he even spotted more than one together.

These high level creatures were hard to see on the outskirts of the Dark Forest. There was often only one of these high level creatures in a large area. Most adventurers would evade them if they bumped into them, deathly afraid of being attacked by them.

However, they’d turned into the most common of existences within the depths of the Dark Forest. There were even many exotic plants growing in specific places, ones that Han Shuo had never heard of or seen. There were enormous flowers growing on these strange fauna.

Han Shuo saw through the yin demons that a giant flower bend when a windblade wolf passed by, ensnaring the wolf with its stamens. The thick stem moved like a neck, as it chewed and swallowed the wolf. The wolf was quickly digested amidst a thick pool of blood, and not even the bones were spat out.

There were some strange looking plants with leaves like human hands. They also had the same frightening destructive power. As soon as magical creatures approached them, they would be entangled by their thick branches and be strangled to death.

“Follow me closely. Danger lurks everywhere within the Dark Forest. No wonder Trunks kept reminding me that although the gains were great in the forest, one might lose their life at any time!” Han Shuo spoke calmly to Gilbert, and cautiously moved forward.

However, even though he spoke those warning words, he was actually the one who lost his cool right after, sprinting towards something with a face full of glee.

Chapter 231: Blood essence grass

A plant with a big, fan-like leaf was protruding from fiery red rock crevice. Sparkling red lights flowed through its entire body.

Drops of bright red liquid dripped down from the hanging leaf of this odd plant. Crystal clear, the liquid drops looked like red diamonds as they fell onto the rock, emitting a sizzling sound as well as a plume of red smoke. The smoke then disappeared near the roots, as if absorbed by the latter.

Han Shuo's body moved with a speed much faster than Gilbert anticipated. In just a moment, he was already below the leaf, his mouth wide open to catch the dripping red liquid.

Drip... drip...

The blood-like red liquid fell onto the tip of Han Shuo's tongue with a soft plop. When the red smoke rose up with a sizzle, he took a deep breath and inhaled it all. Under the watchful eyes of Gilbert, Han Shuo's cheeks gradually glowed red.

Not knowing what was going on, Gilbert looked at Han Shuo's weird actions in perplexion, thinking that his master was becoming increasingly mysterious.

The plant had been originally hale and hearty. However, with every drop of crystal red liquid trickling down the leaf, crimson patches appeared on its body, which then slowly became one with the red rock.

By the time the liquid stopped trickling from the leaf, the strange plant became rock-hard, sticking firmly to the red rock below.

Han Shuo's whole body had turned blood red by this point. He immediately sat down on the spot, his whole being seemingly made of blood, a faintly bright, red layer of smoke surrounding his body.

Han Shuo slowly opened his eyes. He let out a long, low whistle and said with high spirits, "The depths of the Dark Forest are indeed unfathomable. To be able to encounter this Blood Essence Grass that strengthens my blood essence, it appears my luck isn't bad at all."

"What is it?" Gilbert asked with surprise as he stared at the rock-like plant.

"The Blood Essence Grass is a vile plant. It continuously absorbs the energy of the surrounding plants after formation. If it's surrounded by evil plants that feast on the flesh and blood of humans and beasts, then the blood of their victims will also be devoured and refined by the roots of the Blood Essence Grass."

"The process has to operate for a hundred years before the Blood Essence Grass can produce a fan-sized leaf. Once this leaf forms, it will then proceed to spit out the condensed blood refined during the past hundred years to be reabsorbed into its roots. It can then absorb the surrounding vitality even faster, and the radius it can absorb will also expand."

"After another hundred years, the Blood Essence Grass will give birth to another leaf after absorbing enough vitality from the surrounding carnivorous plants. This cycle repeats for a total of nine hundred years. If the Blood Essence Grass can successfully evolve each time, it will eventually become a blood essence that can move freely, possessing sentience just like humans. Every plant within a ten mile radius would be under its control. This is an incredible art!" Han Shuo smiled as he explained the origin of the Blood Essence Grass to Gilbert.

"So amazing. Then, what effect did the blood red liquid have on you? How old is this Blood Essence Grass?" Gilbert asked, surprised at Han Shuo's explanation.

Han Shuo gave a proud laugh and said, "When I absorb and refine the essence of the grass, I can transmute it into my essence blood. In the future, it'll prevent me from expending too much magical yuan. What a pity this Blood Essence Grass seemed to only be around three hundred years old. If it'd been nine hundred years old, after being transformed by my essence blood, it would possess the miraculous effect of bringing the dead back to life. If I suffer a cut, the healing speed of the wound will be visible to the naked eye!”

“It’s that magical? Perhaps there are other Blood Essence Grasses inside the Dark Forest. We can search for them!” Gilbert exclaimed in excitement after being dumbfounded for a while.

Paying no heed to the excited Gilbert, Han Shuo took out the Demonslayer Edge, and carefully dug up the red rock on which the Blood Essence Grass had grown. He shook off the soil around it, and finally placed the clump of red rock into the space ring.

“What does the stone do?” Gilbert curiously asked.

“This is a Blood Essence stone. This is a valuable material, very useful!” Han Shuo knew that Gilbert wouldn’t understand even if he explained everything, so he responded half-heartedly.

Taking a look around, Han Shuo saw nothing else worthy of attention. Only then did he proceed to the deeper depths with Gilbert, his heart growing increasingly curious about the Dark Forest.

However, the strong presence appeared again not long after they set off. Han Shuo couldn’t help but frown, his body halting in place.

“Who or what are you playing at? Are you done yet?” Han Shuo shouted impolitely after he coldly took a look around.

Possessing such a strong presence and being able to avoid the three yin demons’ eyes, it would at least possess intelligence, if it wasn’t human. Such a powerful creature lurking around and eyeing him and Gilbert as if they were prey made Han Shuo extremely uncomfortable, and he couldn’t help but lash out violently.

His shout echoed through the ancient forest with no response. After listening for a while, there was still no additional sound. Evidently the powerful presence hadn’t responded to Han Shuo’s words.

“There really is something stalking us!” Gilbert could apparently sense the danger with his instincts and couldn’t help but cry out.

Nodding, Han Shuo said softly, “Indeed, and we have no idea what it is.

Even I have no way to trace it. It looks quite powerful too. We'll have to be careful; don't give it any advantage!"

No matter what this creature was, if it was confident in dealing with Han Shuo and Gilbert, it wouldn't be lurking around in the dark and would have gone on the offensive already. Yet, it chose to hide, which meant this creature didn't have confidence in defeating them both. As such, Han Shuo wasn't too worried.

With the three yin demons around, it was impossible for this creature to ambush them. Although Han Shuo was on the alert, he felt no fear at all. On the contrary, he was even curious, and more determined to lure this creature out and take a look at what it really was.

The clear moonlight shone down in the depths of the night. Under the rays of the moon, the shadows of the towering ancient trees were etched on the ground, looking like the capering limbs of demonic figures.

Han Shuo and Gilbert were resting in the branches of a ten meter high tree. Gilbert leaned lazily on the tree trunk as he napped, deeply asleep.

Han Shuo's posture was straight, his breathing even, his heartbeat slow. He sat cross-legged like an erect javelin with his eyes closed, silently refining the essence of the Blood Essence Grass that he'd taken in earlier in the day.

After who knew how long, Han Shuo's closed eyes suddenly snapped open from his meditation. His bright eyes shone in the night, pupils sparkling as they swept the area.

The three yin demons had taken positions around Han Shuo, to his back, left, and right. They were closely examining the surroundings for any anomalies. Suddenly, the yin demon at the back found ripples appearing on the surface of a nearby lake. It was followed by an enormous, transparent shadow that slowly rose from the surface of the lake.

The watery being was colossal, on par with Gilbert in his dragon form. Nine heads on slender necks slowly appeared out of its bulk. After emerging from the pool, the originally transparent watery body gradually turned more and more immaterial, until it completely disappeared.

However, a strong presence subtly radiated from that direction, giving off the exact same feeling from the past two days. Han Shuo watched attentively for a while and discovered the wind flowing a bit oddly from that direction, as if encountering an obstacle in the void.

Tapping the soundly sleeping Gilbert, Han Shuo abruptly woke up the dark dragon. Gilbert turned his head to look around, and asked in a low voice, "What's going on?"

"The super rank magical creature, the Hydra!" Han Shuo responded lightly.

Hearing his words, Gilbert's face paled as he said in a stunned voice, "No wonder, my grandfather said that the Hydra has a skill that allows it to use the power of water to conceal its body, falling into a wondrous invisible state. In addition to its powerful presence, its whole body is also venomous. I can't believe that it's set its sights on us!"

"This Hydra has likely evolved only once, so no wonder it was following us but didn't dare to act! Make your preparations, we'll teach it a lesson!" Han Shuo whispered, his whole body remaining unmoving. He continued to sit there, waiting for the Hydra to arrive.

Gilbert understood and but still pretended to continue sleeping, snoring lightly.

Chapter 232: Lewd Dragon, Lewd Snake

A terrible stench along with a powerful presence came crashing down even before the hydra arrived.

Han Shuo was unable to capture the hydra's figure even through the three yin demons. However, he was still able to speculate its approximate location due to the odd changes in the wind.

As the hydra flew over, the clear ponds in the surrounding area were instantly polluted, turning them into gutters that spat out foul odors. The wet ground also slowly became unusually dry, revealing a dark brown color. It seemed like the surroundings were affected by the hydra's abilities.

Han Shuo summoned the Demonslayer Edge, and made his preparations with Gilbert as the hydra approached. He planned on unleashing an unforgettable strike the moment the hydra closed in.

The stench in the air gradually grew worse and worse. Han Shuo had been resting with his eyes closed but became briefly disoriented when he inhaled the revolting aroma. Upon filtering the air with his magical yuan however, his body swiftly returned to normal.

As a member of the dark dragon tribe, Gilbert's physical body was powerful, and he was capable of spitting poison. Furthermore, the natural resistance of a dragon's body was strong enough that the fetid poisonous gas could not affect him.

Suddenly, the hydra's moving figure seemed to stop beside a tree that reached towards the skies. The wind currents also stabilized and stopped changing. The hydra seemed to have landed there.

Han Shuo was shocked. Just as he was wondering why the hydra didn't approach, four waves of dark brown liquid spurted out like a fountain towards the tree that Han Shuo and Gilbert were sitting in.

A noxious stink instantly filled the air. Unusually rancid, when the magical beasts in the area inhaled this putrid stench, their bodies straightened and abruptly froze.

Higher leveled magical beasts like the harpy and two windblade wolves all ran away in a panic after scenting the stinking air. None of them dared to stick around. They clearly knew of the terrifying danger present in their surroundings.

After cursing under their breath, Han Shuo and Gilbert instantly shifted. Gilbert leaped and landed on a tree even further away, while Han Shuo rose into a high vantage point in the sky.

While he rapidly flew up, Han Shuo took the opportunity to chant necromancy spells, summoning the little skeleton and earth elite zombie at the same time, who organized themselves with great teamwork. The little skeleton took up a position beside Han Shuo, while the earth elite zombie hid into the ground.

The branches of the tree that Han Shuo and Gilbert stayed on shuddered when the four waves of dark brown liquid splashed onto it. All the blooming leaves wilted almost instantly, and only a dessicated trunk was left of the once towering tree. It was as if it had experienced a long period of drought.

“Hydra, you’ve finally appeared!” Han Shuo laughed coldly in the sky and launched an attack with the little skeleton. The bone knife and Demonslayer Edge flew directly towards the concealed hydra.

Gilbert’s roar also sounded out from the side at the same time. In human form, he gradually grew in a ball of black light, finally turning into his dark dragon form. He rushed towards the hydra with his claws and fangs and shouted in a resounding voice, “Despicable hydra, you will pay!”

The concealed hydra plainly didn’t think that Han Shuo and Gilbert could find its tracks. Han Shuo’s Demonslayer Edge and the bone knife had already connected with its body before it was able to react.

A sharp scream tore through the silent sky. After getting injured, the hydra’s enormous body was no longer concealed. Coiled atop a sky-reaching tree, it was completely exposed to Han Shuo and Gilbert.

At that moment, two of its long necks were dripping blood, and the remaining seven heads shuddered. It seemed like the tree the hydra was on was unable to withstand its pained writhing as it snapped with a large creak, bringing the hydra's body down with it as it fell.

At this moment, a huge crack suddenly appeared on the brown ground. Intense rumbles sounded from deep within the earth, as if a terrifying danger awaited the hydra's impact.

As a super rank magical beast, the hydra naturally had the ability to fly, but it was just writhing in pain as it fell.

However, when one of the snake heads caught sight of the ground underneath it fracture into a large ravine, the hydra was scared mindless. It struggled frantically, finally halting its descent and rising upwards again.

Faced with the threat of death, it seemed that the hydra's no holds barred struggle bore fruit. However, the attack from the ground clearly did not end there. Just as the hydra rose a bit in the air, it noticed several sharp mounds suddenly rise up from the ground and charge towards its body.

The hydra was extremely troubled in that moment, it hadn't thought that its ambush would result in all this happening. According to its plan, it would silently draw close to Han Shuo and Gilbert, use the noxious poison's fumes to take down the "Dragon Knight" Han Shuo, and then casually deal with the little dark dragon that was a rank lower.

But, Han Shuo, having trained extensively in demonic cultivation, didn't fall to the attack of its noxious fumes like it had planned at all. Furthermore, the appearance of the little skeleton and earth elite zombie also empowered Han Shuo, completely shattering the hydra's plan.

The nine snake heads suddenly started to tremble as its long necks wobbled continuously. The momentum of the mounds that the earth zombie had created was completely counteracted by the fierce streams of poison that the snake heads spat out. While it did so, the hydra's body gradually rose as it frantically flew towards the pool it had first emerged from, dodging the remaining mound attacks from the earth elite zombie.

A stream of magma suddenly hit one of the snake heads, unusually dazzling within the pitch-dark night. With a terrible scream, the hydra's gigantic fleeing body stumbled. The remaining magical beasts in the area fled in fear as the colossal body snapped trees into twigs as it crashed and fell.

"Wahaha, a second ranked fellow has to flee as well!" Gilbert's voice rang out through the night sky as he carried Han Shuo and the little skeleton to swiftly chase the hydra.

The hydra destroyed all of the towering trees blocking its way as it fled. It suddenly leapt into the pool it had surfaced from just as Gilbert was about to catch up.

The originally clear pool water was instantly polluted and very quickly became mired in filth. When the hydra had come out of the pool previously, the pool had remained clear. Yet the moment it entered now, the pool had changed. This meant that the hydra was unable to control its power anymore, most likely due to it being wounded.

The hydra caused a huge wave of activity the moment it entered the newly formed bog. The mud splashed up around it and a foul odor began to spread.

"Honored master, just leave this to me. Just watch from above. I'm very familiar with this sort of place as well!" Gilbert laughed loudly.

Gilbert had been hiding in a swamp the first time he'd met Han Shuo, using its natural advantages to fight against the dark elves. He was entirely used to fighting and hiding in this sort of place. Now that the hydra was hurt, and Han Shuo was on watch above, he didn't really worry about Gilbert's safety, particularly given his astounding resistance to poison.

"Alright, go on down. Come out or yell if you can't handle things!" Han Shuo nodded and agreed to Gilbert's plan of action.

With a wild guffaw of laughter, Gilbert's enormous body dove into the marsh with a huge splash. Like an enormous eel, he swiftly began to make his way deeper into the depths .

All of a sudden, a huge commotion rose out in the mire. Gilbert had obviously found the hydra and had engaged in combat. With the swamp as the epicenter, tremors shook the ground, and the soaring trees as well. With this cacophony, regardless of size, all the magical beasts vacated the premises in a hurry.

It was as though someone had tossed in a chained set of bombs, as huge pillars of mud, accompanied by tremendous bangs, erupted from the huge pool. The constant explosions forced the swamp into a terrifying spiral that could not settle.

Occasionally, the hydra heads or Gilbert's huge tail would show itself above the surface of the bog. Looking down from his vantage point in the sky, Han Shuo noticed that Gilbert and the hydra's bodies were entwined together, continuously rolling around in the mire.

“OOOOOH....”

Suddenly, Gilbert's extremely lecherous yell rang out from within the mire.

Then, Han Shuo caught sight of something that shocked him beyond measure. The hydra and Gilbert slowly floated out of the swamp, their bodies knotted tightly together. But the more Han Shuo looked, the less it looked like they were fighting. Rather, it actually seemed like they were getting intimate.

Gilbert's thick tail and sharp claws continuously stroked the hydra's body like human hands. Meanwhile, the nine long necks of the hydra, that were once struggling fiercely to escape from the dark dragon, began to wrap closer and closer around the dark dragon.

Rays of dark light had begun to surrounding the two entangled super rank magical beasts at some unknown time. The two enormous bodies slowly condensed, and gradually became two muddy people—a man and a woman who were entwined together.

Furthermore, they were two naked humanoids that were tightly embracing each other!

Chapter 233: Conquer

Han Shuo stood in the sky as he watched the development taking place below, completely astonished. He was completely dumbfounded as he stood there frozen.

Gilbert and the hydra had become two naked mud people entwined around each other. The originally intense battle became an “intense battle” of another kind. Passionate cries and roars rang out, giving Han Shuo a complete eye opener!

The dark dragon race was lewd. All hydras were female and were hardly anything proper as they’d always been a synonym for the word ‘pervert’. The fact that these two beings could turn such an intense battle into another kind of “intense battle” meant that they were truly lusty. It really shocked Han Shuo.

The two mud people were rolling around together intensely and churning through the mire. Since their bodies were covered in mud, their original appearances could not be seen. Han Shuo could only discern that the hydra was female from her voluptuous body.

The busty lewd hydra entwined with the dark dragon and copulated fiercely. Heavy breathing kept on ringing out and echoing through the quiet night sky, causing people’s lust to rise!

Han Shuo had been watching intensely, while finding it all slightly baffling. Suddenly he felt someone tug on the corner of his shirt. He turned his head, and saw the purple eye of the little skeleton sparkle as he reached out with his bony claw to point at the dark dragon and the hydra that were in the heat of the moment. He sent Han Shuo a question, “What are they doing?”

Han Shuo replied, “Uh...”

The little skeleton tugged on the corner of his shirt again as the light in his purple eye swirled around quickly, showing that he was clearly very confused. It was as if he couldn’t understand what was going on no matter what, so he questioned Han Shuo again.

“The dark dragon is conquering it. Little kid, don’t ask so much!” Han Shuo couldn’t evade the question, so he just laughed weirdly and tried to skirt around the question.

Only half of the earth elite zombie was in the ground starting from an unknown period of time. It waved its hands around wildly, also looking at the two people in the mire with confusion, wondering if it should get closer to attack.

The mire was very wide and filled with extremely poisonous liquid. If the earth elite zombie rushed inside, it would be unable to make full use of its powers. Not to mention that the current situation was very odd, Han Shuo hastily issued a mental command for the earth elite zombie’s movements to halt.

The two people on the surface of the mire gradually sank back in and disappeared from Han Shuo’s line of sight. However, the huge commotion inside the mire did not vanish accordingly.

Han Shuo knew that the grand battle between a lewd dragon and a lewd snake had not stopped even after they had disappeared. The battle location had merely shifted to underneath the surface.

Seeing that he couldn’t see anything with his eyes anymore, Han Shuo descended from the sky to land beside the earth elite zombie. He patted the earth elite zombie’s shoulder and praised, “You did very well!”

The earth elite zombie had hidden in the ground earlier and used his powers over the earth to pose an immense threat towards the hydra. Power that could tear the earth apart and form a fissure excited Han Shuo quite a bit. This meant that it had already developed a very good battle awareness after staying with the little skeleton for a while.

Now that it would be rather difficult for the hydra to threaten Han Shuo anymore, he landed and praised the earth elite zombie, chanted the spell once more and sent the little skeleton and the earth elite zombie back home.

He then leapt onto a towering tree beside the mire, sat down with his legs crossed, and started to adjust his breathing while watching the commotion within the mire.

As he did so, a loud sound rang out from afar, as if a huge being was passing nearby.

Han Shuo had been adjusting his breathing, but immediately sent out a yin demon to travel towards the source of the sound and discern what was going on.

An azure cyclops, roughly eight or nine meters in height, its muscles as firm as boulders, was moving its stone-pillar like legs as it hurried along its way. The mountains shook with each step, seeming as terrifying as a landslide.

All of the trees were flattened in his path, like a bulldozer had been driven over the ground, flattening it thoroughly. Even some hard boulders were crushed into dust. This clearly indicated that the azure cyclops had an enormous strength that rivaled that of a god's.

The cyclops seemed slightly anxious as it was walking at a very fast pace. The shuddering of the ground caused all of the magical beasts in the area to flee their nests in order to make way for it.

Han Shuo was shocked as the large sound traveled further south. It was likely that even the hydra and Gilbert would feel quite troubled if they met with that enormous fellow with a body as strong as boulders, embodying a terrifying strength.

Just as Han Shuo thought that, a huge commotion rang out from the mire. A whirlpool was spiraling at the center of the mire as streams of brown mud were shot out. It seemed that the lewd dragon and the lewd snake had reached the climax.

As he expected a howl sounded out from within the mire after a while. The mire and its foul stench miraculously regained its purity in an extremely short amount of time. The contaminated muddy water gradually sank down, while clear pool water slowly appeared along the surface with bubbles.

Gilbert's naked body leapt out from within. His muscles dazzled as the mud on his body was washed clean.

Gilbert laughed maniacally with indescribable excitement and pride in his voice after breaking through the surface of the pool. He looked down at the watery pool as he couldn't restrain lewd laughter from bursting out of his mouth. He was clearly very cocky.

"Honored master, you are a living god of this world. You hold miracles that surpass the laws of the natural world. You have allowed your humble disciple to have a technique that can rule the entire Dark Dragon City. I must continuously praise you. Oh, you're truly too great!" Gilbert blurted out a bunch of flattering words continuously after leaping out of the water.

The sincere tone, the passionate emotions, the goosebumps-inducing words surpassed any flattering that he'd done before. Gilbert was truly excited and joyful in this moment, he wasn't purely being fawning towards Han Shuo.

"What, you used that technique?" Han Shuo chuckled oddly as he gazed at Gilbert in a smiling, yet not smiling manner.

Gilbert nodded continuously and loudly in a truly excited manner, "Of course, it's too amazing. That female snake was completely dealt with. She can't even move now."

"What's the situation now?" Han Shuo momentarily blanked, then asked Gilbert quietly in a sneaky manner, as if he was afraid of the hydra in the deep pool overhearing him.

Gilbert quietly gave a lecherous laugh and said, "Honored master, I already stole some of the essence from her body during the process. I can already feel my body reaping enormous benefits."

"Will this hydra be a threat to us anymore?" Han Shuo nodded, then frowned before he asked calmly.

"Don't worry, she definitely won't. Furthermore, I have a way to rope her in, so that master can gain another powerful helper!" Gilbert promised confidently with a smile of unmeasurable lasciviousness.

“That’s good. I’ll believe you this time since you’re so confident. I hope you don’t disappoint me!” Han Shuo chose to believe Gilbert after witnessing his feat with the hydra and nodded in agreement with his suggestion.

“Then, let’s depart for now. She needs a very long period of time to rest. We’ll come back and find her after she recovers!” Gilbert gazed towards the clear pool reluctantly.

“That’s alright. I saw a cyclops hurriedly running towards a direction just now. Let’s go over there to see what’s going on!” Remembering the actions of the cyclops, Han Shuo became interested and spoke thoughtfully to Gilbert.

It was said that the cyclops were the servants of the gods. Legends spoke of their miraculous ability to forge weapons and find special ores. They liked to eat humans and had strong bodies and stubborn personalities. Their living habits were very similar to the dwarves. Another legend said that cyclops were actually a type of dwarf, but they had unbelievably large bodies, as well as terrifying destructive abilities. It was said that they lived in huge buildings.

Their bodies were as hard as boulders. It was unknown whether they had the ability to find strange ores and rare mining fields due to this sort of body. This was an innate ability that made all alchemists green eyed with envy.

When the cyclops had hurried on so anxiously just now, Han Shuo naturally thought of its instinctive abilities and wondered if the cyclops had discovered some special metal ore and was rushing to dig it out.

“Perhaps this cyclops found a good location, or is planning to mine some sort of special ore!” Gilbert clearly knew about the instinctive characteristic of the cyclops, so he couldn’t help but cry out.

Han Shuo nodded and smiled, “Come, let’s go and see. Incidentally, I need some materials to refine a new weapon. Let’s see if this cyclops can help me find some good stuff!”

With that, Han Shuo and Gilbert swiftly followed the path that the cyclops had been taking.

Chapter 234: A strong crowd

The gigantic cyclops' powerful body fully depicted its strong soul as it shook the ground and mountains in its path, snapping ancient trees, and causing many beasts to flee.

Even in the Dark Forest, where super rank magical beasts lurked everywhere, very few beings were actually willing to provoke a being as powerful as a cyclops. Having bad relations with such a big fellow was not an easy thing.

Han Shuo and Gilbert followed the tracks that the cyclops left behind and caught up without too much effort. In order to prevent it from noticing them, Han Shuo rode on Gilbert's body and intentionally created a large distance between them and the cyclops.

As they hurried behind the cyclops, Han Shuo carefully surveyed their surroundings and actually discovered several powerful auras that seemed to be interested in the cyclops' actions.

However, the owners of these auras also intentionally avoided the cyclops. They hid far away, unwilling to approach it, and only followed the tracks that the cyclops left behind, seeming to have the same idea as Han Shuo.

When Han Shuo sensed these powerful auras, he immediately told Gilbert to revert back into his human form. He then dragged Gilbert along using the Art of the Demonic Ninth Heaven to prevent Gilbert's large body from catching the attention of these powerful beings and becoming their prey.

The three yin demons kept watch on the side and continuously paid attention to any approaching danger that might befall them. Danger lurked around every corner in the Dark Forest, so Han Shuo couldn't help but remain vigilant.

Each step of the towering cyclops covered five or six meters. He finally entered a small valley after a long period of rumbling, hasty travel.

A waterfall crashed within the valley, the vegetation green, the lake clear, and strange flowers bloomed. Odd rocks of various colors sat at the bottom of the clear river. They dazzled beneath the sunlight, making the river ripple and shine and the fishes' color even brighter in contrast.

What was surprising was that after the cyclops suddenly became very cautious after arriving at the valley. He set each step down very carefully, as if afraid of breaking the silence of the valley, or disturbing some powerful being.

Following the cyclops from a distance away, Han Shuo hid at a cliff above the valley. He looked down from above, observing the cyclops' movements.

The cyclops advanced forward carefully after arriving at the valley. As it walked, it reached back to undo the huge shovel, heading for the small lake underneath the waterfall.

Contrary to Han Shuo's expectations, the small lake was extremely deep. The cyclops was nearly ten meters tall, and yet the lake water reached his shoulders when he entered the lake.

As careful as the cyclops had been, he caused numerous violent ripples to spread when he entered the lake. Fish of various colors scattered in fear, and the clear waters around his body gradually became muddier, clearly affected by his movements.

When the cyclops moved its hands and started using shovel, the lake water surged even more and the clear surface of the lake became even murkier, as pieces of gigantic rock were flung onto the bank by the moving shovel.

The cyclops was able to determine with just one glance which rocks were useful, and which were useless. He would put away the useful rocks the moment he excavated them and then continued working.

All of the rocks that the cyclops dug out had some sort of muddy silt stuck to them. Han Shuo couldn't determine what they were. However, since the cyclops had become interested in them, and had snuck over to dig them out from such a far distance, they were unlikely to be something that could be easily found.

Suddenly, several powerful auras descended on the valley. All of them locked their attention onto the cyclops, as if waiting for something.

Han Shuo instantly slowed his breathing and heart rate, and began intentionally concealing his presence. He wanted to prevent anyone from discovering a single trace of him and bringing him unnecessary trouble.

As a super rank magic beast, Gilbert also had a miraculous way of concealing himself. He slowly snuck into the current in the lake after a glance from Han Shuo, continuing to sink downwards until he reached the muddy layers at the bottom of the lake.

As one of the evil races of the underground world, the dark dragons had a natural talent for hiding in mire. When Gilbert sank into the mud and was blocked by the flowing water and mud, even Han Shuo needed to sense very carefully before being able to find a trace of the dark dragon.

After concealing himself, Han Shuo commanded the three yin demons to slowly move around the valley and slowly scout out the direction where he had sensed the powerful auras.

Firstly, there was an old woman, whose face was full of wrinkles, wearing a flaming red magician robe, who stood on top of a branch of a seven-meter-tall tree. From the magical insignia on her robe, Han Shuo recognized that this old woman was actually a fire grand magus. Her vision did not rest on the cyclops. Instead, she kept casting her gaze around, as if more interested in the valley itself.

The second person was a middle-aged hulk. He looked rather handsome, with short golden hair sticking up, appearing very energized. He'd stopped behind a boulder and was focusing his attention on the cyclops itself.

There was a strange aura around the middle-aged hulk. It was actually rather similar to Gilbert's aura. Han Shuo carefully observed the middle-aged man and suddenly understood that he was an adult, golden dragon.

The third powerful being had landed within the bushes. It was a savage, huge ape around five meters tall with long silver fur and a pair of blood-red eyes. Its long arms ended with sharp fingernails that were akin to knives. There were traces of blood on one of them, as if it had just ripped open a magical beast.

The last person was a beautiful young girl, who was hovering in the air on the back of a pegasus. She had clear eyes, white skin, and a flawless face. A holy aura emanated from her features. She rode atop the pegasus with a straight back and breasts held high, appearing quite full. Her attention was also on the cyclops.

Thanks to the surveillance of the three yin demons, Han Shuo examined the four powerful beings from all directions. He couldn't help but be shocked. The Dark Forest was truly a terrifying place. A single cyclops had attracted the attention of so many powerhouses.

There were four powerful beings, two beasts and two people. The middle-aged hulk was naturally a golden dragon in its human form. As the race with the most powerful bodies amongst dragons, they were publicly acknowledged to be strong. The aura of this middle-aged hulk was as steady as a mountain. He was definitely a powerful being who had evolved at least three times. He wasn't something that a rookie dark dragon could compare up to.

The silver-eyed giant ape had an enormous body that was four meters tall. From the cold sharpness of its nails, Han Shuo could tell that they were drenched in the blood of various powerful men and beasts from within the Dark Forest. The aura of bloodlust surrounded it. Although he didn't know what sort of mutated monster it was, its powerful aura was definitely not weak.

The old woman with a face full of wrinkles was a fire grand magus. Her control over fire magic already reached its peak, so her strength was definitely terrifying.

Han Shuo was unable to determine the strength of the beautiful young girl on the pegasus from her appearance, but since she'd dared to appear here, Han Shuo believed that she wouldn't be an opponent that would be easy to handle. She definitely would've never appeared if she didn't have extreme confidence in her own abilities.

When Han Shuo had fully appraised the four powerful beings that were hidden, he immediately contacted Gilbert, telling him to stop moving to prevent an unfortunate disaster.

“Roar...”

An enormous roar suddenly rang out from underground. The entire valley shook as the boulders on the cliffs trembled and tumbled towards the small lake.

This roar came from deep within the earth. It was filled with endless fury. The four powerful and hidden existences all displayed varied expressions upon hearing this loud howl.

The golden dragon and the beautiful girl on the pegasus were shocked and didn't know what to do or what was happening. Their gazes shifted from the cyclops towards the lake and stream. However, the fire grand magus and the gigantic silver ape seemed to understand what had happened, and their expressions revealed a hint of eager anticipation.

After that loud roar, the temperature of the originally temperate valley shot up quickly. The lake and the clear river suddenly transformed into a hot spring as steam rose up from them and gradually diffused through the valley.

The cyclops clearly knew what was going on as well. Its originally light-footed actions immediately sped up, as if it was avoiding something and wanted to maximize the most strange ores possible from the lake in a shortest period of time. It frantically sped up its work.

The ground in the valley trembled in accompaniment to the large sound. The ground beneath the lake and river split open. The temperature in the valley rose, causing some of the fragile flowers that couldn't withstand it to wilt. Following that, some branches and bushes cracked as they dried up and started smoking.

Even Gilbert, hidden within the mud, was unable to withstand the rapid rise in water temperature. It nearly turned him into a roasted dragon, making him want to break out from the mire.

However, Han Shuo noticed that the four hidden powerful beings had raised their vigilance to the utmost. There was an ominous killing intent that filled the valley, as if a large-scale war would unfold at any second. He was extremely shocked and hastily stopped Gilbert. Han Shuo told him to banish the thought of leaving the river bottom so that he wouldn't become the first target to be attacked.

Han Shuo was fiercely stopping the dark dragon's action and telling him to leverage the convenience of the mud to leave the valley. This was to prevent him from unfortunately becoming the target of everyone's attacks and dying a terrible death.

Gilbert withstood the pain of his body being burnt and used the dark dragon's natural talents to move to a place of lower temperature, gradually leaving the valley and disappearing in the direction of the river's current.

A terrifying roar sounded out from underneath the ground not long after the dark dragon left. The river and lake seemed to be torn open as magma gushed through to them. The scorching hot temperature made everyone feel extremely uncomfortable.

Ten or so flaming red rock giants, that seemed to be constructed from magma, slowly stood up where the magma was gathering within the river.

The body of these giants were red like iron brands; there seemed to be magma continuously circulating throughout their bodies. Each of them were as huge as the gigantic silver ape, and appeared very savage as magma flowed in their eyes. As the magma spread through the water, they rushed towards the cyclops.

"The Scorching Demon Generals, they really are here!" The old woman, who happened to be the fire grand magus, couldn't help but exclaim with a face full of excitement.

The huge silver ape appeared extremely ferocious. There was a savage light sparkling within its blood red eyes. It was anxiously waving its thick arms around at this moment, as if it was prepared to rush in and fight, but hesitated like it was waiting for something.

The golden dragon and the pegasus girl seemed to be targeting only the cyclops. They clearly hadn't thought that this situation would develop and froze, trying to quickly think of something.

While the four hidden powers were slowly gathering ideas, the magma constructed Scorching Demon Generals charged towards the cyclops.

The cyclops no longer dared to stay now. It picked up its shovel and once again stepped out heavily, hoping to quickly leave the valley behind and avoid the attacks of these demon generals.

The temperature within the valley rose up swiftly, immediately cracking the surrounding ground and wilting all vegetation in an extremely short period of time. The scorching temperature emanating from underneath the ground caused Han Shuo to feel very uncomfortable.

Yet, just at this moment, Han Shuo closed his eyes and relaxed his body, as if wanting to perceive his surroundings more clearly.

After a while, Han Shuo opened his eyes and light sparkled in them. He gazed down into the valley that had been turned into a sea of fire and muttered, "Yes, yes, it should be a place of extreme fire down there!"

Chapter 235: Sea of Fire

“ROAR!”

Another terrifying roar rang out from beneath the ground, the valley trembling vehemently throughout. Large boulders on the cliff tumbled down, while the gigantic boulders that formed the waterfall creaked madly, as if they were about to crumble at any moment.

An extremely powerful aura subtly seeped out of the cracked ground. The roar's powerful sound wave caused the wilted trees to suddenly crash to the ground and the earth to rupture very quickly, forming a huge ravine.

Han Shuo no longer sent his three yin demons in separate directions for surveillance. Instead, he immediately called them back to his side to verify the disturbances in his surroundings. Han Shuo also couldn't help but vault away from the rocks and take to the air because the scorching heat had already transformed the boulders into bright red heated irons.

The scorching demon generals that'd stalked out of the magma attacked the cyclops without any hesitation. In concert with the terrifying sound blast, the demon generals sent streams of magma from the river shooting towards the cyclops' enormous body.

Three four-meter tall demon generals strode out from the ground's depths and blocked the cyclops' path of retreat as their flaming bodies charged towards the cyclops.

The cyclops's enormous body was twice as tall as the demon generals'. Its azure muscles sturdy as granite, the huge shovel it was holding with both hands became its weapon to block the attacks. Every single swing embodied monumental strength and caused gusts of hot air to spin wildly within the valley.

Loud crackling explosions continuously echoed near the cyclops' body as every swing of the shovel deflected a stream of magma, causing a spray of sparks to fly everywhere. Rocks hidden within the magma exploded on contact, shrapnel flying off in all directions.

When some wilted small vegetation off to the side was brushed by the burning rocks, they immediately went up in flames. Instantly, a raging fire started to rapidly spread, enveloping the entire valley in a burning ocean.

A flaming rock the size of a skull was batted to the side with contemptuous ease. Yet the furious force with which it flew towards Han Shuo forced him to flee in a sorry fashion.

With a loud crack, the flaming rock smashed into the hard rock where Han Shuo had previously been standing. A splendid shower of sparks decorated the air as the searing hot flame burned a hole clear through the boulder, causing the people around to gasp at its miraculousness.

Firespark Stone, the ultimate material for refining weapons! Han Shuo gazed intently at that fiery piece of rock, and immediately knew from those flames what this miraculous rock was. This was the material that cultivators required most of all to refine their weapons – the Firespark Stone.

Han Shuo reached out with his left hand, and a wisp of purple spellfire rose up like a sliver of a soul. It carried a sinister aura and slowly enfolded the Firespark Stone.

The moment the scorching heat made contact with the cold aura, dense white smoke immediately billowed out alongside a squeaking sound. When Han Shuo felt the Mystical Glacial Spellfire take effect, he immediately activated his magical yuan. When his magical yuan covered the purple flame of the Firespark Stone, it flickered up even more beautifully.

Wisps of white mist began to rise from the Firespark Stone. Under the impact of the sinister aura, the fire burning on the Firespark Stone was slowly extinguished as it slowly calmed to a normal appearance, finally becoming a normal fire-red colored boulder, red light sparkling from within like a ruby.

Seeing the flames on the Firespark Stone extinguish, Han Shuo immediately revealed a joyous expression and placed this rock, that was the size of a skull, into his space ring. It would be of great use in the future when he refined weapons.

Whether they were magical cultivators or demonic cultivators, cultivators couldn't avoid needing some special flames for refining weapons. Some particular materials would only be melted with special flames. The Firespark Stone was very special. If it wasn't exposed to flames, it acted the same as any other rock, not even the least bit warm.

But once the Firespark Stone was touched by the tiniest spark, it would immediately start burning intensely. Only once the energy contained within the Firespark Stone was completely consumed would it become the most ordinary of rocks. During this process, the enormous fire energy of the Firespark Stone was able to melt any material, which made it convenient for cultivators to refine their weapons.

Han Shuo felt extremely happy after laying his hands on a piece of Firespark Stone, and started searching around with a bright gaze in order to find more stones from the sparks in the sky.

At that moment, a fiery streak of a dragon tore through the sky and landed close to the beautiful girl riding a pegasus. There was an even larger piece of Firespark Stone burning where the dragon had landed, shrouding the entire area around it in a sea of flame.

The four experts who'd been hiding in the valley had already raised their vigilance to the limit. Due to the chaos in the valley, traces of some of them had been revealed. They'd all discovered each other, but none of them took action.

For someone to appear in this valley and not be afraid in the face of such a terrifying scene, they either had mental issues, or were powerhouses who had no need to be afraid. All of the experts knew that they couldn't make a careless move without fully understanding the situation. That's why, even after knowing that there were others in hiding, they didn't dare easily blow their cover.

As the larger piece of Firespark Stone burned intensely, it heated up the surroundings, causing the pegasus girl to sweat profusely, releasing a sweet fragrance. Due to the sweat, the curves of her tall breasts became even more alluring.

There was no way to extinguish the Firespark Stone without special means once it started burning. As Han Shuo looked at the Firespark Stone endlessly consume its energy, he hesitated and finally flew out, moving towards that area.

“Who is it?” The pegasus beauty called out softly. She’d clearly noticed Han Shuo’s actions, since her long eyelashes fluttered quickly as she watched the approaching Han Shuo cautiously.

“I bear no ill will, I just want to pick something up!” Han Shuo called out softly and slowly revealed himself. He was afraid that if he acted too quickly, it would cause this girl to suddenly attack.

Han Shuo was also cautiously on guard during this entire process. He had already called out the Demonslayer Edge, and a yin demon watched her every move and expression. If this girl made the slightest expression of hostility, Han Shuo would mercilessly make the first move.

Through the yin demon’s surveillance, Han Shuo noticed that the arched eyebrows of the girl was furrowing slightly. Two rows of sweat rolled down her fair cheeks, along her neck, and made it into her the depths of her clothing. The girl anxiously urged the pegasus to fly into the sky as she carefully looked at Han Shuo, perplexed. He was approaching her via flight, but wasn’t making any unusual moves.

The piece of Firespark Stone was to the left of the beautiful girl. Since Han Shuo was afraid that she would misunderstand, he deliberately avoided her body, and circled around to land at the center of the intense flames—where the Firespark Stone was located.

“I mean no harm!” Han Shuo raised his head and looked deeply into the eyes of this beautiful girl as he slowly descended from midair. He clapped his palms together and activated the magical yuan, causing a sphere of purple flame to explode into being between his palms. A wave of freezing aura instantly radiated from Han Shuo’s palms.

Someone that could fly was certainly a top expert. This was common knowledge in the entire Profound Continent. When Han Shuo flew over steadily with a relaxed expression, the girl immediately thought that he was an expert on the same level. Since she saw that Han Shuo hadn't made any actions that displayed ill intentions towards her, she didn't dare carelessly offend Han Shuo either. She only examined him with a pair of beautiful and curious eyes.

When Han Shuo deployed the Mystical Glacial Spellfire, giving form to the freezing purple spellfire, the temperature with Han Shuo at the center also decreased. Using the same method as before, Han Shuo brought over the purple magical spellfire with both of his hands and gradually approached the Firespark Stone.

Intense rumbling smoke suddenly rose up. As the scorching heat aura and the freezing cold aura met, the collision caused once again caused a dense white mist to billow. The Firespark Stone that had been burning intensely started to gradually extinguish amidst squeaks.

The majestic pegasus underneath the beautiful girl was very unused to the inhospitably high temperatures currently in the valley, and had been extremely agitated. It was only due to the girl's continuous control that it did not immediately leave the valley.

However, once Han Shuo's purple spellfire appeared, the temperature around Han Shuo rapidly dropped. It was as if he was a piece of land that the blistering summer was evading. For the majestic pegasus underneath the girl, this was an extremely strong temptation.

The pegasus decided to draw near Han Shuo despite not having received any such orders from its rider. It flew around Han Shuo greedily, as if wanting to stay where the temperature was just right.

Han Shuo, who was focusing on obtaining the Firespark Stone, saw the pegasus' approach and the girl's actions clearly through the surveillance of the yin demons. The beautiful girl was attempting to stop the pegasus from approaching, but was clearly failing.

Han Shuo raised his head and looked at the beautiful girl, revealing a smile of good intentions, signaling that he understood she hadn't approached intentionally, and that she bore no ill will either.

“Thank you!” When the girl smiled, it was as if flowers had bloomed. Her voice was soft and sincere.

“You’re welcome!” Han Shuo lowered his head and continued to use his magical yuan to extinguish this piece of Firespark Stone at the quickest pace possible. He didn’t glance at the beautiful girl anymore.

With the three yin demons, Han Shuo could still keep an eye on the situation of the entire valley even though he was working hard. The scorching demon guards that’d blocked off the cyclops’ way was savagely battling, trying to make the cyclops permanently stay in the valley.

However, the cyclops was twice as large as the scorching demon generals, and possessed an extremely hard body. It was furiously flailing about with the giant shovel in its hand. In a shocking turn of events, he had already hacked two blazing demon generals into several large pieces of rocks that ended up fusing together in the river.

At that instant, a bit of scorching magma splashed onto the cyclops’ azure body, causing a large scalded area. The cyclops wailed in pain, its single eye occasionally glancing at the depths of the magma river, as if scared that a certain powerful being would suddenly break out of the ground.

The fire grand magus was covered in a crimson magic shield. The old woman within had a really excited expression on. Her eyes sparkled as she directed all her attention to the depths of the magma, as if she was waiting for something as well.

The buff golden dragon hulk was completely soaked with sweat in the hot valley. He was slowly moving towards the outside of the valley, as if biding his time to make a move on the cyclops.

The silver fur of the giant silver ape was standing up like needles. When some sparks landed on its silver fur, they actually didn’t leave any burn marks. His tough claws continuously clenched and unclenched as its blood red eyes stayed laser focused on the depths of the magma river, not daring to approach.

“ROAR!”

Another ear shattering roar rang out, and the valley truly started to crumble. The land was ripped apart. The being underneath the ground seemed to be truly furious, as if it was blaming the scorching demon generals for their incompetence. More and more fissures tore open as more magma exploded outwards, spurting in all directions like a fountain.

In what seemed to be an instant, the beautiful scenery in the valley no longer existed. A gigantic ten-odd meters tall thing stood up from the largest crack on the ground, rising along with the boiling magma.

The head of this enormous thing was sharp, its lower body rotund, and it was as flaming red as the scorching demon generals. It seemed to be a huge moving volcano as a powerful aura spread out from its body, seemingly burning the very sky. Swathes of clouds, seemingly set ablaze, covered the sky above the valley, causing the valley to utterly transform into a kingdom of pure conflagration.

As the sky crumbled and the ground shattered, the boulders of the valley imploded, careening downwards. When the gigantic being walked out from the depths of the earth, its enormous body swayed backwards and caused more magma to explode. A volcano had truly erupted!

“It’s actually... actually the Lord of the Flames! No wonder scorching demon generals would appear!” The beautiful girl exclaimed, immediately spurred the pegasus underneath it, yelling. “Leave, now!”

The pegasus, though infatuated with the temperature around Han Shuo, was clearly very happy to hear the girl’s orders. It flew up beautifully and planned to leave this place of trouble.

However, the terrifying Lord of the Flames was furiously burning everything. The burning clouds in the sky were not illusions, they had actually enveloped the valley. When the girl and pegasus flew up, the flaming clouds lit up with intense flames, turning the sky into a sea of fire as well. No one could even think about escaping through the air.

Furious killing intent spread out from the body of the Lord of the Flames. All of the experts realized that this fire manipulator was of a mind to savagely slaughter the intruders that had dared to break into its kingdom!

Chapter 236: The strong work together

By the time Han Shuo finally secured the Firespark Stone, the entire valley had already been sealed off by fire. Six powerful beings, including Han Shuo, were all trapped within the valley.

Those six powerful beings, who all had different goals, were about to face the wrath of the Lord of the Flames' surrounded by volcanic eruptions. No one had been fortunate enough to escape.

After the Firespark Stone was stored safely into the space ring, Han Shuo extinguished the purple spellfire between his palms. The surrounding temperature began to rise rapidly once again. Sweat gathered on Han Shuo's body and flowed down like small rivers.

As they were facing a sky filled with fiery clouds, the beautiful girl and the pegasus were forced to land on the ground. They looked up at the flaming clouds with resignation. It looked like they didn't dare to directly break through the ocean of flames that occupied the sky above the valley.

The fire grand magus with the crimson shield floated like the wind, occupying the place between Han Shuo and the girl. She smiled and said, "The three of us are human. I think it'll be easier to communicate between us. Taking a united stand against the enemy at this moment might make it easier for us to survive. What do you guys think?"

When faced with horrifying danger, alliances between the powerful wasn't a bad idea. Besides from the Lord of the Flames, there was also the gigantic silver ape, the cyclops, and the golden dragon. Those three beings were also exceptionally powerful, but it was a pity that they weren't human, making them less than ideal targets to partner with.

"Of course, only by cooperating can we live to walk out of this kingdom of flames!" Han Shuo naturally knew that with his ability alone, he didn't have complete confidence in dealing with any of the experts within the valley. This fire grand magus seemed to at least know what was going to happen. Although he didn't know what she was planning, he could at least wait and see.

“This idea isn’t bad, granny!” The beautiful girl revealed a dazzling smile and responded with a sweet and clear voice.

The fire grand magus seemed to know that Han Shuo and the beautiful girl would agree, she slightly shook the magic staff in her left hand and chanted a mystical spell. A boundary the size of a house instantly appeared around the three of them. The boundary was invisible and formless, but it isolated them from the high temperature. The scorching temperatures from the magma outside was completely blocked off.

The magic shield on the old woman disappeared after she’d formed the boundary. She smiled and looked towards Han Shuo and the girl. She introduced herself, “I’m called Marceau, I come from the Brut Merchant Alliance. I major in fire magic.”

“Bryan Han from the Lancelot Empire. I’m a necromancer,” Han Shuo replied.

“Sophie from the Kasi Empire. I’m a knight. Ugh, and an amateur summoner,” The beautiful pegasus girl answered simply. The moment she said this, she softly chanted a spell and made the pegasus she had been riding the entire time miraculously disappear.

The old woman Marceau and the girl called Sophie seemed to have heard of each other’s name. When the two introduced themselves, the other person revealed a shocked expression. Only Han Shuo was an unknown, and the two were unfamiliar with him. They looked at him in confusion. As an expert who focused on necromancy and could fly, they definitely would’ve heard of him if the Lancelot Empire had such a person. Thus, Marceau and Sophie both assumed that Han Shuo had given a fake name after realizing that they’d never heard of Han Shuo’s name.

In response to the two people’s confusion, Han Shuo shook his head and smiled wryly as he explained, “I’m telling the truth, I only made my debut recently, it’s normal for my name not to be known. There’s nothing to feel odd about.”

“ROAR!...”

The Lord of the Flames’ loud roar rang through the valley. Along with the terrifying sound wave, its massive body began to chase the cyclops with surprising speed.

Rays of scorching flames danced like flailing ribbons, while the insanely high temperature caused the air itself to crackle and pop. Flames mixed with magma surged towards the cyclops under the Lord of the Flames' manipulation, causing the cyclops to scurry around in an unsightly manner, clearly showing that it wasn't able to stand up to its opponent.

The golden dragon seemed to be targeting the cyclops, but after realizing now that it also faced an enormous threat, it seemed to have given up the plan of immediately dealing with the cyclops. Instead, it paced around the exit of the flaming valley, wondering how to leave.

At that moment, the enormous silver ape beat its chest with a roar, and turned into a bolt of silver lightning as it tore through space, shooting directly at the Lord of the Flames, who was still chasing the cyclops. While in the air, its two razor sharp claws danced in front of its chest, sending out several rays of cold light similar to a sword's fighting aura.

When several flaming demonic generals in the vicinity were hit by the rays of cold light, their bodies crumbled with a huge crack, the pieces swiftly fusing into the magma flow.

Watching through the yin demons, Han Shuo couldn't help but be shocked. He didn't know what sort of mutated magical beast this gigantic silver ape was, but it had such terrifying destructive abilities.

Its two claws could shoot out attacks akin to sword flashes, which seemed to hold tremendous power, like it could tear through anything. The flaming demonic generals, who were just as huge as it was, and had bodies like heated metal to boot, were torn into pieces from afar before they'd even neared the gigantic silver ape's body.

"The power of the gigantic silver ape is very terrifying. I have once saw it tear apart three twin head dragons before. It should be a mutated super rank magical beast! Its target is the Lord of the Flames. I have watched for a while, and found that it had come to the valley three times, but it had never dared to provoke the Lord of the Flames. This time, they might actually fight!” Granny Marceau had also had been paying attention to the distant commotion as well.

Han Shuo momentarily blanked, then understood that Marceau truly hadn’t come here by chance like himself. She must’ve surveyed the area for a long time, and then chosen to come here during the chaos. However, he didn’t know what she planned on doing.

“Aoooo…”

A loud roar exploded from where the golden dragon was. A gigantic golden dragon, fifteen or sixteen meters long, suddenly revealed its form within dazzling golden light.

After the golden dragon had transformed back to its original form, its long and slender body shook, releasing a terrifying surge of dragon breath that exploded outwards, disintegrating the red boulder that sealed the valley. The sudden explosion caused a path five or six meters wide to suddenly appear in the valley that the Lord of the Flames had sealed off.

As the dragon race with the most incredible fighting abilities, the golden dragons boasted the strongest attacks and defense. They’d always been synonyms for strength and power, and taking on its dragon form had made it even more ferocious. Even the valley that has been sealed shut by the Lord of the Flames was blasted clear by the golden dragon’s dragon breath.

“This Lord of the Flames is a super rank magical beast that has evolved four times, but this golden dragon has only evolved three times. Its decision to give up on taking revenge on the cyclops, and choosing to leave the valley instead is the wiser decision!” The fire grand magus, Marceau, gazed at the large commotion in the distance and calmly explained the situation to Han Shuo and Sophie.

“ROAR!”

The Lord of the Flames let out an earth-shattering howl. When faced with the golden dragon’s dragon breath, it naturally considered it provocation, so it howled loudly to vent the rage in its heart.

All of a sudden, the flowing magma on the ground and the flaming clouds covering the sky all rushed towards the opening which the golden dragon had created, following the will of the Lord of the Flames. The path that was created by the dragon's breath attack was once again sealed shut by the searing flames, magma, and the flaming clouds before the golden dragon had time to leave. This time, it was sealed even tighter. At this, the golden dragon was completely enraged!

As the proudest species amongst the super rank magical beasts, the method that the golden dragon had tried to take in leaving the valley had given quite a bit of face to the Lord of the Flames. However, this rank four Lord of the Flames seemed to truly want to burn everything with its flames, causing the golden dragon to completely lose its temper.

A dominating dragon roar came out from the golden dragon's huge mouth. The golden dragon decided to give up on its original plans. Ignoring the cyclops, it charged directly towards the Lord of the Flames. Along the way, the golden dragon swung its tail, making it so that the scorchingly hot flaming rocks were unable to leave even the tiniest of scratches on its shimmering body.

At the same time, Marceau suddenly exclaimed in joy and said excitedly, "Chance, a chance for us has finally arrived!"

Han Shuo turned around to gaze at Marceau, then said calmly. "I think that you should tell us your plan now. Otherwise, it's impossible for the two of us to blindly follow you!"

"There is a very miraculous existence in the underground domain of the Lord of the Flames. It was only due to this miraculous existence that it was able to evolve four times. I have researched fire magic for many years, and have noticed that that place has a strange kind of fire attribute energy. This energy is different from the usual fire element, it is much more mysterious and mystical."

"Not only did this miraculous location shape a rank four Lord of the Flames, it's also nurtured a mysterious Fire Lotus and many strange rocks. I only discovered this by coincidence. Using the opportunity while the Lord of the Flames battles outside, I can use my fire manipulation magic and take you guys into that underground world together, and bring out some interesting things. What do you think about that?" Fire grand magus Marceau, looked very anxious as she looked at the other two people and explained quickly.

"Sure!" Han Shuo answered decisively without any sort of hesitation.

Fire grand magus Marceau was definitely a powerful figure. From her to be able to discover this place of extreme fire, and even understand that the fire element energy within was completely different from the energy of the fire elements, it seemed as though she had definitely put a lot of work into studying the place of extreme fire underneath.

Although fire element energy and the fire element were both fire attribute existences, they were two completely types of power. In this world, as long as a mage had mental strength, they can use it to communicate with the fire element and cast fire magic anywhere.

The fire element existed everywhere in this world. According to a mage's mental strength, a fire mage could communicate with the fire element and release fire magic that was either powerful or weak.

However, fire element energy did not exist everywhere. It only existed in some mystical places in the world. Only when a place that coincided with heaven and earth and formed a land of natural treasure, would it be possible for fire element energy to form in some blisteringly hot places after hundreds and thousands of years. Out of these places, the place of extreme fire was without a doubt the best spot to nurture fire element energy. Compared to the fire element that was everywhere, fire element energy was far rarer. If it was then refined by some cultivators who knew how to use it, it could display even more mystical and incredible power.

The Lord of the Flames had always been a magical beast that found it extremely difficult to evolve. However, this one had evolved four times and become an extremely savage fire magical beast thanks to this place of absolute fire. If this Ruler of Flame could evolve once again, it would become an Emperor of the Flames that possessed power and divinity similar to that of a demigod.

If the Emperor of the Flames could break through the fifth evolution, it would surpass the boundaries of magical beasts and become a fire god with a divine fate, possessing true divine powers as well as powerful fire manipulation abilities.

Han Shuo understood that this was a chance. He had to take a look at the place of extreme fire no matter what in order to see if he had a chance to refine a fire elite zombie. The elite zombies of the five elements was Han Shuo's goal. If he counted this place of extreme fire, he only had a place of extreme metal left to locate. Only when the elite zombies of the five elements were gathered could they use the earth-shattering effects of the formation.

Beautiful girl Sophie was likely targeting the cyclops. She was clearly a bit hesitant to accede to Marceau's suggestion. She contemplated for a while, finally nodding her head lightly, agreeing to Marceau's suggestion.

"Alright, then let's take the opportunity when they're fighting to hurry to the underground kingdom of the Lord of the Flames!" Seeing that Sophie agreed, fire grand magus Marceau displayed a joyous expression, and hurriedly activated a spell. Sparks suddenly arose from the invisible magic boundary covering the three of them, seeming to have the ability to absorb the fire element. As the sparks flew, the surrounding fire element was swiftly absorbed into the boundary.

After absorbing the enormous amount of energy, the boundary contracted bit by bit and emitted a dazzling red light as the temperature inside also gradually rose. Only when the temperature inside the boundary was about forty degrees Celsius and it'd become three or four meters in size, did the temperature stop rising and the space stop shrinking.

"Go!" Marceau, called out softly, causing the boundary to carry the three people and circle around the great battle of the enormous beings. It then descended into the flaming fissure on the ground that was shooting out magma.

Chapter 237: Fire Attribute Treasure

The temperature within the boundary stopped at around forty degrees, while the magma that spewed out of the crack in the ground was halted outside the boundary, not affecting the three people within its confines at all.

Fire grand magus Marceau clearly found the process very difficult. Since there was a large amount of magical element within the boundary, it meant that she had spent a lot of mental strength in order to shift this boundary.

After the boundary had shrunk to a size of three to four meters, it became rather close quarters. Adding onto the fact that it was a hot and muggy temperature of forty degrees within, it caused the people to feel wet and uncomfortable, even though it wasn't as scorching as it was outside.

However, Han Shuo's body was able to easily handle a temperature of this degree. His body wasn't covered in sweat even though he didn't use his demonic arts to defend himself. Instead, he used this rare spare time to sit down cross legged, calmly adjusting his breathing to recover the magical yuan that he'd expended earlier.

Beautiful knight Sophie wore tight clothes that clung to her great figure. Her sweat soaked through her clothes, making it seem like she'd just taken a bath in her clothes, emphasizing the curves on her body. Due to the high temperature, the sweat on her body flowed continuously as she wheezed erratically, continuously fanning herself with her hands to create a little bit of wind to cool herself.

The fire grand magus was just as focused as Han Shuo as she paid careful attention to controlling the boundary. The wrinkles on her face were like gullies that were currently filled with sweat. They were unable to stop the sweat from slowly dripping down her body due to gravity.

The two yin demons, that had been left in the valley, were surveying everything that was going on outside, so that Han Shuo could find out everything going on above in order to make the most precise decisions.

After descending into the magma crack on the ground, the boundary continued to sink. As the surrounding flames burned fiercely, bits of magma and loud rumbling sounds shot everywhere. When they collided with the boundary, radiant sparks appeared and created a beautiful scene of an ocean of fire.

Unfortunately, for the three people in the boundary, Han Shuo and Marceau had no spare effort to pay attention to the surrounding scene; while female knight Sophie was uncomfortably covered in sweat creating a burning fire of anxiety in her heart. She naturally wasn't of the mind to pay attention to the beautiful scenery around her.

The three of them and the boundary slowly sank downwards amidst the scorching and brilliant sparks. During this process, fire grand magus Marceau manipulated the direction of the boundary, slowly guiding it to fall towards the earth's center. She seemed to be rather familiar with the situation here.

Finally, the moving boundary stopped. Han Shuo opened his eyes instantly and carefully surveyed the scene around him. He wanted to imprint everything into his mind with the shortest amount of time.

What he saw first was a vast lake of fire. It was like the burning sun as it released scorching light and heat. Turbulent magma emerged in the form of pillars of fire dragon. They shot up up pillar by pillar. They were likely so fierce due to the influence from the Lord of the Flames' powers.

Blazing walls of boulders were around the vast lake of fire. These walls of boulders were red like heated metal as they radiated an intense temperature. They filled up the surroundings with piercing red light, causing the entire area to become a huge space of flames.

There was a strange fire lotus at the center of the fire lake that bloomed miraculously in the turbulent lake filled with magma. It simmered with an unusual red light and seemed to have a sort of tempting beauty as it swayed on the fiery waters.

The three of them were still enclosed by the boundary and floated inside an opening within the wall of boulders. This moved them safely away from the spurting magma.

“Firespark Stone, Firesun Crystal, Red Onyx...”

Han Shuo exclaimed softly with surprise when he noticed that there were several pieces of magical rocks scattered not far from the cave entrance. They were all weapon-refining treasures of the fire attribute. Their quality was top tier and could be used to refine high quality fire flying swords or be directly absorbed by fire cultivators in order to improve their arts.

“This area is very mysterious. It’s filled with strange energy, and the stones that is nurtured around it are very valuable. If they were embedded into a magic staff, it would definitely give a great improvement to fire mages!” Grand magus Marceau said as she wiped away her sweat.

However, Han Shuo, as a demonic cultivator, could recognize many of the strange stones based on Chu Canglan’s memories even without her explanations. He understood that these special stones all had different types of great effects, and each one of them were highly useful.

“Open the boundary, I have to go and collect some!” Han Shuo felt really excited, but he still spoke with a calm expression.

Marceau blinked, then hesitated for a moment before reminding with goodwill, “The temperature outside the boundary is several times higher than within. I think that the moment you leave the boundary, you will be baked by the high temperature. I would advise you not to take the risk!”

“It’s okay, I think I can withstand it!” Han Shuo used his magical yuan to create a jumping sphere of purple flame to appear in his left palm. A wave of cold breeze air instantly blew up in the forty degrees interior of the boundary, causing Sophie and Marceau to shudder with cold, despite perspiring heavily. Their flowing sweat suddenly stopped, bringing to them a cold feeling.

“What kind of magic is this?” Fire grand magus Marceau couldn’t help but exclaim after seeing the high temperature within the boundary instantly drop, nearly turning into an extremely hot spot into an ice cavern the moment the purple flames appeared in Han Shuo's palm.

"Hehe, it's just a special type of martial arts, so don't worry, I think I can withstand the high temperatures outside!" Han Shuo gave a faint smile as he looked confidently towards Marceau while holding the ball of jumping purple flames.

"I think you're right!" Marceau nodded and then said. "Pay attention, the moment I count to three, I will send you out of the boundary, so prepare yourself."

Han Shuo took in a deep breath and circulated his magical yuan, moving his fingers on his hands agilely as waves of purple flames appeared from his fingertips.

When Marceau counted to three, the section of the boundary in front of Han Shuo was sheared off, as if by a knife. The high temperature attacked his face as scorching waves of fire broke through the boundary, instantly covering Han Shuo's entire body. Without Marceau's control, the boundary cracked like an egg shell. Not only did it lose the ability to block off the heat wave, it also lost the ability to remain in the air.

The boulders were boiling heat where Han Shuo had landed. If he stepped down, his feet would instantly burnt to cinders. When he activated his magical yuan to cast the Mystical Glacial Spellfire, he naturally didn't forget about the Arts of the Demonic Ninth Heaven. In the moment his feet were about to land on the flaming stone, he suddenly stopped moving in midair.

The yin demon that Han Shuo had left behind in the boundary was paying attention to the two women's actions. Han Shuo himself didn't waste a split second as he used the extreme coldness of the Mystical Glacial Spellfire, covering his entire body in white smoke as he planned to act covertly.

When Han Shuo started flying, Marceau and Sophie looked at his actions in shock. They were clearly very surprised. At the same time, when the extreme cold on Han Shuo's body was met with the high temperature, his body was instantly covered with white smoke, obscuring his figure from their eyes.

“The most magical thing in this area should be that fire lotus at the center of the lake. He’s gone to collect stones to forge weapons, then let’s go and pick that fire lotus!” Fire grand magus Marceau did not seem to care about the unknown rocks around her. Perhaps, it was because she didn’t know what kind of miraculous effects those rocks had and had placed all her attention onto that fire lotus.

The fire lotus had roughly ten bright red leaves that were the size of palm leaves. It was as translucent as a crystal. Strange red light flowed in the texture of every leaf, as if they were nurturing life through flames. The fire lotus was extremely eye catching in the flaming fire lake, giving people a feeling of awe-inspiring beauty.

Fire grand magus Marceau and Sophie were completely captivated by this strange lotus. Both of them gazed at the fire lotus like they were mesmerized. Marceau started moving the magical boundary and slowly approached the fire lotus together with Sophie.

Han Shuo did not activate his arts within the dense white smoke to collect fire rocks. Instead, he quickly dug a large hole and dripped his blood essence into it. His sparkling eyes occasionally glanced over to the fire lotus. while the expression on his face was extremely calm, as if he was quickly thinking about setting something up.

After hearing Marceau’s description before they’d come down, Han Shuo understood that the place of extreme fire had nurtured a fire lotus, and thus formed his own plans. No matter what, the fire lotus could not be obtained by Marceau nor Sophie. As a fire attribute treasure and a spiritual treasure that was nurtured by the place of extreme fire, the fire lotus had the miraculous effect of directly enclosing a zombie in order to help a zombie directly become a fire elite zombie.

The places of the five extreme elements had a chance to nurture treasures of the five elements based on time and special circumstances. The place of extreme earth, place of extreme wood, and the Valley of Sunshine’s place of extreme water may have needed too much time, or perhaps were not suitable locations, and so no treasures had appeared.

However, this place of extreme fire may have existed for over several hundred thousand years, and had been storing energy during this long period of time. Thanks to the Lord of the Flames as well, it had actually successfully nurtured the treasure of the fire lotus. As the spiritual treasure of the place of extreme fire, the fire lotus had absorbed all sorts of fire attribute power during the thousands of years it had to grow.

Thanks to the existence of the fire lotus, Han Shuo did not need to spend a large amount of time to gather all sorts of materials. He could use secret techniques to build a formation at the place of extreme fire, and start the formation with his blood essence. If he then placed the zombie into the fire lotus, it could help evolve the normal zombie into a fire elite zombie through the nutrients the fire lotus had absorbed over the years, and the dense concentration of fire element energy within the place of extreme fire.

This was an extremely rare chance. Han Shuo would definitely not allow Marceau to take the fire lotus. Therefore, he'd started to organize everything after he exited the boundary.

As Marceau manipulated the boundary and slowly approached the fire lotus, Han Shuo's wave of dense white smoke passed through the caves made from the reddened boulder walls. When the two women saw this, they thought that Han Shuo was taking the chance to collect some unique ores in the surroundings. They didn't know that by using the cover of the dense smoke, Han Shuo had already finished digging the eyes of the formation that was needed to refine the fire elite zombie. Although there was the fire lotus, because there weren't any other materials to refine the fire elite zombie, the connection between eyes of the formation was done using Han Shuo's blood essence. It was fortunate that Han Shuo had swallowed a three hundred years old Blood Essence Grass earlier and possessed enough blood essence. Otherwise, he wouldn't be able to successfully use the formation at this time.

After Han Shuo walked around the walls, dug all of the eyes of the formation, and dripped his blood essence into them, he immediately chanted an incantation and summoned the little skeleton from the other dimension.

“Quick, bring a zombie you approve of. He will have the same treatment as the earth elite zombie!” After issuing the order, he sent little skeleton back to the other dimension before the little skeleton could nod in understanding.

Purple flames then leapt up from Han Shuo’s hand as he activated his magical yuan in the direction that the little skeleton had stood at in order to create a temperate location.

The little skeleton’s body was made out of crystal-like white bones. After multiple refining and training, Han Shuo had enough confidence in the strength of the little skeleton’s body that he knew that this sort of temperature wouldn’t affect the little skeleton at all.

However, if a normal zombie suddenly appeared at such a place like this, it would definitely be in terrible pain due to the scorching high temperature. It might even be directly burned to death. Thus, in order to successfully refine the fire elite zombie, Han Shuo had to make some preparations first, so that the zombie wouldn’t die from the heat once it was placed within.

An urgent call passed over from the other dimension from the little skeleton. When Han Shuo received this call, he immediately cast the spell, resulting in the little skeleton appearing in front of Han Shuo within the temperate area he’d created. When the little skeleton appeared, he was holding a zombie warrior that had an extremely large head.

Perhaps the little skeleton had felt Han Shuo’s anxiousness, and so did not take too long in his search before randomly grabbing a zombie warrior with an extremely large head.

“Alright, it’s you!” Time was tight. Han Shuo saw that everything had been prepared. When he saw the two women approaching the fire lotus, he didn’t have the time to dither as he grabbed the huge zombie and dashed towards the center of the fire lake.

Chapter 238: Disguise

The closer Han Shuo traveled to the fire lake, the hotter the temperature was. But since the big-headed zombie couldn't withstand the heat, Han Shuo had no choice but to use more magical yuan to activate the Mystical Glacial Spellfire in order to lower the temperature around the two of them.

Zombie warriors was used to the dark and instinctively wanted to avoid to the scorching heat and sunlight. This big-headed zombie was no exception as it kept on shaking in Han Shuo's hands, like it was afraid of that searing fire lake.

However, he couldn't move at all within Han Shuo's vice-like grip. Meanwhile, two waves of dense white smoke quickly neared the fire lotus from the boulder walls and arrived beside Marceau in the blink of an eye.

At this moment, the two women were only a bit more than three meters away from the fire lotus below. Since they were afraid of the temperature being higher than what the boundary could entire, the two of them didn't dare to approach the fire lotus that quickly, for fear of the boundary being cracked open by the high temperature.

"Eh, why are you here?" Marceau was surprised to see the two waves of white smoke near. Although she couldn't see Han Shuo's appearance due to the dense mist, she was able to recognize him from his actions.

"I can't stand the baking of the heat anymore, please let me enter the boundary to rest a bit!" Han Shuo's anxious pleading rang out from the thick must. When the sound had reached them, Han Shuo already stopped next to the boundary.

Fire grand magus Marceau was clearly a bit troubled after he said this. It seemed like it was very difficult for her to bring Han Shuo into the boundary, so she hesitated and debated.

Han Shuo suddenly screamed loudly in one of the waves of smoke next to Marceau. The wave of smoke suddenly sank directly towards the beautiful fire lotus.

Screams rang out from continuously the smoke underneath them, shocking them to the core. This caused the two confused women unable to react.

Although Han Shuo was emitting terrible screams whilst covered by the smoke, he had a calm expression on as he grabbed the struggling big-headed zombie warrior and stuffed him into the bud of the flower.

Han Shuo shot out an arrow of blood from his left index finger, causing it to land directly in the big-headed zombie's mouth. At the same time, Han Shuo also imprinted a dark seal into the zombie's body. A jumping purple flame followed Han Shuo's thoughts and covered the zombie, while Han Shuo sent out rays of dark magical light that surrounded the big-headed soldier.

Han Shuo formed his blood essence into a lotus shape and smacked it down onto the big-headed zombie's head. It was as if he'd triggered some sort of prohibition. All of a sudden, twenty-four rays of scorching blood red lights shot out towards the fire lotus from the holes in the boulder walls.

The rays of fire element energy seemed to be couriers for the dense fire element energy, bringing it to the fire lotus in the center. The beautiful fire lotus let out a blinding, splendid red light that leapt around. It slowly began to retract with a miraculous speed and path. During this, the big-headed zombie that Han Shuo had firmly ordered to remain in the bud became wrapped up bit by bit.

"What's going on, what is this!" Marceau, three meters above Han Shuo, couldn't help but exclaim as she observed the mysterious change in the surroundings and felt fire element energy gather furiously.

However, Han Shuo's pitiful wails completely covered Marceau's exclamations. Marceau had no idea what was going on and had no idea just what what Han Shuo had met with below. She didn't dare descend herself the last three three meters to see what was going on underneath.

Due to the influence of the formation, the thick fire element energy in the surroundings was all sent gathered at the fire lotus at the center to provide nutrients for the fire elite zombie. When the fire elite zombie formed, the fire lotus that nurtured it may very well become a treasure that the fire elite zombie could employ.

Twenty-four rays of blood red light had gathered at the fire lotus in the center of the cave. The fire element energy that has circled the entire place of extreme fire for ten thousand years was gradually nourishing the big-headed zombie's body through the fire lotus. As long as it continued to absorb the pure energy and trained according to the seal that Han Shuo had left in his mind, the zombie would be able to continuously change itself and become a strong fire elite zombie.

“ROAR...”

A terrifying roar of anger sounded out from above the fire lake. It was as if the Lord of the Flames sensed the change in the kingdom of fire, howled as a result.

Through the yin demon's surveillance, Han Shuo saw that despite holding a slight upper hand even against three enemies, the Lord of the Flames had given up on the fight with the golden dragon, the cyclops, and the gigantic silver ape. Instead, it moved its enormous volcanic body and slowly walked towards the largest crack in the valley.

The fire lotus nurtured by the fire lake was a treasure of the fire attribute. There was special energy inside, and the Lord of the Flames must have some sort of connection with the fire lotus since it was the ruler of this kingdom of flames. Perhaps, the fire lotus had already been branded with its mark, and it treated the lotus as its own forbidden treasure.

Using the formation and touching this forbidden item, even left a living lifeform within that absorbed the fire element energy around it, this must have startled the Lord of the Flames, and it was rushing over to find out what was happening.

At this moment, the petals of the fire lotus have already closed into a flower bud, and started to sink into the fire lake. Han Shuo immediately knew that his job was complete, and continued to scream as he moved upwards slowly.

Han Shuo's plan has been successful up until now, but he was still unable to know the final results. According to Chu Canglan's memories, Han Shuo knew that after the fire lotus petals had shut tight, it was very hard to open it once again without a special method and particular timing. However, he didn't know whether the Lord of the Flames had a way to open the fire lotus since it was the owner of this fire lake.

Han Shuo knew that there was no guarantee of success, but he had been forced to do this. Otherwise, if he lost this chance, it was unknown when the Lord of the Flames would next leave the place of extreme fire, and there definitely wouldn't be a fire grand magus who would bring him to this strange space.

Therefore, despite not being guaranteed success, Han Shuo needed to make use of this rare opportunity and plant the big-headed zombie into the fire lotus. As for the final result, whether the Lord of the Flames could open the fire lotus or not, would it kill the big-headed zombie or not, none of it was something that Han Shuo could control. It was up to heaven's will!

When Han Shuo's body floated upwards slowly, he intentionally dispelled the purple flames protecting his two legs, and allowed the high temperature of the fire lake to burn his legs. The ends of Han Shuo's trunks were burnt black in an instant, his legs were exposed to the scorching temperature, and they looked like they would be charred to cinders in an instant.

"Save me!" A terrible cry filled with despair rang out from Han Shuo's mouth.

However, Han Shuo's face in the dense smoke had no expression of pain on it. Instead, it was terrifyingly calm. It was like the burning pain on his legs was happening to someone else as he looked at the two people within the boundary with interest.

Fire grand magus Marceau watched the fire lotus slowly sink into the fire lake with a clear expression of regret. She didn't pay attention to Han Shuo's call underneath, and just kept muttering, "My fire lotus, my fire lotus..." It was female knight Sophie who showed pity for Han Shuo. She wheezed heavily as she pulled on the corner of Marceau's clothes and said anxiously, "Go and save him first!"

Marceau suddenly recovered her senses thanks to Sophie's actions. She looked down in dejection, sighed, then nodded unwillingly and started to chant a spell.

A powerful magic suddenly covered Han Shuo's body. Under the guidance of the fire elemental energy, Han Shuo's body was suddenly pulled into the boundary where Sophie and Marceau was staying through the fire sparks.

When Han Shuo had first left, the three to four meter magic boundary had had a section chopped off. Now that Han Shuo's body squished in once again, the chopped off section did not return, and so the magic boundary that Sophie and Marceau were occupying became very crowded due to Han Shuo's sudden appearance.

Han Shuo had a weak expression on his pale face at the moment. He had been burnt on a large scale from his knees down to his feet. Not only was it terrifying, there was also a terrible smell.

Possibly due to her age, identity, or some other reason, the fire grand magus didn't seem to want to touch Han Shuo within the crowded confines. She squeezed herself into a corner, making the collapsed Han Shuo lean on Sophier.

Han Shuo moved his body difficulty, then called out with fake pain, as if wanting to sit up from the collapsed posture. With his arms pressed against the invisible boundary, he couldn't help but touch Sophie's leg.

After Han Shuo had left, the temperature within the boundary had remained around forty degrees. Sophie was still covered in sweat, causing her entire body to feel uncomfortable from the dampness of the clothes stuck to her body. The plastered clothes fully emphasized her curves and well toned body. Through Han Shuo's unintentional touch, he could feel the firmness of Sophie's thigh, as well as the tremendous power within the flexible thighs.

The burning of his two legs had been intentional. This level of injury wouldn't affect the function of his legs. Although it looked terrifying and caused some pain to Han Shuo, there was no other impact to him.

Therefore, although Han Shuo cried out softly as he tried to sit up whilst pretending to be in pain, he wasn't in as bad of a state as he appeared. Thus, when his arm unavoidably touched Sophie's straight, slender thighs, he actually had the effort to spare to rate the flexibility and suppleness of her thigh.

Perhaps due to the boundary being very crowded, Sophie treated this sort of frivolous touching as accidental, and wasn't annoyed. Her arched eyebrows furrowed slightly and instead looked at Han Shuo with a bit of pity. She said kindly, "Let me help you!"

Sophie's soft voice rang out beside Han Shuo's ear. As Han Shuo clenched his teeth in pain, she squatted down slightly and use her jade hands to support Han Shuo's shoulders in order to help him up. She then aided him in sitting down cross legged in the boundary.

Due to how crowded the boundary was, it was unavoidable that the two would have body contact. When she hauled upwards on Han Shuo's arms, their arms pressed tightly , and Han Shuo even "accidentally" touched Sophie's full and well curved breasts with his shoulder.

"Thank you so much!" When Sophie helped Han Shuo sit up from his collapsed position, Han Shuo looked at Sophie sincerely and thanked her wholeheartedly.

"You're welcome, it's what I should do!" Sophie's delicate cheeks were bright red due to the high temperature, but the keen eyed Han Shuo noticed that Sophie's cheeks were even redder than before. She even seemed slightly embarrassed. It seemed that the close contact between the two had caused this kind girl to feel a bit awkward.

Han Shuo and Sophie still remained very close together up until now. Although Sophie had intentionally tried to distance herself, due to the crowded quarters of the boundary, the maximum distance of the two's limbs was not more than twenty centimeters, causing them to smell the scent on each other clearly.

Han Shuo's intense male body odor mixed together with the sweet smell of sweat on Sophie's body. Both of them breathed it in. This special scent was like a miraculous medicine that nourished Han Shuo's eager heart, causing it to palpitate for some reason.

Han Shuo looked deeply at Sophie. His gaze was extremely intense, possibly due to the high temperatures. When Sophie turned her head uncomfortably, Han Shuo greedily took a deep breath, then resumed his normal expression as he flashed a bright smile towards Sophie. He then slowly closed his eyes and started to rest, not wasting any time to restore his magical yuan.

Through the surveillance of the yin demon, Han Shuo saw that Sophie's cheeks had reddened, and her expression seemed rather unnatural. Her long eyelashes fluttered, and she looked oddly at Han Shuo when he started to rest. He was unable to know what she was thinking.

On the other side, Marceau hadn't noticed Han Shuo and Sophie's actions. Since the Lord of the Flames' roar was getting closer, Marceau didn't have any effort to spare to observe what was going on around her. She was completely focused on controlling the boundary and making it gradually rise towards the top where the magma was shooting out.

Chapter 239: Couldn't help it

The Lord of the Flames' terrifying wave of sound carried within it savage and earth-shattering power. It caused all of the spurting magma to stop, and then fall downwards to the fire lake with an even more ferocious speed.

At that moment, not only was the magic boundary unable to rise anymore, but it fell speedily towards the fire lake below due to the reversed flow of the magma.

"This is bad!" Marceau exclaimed anxiously with a face full of shock. "The Lord of the Flames is controlling the magma and making it fall. I used too much mental strength just now and have no way to control the boundary and fly out."

Han Shuo had been resting with his eyes closed and suddenly opened his eyes. He looked at Marceau, "So we're stuck in the fire lake?"

Kind hearted female knight Sophie was equally helpless in this situation and looked anxiously at the scorching magma roiling towards them, completely unsure of what to do.

Suddenly, Marceau revealed a resigned expression and said to Han Shuo and Sophie, "I'm very sorry, I don't think I can leave the fire lake if I bring you two. I'm sorry!"

An strong pulse of magic suddenly traveled out from the position where Han Shuo and Sophie was at. It felt the same as last time when Han Shuo had left the boundary. As fiery sparks flew, the section of the boundary where Han Shuo and Sophie was located was directly cut off from Marceau's boundary as if it had been chopped off by a sharp weapon.

Without the support of Marceau's magic, Han Shuo and Sophie were immediately drowned by the flowing magma as they fell into the fire lake.

"Instead of the three of us dying together, I might as well escape by myself. This couldn't be helped. Please don't blame me!" Marceau murmured to herself remotely as she watched the two people fall and be quickly covered by the magma.

“ROAR...”

The earth-shattering roar was growing closer and closer. Marceau's expression turned to shock when she heard that and she no longer dared remain. She controlled the boundary that was clinging rightly to her and inched upwards against the magma that was falling like a waterfall.

“Ahhh...”

Sophie's yell as she fell towards the fire lake was completely covered by the roar from the Lord of the Flames. Aside from Han Shuo, who happened to be right next to her, no one else heard her scream of despair.

Even a female knight with extraordinary abilities, would instinctively reveal her weak side when facing a life or death situation, so this yell of despair was not a shameful act.

However, no one was able to withstand it when this sort of sharp scream was continuously ringing out right next to your ear. Han Shuo was naturally no exception.

“Miss Sophie, can you stop yelling!” Han Shuo couldn't help but say to Sophie with a look of annoyance as he held Sophie's slender waist with one arm.

To his surprise, the remaining magic boundary that was left on the two of them did not suddenly burst due to Marceau's departure. It was instead covered with a dark light. The dense magma in the surroundings continuously crashed against this dark boundary, but the latter didn't move or crack. Only rays of ghostly light slowly seeped out from Han Shuo's body to stick to the dark boundary.

Sophie very quickly realized the situation they were in after Han Shuo's scolding. Her clear eyes swiftly surveyed her surroundings and she exclaimed in joy, “We're actually not dead!”

“Of course, I just recovered some strength. I think we can hold on for a bit more until we leave this mysterious place!” Han Shuo smiled faintly and comforted Sophie.

Sophie suddenly realized that Han Shuo still had an arm wrapped around her waist. She immediately straightened herself uncomfortably, and struggled out of Han Shuo's arm to maintain a safe distance from him.

Seeing that Sophie had recovered from the shock, Han Shuo no longer intentionally took advantage of her. He smiled apologetically and said, "It couldn't be helped just now, I hope you don't mind. The Lord of the Flames will come back very quickly, we have to leave immediately!"

"That Marceau is actually a famous person from the Brut Merchant Alliance, I didn't think that she could actually do something like this. What a petty character!" The kind Sophie swore furiously as she was still very hung up over Marceau's actions.

Han Shuo however, felt that it was natural. He didn't think that there was anything wrong with Marceau's. After all, the three of them had just met and there was no true friendship between them. When danger befell them, everyone naturally had to think for themselves. Marceau had been forced to do what she'd done, so Han Shuo didn't fear any grudge towards her.

That was because he would've done the same if he were in her position!

However, Han Shuo didn't say much, he merely shrugged and smiled, concentrating on circulating his magical yuan as they slowly flew up through the falling magma.

At Han Shuo's level of magical cultivation, he could naturally form a protective barrier around him via manipulating the magical yuan. As long as his magical yuan didn't run out, he could continue to maintain the barrier so that it didn't break, and use it to stop the invasion of the magma and flames.

Compared to Marceau's barrier from earlier, the insides of Han Shuo's shield had a more moderate temperature. None of the various threats in the surroundings could penetrate the barrier. After the barrier enclosed Han Shuo and Sophie's body, their flight speed actually increased greatly as they broke through the obstacles of layers of magma. They swiftly identified a narrow crack and rushed upwards against the scorching sparks.

Sophie focused on observing Han Shuo's protective barrier during this process and displayed a confused expression. She even reached out carefully her hands and touched the protective shield with black light flowing through it, then mused blankly as she felt the weird texture.

Han Shuo's expression was carefree and confident without pain and suffering he'd shown before as they rushed upwards. This caused the observing Sophie to be very confused. In the end, she couldn't resist as she asked with suspicion, "Are you actually hurt or not?"

Han Shuo understood her meaning the moment she said this and turned to look at Sophie. He smiled wryly and said, "Don't think that I'm fine just because my expression is carefree. I've actually been enduring agonizing pain. It's just that I have to show my strong side in front of a beauty, only then will I leave the image of a powerful man in your mind!"

Sophie obviously hadn't expected Han Shuo to say that. These words were full of ambiguities which Sophie naturally heard as well. She first blanked, then rolled her eyes at Han Shuo with annoyance and laughed, "You're so interesting, who says things like that!"

Han Shuo shrugged and pretended to in pain. He even used his magical cultivation to force himself to break out into a sweat and turned his face ghastly pale. He said with difficulty while panting, "Look, this is my real situation. I might fail at any moment, then we'll both fall into the fire lake together to see that beautiful lotus!"

Sophie was extremely unused to Han Shuo's sudden change in appearance. She said anxiously with great shock, "Don't scare me, I don't care if it's real or not, but I want to see your carefree look of just now!"

"No problem!" Han Shuo laughed heartily as the painful expression disappeared from his face in the blink of an eye. The sweat on his forehead also miraculously disappeared, and he winked at Sophie with an evil smile. He teased casually, "Is this better?"

"Pfft!"

Sophie was unable to hold in her laughter, and she waved her fists to punch towards Han Shuo's chest. She huffed as she waved her fist angrily in front of Han Shuo, "You evil person, you were tricking me the entire time!"

"Haha!" Han Shuo laughed proudly. He then broke through the layers of magma with Sophie in tow and rushed directly towards the crack above.

"You guys are actually fine?!" Marceau, from the Brut Merchant alliance, suddenly exclaimed from a boundary wrapped in magma located beneath Han Shuo and Sophie's body.

Right now, Marceau looked like she was drenched by rain. Her body was soaked in sweat and her face was pale as she huffed and puffed weakly. She moved the magical boundary with difficulty and slowly inched upwards.

Her current appearance was similar to the appearance that Han Shuo had faked. It was obvious that she'd used up a lot of mental strength, and was finding it harder and harder to hold on. When she noticed Han Shuo and Sophie had passed her by like an arrow as they flew straight towards the surface, she was even more shocked.

"Hi, let's meet up there!" Han Shuo casually looked down at Marceau beneath his feet as he responded with a smile. He then activated his magical yuan and ignored Marceau's concentrated gaze as he rushed towards the crack in the ground that was revealing the sky.

One of his yin demons had been left near the underground fire lake, while the other two had remained in the valley all this time. This had enabled Han Shuo to see everything clearly through the three yin demons' surveillance.

When the Lord of the Flames left behind its three enemies without hesitation and wanted to return to the Kingdom of Flames, the enormous silver ape was the only one that went to stop it, but was easily beaten back by the fury of the Lord of the Flames.

Without the cooperation of the golden dragon and the cyclops, the enormous silver ape was unable to defeat Lord of the Flames, it could only watch as the Lord of the Flames entered the largest crack on the ground and hitched a ride underground with the flowing magma.

As the traces of the Lord of the Flames disappeared, the proud golden dragon seemed to remember the purpose for coming to the valley, and immediately started to attack its previous ally – the cyclops. The cyclops seemed to know well beforehand that this would happen as well as it started fighting with the golden dragon. It carved a passage through the valley, as it fought with the golden dragon, making for the exit.

When the Lord of the Flames landed in his kingdom of flames, the enormous silver ape knew that it didn't have any more chances and left from the path that the golden dragon had torn open after beating on its chest. It disappeared with a few hops.

Han Shuo saw all of this through the two yin demons he'd left in the valley. The yin demon left around the fire lake also noticed the enormous body of the Lord of the Flames at this moment. It was mixed with the flames and magma, and was slowly sinking towards the bottom of the lake.

“Phwee...”

A long whistle rang out from a crack in the ground as a black arrow shot out from within, hovering in the sky above the valley.

Having managed to escape from danger, Han Shuo let out a long whistle as the barrier of black light flowing around him cracked like an egg shell. Rays of black light seemed to wrap around Han Shuo like lightning before it slowly sinking into his skin.

These black lightning wiggled beneath his exposed skin. They seemed to be like moving tattoos and displayed a shocking beauty. With Han Shuo's long whistle, the black light slowly faded away as his skin color returned to normal.

“How long are you going to hold onto me for?” Sophie gazed at the series of changes to Han Shuo's body and couldn't help but glare when she saw that he refused to let go of her slender waist.

Due to the crack in the protective barrier, Han Shuo had been afraid of Sophie falling down from the sky and had held onto her slender waist in hurry just now. When he felt the soft elasticity of Sophie's slender waist, the long whistle earlier had also been indescribably comfortable.

"Eh... I couldn't help it, hehe, couldn't help it!" Han Shuo didn't feel awkward at all as he chuckled. "I don't know that if I let go, would you directly crash to your death?"

Sophie looked at Han Shuo in an unfriendly manner and then pointed below. "I'm only a few meters up from the ground. The surrounding area has not been covered by lava yet. Do you think a knight who has dared come to the Dark Forest by herself would fall to her death from a few meters in the sky?"

“呃.....我想不会，你该趁早提醒我的！”韩硕摸了摸头，嬉皮笑脸的说了一句，挽着苏菲细腰的右手紧了紧，留念的感受了一下她细腰的柔软美妙，这才放手任由她往地面落去。

"Ugh... I think not, you should have reminded me earlier!" Han Shuo touched his head and said with a laughing expression. He tightened his right hand on Sophie's thin waist, then gave a last feel for the miraculous softness of her waist, before letting her go and fall towards the ground.

"Awroo..." The Lord of the Flames' strange roar suddenly rang out from deep within the ground.

By using the yin demon underneath to investigate, Han Shuo noticed that the Lord of the Flames' enormous body had been completely fused into the fire lake. The fire lotus that had sunk into the fire lake was raised in its giant palm. A powerful feeling emanated from the Lord of the Flames towards the fire lotus through some sort of mystical power.

Just as Han Shuo was growing worried, the Lord of the Flames suddenly looked up and called out continuously, then carefully caressed the shut fire lotus as if it was a treasure. The murderous air around it was nowhere to be felt. Instead, it was more like a mother as it brought the fire lotus to its chest as a strange motherly love filled the entire fire lake.

"No way, it's not treating the fire elite zombie as its child, right?" Han Shuo guessed in confusion as he was completely dumbfounded.

Chapter 240: A strange place

A ray of red light flew out, showing that Marceau had finally escaped with incredible difficulty. Her wrinkled face was full of dejection as her shining eyes looked around, wanting to understand to fully grasp the current situation within the valley.

The beautiful scenery and the valley full of flowers had been completely destroyed after the four enormous beings' battle. The ravines in the ground were flowing with lava, while raging flames burned in huge holes, filling the air with a burnt smell.

Marceau looked around for a bit and clearly let out a sigh of relief after noting the absence of the golden dragon, cyclops and gigantic silver ape. When she noticed Han Shuo and Sophie staring coldly at her at a distance, she forced an ugly smile on her face. She explained apologetically, "Congratulations to the two of you for gaining a new life. I hope you can understand the special circumstances just now, I had no other choice!"

Sophie's face was full of despise and contempt. She raised her head and snorted. Without looking at Marceau for even a moment longer, she said to Han Shuo still up in the air, "Let's go. There's nothing to be said to this kind of person!"

"Yeah, I think so too!" Han Shuo supported Sophie's suggestion, then looked at Marceau coldly from afar. When he did that, he naturally emitted a wave of savage aura, but he didn't make a move, and instead flew towards the exit of the valley.

Sophie chanted out a mysterious summoning spell from her cherry lips. The pure, white, and beautiful pegasus appeared in the burning valley once again, helping Sophie mount.

The enormous burning clouds slowly dispersed from the skies above the valley after the Lord of the Flames ceased to control them. The wind in the sky blew lightly downwards and slowly extinguished the surging flames.

It would definitely take more than a single day for the fire elite zombie to form. It would be a slow and gradual process. From the yin demon's surveillance, not only did the Lord of the Flames bear no ill will towards the life within the fire lotus, it even treated and protected him as its child. There definitely wouldn't be an issue with the fire elite zombie's safety.

When the fire elite zombie had absorbed enough power, it would emerge from the fire lotus. When that happened, this place of extreme fire will also become the fire zombie's kingdom of fire. Han Shuo would be able to use its connection with the fire elite zombie to sweep away all of the various fire spiritual stones, so he wasn't in a hurry to collect them.

As Han Shuo exited the valley, Sophie rode the beautiful pegasus and followed behind him at a moderate space, eventually disappearing from the valley as well.

Marceau watched both Han Shuo and Sophie leave with a sullen expression, but didn't take any action. Only a while after the two had disappeared did she gaze at the now clear sky and used a levitation skill to quietly rise into the sky.

Han Shuo mentally contacted dark dragon Gilbert when they'd left the valley. The little skeleton has already been sent back to the other dimension, and the yin demon left in the fire lake also flew out of the ground's crack and met up with Han Shuo.

When the yin demon returned to Han Shuo's side, he also sensed Gilbert's location. Sophie was following Han Shuo at a moderate pace on the pegasus. She gazed at Han Shuo with her beautiful and sparkling eyes, thinking some unknown thoughts.

Han Shuo had a good impression of Sophie. When Han Shuo had pretended to be injured as he flew up from the fire lotus, it had been Sophie who had convinced the indecisive Marceau to let him into the boundary. After Han Shuo had entered the boundary, Sophie hadn't minded the terrible smell and the terrifying appearance of his legs to help Han Shuo sit up.

Sophie's kindness had won Han Shuo's kindly disposition, causing Han Shuo to immediately enclose Sophie in his protective barrier after Marceau had cut them out, and use more magical yuan to protect Sophie.

“I think it’s time for us to go separate ways!” Sophie had been silently following Han Shuo for a while when she finally spoke.

Han Shuo turned around and looked at her deeply. He flashed a dazzling smile and said, “You are a kind and just knight. It was a pleasure to meet you!”

They were about to go on their ways when Sophie also looked at Han Shuo with deep interest, as if she wanted to commit him to memory. After a while, she smiled and said, “Bryan, if you have the time to come and tour the Kasi Empire, I can be your guide!”

“Oh!” Han Shuo was happy to hear that. He then asked curiously. “How should I find you?”

Sophie pouted and glared at Han Shuo. She said strangely, “Did you really just make your debut that you actually don’t know me?”

Han Shuo shook his head and spoke with a laugh, “Are you very famous?”

“The Kasi Empire’s sacred knight, Zoro, is my father. I am the only earth rider who rides a pegasus. If you want to find me when you come to the Kasi Empire, you’ll definitely be able to find me. Goodbye, interesting scoundrel!” Sophie left behind a round of bell-like giggles as she flew in another direction on the pegasus, entering the skies like a little fairy. She completely disappeared in the blink of an eye.

She was the daughter of a sacred knight! Han Shuo was shocked. Only then did he truly pay attention to Sophie’s identity. He never would’ve thought that she was from such a famous family and have such a terrifyingly powerful father.

Currently on the Profound Continent, only the strongest of the strong would have the word “sacred” added on their class. Whether they were a sacred magus, a sacred swordmaster or sacred knight, they were the people that were publicly recognized to be the strongest. Regardless of what country they were in, they would hold an extraordinary position and gain the adoration of all of the people.

People like them held terrifying strength. They could even instantly change the outcome of a battle. They were existences that served as a nation's patron god, and had the strength that caused even kings to treat them carefully. Sophie's father was a sacred knight! No wonder she had such confidence, and rolled her eyes at Han Shuo furiously when he told her that he had never heard of her.

However, there was another type of existence that exceeded the boundaries of "sacred" and gained the title of "divine". They were the closest existence to the gods, and were commonly called demigods!

They were the extreme of every class. They were as rare of the scales of dragons and feathers of phoenixes, and only a few appeared during hundreds and thousands of years. They were called the divine magus, divine swordmaster, and the divine knights. These demigods had the destructive abilities to destroy the earth. Their power were on par with deities. If they could breakthrough even more, they would break through the barriers and become true gods.

It was a pity that no such people had appeared on the Profound Continent yet. Those who held the title of "sacred" were already the peak level of existence.

As Sophie rode away on her pegasus, Han Shuo merely gawked at Sophie's identity for a bit and then flew towards where Gilbert was.

He saw the huge footprints of the cyclops and signs of an intense battle along the way. The two meter long footprints were clearly from the cyclops. All of the towering ancient trees had been knocked down in rows, whereas some smaller hills also had been impacted.

With just a few glances, Han Shuo was sure that it the cyclops and golden dragon had been fighting as they left the valley. Gilbert must've followed the two enormous beings here stealthily.

Gilbert was still following the two powerful creatures. Han Shuo could feel that he was constantly on the move without paying attention to his surroundings. As he followed his contact with Gilbert, Han Shuo fully activated the Art of the Demonic Ninth Heaven and rushed towards

Gilbert like a ray of light.

The valley had been in an ocean of flames before. Han Shuo only noticed that it was already night after he'd left. The stars shimmered in the sky while moonlight flowed down like water, it was a pity that the passing scenery was no longer beautiful due to the fighting of the two powerful beings.

After Han Shuo flew with all his might for a long distance, he heard a loud sound from afar. It was as shocking as the ground breaking apart. The ground seemed to be trembling due to this voice. In this moment, Han Shuo's distance with Gilbert also seemed to be gradually decreasing.

Just as Han Shuo flew quickly and thought that he would be able to see Gilbert soon, the loud sound disappeared, and Han Shuo's contact with Gilbert was also cut off at the same time. No matter how hard Han Shuo tried, he couldn't sense Gilbert's existence.

Han Shuo was shocked. He had no idea what had suddenly happened. He was completely confused by this sudden change, so once again raised his speed and flew towards the location where he had sensed the dark dragon just now.

Han Shuo was able to reach the scene with a speed of a falling star a few minutes later. Traces of the two enormous beings' fight were still in front of him, but there was a vast area covered in black mist as well.

The area was extremely large. As Han Shuo gazed down from above, he noticed that the black mist covered a 2.5 kilometer radius. The moonlight was completely blocked off by the black mist, preventing it from entering. Han Shuo wasn't able to see anything with his naked eyes either.

Waves of intense evil filled the entire area. There seemed to be some sort of terrifying danger within the black mist. Han Shuo was unable to feel the existence of any living things. It was as if the black mist had completely blocked everything off.

He hovered in the sky for a moment, then released a yin demon towards the area underneath. The formless yin demon descended slowly, then shot into the area of black mist.

Han Shuo's connection with the yin demon was instantly cut off. The yin demon that had slipped into the black mist had instantly vanished in the blink of an eye. Han Shuo was unable to sense its position at all.

Han Shuo was truly shocked now. His connection with Gilbert was due to the power of the contract, so it was possible for the area to block it off. However, the three yin demons were refined by feeding them his own blood essence. Having it disappear after entering that area was truly a bit frightening.

The five kilometer radius below him was completely blocked off by the black smoke, he was unable to see what was going on inside at all. Han Shuo could only feel that it was full of an evil aura, meaning that the existence inside was definitely not a simple one.

"The Dark Forest is truly filled with mystery. This is such a bizarre place! It seems that if I want to understand the situation, I have to go in and figure it out!" Han Shuo muttered to himself as he gazed at the area below. He activated the magical yun in his body to form a barrier that would protect his body and slowly descended into the area below. As Han Shuo slowly approached the black mist, fear, depression, rage, insanity, and all sorts of negative emotions suddenly surged into Han Shuo's mind. It was like a power had tried to invade Han Shuo, trying to cause him to lose his sense of self.

However, the murderous aura that'd formed Han Shuo's body had absorbed various negative emotions in the last two slaughters he'd committed. Being in the bloodlust realm, Han Shuo was also used to the invasion of negative emotions. He was completely unaffected as his expression remained calm and controlled.

"This is rather interesting!" Han Shuo couldn't help but mutter with surprise after feeling that sort of negative emotion rush into his mind. His body suddenly sank and fell directly into the area.

His lost connections with Gilbert and the yin demon was instantly reconstructed. It seemed like the black mist only prevented contact with the outside, but couldn't stop the beings inside from connecting with each other.

He didn't hurry to find Gilbert. Instead, Han Shuo looked around with fascinated eyes. He planned to fully memorize his bearings first so that he could make the correct decision when facing something dangerous.

Han Shuo's vision was affected by the dense black mist. He was only able to see ten meters around him. This part of the Dark Forest seemed entirely different as it was covered with black mist. He looked around, but didn't find any vegetation within ten meters of him. There were only weird and dark-colored rocks around him.

There was a small green stream beneath Han Shuo's feet. It flowed quietly without any fish in it. When Han Shuo looked up to the sky, the black mist blocked off even the tiniest bit of light. The entire space was dim and filled with the smell of the desolation.

"Mhmm!" Han Shuo exclaimed when he saw a strange stone monument through the yin demon's vision. It was the fact that there were some writing on the stone monument that caused Han Shuo to decide to go and see it for himself.

Chapter 241: Demigod existence?

AS Han Shuo approached the monument, he saw a row of words engraved in it from far away – Ayermika Cotton!

It was actually Ayermike Cotton's name! This simple row of text shocked Han Shuo greatly. As a citizen of the Lancelot Empire, he had heard a great deal about this person. Every citizen would speak of his deeds in great detail. As the peak existence of dark magic in the Lancelot Empire's history, Ayermika was a divine dark magus that was said to have a demigod's strength in the legends!

Five hundred years ago, Ayermika Cotton had helped the first king of the Lancelot Empire to establish the Empire. It was only with this person's help that the founding emperor of the Lancelot Empire was able to conquer all of the foreign tribes, exile the barbaric beastmen, drive off the greedy and despicable goblins, and stand above the various factions to establish control of the land. Even now, the Lancelot Empire stood firmly upon this land.

In the legends, Ayermika Cotton was a divine dark magus with the abilities to destroy the world. In that era, not only did such a powerful being bring about the existence of the Lancelot Empire, it had also deified his being, resulting in adoration from all citizens of the Lancelot Empire for five hundred years!

Even now, there hadn't been any descendants who could surpass his glory and game!

Ayermika's entire life had been glorified with the legends of greatness. He'd defeated countless powerful people, expanded the borders of the Lancelot Empire, and shattered the fighting spirit and confidence of the foreign tribes. His power had caused all the tribes to submit to the Empire's reign as soon as the Empire's iron hooves landed on it.

However, such a terrifying demigod existence had suddenly disappeared at the peak of his life. The Lancelot Empire had been in its grandest era, having already conquered several countries around it. It was at that time that Ayermika should've been enjoying glories and honor.

However, he'd disappeared mysteriously, just like that. The first king of the Lancelot Empire had been unable to accept the departure of his true friend, and used all sorts of ways to search for him. They were still unable to discover anything in the end.

There were quite a few versions of the rumors surrounding his mysterious disappearance. Some said that he grew sick of conquest and went into hiding by himself. Others said that he surpassed everything and ascended to become a true god. There were those that said although he'd defeated countless powerful foes in his life of conquest, he had been injured several hundred times. The frail body of a mage was unable to withstand the wounds in his old age, so he'd died in a depressing way.

However, the legends were still just legends in the end! All words were mere illusions before any tangible evidence was produced. Ayermika Cotton's mysterious departure five hundred years ago remained an unresolved mystery!

However, there was a monument with Ayermika Cotton's name engraved on it in such a strange place enclosed by black mist. From the shape and engraving of the monument, Han Shuo was certain that it was a tombstone to memorialize the deceased buried here. Seeing this filled Han Shuo's heart with shock. He wanted to draw close to the tombstone and carefully inspect it.

Just at this moment, Gilbert started moving towards Han Shuo, using their mutual connection. Han Shuo could even feel Gilbert's anxiety.

Han Shuo had already planned to examine the tombstone closely, but due to Gilbert's anxious and swift approach, he set the idea aside. He then increased his awareness so that he was ready before leaping up and landing behind a huge boulder. At the same time, he also sent out a yin demon to fly in Gilbert's direction.

Gilbert, who'd changed into his dragon form, approached swiftly with an enormous roar. He actually wasn't flying, but was using his body to slither forward like a huge python. The gigantic cyclops was chasing him relentlessly, while the golden dragon that had originally been fighting with the cyclops was slithering on the ground like Gilbert, forgoing a dragon's natural talent to fly.

“Great master, come quickly and save your pitiful servant!” As Gilbert approached swiftly, his eyes shone with frantic light as he continuously bawled out in his deep voice.

Hearing that Gilbert was shouting for Han Shuo to save him, Han Shuo couldn't help but curse quietly behind the boulder, “Dumb dragon, with you shouting like this, anyone would know that there's someone waiting ahead. How can I ambush them then!”

Seeing that he couldn't set up an ambush, Han Shuo cursed lowly as he leapt up into the sky and flew in Gilbert's direction. Then, he let out a dominating whistle in order to notify Gilbert of his presence.

Through the yin demon's surveillance, Han Shuo saw that the cyclops and golden dragon seemed to be chasing Gilbert. Who knew what sort of shitty thing Gilbert had done in order to piss off two enemies enough for them to work together to kill him?

The terrified Gilbert calmed down slightly when he heard the piercing whistle. He then furiously “crawled” over and started complaining before he reached Han Shuo, “Two on one, this is too shameless, too wicked!”

“Damn stinky bug, you nearly ambushed and killed both of us when we were tired from the fight! But whatever, you actually brought us to this forbidden land, making us have no way out. You're the most shameless and wicked!” To Han Shuo's surprise, the cyclops actually let out a thundering curse after a furious roar.

“A shameless person that ran over to someone else's place to steal stuff doesn't have the right to scold others!” Gilbert was clearly more confident with Han Shuo around, so he turned around and mocked the cyclops. He then swiftly moved his huge body and stood in line with Han Shuo.

“You're pissing me off, you damn reptile, I'm going to kill you!” The cyclops was enraged. He roared at the sky and his single eye began to shimmer with a terrifying light as he leaped towards Gilbert.

The majority of the cyclops' body had been scorched by the Lord of the Flames. Its two large azure palms were a mess of blood and muscle. It seemed that the fight with the golden dragon afterwards had caused it quite a lot of harm.

"Shut up! You can beat him and curse him, but you aren't allowed to use the words 'reptile' and 'stinky bug' in front of me! Otherwise, I'll kill you first, you damn one-eyed thief!" The golden dragon roared furiously and howled loudly behind the cyclops.

The golden dragon's body condition was equally as bad. Not only were large patches of its golden scales black, there were also some scales that were splattered with blood. Even its large head had a trail of blood dripping from it. It seemed that the fight earlier had caused it to become severely injured.

"You crazy dragon, do you think I'm afraid of you!" The cyclops and golden dragon had fought their entire way out of the valley, and had become quite angry with each other. Although the cyclops was extremely furious with Gilbert's shameless actions, he had no good feelings towards the golden dragon either. He immediately turned around to argue with the golden dragon, as if they were ready resume their halted fight at any time.

The truth was this as well. The proud golden dragon just couldn't take any provocation. Right after the cyclops' initial thunderous shout, he'd already rushed up with a howl and started fighting with the cyclops. They'd already forgotten about Gilbert and completely disregarded him.

"Eh... What's going on?" Han Shuo was confused by the two enormous beings fighting in front of him. He couldn't help but look at Gilbert, asking him with a wry smile.

"Haha, I saw that they fought along the entire way, so I followed them, and took the chance of moving a large rock that was the size of a small mountain when they were both tired in hopes of smashing them both to death. What I didn't know was that they were rather nimble and managed to dodge it. Afterwards, they chased me all the way here.

I started running frantically without caring where I went, and ended up rushing into this strange place. The two of them had already lost their sense of reason, and also followed without thinking. Then, I noticed that my power was restrained. Not only did I lose the power of my tribe to spurt poison, I couldn't fly anymore.

“Of course, that dumb golden dragon couldn't fly anymore either. He could only crawl like me. It seemed that like even the cyclops has his power restrained. After a brief moment of shock, they treated me as their main focus of attacks. They started attacking me together with great shouts. I had no other way, so I could only come find you!” Gilbert didn't mind in the slightest, and laughed evilly when he explained his shameless actions to Han Shuo. Looking at his prideful look, he was clearly honored instead of ashamed!

“You truly are despicable!” Han Shuo commented upon hearing Gilbert's description.

“I learned all of this from you!” Gilbert yelled, blaming it all on Han Shuo, as if he'd been that pure when he left the underground world!

Rumble...

Loud collision sounds rang out from where the cyclops and the golden dragon were fighting. Dark colored boulders around them exploded outwards, whilst the cyclops and golden dragon collapsed limply on one side, a large pit between the two of them.

Just as the two enormous beings struggled to stand up and continue their fight, the cyclops shouted in a thunderous voice, “Wait, why isn't the human affected by the environment and is still able to fly in the sky?!”

Upon hearing that, the golden dragon and Gilbert also looked confusedly at Han Shuo, seeming to be filled with surprise and confusion. They suddenly seemed to regard Han Shuo, still able to fly in the sky, as a really special sort of existence.

“Human, there is no magical essence in this forbidden place, so how are you still in the sky?” The golden dragon coiled up from his limp posture with difficulty and raised his head up high. Even now, he still did not forget about the innate pride of his tribe, and seemed to want to suppress

Han Shuo in his atmosphere. He gazed at Han Shuo from above and asked with a tone that was used to interrogate criminals “None of your damn business!” Han Shuo replied very sharply with a very disparaging tone towards the golden dragon.

Just as the golden dragon was about to roar with anger, the cyclops couldn't help but jeer, “Dumb dragon, do you think someone who can stay in the sky in this forbidden land would be scared of you? Have you not heard about the legend about this forbidden place? Do you really want to die?”

The golden dragon surprisingly shut his mouth the moment the cyclops voiced this thought. His two eyes, that were as large as a human head, quickly shone with a strange brightness. They focused on Han Shuo as he shook his head with disbelief. He rumbled, “Impossible, how is it possible!”

“Great demigod existence, you must have exceeded the barriers of mankind. Please, you must shine your merciful light and take us away from this forbidden place!” Sincere pleading filled the cyclops' eye. Furthermore, his humongous body bent in a weird manner to display respect for Han Shuo.

Even the golden dragon stopped his muttering and gazed at Han Shuo silently. The pride within him made him unable to immediately bow before Han Shuo, but he also conveyed urgent pleading with his eyes.

“What do you mean?” Han Shuo didn't know what to say and looked at the two enormous beings in confusion. He scratched his head in silence for a moment and couldn't resist asking with confusion.

“All the super rank beings in the Dark Forest know of the legend of this forbidden land. There was a shocking battle here five hundred years ago. The legends say that even true gods participated. That battle caused all of the beings in the Dark Forest to tremble. The enormous commotion lasted for three days and two nights. Nobody knows what happened.”

The cyclops showed an expression of lingering fear and continued in his thunderous tones, “None of the powerful beings that tried to come in to observe the situation were able to walk out of the forbidden zone. Furthermore, none of the beings that accidentally entered the forbidden zone made it out alive either.

Legends says that all magic and fighting aura is restrained in the forbidden area. All beings can only use pure physical abilities, and they cannot leave the forbidden place. Only demigods that have surpassed the divine stage will be unaffected by the limitations of the forbidden place. Great human demigod, please take us away from here!"

Although the golden dragon hadn't said anything, his gaze towards Han Shuo was completely different from before. His gaze clearly contained a bit of pleading, and he couldn't help but dip his proud head.

"I think that you're mistaken!" Han Shuo looked helplessly at the two enormous beings, then explained with a shrug. "I'm very sorry, but I'm not some kind of demigod existence!"

Chapter 242: Murderous Soul

“How is this possible? If you’re not a demigod existence, how are you not affected by the restraints of the forbidden place and continue to fly?” The cyclops found this hard to believe. He had an incredulous expression on his face, perhaps afraid of the hope that he’d placed on Han Shuo vanishing.

Han Shuo chanted out a most basic necromancy spell, the skeleton summoning spell that he never failed in casting. There was no effect this time. No abnormalities formed out of the dark space – the necromancy spell had failed!

This was indeed the case! Han Shuo was shocked and understood that the cyclops wasn’t lying. It seemed that no magic abilities could be used in this forbidden place.

“Wait a moment!” Han Shuo called softly towards the cyclops and the golden dragon, and flew directly up into the swirling black mist.

However, just as Han Shuo felt that he was about to leave the space of the swirling black mist, a nearly infinite wave of strange energy blocked off the sky like a trillion ton rock. Han Shuo charged furiously into it, causing his entire body to ache with pain, but no matter what he did, he couldn’t break through the cover of the black mist and leave this strange space.

There was no need to try anymore. Han Shuo understood that this area with a 2.5 kilometer radius had been completely restrained by this strange power, just like the cemetery of death. It was impossible to leave without opening the boundary.

Han Shuo landed dejectedly, rubbing his buzzing head. When he looked at the surprised cyclops and golden dragon in front of him, Han Shuo spread out his hands and apologized, “The entire forbidden place is truly enclosed within a boundary, the same going for the sky covered by black mist. I think that if there is no special way, we don’t need to bother thinking about leaving the forbidden place!”

The cyclops and golden dragon were starting to believe that Han Shuo wasn't the demigod existence they'd thought him to be. When facing the threat of death, and their hopes extinguished, the two powerful beings lost interest even in why Han Shuo was able to fly. They started sighing continuously in despair.

Seeing that the two powerful beings had not only lost interest in his ability to fly, but was also the desire to attack Gilbert, Han Shuo was able to understand the depths of their utter despair.

"Great master, what should we do? I don't want to stay in this damned place. Let's go to the colorful outside world to continue my incomplete legend!" Gilbert was very anxious as he started to fretfully wail.

No beings have left the forbidden place in five hundred years, not even super rank magical beasts with extremely long lives. Yet, after Han Shuo had entered this area, he'd only felt the coldness of death without a hint of life. This meant that those super rank magical beasts with extremely long lives must've died there.

As he looked up to the sky, Han Shuo noticed that the black mist swirling around the entire region had gradually become denser, possibly due to his forceful impact. There was an extremely dangerous, murderous aura that floated around in the damp air.

"I don't think we could die of old age here, even if we want to!" Han Shuo muttered as he felt the surroundings change. He then suddenly call out. "Careful, danger!"

Just when he'd been complaining about everything, Gilbert suddenly sensed the terrifying change in their surroundings as well, along with the cyclops and the golden dragon. This caused their survival instincts to kick in immediately as they nervously scanned their surroundings, ready to react at any time.

Swirls of inseparable black mist roiled in the sky, the occasional green flashes of light mixed in with them revealing an evil and terrible power. As it swept over and crashed down on those assembled, they found it difficult to even breathe. The colossal power seemed as weighty as a billion ton mountain, bearing down on everyone's backs.

Even enormous beings like the cyclops and golden dragon could only scream and howl in the face of such terrifying pressure. Their figures, they had completely lost their minds! Gilbert, at only rank one, had already fallen flat on the ground like a limp snake, unable to even stand up.

The magical yuan within Han Shuo cycled furiously, creating a sparkling black protective shield that completely covered Han Shuo's body. Meanwhile, rays of black lightning swirled around inside the shield as the pure magical yuan refined the shield over and over again, raising the defensive power of the shield even further.

In the end, the protective shield around Han Shuo was as beautiful as a piece of clear ink jade, and Han Shuo seemed like a living fossil entombed within the black jade, full of a demonic charm.

The forbidden place had sealed all of the mystical powers within this world, but the magical yuan from another dimension was not something the forbidden place could simply snuff out!

Thus, as Han Shuo furiously cycled his magical yuan to protect himself, he actually managed to withstand the tremendous pressure and remain standing.

As Han Shuo's profound gaze examined at the change in the entire area, none of the traces of evil aura were able to escape his detection. His originally anxious heart was thumping violently, and his once calm breathing slowly sped up.

Han Shuo actually felt a sliver of familiarity from the strange power enclosing the forbidden place. More, it seemed as though this power was filled with a drug-like allure to him, someone in the bloodlust realm!

A miraculous feeling was suddenly transmitted from the demon infant within his body. The demon infant was like a bloodthirsty little monster that had finally caught the scent of fresh blood. It was no longer able to resist as it rampaged within Han Shuo's body and urged him onwards, as if it was trying to reach something.

Terrible green light flashed within the inky mist that covered the entire area, as swirls of the mist started to converge around Han Shuo and the others. Waves of the terrifying evil aura seeped out from the swirls of smoke. Under the continuous flashes of the green light, the mist gradually changed shape, transforming into a savage and horrifying face that bore downwards.

“No!” The cyclops let out an angry roar and waved his giant shovel towards the terrifying face. The golden dragon also let out a roar and furiously swung his huge tail towards the sky, towards the savage, demonic face.

However, their attacks had not the barest of effects on the savage phantasm. It fearlessly reformed after it was scattered, and lunged down with shocking fierceness.

Still inside his protective barrier, Han Shuo suddenly exclaimed, “Specters, they’re specters!”

Instantly, he dispelled the protective barrier that covered his entire body as rays of bloody light shot out from his body, causing a dense, murderous aura to suddenly surround his body.

At the same time, a flash of indigo light shot out from his body. The Demonslayer Edge was shining with a purplish red light as it danced around endlessly above Han Shuo’s head.

Han Shuo had a calm expression before, but now his face had twisted into a savage and frightening visage. His stark white teeth were bared in a devil’s grin, as his eyes glowed blood red. The murderous aura around his body spread out and entwined with the Demonslayer Edge above his head. A piercing bloody light exploded forth from man and the weapon in that moment.

The terrifying demonic face was screeching without any sound. All of the evil faces that was rushing down towards the cyclops and the golden dragon all panicked, and started to escape without the slightest hesitation.

But it was far too late. With Han Shuo and the Demonslayer Edge as the center, an enormous whirlpool had unknowingly formed above them. It was hovering in the air, around ten meters wide, a murderous aura swirling within. Blood red light flashed inside as evil energy swirled within it.

All of the “specters” that had gathered seemed to be caught within a strong suction force generated by the enormous whirlpool. All of them frantically tried to escape, but none were able to. Under the attraction of the enormous whirlpool above Han Shuo’s head, no matter how far away the “specters” escaped, they were slowly reeled back towards the whirlpool.

The intense and overwhelming pressure instantly disappeared. Gilbert straightened his back from his limp snake position as he looked at Han Shuo, watching the huge commotion in the air. He muttered to himself, ‘Great master, what the hell are you doing?’

“Little dark dragon, what exactly is your master? What is he doing? Why is there no trace of a fighting or magical aura that a human should have?” The proud golden dragon couldn’t help but yell after hearing Gilbert’s muttering.

“No matter what, our dangerous situation just now was allayed due to his unusual actions. Otherwise, we would’ve already been killed by those evil ghost faces!” The cyclops looked meaningfully at Han Shuo with his single eye. He still couldn’t find any trace of a fighting or magical aura from the human after a while. According to his understanding of the world, he understood that Han Shuo truly might not be some sort of demigod existence. However, Han Shuo’s current actions had illogically removed the enormous pressure that had covered the entire area, causing the cyclops to not dare underestimate Han Shuo.

Since his master had shown off his might, Gilbert also took the chance to strut around with borrowed influence. He raised his neck high and loudly proclaimed, “Damn, how do I know what’s going on? However, my master is very powerful! Otherwise, as a mighty dark dragon, how could I have submitted at his feet!”

The two powerful beings were convinced of the dark dragon’s words;

Han Shuo's current actions and Gilbert's existence were proof enough of Han Shuo being an extremely powerful existence. Due to this, even though the dark dragon had been talking so disrespectfully, the golden dragon and the cyclops accepted it, as if they had already forgotten about the dark dragon's previous wicked actions, and didn't attack him.

Since Gilbert had such a powerful master who was able to dispel the tremendous pressure that covered the entire area in his own unique way, they weren't willing to attack the dark dragon at this moment and bring about unnecessary trouble for themselves. If the human stopped all his actions and that strong pressure appeared once more, only death awaited the cyclops and golden dragon.

Therefore, the two enormous beings only snorted coldly in response to Gilbert's uncourteous blathering without saying anything else. Since they saw that the dark dragon didn't know anything, the two of them didn't continue questioning him. They merely recovered their stamina on the side as they quietly watched the changes in Han Shuo.

The savage demonic face that floated in the air earlier had already become a pitiful refugee – a pitiful fugitive that could not escape! Ever the “specters” that had left this area at the beginning were pulled in by the whirlpool above Han Shuo's head, no matter how terrified any of them were.

It was as if the murderous aura around Han Shuo and the whirlpool of bloody light created by the Demonslayer Edge had some sort of restraining effect towards the weird strange specters. There was not a single one that could escape in the end. Under the powerful suction of the giant whirlpool, the savage green faces silently roared in terror as they became rays of dark green light and fused into the whirlpool.

The immense whirlpool was like a huge strange tree, the swirls within like flourishing leaves, and a thin path towards the roots. When the specters were sucked in one by one, the huge whirlpool was filled with harrowing, rampaging energy.

Lights of blood red, black, and terrifying green slowly gathered within the Demonslayer Edge and Han Shuo through the roots, as well as a dense, baleful aura. The whirlpool churned more and more quickly as the Demonslayer Edge absorbed a large amount of specters. It began to shine brightly, slowly displaying the splendor of a peerless weapon. Violent screeches continuously rang out from the Demonslayer Edge, causing the three enormous beings to shake and tremble.

On the other hand, Han Shuo was surrounded in a mist formed from the baleful aura, sitting cross-legged in the sky. Behind him, the dense aura had faintly formed a giant gazing down towards the earth. The giant was ten-odd meters tall in the sky, and had a horrifying deathly flame. It looked exactly the same as the Han Shuo with bloodshot eyes.

This astonishing scene lasted for a day and a night before the giant whirlpool above Han Shuo's head slowly dissipated. All of the specters in the area also disappeared along with it. Even the floating image of the giant behind Han Shuo, slowly flew into his body. Only the Demonslayer Edge was left floating and shining above Han Shuo's head.

“ROAR...”

A terrifying howl suddenly tore out of Han Shuo's mouth. He'd been sitting down cross legged when he suddenly stood up with bloodshot eyes. His figure seemed to embody the soul of a peerless killer that had just awakened from his slumber underground. He stared savagely at the cyclops, the golden dragon, and even Gilbert, making them tremble from within the depths of their hearts!

Chapter 243: Destruction

“What, what does he want to do?” The proud golden dragon couldn’t help but exclaim with a shudder of his heart when he saw Han Shuo, evil incarnate, glare sternly at him with blood red eyes.

“How do I know?! Oh my gawd, honored master, just what do you want to do? I’m your most humble servant Gilbert!” Gilbert had just drawn himself upright when he saw the violent looking Han Shuo stride over, a wave of murderous intent churning towards him like a wave of blood. Gilbert immediately started screaming in a panic.

It was a pity that Han Shuo’s expression was a frightful leer at the moment. His pupils had all turned a blood red as he threw his head back, screaming to the heavens, and charged over like a bloodthirsty beast.

The aura circling around him had solicited into a red mist, and started turning over with an incontrovertible momentum as Han Shuo leapt and flew.

“This is bad, he’s lost his reason!” The cyclops’ thunderous tones suddenly cried out as he prepared for the worst.

The golden dragon was standing the closest to Han Shuo at this time, and he’d already curled himself into a ball, becoming Han Shuo’s first target of attack. Han Shuo had already landed on the golden dragon’s head amidst the mass of aura and punched downwards with one fist.

If it’d been only Han Shuo’s fist, the golden dragon might not have minded that much. After all, Han Shuo’s body size was on a different level from the golden dragon. There was a limit to the power behind his punch and the area he could cover. He would be unable to cause too much damage to this enormous being.

However, when the punch came crashing down, the murderous aura around Han Shuo suddenly coalesced into the forms of red fists the size of small mountains. The fists completely encircled the golden dragon’s coiled up form, the pressure such that he could barely catch his breath. A destructive ferocity descended upon his head.

The proud golden dragon cried out in pain as he cussed viciously. He was forced to uncurl himself and stab out viciously with his tail that was as long as the Great Wall of China.

Rumble...

An earth shattering explosion traveled from the impact of the violent punch and the golden dragon's tail. The boulders around the golden dragon crumbled from the impact as he howled with pain. His dragon tail couldn't seem to take the pressure as it curled together with a shake. The more than ten meter long body was laid low from its previously proud position with this blow.

"Wahaha, mighty master, your humble servant is proud of you! You used your power to beat the strongest of the dragon race, the golden dragon, into the ground! I, Gilbert of the dark dragons, have witnessed this historical moment. You are the master I chose alright..."

The terrifying blow had pounded the golden dragon into the ground. Disbelief shone out of the cyclops' single eye as Gilbert continued to yell, "Eh... my mighty, handsome, amazing, and noble master, what... what do you want to do? Are you planning on hitting your cutest, most loyal, most honest, and most humble Gilbert? Um..."

However, the fist with blood red light coming out of it vanished before Gilbert's fawning had ended. When Han Shuo kicked towards Gilbert, a blood red foot appeared out of midair and aimed straight at the chattering dark dragon.

Before Gilbert had even finished yammering, this foot had already stepped down on Gilbert's head. If it continued, Gilbert would never again be able to be this noisy!

"ROAR..."

As the dark dragon roared in despair, a towering figure suddenly shot out. An enormous green hand dragged back this foot for Gilbert, and the green cyclops crashed to a sitting position on the ground after a series of rumblings and shaking. He looked in fear at the grimacing Han Shuo who was slowly descending.

“Stupid dumb dragon, he’s already lost his mind and isn’t your master anymore. Do you want to die?” The golden dragon had finally struggled up from his collapsed position on the ground. He couldn’t help but shake his head and tail and roar, wanting Gilbert to recognize reality.

Gilbert found it a bit difficult to react. In the depths of his heart, he was unwilling to believe that Han Shuo would want to kill him. He murmured to himself in a daze, “How is that possible? How would my master want to kill me?”

“Dumb dragon, although I don’t know what’s happened, your master really has lost his mind at the moment. He is now very, very strong. I and that unlucky golden dragon don’t have much energy left now. Only the three of us together will be possibly able to fight against your master!”

As the cyclops watched Han Shuo slowly descend from the sky, a boundless, thick murderous sense locking firmly onto them, he couldn’t help but cry all anxiously at Gilbert.

Gilbert shook his head dazedly. Although his heart ached, and he felt despair at Han Shuo’s vicious blow just now, he still said stubbornly, “No! Absolutely not! I can’t fight my master with you guys! Not even if I die!”

“Idiot, we wouldn’t be able to kill him with even the three of us! We just need to defend or control him! We’re saving him, you stupid, damned dark dragon! Do you understand this or not?” The golden dragon started roaring on the other side when he was faced with threat of death.

“Indeed, dumb dragon, we’re saving him, saving him! Stupid!” The cyclops immediately understood when he heard the golden dragon’s word and started yelling as well.

The dragons were a proud race, and if it wasn’t for special circumstances, it was very difficult for them to submit to humans, a race they disdained. However, once a dragon formed a contract with a human, their loyalty was unquestionable before their master died.

Gilbert had spent a bit of time with Han Shuo, and his master’s actions were right up his alley. Even though Han Shuo had lost his mind and had struck out viciously at him, he’d never had any thoughts of resistance.

This was like a dark dragon's naturally lewd nature, a innate brand on the dragons that no one was able to change!

The golden dragon understood this racial characteristic well and thus immediately changed his tune, spinning this as a way of liberating Han Shuo and dispelling the conflict that this formed against Gilbert's nature.

Indeed, it was as if cold water had been dumped over Gilbert's head. The golden dragon and the cyclops' roaring shocked Gilbert awake. Having thought through things, he muttered anxiously, "That's right, I must help you. Nothing can happen to you, your humble servant still needs your guidance!"

"ROAR..."

Han Shuo was slowly descending upon the three enormous beings when he suddenly leered and roared out again, charging forward with a frightening sound wave. Ripples of the murderous aura rolled over in the dark space. Evil was contained with the sound wave, and it seemed like clouds of fire were pouring down from the skies.

Blood started leaking out of the mouths, nose, and eyes of the three beings beneath the attack of this horrifying sound wave. Their bodies rolled violently, seemingly to be unable to hold up beneath this terrifying sound wave.

"Damn it, just what kind of attack has your master used? As opposed to him yelling, I'd rather face his enormous fists and kicks. At least we can block the tangible attacks, what can we do against this sound wave!" Streams of blood as thick as a baby's arms were leaking out of the golden dragon's lantern-like eyes as he complained whilst blood dripped out of his mouth.

"Oh my gosh, what is going on? My master shouldn't be this strong!" Gilbert had spent a long time with Han Shuo. Although he was uncertain of Han Shuo's true strength, his master had never demonstrated such frightening strength.

"Nothing for it, the three of us need to combine our strength to attack him! Otherwise, we'll be dead without a doubt. He probably won't be able to escape the backlash of this power! The frightening power around him now is from the specters that were present earlier. This must have happened because he's trying to absorb them all!" The cyclops was the calmest out of them all. He hastily raised this suggestion when he saw that all of them were about to die from the impact.

The cyclops and the golden dragon suddenly looked at each other before Gilbert reacted and stood up together. They endured the agonizing pain of their bodies to charge towards Han Shuo, wrapped in layers of murderous aura and bloody sound waves, in mid air.

Han Shuo had been roaring furiously when he felt the movements of the two enormous creatures. He cackled oddly as his bloodshot eyes suddenly lit up. Bloody light emanated from his pupils and concentrated on the two enormous beings like it was something tangible.

The two had just struggled to their feet when they were swept by his bloody eyes. A terrifying power immediately invaded their bodies as they began to seize and spasm. Terrifying cries traveled out from their mouths.

"Damned dark dragon, you're right behind him. Make your move or we'll all die!" The golden dragon's scales were exploding one after another after Han Shuo had swept his blood gaze over them. Fresh blood was gushing forth, and the golden dragon kept trying to evade the gaze as he screamed for his life.

"Hurry up, you're saving him, damned stupid dragon!" The cyclops' skin suddenly split open after been swept by Han Shuo's gaze, and his injuries were increasing in scale. His heart was filled with an unknown fear as he too began screaming in earnest, cussing for the first time.

Gilbert murmured as the two enormous beings howled in pain, "I'm going to save you, save you..."

A resolute emotion appeared in Gilbert's eyes as he reached out suddenly with his dragon claws, slapping them forward cautiously and gingerly towards the completely unsuspecting Han Shuo in front of him.

He planned on knocking Han Shuo unconscious first and then finding a way to restore Han Shuo's reason, saving his master from this berserk state. Gilbert's loyalty was without a doubt.

Bam!

An enormous dull thud sounded as a patch of red mist appeared over Han Shuo's head, blocking Gilbert's swipe. Wrapped in the red mist, Han Shuo hadn't been injured at all, but he'd seemed to feel Gilbert's malicious intent. He couldn't help but turn around and glare at Gilbert with bloodshot eyes, roaring furiously.

All of the murderous aura floating around Han Shuo was affected by his anger and congregated from all corners, feeding into the Demonslayer Edge floating in front of Han Shuo's chest. The enormous murderous aura seemed to be bloody waves as they quickly gathered within the Demonslayer Edge.

The savagely howling Demonslayer Edge suddenly emanated a destructive aura. When all of the aura surrounding Han Shuo had been absorbed, a beam of blood red light a hundred meters tall shone out of the weapon. It'd become a peerless weapon that could cleave the heavens and earth, and Han Shuo seemed like a demon god that could destroy all when he wielded it.

The hundred meter light slowly pivoted and locked onto Gilbert as Han Shuo's right arm adjusted its direction. During this process, anywhere the frightening light passed by directly reduced the weathered boulders into rock dust.

When faced with this boundless aura, Gilbert's enormous body seemed so small and helpless. His dragon eyes were filled with despair, fear, bitterness, and sadness. As his eyes locked dumbly onto the raging Han Shuo, he couldn't help but murmur lowly, "No, you won't, you're my master and won't really want to kill me!"

"Dumb dragon, run, run!!" The cyclops and golden dragon screamed in reminder. For some reason, their hearts were filled with bitterness as well.

However, for some reason, the usually loud and active Gilbert seemed to be stuck dumbly in place like a fool. Blood red tears slowly formed in his lantern-like eyes, but his body stayed firmly put as if it'd been rooted!

Earth shattering roars continuously emitted from the grimacing Han Shuo's mouth. The destructive Demonslayer Edge and hundred meter tall sword slowly lifted to aim at Gilbert. Both the cyclops and the golden dragon had no doubt that when this light descended, Gilbert would be carved into many little pieces of meat. He wouldn't have the slightest chance of survival and his vital signs would be utterly erased.

"No!" A howl came from Han Shuo's mouth. It was the first human sound he'd made up until now. His face contorted with pain, the black lightning surrounding him as he roared furiously started crackling and popping. The blood vessels in his neck and arm starting exploding, and fresh blood splattered him all over.

Han Shuo ignored the frightening wounds on his body. He couldn't seemed to control his limbs as he looked at his right arm with a twisted expression. He kept yelling, "No, no!!"

Suddenly, his expression hardened as his bloody left arm suddenly slammed into his weapon wielding right arm. It landed like a bolt of lightning, accompanied by a crisp breaking sound. arrows of blood shot out from his arms and sped toward the surroundings.

This self-mutilating blow had an amazing effect. It saved Gilbert's life, and a change happened in the hundred meter tall sword light!

The light had been aimed at Gilbert when it suddenly changed direction, circling past Gilbert's enormous body and carrying with it a violent, evil sword aura to shoot into the endless black mists surroundings the forbidden area.

Suddenly, the skies were filled with bloody light as the earth shook. A frightening explosion sound filled the area, seeming to rip the very sky asunder. The black mists that had covered this area for five hundreds years slowly dispersed after the blow from the blood red light.

Beams of warm sunlight finally shone on this desolate land after hundred of years of absence. Sunlight radiated on the heavily injured cyclops and golden dragon, on the panting but clear eyed Han Shuo lying in a pool of his own blood, and entered the teary, delighted eyes of Gilbert...

Chapter 244: Awe

The violent explosions continued for a while before the forbidden zone slowly returned to normal. The radiant sun finally shone on the forbidden area that had been confined for 500 years.

“Ah, light, this is the sun’s light!” The injury ridden golden dragon looked up at the bright sun in the sky and felt the warmth of the sun dappling over his body, sighing with great emotion.

Just as he was reflecting with some emotion, the power that he’d lost upon entering the forbidden area slowly began to fill his body once again. His body had been plastered to the ground when it slowly began to rise again. The natural ability of the dragons to fly had been restored.

“The strength that’s been confining the entire area has disappeared. We’ve been saved!” The cyclops’ single eye looked straight at the sun as he collapsed on the ground from his injuries. Although he appeared a bit lazy, his green face was filled with delight from the thought of being alive.

On the other side, Gilbert shook his enormous head, sending his tears from earlier flying through the air like the spring rain. His enormous body floated in the air and flew towards Han Shuo, murmuring, “I knew it, I knew you wouldn’t kill your most loyal servant!”

Han Shuo had broken his right arm, an arm as strong as iron, with his left hand. The meridians in his neck and arms had exploded, and he was lying in an ever-growing pool of his own blood, panting heavily.

“Idiot, if I hadn’t recovered quickly, you would’ve been dead without a doubt by now!” Han Shuo hectored Gilbert loudly from his listless position. Bloody froth spewed out of his mouth whenever he opened it, but he felt none of the associated pain. His now clear eyes had a few traces of warmth and touched emotions to it.

With the strange power that restrained the entire area vanished, Gilbert felt a familiar power in his body and slowly began to transform as he approached Han Shuo. When he once again stood in front of Han Shuo, he’d already changed into a haggard and worn person, reflecting what he’d just gone through.

“Heh heh, recover your body first!” Gilbert stood with his back to Han Shuo and wiped the moisture from his face, walking over easily and helping Han Shuo up from collapsed position. Gilbert silently stood behind him in support.

Han Shuo chanted out an incantation and a little skeleton with sparkling white bones and a honest and silly earth elite zombie suddenly appeared in front of Han Shuo.

The two of them focused their attention on Han Shuo when they stood in front of him. When they discovered his woeful state and that he was dripping with blood, they rushed to his two sides and reached out urgently with their hands, seeming to want to take his blood and shove it back into his body through his wounds.

Panic and anxiety filled the little skeleton’s purple eye and the earth elite zombie’s yellow eyes. They waved their arms around madly as they busied themselves, seeming to express, “Alright, alright. We’re here now, he’ll be fine now!” The two of them capered around frantically to express themselves to Han Shuo. Although their actions of trying to shove his blood back into his body through his wounds were childish and comical, this warmed Han Shuo’s heart greatly.

Suddenly, the little skeleton took to the sky and sent his bone dagger and bone spurs whirling through the air. An evil, frosty, and completely inhumane killing intent emanated from his body as the seven bone spurs pierced towards the cyclops and golden dragon like seven bloody streams of light.

At the same time, the earth elite zombie next to Han Shuo sank into the ground like he stepping into water. Shaking and rumbling then traveled from the depths of where the cyclops and golden dragon were. Sharp earth mounds then began shooting out of the ground. The cyclops standing on the ground was the first to be affected, and he began to frantically evade the attacks.

When the little skeleton and earth elite zombie had appeared out of nowhere, the cyclops and golden dragon had only flicked a glance at them, not paying too much attention to these low level dark creatures. However, when the two finally made their moves, the destruction they brought forth shocked the two creatures senseless. They were unable to believe the truth before their eyes.

The little skeleton and the earth elite zombie's actions were as fast as a strike of lightning. By the time that Han Shuo had time to react, their attacks had almost landed on the heavily injured cyclops and golden dragon.

"Hey, damned idiot dragon, are you going to just watch the show? We helped you just now!" The golden dragon was terrified as he dodged the attacks and roared loudly.

Although the cyclops and golden dragon could now use their recovered abilities, their bodies had long since lost all their strength after the previous round of events. Add to that although the little skeleton and earth elite zombie were small, the destruction they wreaked was indeed terrifying, making the two enormous beings cry out with fear.

"Eh... my honored master, these two fellows did indeed help us just now. I think they mean us no harm now!" Gilbert thought of when the three of them defended against Han Shuo just now and couldn't help but say to Han Shuo.

"I see. Come back then, the two of you!" Han Shuo nodded distantly and called out to the little skeleton and earth elite zombie.

The two brash dark creatures immediately withdrew their attacks when they heard Han Shuo's order. The seven blood red bone spurs spun in a circle and reattached to the little skeleton's spine in an exceedingly short amount of time. The various hills all sank down astonishingly, and the earth regained its smoothness again. The earth elite zombie that had disappeared from sight floated up again, slowly rising from the earth and stood on Han Shuo's left, as if he'd never moved.

When the little skeleton and earth elite zombie discovered that Han Shuo was gravely injured, they naturally ruled Gilbert out of the running of entities that could've hurt their master. Therefore, the two enormous beings that had obviously weathered through an immense fight became the natural culprits. It was understandable that they hadn't waited for Han Shuo's orders before attacking.

To be honest, Han Shuo had a vague notion of what had happened after he'd lost his ability to reason. However, his presence had still been useful in allowing the two beings to escape the forbidden area when he'd attacked. Now that the restraints around the forbidden area had been dispelled, he didn't know if the two of them would act maliciously towards him. He'd summoned the two fellows purely as a precaution.

The little skeleton and earth elite zombie's sudden attack had been out of his expectations, but he then thought that the two fellows could awe the two enormous beings after a show of strength, thereby preventing them from making any moves against him. Therefore, he only stopped the little skeleton and the earth elite zombie after Gilbert had explained what had happened. This also served as a warning to the two enormous beings that they weren't the ruler of this place just because the restraining power in the forbidden area had been dispelled.

When he faced the little skeleton's bone spurs just now, the golden dragon had frantically tried to decrease his size in order to evade the attacks. He wiped cold sweat from his brow now and smiled at Han Shuo from afar, "Very nice to meet you, strong human! I think you've nothing to do with me now, so goodbye!"

The golden dragon had already transformed back into his human form after speaking and dashed outwards as if fleeing the scene. He landed in a patch of boulders after a few leaps and vanished completely from sight.

The cyclops also rumbled anxiously after the golden dragon had left, "Ahaha, I'm also very pleased to make your acquaintance. However, I still have some things at home and won't keep chatting with you. I hope we can meet again!"

The rumbling from his voice was still hanging in the sky as the cyclops twisted his injury laden body into motion. He stumbled as he made for the far distance, praying to never bump into this crazy human again. He was simply too scary when he lost his mind!

In the span of an instant, the two heavily wounded enormous beings had fled with panic stricken expressions from their location. Han Shuo and Gilbert looked at each other, finding this extremely ludicrous.

Whether it was the cyclops or the golden dragon—both were incredibly frightening levels of existence when they were at their full peak of power. If they hadn't met something like the Lord of the Flames, a level four creature, they would absolutely be the lords of the Dark Forest. Something like the manticore, a level one magical creature, would dash out of the way like it'd seen a ghost if it ever met a cyclops or golden dragon.

However, such a strong level of existence had left in front of them like they were fleeing from some horror. This filled Han Shuo and Gilbert's heart with strange emotions!

Cleaning his mind of stray thoughts, Han Shuo sat down cross legged and said to Gilbert, the little skeleton, and the earth elite zombie. "I'm going to recover from my wounds now, you guys keep watch!"

The murderous aura around him formed a cocoon of black and red light, fully enclosing his body. Streaks of black and red lightning swirled around the cocoon and completely sealed Han Shuo's presence away, not allowing even a single bit of it leak out.

The specters that'd been present in the forbidden area were strange existences formed from the souls of the strong who'd died, but had been unable to disperse into the world, and had absorbed all sorts of random powers instead.

No one knew what had happened five hundred years ago, but there were quite a few souls that had been affected by the strange power of the forbidden area, and were unable to disperse for five hundred years.

All of the lifeforms that had mistakenly barged into this forbidden area had had their powers restricted by the area. They were unable to use fighting aura or magic to hurt the specters, and the specters were unaffected by physical attacks. Therefore, death was the only way out for anything that stumbled upon this area and faced the specters.

Before these entities died, all their fear, despair, fury, unwillingness, and associated negative emotions were absorbed by the specters, making them accumulate even more energy over the years, causing the spectres to become more and more powerful.

Intruders who could only make use of their physical bodies to attack naturally couldn't handle the specters, but Han Shuo, already in the bloodlust realm, had a natural aura and the Demonslayer Edge that was the antithesis of the specters. Therefore, when he knew the beings present were specters, he immediately used the demon infant and Demonslayer Edge to form a whirlpool, constructing a crazily devouring machine. All of the specters that had existed for five hundred years were sucked into the demon infant and the Demonslayer Edge.

In this process, the image of the giant that had floated behind Han Shuo in the air was a result of the demon infant consuming too many specters. This naturally formed image was also absorbed by Han Shuo's body in the end.

However, although the specters had great strength, there were too many impure and random thoughts amongst them. All of the negative emotions mixed together, and their characteristics were all different. Han Shuo's mentality in the bloodlust realm was already unstable to begin with, which caused him to almost completely lost his mind and become a bloodthirsty demon.

He'd made use of his fight with the three enormous beings to vent the random emotions plaguing him. The purest portion of the specter's energy had been absorbed by the demon infant, and the majority of it had been too filled with negative, violent emotions and so it had been absorbed by the Demonslayer Edge inside.

The majority of the energy that he had been unable to absorb caused Han Shuo to lose reason. He'd made use of his attacks on the three enormous beings to wear away at it, and then used the final blow from the Demonslayer Edge to attack the void of black mists. The tremendous and fatal energy had actually destroyed the restraining power around the forbidden area, enabling sunlight to stream in once again.

Han Shuo had possessed the power to fight against the three strong beings previously because the Demonslayer Edge had consumed the violent and scattered energy from the specters. This kind of energy was pure destruction and not something he could control at all. This was why he'd made it all disappear through venting like how he'd done.

Therefore, this was why Han Shuo and the Demonslayer Edge had displayed power that didn't belong to them earlier. When the Demonslayer Edge pierced through the restraints of the forbidden area, all of the destructive power had vanished, and Han Shuo and the Demonslayer Edge quickly returned to normal shortly after.

However, the two gained great benefits this time. Even though Han Shuo was still in the bloodlust realm, the pure energy within the demon infant had once again greatly increased in strength.

After absorbing some power, the Demonslayer Edge would be able to truly emit a murderous aura after a bit more refining and some fortuitous occurrences. It would really be a peerless weapon then.

Wrapped in his red and black cocoon, Han Shuo didn't emerge for eight days. His ravaged right arm had returned to normal, and the blood vessels on his neck and arms had reformed, more durable than before. His height had also increased by a few centimeters, and his naked body was even more stocky than before. His shoulders were broad, his waist narrow, and his muscles were more evenly distributed over his body like finely chiseled granite. His eyes were clear and sinister looking, brimming with the confidence of being able to control everything.

"Honored master, you've finally emerged. Your poor servant has waited for such a long time!" Gilbert had a look of dejection on his face as he stood pitifully next to Han Shuo, loudly praising his glory.

Looking at Gilbert in shock, Han Shuo asked in bafflement, "What? What happened to you?"

Gilbert looked around pitifully and cast a look in his surroundings, then finally speaking to Han Shuo like he was tattling on someone. “Those two fellows not only bullied me, but also dug up someone’s grave. This is too evil!”

Han Shuo was shocked upon hearing these words, “What’s going on here?”

“You take a look at what they’ve done! They had me, the great dark dragon Gilbert, help them in digging up someone else’s grave, and actually threatened me with a knife when I wouldn’t do so. This is so evil, so shameless, and that little skeleton is too evil!” Gilbert was incredibly pitiful as he brought Han Shuo up into the air and had him take a look for himself.

When Han Shuo floated in the air and looked at Ayermika Cotton’s grave, he was stunned senseless by what he saw. He didn’t know whether to laugh or cry as he said, “Eh... those two are indeed a bit out of line!”

Chapter 245: Grave digging

The formerly leveled ground stood witness to many ravines. The tombstone of Ayermika, the demigod existence of the Lancelot Empire, stood grandly at the center. Surrounding it was a ten meter circular area of messily dug trenches and holes. Dirt had been tossed every which way, as if some archaeology team had conducted an excavation searching for antiquities. The whole area had been overturned.

Taking a closer look, Han Shuo noticed a few more hills formed from mounds of brown soil. The little skeleton and the earth elite zombie were busy demolishing an enormous skeleton at the bottom of a huge trench. This skeleton was a dozen meters long, and each bone was as tall as a person. The skeleton was translucent as crystal, its surface reflecting bright light. It was obviously the corpse of some super rank creature.

The two fellows sensed Han Shuo's presence in the midst of their demolition. They excitedly waved their hands, which were holding bones even bigger than their own bodies, greeting their master.

After that, the little skeleton picked up several bones with his hand and flew, fast as lightning, to the middle of the trench, dropping the bones in a deeply excavated pit. He placed them carefully in the middle of the deep pit, as if the bones were valuable treasures.

"Eh... What have they been doing these past days?" Han Shuo stood in the air and watched raptly, asking Gilbert in surprise.

Gilbert complained loudly, his face as gloomy as one at a funeral, "Not long after you wrapped yourself up in the cocoon, these two fellows got up to these antics. First, the small zombie went underground and took out a bone. He proudly bragged about it to the little skeleton, then the little skeleton also got excited. These two together were simply the most superb grave diggers, they turned the whole place upside down. They seem to be collecting those bones, I don't know what they're doing that for!"

Han Shuo listened to Gilbert's complaining narrative, his eyes glimmering as he looked into the deep pit that held the white bones. His body slowly moved and approached the pit. He landed straight within it, randomly picking up a bone of who knew what super rank creature and carefully examined it.

The bone was heavy in his hand, seeming to actually weigh around a hundred kilograms. The stark white bone seemed to contain a strange presence. The skin touching this bone felt a biting cold, and a sharp and chilly killing air flowed from the bone into Han Shuo's body.

The earth elite zombie silently emerged from the earth beneath Han Shuo like a ghost, his hand clutching a white bone as if it was something incomparably precious. As he handed this bone to Han Shuo, his golden earth-colored eyes danced with pride.

This surprised Han Shuo. He took the bone from the earth elite zombie and immediately felt an eternal dragon breath within. He could tell that this bone was heavier than the one earlier. This pristinely white bone caused the air around it to emit a faint whistling sound. He sensed it carefully again and felt some wind magic elements within.

Han Shuo could say with certainty at this point that this bone had come from a wind dragon. He was sure because as a necromancy mage, he had some understanding about the bones of magic creatures. Every mage coming from the necromancy department had to use bones in their experiments.

The bones of some super rank magic creatures still contained some energy from when they were still alive. They could be used to make powerful weapons. For example, the white bone staff that Belinda from the Calamity Church had refined was also forged from the bone of a super rank magic creature. This bone would also be helpful for Han Shuo to improve his necromancy magic.

While Han Shuo was deep in thought, the little skeleton also seemed to be trying to prove something. He brought several bones in front of Han Shuo, then pulled on his sleeve to gain attention.

Han Shuo was stunned when he looked at the little skeleton. He discovered two odd lights gleaming in the latter's eyes. The little skeleton's left hand was holding a white bone when a wave of silver light suddenly started circulating within the bone. The originally translucent bone rapidly corroded, as if time had accelerated over a thousand times. In just a moment, the bone containing a strange presence had turned into ashes and scattered into the wind.

After that, the little skeleton threw back his head proudly. He took another bone and made a munching motion towards Han Shuo. The little skeleton then threw the bone back into the pile of bones.

Han Shuo could understand without needing the little skeleton to say anything else. The little skeleton and the earth elite zombie could absorb the energy from the enormous skeletons littered throughout this land. Due to the unknown force of imprisonment here, the souls of the dead creatures couldn't dissipate into the heavens and earth after death, and instead, a portion of energy still remained in the bodies. Even when the flesh rotted away, the bones still contained some magical energy. To these two fellows, this energy was a great tonic. No wonder they were so interested in roleplaying as grave robbers and had turned this place upside down.

Han Shuo smiled as he rubbed the little skeleton's smooth skull, then patted the earth elite zombie's shoulder and said gently, "Hehe, you did well! How about this, you guys collect all the usable bones here!"

After being encouraged by Han Shuo, the earth elite zombie rubbed his head in honest joy as he quickly sank into the ground again. He appeared next to the ten meter long skeleton in the blink of an eye and started to dismantle the bones. As for the little skeleton, he waved his bony hands and danced around, happily sending Han Shuo a message to express his thoughts.

After focusing his attention for a moment, Han Shuo nodded and said understandingly, "So you think there's no problem for you and the earth elite to take away these bones. Wait until you guys collect them all in a pile, I'll give you a hand!"

The little skeleton had transmitted a message saying he wanted to bring all of these bones into the other dimension for the benefit of the necromancy creatures in his camp. Han Shuo had first been surprised for a moment after he'd understood, then expressed his assent.

As he received Han Shuo's approval, the little skeleton became extremely excited. His seven bone spurs shook, sending him whizzing through the air towards the earth elite zombie. The two continued to dismantle the huge magic creature's skeleton.

As Han Shuo observed carefully, he discovered that the two didn't take just anything from the ten meter long skeleton. Relying on their sensitivity towards energy, they only took bones with energy and promptly threw away the ordinary ones.

The useless bones thrown away by these two fellows were scattered throughout the trench filled area. They obviously hadn't sat idly by either dying the past couple of days when Han Shuo was cultivating. This ten meter long skeleton seemed to be their last prey.

While the little skeleton and earth elite zombie remained hard at work, Han Shuo's eyes were caught by the tombstone with the name Ayermika Cotton engraved onto it.

Only now did Han Shuo discover that this tombstone of the Lancelot Empire's legendary figure had originally only revealed a small part of its splendor. Thanks to the trenches that the earth elite zombie had carved, he'd yanked out that one meter tall tombstone up three meters. From the top of the tombstone down, it seemed to keep getting wider the deeper it was buried. It was shaped like a miniature hill, which puzzled Han Shuo.

Seeing Han Shuo focus his attention on the tombstone of Ayermika, Gilbert seemed to remember something and suddenly shouted out loud, "Master, this engraved stone slab is really weird. The little skeleton and earth elite zombie asked me to try moving it, but we found that it's extremely heavy. I didn't expect that even my strength couldn't move it one bit."

"Oh, this is a bit interesting!" This surprised Han Shuo greatly. As part of the dragon race, Gilbert was still immensely powerful even in human form. Even if the stone slab had been double in size, it should've been impossible for Gilbert to not be able to move it.

Therefore, Han Shuo had flown to the tombstone as soon as he'd heard Gilbert's words. He reached out and touched this tombstone with a surprised face.

The tombstone was cold to the touch. Apart from the deeply engraved, large Ayermika letters, the entire tombstone was as smooth as a mirror. Running his hand over it again, Han Shuo didn't feel any discomfort or anything strange. This tombstone wasn't much different from an ordinary stone slab.

Taking in a deep breath, Han Shuo tried shaking it and didn't even feel a shudder from the tombstone. It was just as Gilbert said, this stone was simply not easily moved.

"Come, dig up this piece of land for me!" His thoughts raced and Han Shuo waved his hand at the distant earth elite zombie.

The little skeleton and earth elite zombie were too interested in their skeleton, this tombstone seemed to have no appeal to them. Otherwise, with the earth elite zombie's nature, it would have given this tombstone a try.

As per Han Shuo's instructions, the earth elite zombie in the distant underground immediately disappeared. Afterwards, a tremor arose under Han Shuo's feet. The soil and sand that the tombstone was buried in was roiling and churning. The soft ground shook for a while, when two cracks appeared beneath the tombstone.

The originally firmly standing tombstone crashed down on a high hill that had formed. The tombstone, seven meters in length, was now completely revealed. Even its base, as broad as a tree root, could be seen.

"Hateful zombie, it obviously has the ability, yet deliberately makes this great dark dragon do all the carrying. What a lazy brat!" Gilbert watched the earth elite zombie follow Han Shuo's order to uproot the tombstone without much effort. At that point, he could not help but recall his previous experiences and complain loudly.

It was a pity that the earth elite zombie simply didn't care for the noisy Gilbert. When he finished what Han Shuo had ordered him to do, he immediately went back to the little skeleton's side and continued dismantling that huge skeleton.

"Honored master, what do you want to do?" Gilbert looked at the completely revealed tombstone and asked, puzzled.

"Let's have a look first!" Han Shuo casually answered. Then he approached the tombstone and carefully observed it, gently tracing the tombstone with his finger as he looked a little pensive.

An ordinary tombstone wouldn't be seven meters long. In addition, the material of this tombstone were unknown. Even with Han Shuo's current knowledge of all kinds of ores, he couldn't identify the tombstone's material. Combined with its unexpected weight, the tombstone left him suspicious.

As his finger gently swiped across the tombstone, a piece of magical yuan appeared like static electricity on his fingertip. It was pressed into the tombstone with a push from Han Shuo's finger. Suddenly, a large wave of dark magic element reflected back to Han Shuo's mind through the magical yuan. This energy was astonishingly similar to the imprisonment force all over in the forbidden land.

Han Shuo paled and hastily retracted his finger. He looked at the brown tombstone in astonishment and murmured, "How strange, this force should've disappeared already, could it be... the strange imprisonment force that covered the whole forbidden land came from the deceased demigod Ayermika...?"

"What is it, master?" Little dark dragon Gilbert couldn't hear Han Shuo's mumble, but couldn't help but ask when he saw Han Shuo's surprised face.

Han Shuo backed up a few steps and instructed, "Gilbert, back away a bit, I need to blow up this tombstone and see what's inside."

Waiting until Gilbert had moved according to his orders, Han Shuo also backed up about ten meters or so. He took out the Demonslayer Edge and infused magical yuan into it. After absorbing such a large mass of evil intent, even though the Demonslayer Edge hadn't truly become a peerless masterpiece, it already contained a formidable power.

A fierce sword light directly blasted out from the Demonslayer Edge after Han Shuo had infused his magical yuan, and headed straight for the tombstone with a terrifying force.

Rumbles resounded nonstop. The grand, seemingly indestructible tombstone was shattered into pieces under the impact of the Demonslayer Edge amidst a spray of splendid light.

Stone debris flew all around. After all had calmed down, the brown tombstone had broken into many pieces. A magic staff embedded with three amethysts wrapped in dense dark magic elements appeared on the ground. Next to the staff was an ancient, handwritten notebook.

Chapter 246: Just you? Are you worthy?

This magic staff was made of an unknown material. It was greyish-brown in color and felt rough to the touch. The staff was about one meter long, and its upper part was diamond shaped. The three amethysts were palm-sized. They emitted a beautiful bright light and sparkled as if containing water ripples. The three amethysts looked like three miniature lakes at a glance, and were placed in a triangular formation.

Ancients script were as dense as a bunch of tadpoles in the ancient, handwritten notebook. These two things had been unexpectedly embedded within the tombstone! One could tell that they were very valuable with just a single glance. They could even be the relics of Ayermike Cotton himself.

Han Shuo held the two items in hand, taking a deep look, and then unceremoniously put them into the space ring. He flicked a glance around and saw the fragmented rocks of the tombstone sparkling with different colors. He couldn't help but feel surprised and carefully assessed each one.

"Mhm, scarletheart iron and whitelight silver ores. I hadn't thought that the tombstone was refined from these strange ores. No wonder I couldn't see through the material!" Han Shuo softly exclaimed. He picked up some of the broken stones and identified them.

The surface of the tombstone had actually been refined from several strange ores smelted together. However, after the Demonslayer Edge had broken it apart, the interior revealed ores that hadn't completely melted, many of which were still raw ores. Looking at the magic staff and notebook, one would understand that it wasn't because the refiner of this tombstone was lacking in ability. They definitely did this on purpose, for fear of ruining the items inside if they completely refined all the ores.

What happened in this forbidden land five hundred years ago? Why was Ayermike Cotton here? Why was his tombstone here? Han Shuo didn't know and didn't care. What he wanted was to collect anything of value here before leisurely leaving this area.

After placing the magic staff and ancient notebook into the space ring, Han Shuo also unceremoniously did the same with the raw ores. He then walked to the pit where little skeleton and the earth elite zombie were, closing his eyes and placed his hand on each of the bones containing the strange energy.

In a blink of an eye, roughly ten white jade-like bones were also shoved into the space ring by Han Shuo. Seeing their hard earned bones taken away by him, the little skeleton and earth elite zombie weren't at all angry. They even expressed joy, as if the more he took, the more honored they became.

When he took a look around the whole area, there were no longer any complete skeletons. In the pit, the little skeleton and earth elite zombie were excitedly picking things up here and there. Like two small porters, they held the bunch of bones under their arms, on their backs, and in their hands.

When these two fellows were almost completely hidden by the white bones, the little skeleton's purple sockets shone brightly and he looked at Han Shuo to transmit a message. Han Shuo began to chant a spell. The little skeleton, elite earth zombie, along with the bones that they had to made four trips back and forth to collect, were sent back to the other dimension.

After the two fellows left, Han Shuo stood in the sky and swept the entire area. Seeing there weren't any more abnormalities in this forbidden land, he had Gilbert transform and returned to the cemetery of death.

This time, the human and dragon didn't encounter any danger during their return trip. Han Shuo released three yin demons along the way, and had Gilbert slow down. He searched carefully for materials to refine pills and weapons. This actually took them a total of ten days before they finally returned to the cemetery of death.

Han Shuo had managed to collect a good amount of refining materials in those ten days. Upon returning to the cemetery of death, the materials would be enough for Han Shuo to refine several things that he wanted, as well as a cauldron full of rebirth pills.

Han Shuo had actually reaped a lucrative harvest during this excursion into the Dark Forest. Although there had been some crises halfway, he resolved them by relying on the virtue of his luck and wits. The feeling that he received when he returned to the cemetery of death was quite good.

As he collected enough pill and weapon refining materials, Han Shuo carefully weighed his options. He decided to do a closed door session in the cemetery of death, ready to refine a pill cauldron in addition to some small magic treasures, before continuing to refine rebirth pills.

Determined, Han Shuo decided to research the refinement of pills and magical treasures. He stayed in the cemetery of death for three months.

When he emerged after the three months were up, the cold winter had passed and all beings had awoken from their hibernation. It was a season in which the spring flowers were blooming vibrantly. At the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force, it was the time where students took an exam to test their individual power.

At the dark major's biggest testing field, the teachers and students of the necromancy major were grouped. They had to wait for the dark major students to finish before they could use the equipment in the testing field for their exams.

After the tragic experience that had happened to her family, little witch Lisa suddenly became much more sensible. Although her nature was still unruly and stubborn, she was no longer unreasonable to the point where people hated her.

"Master Fanny, has Bryan really not returned to the academy in the past six months?" Lisa looked helplessly at Fanny and asked in a sweet voice.

"Lisa, you have been asking this for two, three months already. He really hasn't come back!" Fanny replied with a gloomy face. She thought in her heart, That damnable naughty devil, where has he been for the past six months? He hasn't come back to see me in so long.

“He said he would return to the Empire shortly after leaving Valen City, but it’s been so long and he still hasn’t returned, can it be that something’s happened to him?”

“Don’t speak nonsense, how could something happen to Bryan?!”

Fanny was also worried that Bryan had disappeared for half a year. However, she didn’t dare to think any bad thoughts. That was how humans were. Just one bad thought would be enough to derail their entire train of thought, and everything would go downhill from there. One thought could cause them to fall into inextricable sadness.

“Master Fanny, your students can commence their exams.” A dark major teacher shouted from a raised platform.

“Let’s go, let’s go watch a bit!” Necromancy major teacher Gene was still indulgent to Fanny as ever. He displayed a gentle smile, urging Fanny onwards.

Nodding her head politely, Fanny maintained a distance from Gene and went with him to the raised platform. The dark major students happened to be descending. A few of them had on arrogant expressions and didn’t immediately leave. Instead, they laughed and lowered their voice to murmur about something.

The dark major students that been humiliated by Han Shuo at the last competition were made a laughingstock for the longest time. The longer Han Shuo had vanished for, the more their embarrassing experience would be forgotten. However, their hatred for him couldn’t be erased. From time to time, they would find opportunities to poke, bully, and make fun of the necromancy major students.

After Han Shuo left, the necromancy major returned to its previous state of decay. The exuberant heroic spirit was short lived for only a few days. The students continuously waxed eloquence on how good things had been when Han Shuo was still there.

“It makes no difference if the necromancy major takes the test or not! What can their students accomplish?!” Phillide, the strongest student in the dark major, sneered disdainfully at the approaching necromancy major students.

All of the dark major students, who were standing nearby, joined in and laughed loudly, each one louder than the one before, as if they feared the necromancy students wouldn't be able to hear.

"Phillide, don't use such a loud voice within the testing field!" The dean of the dark major, archmage Deo, had a bland smile on his face, as he softly chided the clamor Phillide and the bunch of brats had created. He didn't look the least bit serious.

Be it the necromancy major students or teachers like Fanny and Gene, all could see that Deo's smile held a trace of delight and indulgence. Han Shuo had stomped on both the light major and the dark major last time at the competition. As the head of the dark major, Deo had lost a great deal of face and naturally didn't hold any bit of goodwill towards the necromancy major.

"I know, dean!" Phillide chuckled off to the side as he answered. He then ridiculed, "Looking at the necromancy department taking test, isn't that interesting?"

"True. We've nothing to do anyways. Let's stay and watch!" All of the students, who'd been stomped by Han Shuo last time, chimed in to agree with Phillide, rapt interest on their faces. They looked at the first person coming up to take the test, Athena, as if they were watching clowns walk up stage.

"I heard that it's this stupid woman's fourth attempt to take the test. If she still can't advance to novice mage, she might as well go die already. What an embarrassment!" Phillide smiled, ridiculing viciously.

"Phillide, and who the hell do you think you are?! If Bryan were here, he definitely will rip your mouth off!" Lisa couldn't listen to those words and couldn't help but snap at Phillide.

"Humph! How could that brat have run around so arrogantly! If I hadn't had a stomachache last time? Heh heh, now that my body has recovered, it's time to settle the debt, but he's disappeared for half a year. Doesn't this explain it all?" In the last competition, Han Shuo indeed participated in Phillide's stead. The former had done so with a bang, making Phillide lose all face. He'd even been scolded by Deo. He still felt indignant about it even now, not wanting to be the least bit inferior than others.

“Oh, so you say I'm hiding from you? Just you? Are you worthy?” Han Shuo's shadow appeared like a ghost. A blue magic robe adorned his tall body, an odd smile hung on his face. He walked measuringly into the testing field, raising his voice as he said, “I've return this time to graduate ahead of schedule. Today, I will take my final test at the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force.”

Chapter 247: Graduation

With his current strength, Han Shuo wouldn't even be afraid of the dark major's dean, Deo, let alone the likes of Phillide. Han Shuo looked relaxed and unrestrained as he stepped onto the testing field. An easy smile hung on his face. However, he still exuded an awe-inspiring temperament.

"Bryan, you've finally returned?" Lisa's voice was full of joy and surprise. She couldn't help but jump in excitement as she let out a "Yeah!".

Fanny was sitting demurely on the high platform. After seeing Han Shuo, the traces of sadness that had lingered on her brows for the past few months were completely wiped away by an invisible hand. She radiated brightly in a way that dazzled the eyes. Her lips curved in an odd way that seemed both happy and angry.

Han Shuo had been through a series of life and death battles in that half year's worth of time. His power had skyrocketed and emitted a natural aura now. No one dared to look down on him now, even when he didn't deliberately show off his strength.

"Athena, focus on the test! I know you can definitely pass!" After arriving, Han Shuo spoke to Athena, who seemed nervous because of the jeers and sarcastic remarks from Phillide's group.

"Thank you, Bryan!" Han Shuo's arrival seemed to put Athena at ease, and her uneasy heart slowly returned to its original calm state.

Phillide, on the other side, had been set off by Han Shuo's earlier words. His facial expression was quite ugly as he gave Han Shuo a sinister look, "You disappeared for half a year after I recovered. What was it for if not to hide from me?"

Honestly speaking, the likes of Phillide bored Han Shuo. After fighting so many powerful beings, Phillide was no longer qualified to shout and yell in front of him. The disparity in power was too great, Han Shuo couldn't be bothered to even deal with him.

"Aha!" Han Shuo gave an odd laugh, squinting his eyes at Phillide. He shook his head sympathetically, before shrugging and sighing softly, “You think too highly of yourself, but what can I say to this kind of fool who has a few screws loose in his head?”

As he finished saying this, Han Shuo no longer paid any more attention to Phillide, who happened to trembling in anger. He turned in the direction of Fanny on the platform and flashed a bright smile. Inhaling deeply, he gazed at Fanny and said, “I’m back!”

Fanny’s pretty face reddened for some reason. She seemed to want to hide her true feelings as she glared fiercely at Han Shuo, huffing, “You unruly brat! You still know to come back to the academy?”

Han Shuo flashed an awkward smile and wanted to explain something when the dark major dean displayed an unpleasant expression. “Wait until after the exams to catch up. You’ll have plenty of time then. Now, I think we need to quickly settle your major’s business, we’re very busy people after all!”

The other dark major teachers also loudly rushed Fanny and Gene after their dean had spoken, expressing that they had a lot of things to do and couldn’t keep waiting.

Han Shuo had been about to explain, but looked apologetically towards Fanny on the platform and flipped out his hands. He shrugged and took a few steps back without another word to where Lisa, Amy, and several other necromancy major students were standing.

“Bryan, where did you go for the past half year? Didn’t you say that you would quickly return to Ossen City? Why did you drag it out until now?” Lisa chattered nonstop after Han Shuo had arrived. Han Shuo waited for her to finish her questioning before smiling and telling her that he spent a period of time cultivating in the Dark Forest.

“What the hell? He really thinks he’s something huh!” The dark major students, who’d been stomped by Han Shuo, felt indignant and snorted when they saw his dashing manner.

“Humph, I’d like to see how he intends on graduating early. I remember he was only a novice mage half a year ago!” Phillide, who’d been repeatedly humiliated by Han Shuo, said coldly when he saw Han Shuo in his element.

Athena was calm this time and was not as nervous as she'd been before. She skillfully casted several necromancy magic spells, smoothly answered some questions, and easily passed the novice mage test.

Afterwards, the necromancy students started their tests one by one as well. For most of the students, their power hadn't improved much. Only Lisa unexpectedly became a journeyman mage, the magical pulses from her body were obviously stronger than that of the other students.

Lisa was a lot more sensible after her harrowing experience and had also come to understand the importance of strength. She was much more hard working when it came to practicing magic now, unlike when she'd mostly played around and rarely meditated.

Waiting until all the necromancy students had finished their testing, Han Shuo leisurely stepped forward and said, "I intended to directly graduate upon my return. May I take the test now?"

At the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force, one could graduate as long as they advanced to the rank of adept mage. Since Han Shuo received the memories from the soul of archmage Clarendon, he'd mastered all the high ranked necromancy magic after a short amount of practice, not to mention that he also possessed some lost necromancy spells.

The magic test was divided into three stages. The first was an oral examination about magical knowledge, the second was to release a magic spell of that corresponding rank, and the third was to be assigned to a mission. The test was over once all three stages were completed.

However, in the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force, the adept mage test didn't include the mission portion. Students could advance as long as they passed the first two stages.

With his current necromancy knowledge and power, the adept mage test was as simple as child's play for Han Shuo. He arrogantly skipped the journeyman mage test and set his eyes on the adept mage level test, intending to escape the shackles of the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force as soon as possible.

“Are you sure you want to skip to the adept mage test?” Standing on the platform, Deo glowered at Han Shuo and asked for confirmation.

Nodding his head impatiently, Han Shuo confirmed, “Master Deo, didn’t I just say it very clearly? I want to skip the journeyman mage test and directly advance to adept mage.”

“Fine then, let’s start!” Deo snorted coldly, obviously a little displeased at Han Shuo’s discourtesy. He then turned to nod at Fanny and Gene, giving his agreement.

To the surprise of the other necromancy students, Han Shuo stepped onto the round platform. He leisurely dealt with Fanny and Gene’s questions, then he answered some questions about the relationship between several magical theories. Some of the dark major teachers on Deo’s side deliberately tried to embarrass Han Shuo, asking him about obscure, difficult magic knowledge.

However, Han Shuo possessed Clarendon’s memories of magic. Forget his mental strength, with his own strength alone, he could already be considered an archmage who had been thoroughly tempered. The seemingly complex problems couldn’t stump him as he fluently answered them all with merrily twinkling eyes.

At this point, the necromancy students below were starting to feel proud, especially Lisa. She chattered and laughed at Phillide, jeering at him. She was making use of Han Shuo’s performance to mock Phillide and the group of students who’d jeered at her earlier.

Even though Deo didn’t want to admit it, Han Shuo’s answers were flawless. Han Shuo smoothly and accurately answered all of the difficult questions that they presented him with. There was nothing for them to even find fault with. In the end, they had to announce with stiff faces that Han Shuo had passed the first round.

The second round about necromancy magic performance was even easier. Han Shuo cast and skillfully deployed about a dozen spells along with adequate mental strength. With the decades of experience from Clarendon combined with his own, Han Shuo didn't have any difficulty releasing high rank necromancy magic.

As Han Shuo released one high rank necromancy spell after another, the necromancy students below began cheering nonstop, while the dark major teachers and students had ugly expressions on their faces. Evidently, they hadn't expected Han Shuo to be able to skip one rank and advance directly to the rank of adept mage in just the a short span of six months.

"Bryan, my assessment wasn't wrong! You really are a magic genius!" Fanny was watching from the platform how Han Shuo easily dealt with the test from beginning to end. The power he demonstrated wasn't at all inferior to Fanny herself. For some difficult spells, he released them even more accurately and skillfully than her, the teacher. This made Fanny marvel.

"What's wrong with the world's order? He's actually gained so much strength so quickly!" Gene muttered with a look of disbelief, but then his thinking changed. Although Han Shuo had never attended his classes, he could still be considered one of Gene's students. With such a miraculous student, Gene could still more or less take some credit, enough for him to boast from now on. Gene felt delighted when his thoughts reached this point.

"Pass!" Deo gave a cold snort. His expression was increasingly ugly.

"Hehe, many thanks, Master Deo!" Han Shuo was all smiles from beginning to end. Be it oral knowledge or practical magic deployment, he passed it all leisurely without a single bit of effort.

Deo and some dark major teachers gathered for a discussion with glowering faces. Deo then gave a cold, devious laugh as he looked at Han Shuo. "You've managed to pass the first two rounds. Your performance has impressed everyone, so I'll just tell you about the third test. You need to hunt a rank three harpy by yourself and hand us its core in a month. Your exam can only be considered passed then!"

"Oh my gosh, how is that possible?!" The necromancy students immediately started complaining.

On their last trip to the Dark Forest, Odysseus and his team of six had been carefully on their guard when dealing with a harpy. The six person team had included mages, and swordsmen, plus a journeyman swordsman, and archer Nia, but they'd still had to be careful. This showed how fearsome a harpy was.

Deo had actually demanded Han Shuo hunt a harpy as a stepping stone to advancing to adept mage. He was obviously trying to make Han Shuo's life difficult.

Phillide's cadre all shut up when they witnessed Han Shuo's performance on the second round. Even Phillide, who'd been full of confidence, was disturbed and didn't dare to say anything else after he saw Han Shuo easily release all sorts of advanced level magic. Just when the dark major students felt their spirits had been dampened, they heard Deo suddenly announce that Han Shuo had to hunt a rank three creature—a harpy. They were excited again and laughed loudly while they threw gloating looks at Han Shuo's group.

"Master Deo, aren't you going too far? I've never heard of any dark major student having to hunt a harpy for the mage advancement exams. This is simply a mission to death, I definitely won't agree!" Fanny's delicate cheeks were red with fury, and she glared fiercely at Deo as she shouted.

Snorting coldly, Deo said with a darkened face, "Master Fanny, I'm the head of the dark major, not you. Your necromancy major is part of our dark major, and I have the right to do so. You can give up if Bryan doesn't want to accept this task, but then the first two rounds will be wasted!"

By now, Deo had made it abundantly clear that he wanted to make things difficult for Han Shuo. This conversation left Fanny trembling in rage. She pointed at Deo and shouted, "You... you are actually that despicable of a person! I'm going to look for academy dean to judge this, I won't allow you blot out the sky with one hand like this!"

"Wait!" Han Shuo still had a smile on his face. He responded in a neither fast nor slow manner. When he had everyone's eyes on him, he looked at Deo and chuckled merrily, “Master Deo, are you sure you want me to kill a harpy?”

“Heh heh, I am sure! As long as you can prove that you have this power, I will definitely let you pass without another word!” Finally feeling the thrill of victory, Deo was smiling as he looked at Han Shuo.

Nodding, Han Shuo shrugged and said smilingly, “If so, it seems I don’t have to make a trip back to the Dark Forest again. Please determine my rank now!” Han Shuo’s space ring flashed when he finished saying these words and two harpy cores appeared in his hand. His right hand also held a pair of black iron claws, obviously also belonging to the harpies.

“I hunted down these two harpies in the Dark Forest before I returned to the Academy. These claws still retain traces of my magic. I think Master Deo won’t deny these things?” Han Shuo laughed and said, throwing a mocking look at the shocked Deo.

Suddenly, the space before Han Shuo trembled. A light flashed by and the Dean of the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force, Emma, appeared out of thin air. A pulse of magic shot out and circled the pair of iron claws in Han Shuo’s hand. Emma then smiled benevolently, “Indeed, I have confirmed that these two harpies were definitely killed by Bryan.”

Halting, Emma gave Han Shuo an odd glance, then turned to look at Deo with a smile. She said warmly, “There shouldn’t be any problems. I think he can truly graduate now!”

Chapter 248: The promise

Deo's face was as ugly as it can be. No matter how much he had overestimated Han Shuo's abilities, he absolutely couldn't imagine that the latter's strength had been this terrifying. Even Deo himself might not have the power to kill two harpies by himself.

Deo simply had no words to say after Dean Emma had given her confirmation. He couldn't deny it with so many people watching. Ultimately, he could only nod in anger and say to Emma, "Since master Dean has personally confirmed it, Bryan can be considered to have officially graduated."

Saying those words, Deo snorted with a scowl as he spoke. He turned to a dark major teacher next to him and left some instructions before directly leaving the testing area, seeming to be in a foul mood.

The necromancy students snapped out of their shock after Deo left. When Lisa started cheering, the rest couldn't help but join in as they shouted happily. As for Phillide and his gang, they didn't bark another word and ran off with their tails between two legs.

"How could this be? How could this be?!" Fanny murmured, looking at Han Shuo in disbelief. No matter what, she couldn't figure out how Han Shuo managed to kill two harpies by himself. Fanny felt that even she couldn't estimate Han Shuo's current strength.

Afterwards, Fanny suddenly remembered her promise with him. She once said that as long as Han Shuo advanced to adept mage, she would consider being his girlfriend. Now, just after six months, Han Shuo had suddenly returned to the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force, and had done this grand deed in such a relaxed manner. With Fanny's understanding of Han Shuo's character, he'd definitely bring up the matter.

Therefore, the unprepared Fanny panicked. Her face was red with embarrassment as she snuck a fleeting glance at Han Shuo, just to discover that he was also looking at her with shining eyes. She grew even more frantic. She hastily left Gene with an explanation and quickly fled the scene.

When Han Shuo saw Fanny leave, he knew full well as to why and proudly chuckled in a low tone. Paying no heed to the compliments from Lisa and the other students, he turned to chase after Fanny.

“Bryan, I have some things to discuss alone with you, so come with me for a bit. There’s no need to pursue the matters regarding your graduation qualifications. There shouldn’t be any more problems!” Dean Emma immediately stopped Han Shuo with a smile when she saw that he was about to leave.

Han Shuo was slightly taken aback. He wanted to decline as he didn’t know what she wanted. However, he then told himself the matter with Fanny wasn’t as urgent, so he nodded in agreement. Han Shuo spoke a word to Lisa’s group before following Emma to her office.

They reached Emma’s office after walking for a bit. Han Shuo found a seat and sat down without any reservations, then said smilingly, “Master Dean, what can I do for you?”

“Hehe, if I remember correctly, you aren’t older than eighteen years old, and yet, you’re already a necromancy adept mage and even have the power to kill harpies. You went from being a child without any magic to having such accomplishments in just a short year. This is quite incredible!” Emma spoke at a good pace as she smiled at Han Shuo.

Han Shuo frowned involuntarily upon hearing her words. Remaining silent for a bit, he smiled and opened his mouth to speak, “Indeed, even I myself find this incredible. I wonder what Master Dean means by saying such words?”

Emma shook her head and chuckled, speaking kindly, “Child, you shouldn’t misunderstand, I hold no harsh feelings towards you. You’re a student of my Babylon Academy of Magic and Force and even studied necromancy. Now that you have such great achievements, it can be considered as a credit to our Academy.”

“Heh heh, you’ve gone from being a clueless child to having the power to kill two Harpies in two years. I must say that this is quite the miracle. I'm sure you have encountered many strange things in these past two years, otherwise you wouldn't have progressed this fast."

"You also haven't reported to the Dark Mantle for quite some time. Candide told me to pay attention that if you returned to the Academy, that I must have you visit to the Dark Mantle as soon as possible. He seems to have a mission for you. In addition, I hope you will properly handle your relationship with Fanny. While there are things that I can't say, I just want to remind you that Fanny's father isn't someone that you will easily get along with, so you need to pay special attention!"

Han Shuo heaved a sigh of relief after Emma finished speaking. He hadn't expected Emma to be similar to Candide. Like husband like wife, they didn't seem interested in plumbing his secrets, and even sounded rather protective of him.

Nodding, Han Shuo said with a smile, "Rest assured Dean Emma, I'll definitely heed your advice. I'll also report to the Dark Mantle as soon as possible."

"That's all well and good, so I'll say no more. Your diploma and identity certificates should be ready by tomorrow if there's no problem. Deo won't dare to try any more monkey business under my watch. Hehe, Deo isn't a bad person in fact. It's just that you humiliated him last time, which is why he targeted you like this. I hope that you won't take it to heart."

"Mhm, I know!"

Han Shuo didn't say anything else and left Emma's office. He actually didn't mind the matter with Deo. Han Shuo wouldn't have many chances to come back after graduation if there were no further accidents. He naturally wouldn't have any contact with Deo in the future. Of course, if Deo himself wanted to seek death, Han Shuo didn't mind sending him on his way with the strength that he held.

Han Shuo went straight to Fanny's lab after leaving Emma's office. His mind was churning nonstop when he thought about how he would be seeing her soon. He was a little excited and couldn't quite control himself.

He was nervous like a young boy about to confess his love.

Han Shuo inhaled deeply at Fanny's door and gradually calmed his nerves. He knocked on the door with a smile, "Master Fanny, can I come in?"

"No you cannot!" Contrary to Han Shuo's expectations, Fanny neatly rejected him as soon as she heard his voice. This had never happened before.

Dumbfounded, Han Shuo smiled wryly, "Why?"

"Humph! I know you are up to no good this time, so just stand outside the door, or you can just disappear for half a year like last time." Fanny's voice inside the lab contained obvious resentment that anyone could tell from her tone. She was still complaining about the last time that Han Shuo had departed without a farewell.

"Master Fanny, please let me explain. I really didn't do it on purpose. I was delayed in Valen City this time. I really had no choice but to stay there. I didn't deliberately try to deceive you!" With his current breadth of experience, how could Han Shuo not understand the underlying meaning of Fanny's words? He could only stand outside the door with a wry smile and explain slowly.

"Little lecher, I'll allow you to come in, but don't try anything funny." Fanny hesitated for a bit. She understood that leaving Han Shuo standing at the door was somewhat inappropriate.

Hastily nodding his head, Han Shuo compromised to assure her, "Of course, of course. There might be bad rumors if someone sees me standing outside. That'd be even more improper."

Fanny seemed to think that Han Shuo's words made sense. The lab door made a creaking sound as she cautiously stuck out her head out and looked around. Her hand grabbed at the silent Han Shuo and yanked him inside, shutting the door. She returned to sit at the table in the middle of the room, and said in a serious manner, "Alright, what do you want?"

Laughing devilishly, Han Shuo walked to sit right in front of Fanny without any reservations, saying, “Master Fanny, could it be that you want to deny your promise?”

Stilling her expression, Fanny pretended to be calm and flicked a glance Han Shuo, asking suspiciously, “Deny what?”

“You once said that you’d be my girlfriend when I advanced to adept mage. Now that I’ve passed the adept mage test, I can be regarded to have officially graduated from the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force. There is no longer a barrier between us, and so, you’ll honor your promise, won’t you?” Han Shuo didn’t beat around the bush. He asked with a smile, his eyes shining as he looked at Fanny.

Fanny couldn’t pretend to be serious anymore after hearing Han Shuo’s words. Her cheeks flared as red as the sun. She fiercely rolled her eyes at Han Shuo, then giggled in a charming manner and said the words she prepared beforehand, “I didn’t say I’d agree for sure, just that I’d give it some thought and consider it. Hehe, I’m done thinking, so what are you so anxious about?”

Fanny’s expression was delicate and charming at this time. The two crimson patches on her cheeks adorned her shy beauty even more. Having known her for so long, Han Shuo had long since been aware that she wasn’t without affection for him. Her half-hearted attitude right now only made Han Shuo unable to suppress a heart that was itching with naughty thoughts.

With a wicked laugh, Han Shuo instantly forgot the compromise earlier. He abruptly moved behind Fanny, his large hands hugging her shoulders from behind. He puckered his mouth to steal a kiss from her red cheek, then said with a grin, “Can it be that you really want to go back on your words? That isn’t the morals of a good teacher, no?”

Fanny only saw a blur when Han Shuo disappeared right before her eyes. He appeared like a ghost behind her without giving her time to react. His arms embraced her, firmly holding her to the chair as he took the chance to attack her with a kiss.

“You brazen daredevil of a little lecher, what did you promise me when you came in?” Fanny was extremely embarrassed. Her resentment from the past half year still hadn’t dissipated yet, so she couldn’t help but struggle and yell loudly.

When dealing with a woman, one couldn’t follow her pace, but had to take the initiative, using body and soul as a double-layered attack to destroy the defenses of her heart. Han Shuo had learned many things from Emily’s body. He had long stopped being a greenhorn. Moreover, with the memory and experience from Clarendon, plus his own feelings, he was no longer passive when coming into contact with women.

While Fanny was struggling and yelling, Han Shuo held her firmly with his hands and leaned down, his hot tongue gently caressing her white, slender neck. He tenderly whispered into her ear, “I’ve thought of you, everyday and everynight for this past half year. I’ve wanted to see you at every moment. I think you already know this, don’t you? Honestly, the past days were bland when I wasn’t by your side. Only your promise encouraged me to work hard and practice. The thought of being with together with you was like a spell, haunting me to train day and night without a single moment to relax. I could advance to an adept mage today, everything was because I wanted to be with you. Could it be you wish to heartlessly hurt me?...”

The unbroken string of whispers was full of sincerity and deep affection. The tender voice was like a gentle rain that moistened Fanny’s dry soul. The hot tip of Han Shuo’s tongue wantonly probed about, like a catalyst that started to destroy her soul’s defense. Fanny, whose very heart was still struggling, slowly fell into the net of love woven by Han Shuo.

“Oh... Bryan...” Fanny softly moaned, tears had unknowingly filled her eyes. Her struggling body suddenly melted and her mouth curved into a sweet smile as she listened to Han Shuo’s whisperings of passionate love.

“Do you know? I truly can’t do without you!” Han Shuo finally pulled Fanny up from the chair and embraced her tightly. His look was fiery and directed right at her as he tenderly professed his affection.

The line of defense in her soul completely collapsed. Fanny softly whimpered and threw herself into Han Shuo's chest. Her hands clutched his strong back, and she stood on the tips of her toes as her fragrant lips reached for Han Shuo's.

A beautiful woman was offering her cherry lips, so Han Shuo naturally wouldn't be politely aloof. He immediately held her and gave a blazing hot kiss.

Beautiful Fanny was the one that Han Shuo truly loved. From the moment he'd stepped into this world, perhaps it was the lingering emotions from Bryan's thoughts, or her kindness that'd moved Han Shuo's heart. He was deeply infatuated with her, a fact that had never changed.

Even after all the earth-shattering changes, even after Han Shuo's power soared nonstop, even with Emily and Phoebe, who were no less beautiful than Fanny, his initial and most sincere affection for Fanny had never been affected.

Han Shuo was now accustomed to the ways of this world. He understood that as long as he had enough strength, it wouldn't be difficult to obtain whatever he wanted. Money, power, and beauty were his trifecta of favorite things, and were precisely the three things that he didn't have in his past life.

Why would one mind the petty things in life if one could simply have everything they wanted? Why mind how others look at you? Han Shuo had decided to indulge himself, and no longer concealed his desires!

Chapter 249: Rebirth pill

Han Shuo and Fanny embraced each other affectionately. However, Han Shuo wasn't anxious to take her. He only continued to use tender words to declare the feelings that he felt deep in his heart.

When Han Shuo realized that Fanny had completely let down her guard, he took out a pill from his space ring and smiled, "Eat it!"

"What is this?" Fanny smiled happily, her eyes sparkling. She looked curiously at Han Shuo and asked.

The rebirth pill was round and crystal clear, like a beautiful bright green jewel, and emitted a refreshing fragrance. Han Shuo had refined it back when he had been in the cemetery of death. It had the effect of completely transforming an ordinary person's body. A batch had only seven pills. Han Shuo had already eaten one. He had confirmed its effects and intended to use the rebirth pill to reform her body, giving her a surprise.

"A great pill!" Han Shuo smilingly said.

"Being all mysterious again, you bad thing!" Fanny rolled her eyes at Han Shuo, as she casually picked up the rebirth pill. She popped it into her mouth without another word.

Seeing her swallow it so quickly, Han Shuo was shocked for a moment before hastily urging, "Quick, sit down and don't think of anything else."

Han Shuo couldn't explain in time, so he used his hands to press her back into her seat. He then placed both of his hands on the middle of her back and began to transmit magical yuan into her body.

"Mm, what on earth did you give me to eat? It feels like a fire is burning in my stomach!" Fanny felt like a fire had been lit in her body after swallowing the rebirth pill. Her body temperature rose quickly, making her yell out in panicked voice.

She then seemed to misunderstand as she couldn't help but struggle and roar in fury, "Damnable brat! You gave me that kind of medicine didn't you!? How could you be so despicable?"

Fanny had misunderstood and her heart was in a mess. She was both disappointed and furious at Han Shuo, wanting to escape his grip as her body madly struggled.

Han Shuo panicked, his face paled. He immediately used his left hand to firmly press down on Fanny's shoulder and hastily shouted, "This isn't an aphrodisiac. I swear. You trust me so little?"

Fanny became a little calmer upon hearing his words. She could feel that although there was a fire in her body, it wasn't a lustful flame. Therefore she stopped struggling and said quickly, "Eh, you're always up to nothing good, so I just misunderstood your intentions. I won't move anymore now!"

Han Shuo didn't know whether to laugh or cry upon hearing her words. When he thought about it, his relationship with Fanny was indeed a little out of order. It was understandable for her to assume his intentions were bad.

"Alright, don't speak. Just calm your soul and empty your mind, like you're meditating!" Han Shuo released Fanny's shoulder and moved his hand to the middle of her back. He quickly poured magical yuan into her body and helped her diffuse the medicinal energy.

Dense mists wrapped around the two, black electric sparks shot out from Han Shuo's palm into Fanny's body. Fanny sat still and proper, her whole body relaxed as she allowed Han Shuo to act as he wished, completely trusting him.

Han Shuo released his hand with a smile roughly an hour later, heaving a long sigh before he leaned in and asked, "How are you feeling?"

"Eh, I need to go to the toilet!" Fanny was somewhat embarrassed. She whispered with a reddened face.

Han Shuo let loose with a loud string of laughter and said, "That sounds about right. You'll want to go to the toilet over the next three days. The waste and filth in your body will be excreted during this time, after which your body will be reformed in ways beyond your imagination. I'll come back to see you again then."

A series of pitter-patter sounds burst out from Fanny's body. Fanny couldn't hold it in anymore. She sprang up with a flushed face, huffing and yelling, "How is this different from a laxative? You hateful brat!"

Fanny leapt to open the door and ran out before Han Shuo could respond, not daring to stay for a moment. She obviously couldn't hold it back anymore.

Han Shuo gave a long, devious, odd laugh after Fanny left. He then promptly left as well. He followed a narrow, twisting trail to the back mountain to avoid bumping into the other necromancy students and exited the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force.

Han Shuo's actions would definitely have caused a sensation upon return. He would stop being associated with the Academy after procedures were wrapped up in three days. Thus, it was more appropriate to leave through the back door to avoid the chatter of Lisa and the other students.

Han Shuo didn't immediately go and report to the Dark Mantle after walking out of the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force. He hadn't been back for a long time, so it wouldn't matter if he visited a day or two later.

It currently seemed quite lively in front of the Boozt Merchant Guild as many carriages stood there. Han Shuo went straight inside after arriving.

"Eh, if this isn't Mr. Bryan? What brings you here?" The two guards at the door both recognized Han Shuo. They greeted him with surprise as he hadn't come to visit in a long time.

"Mhm, it has indeed been a long time since I last came by. Has the lady of the house returned?" Han Shuo nodded with a smile and asked in a friendly manner.

"The lady came back a long time ago. If Mr. Bryan has come to discuss business with the lady this time, why don't you drop by a little later?" This guard had a difficult expression, he hesitated momentarily before opening his mouth to speak.

"Oh, why is that? Can it be that your lady isn't home?" Han Shuo inquired with confusion, then laughed lightly, "No problem, I can just meet with Fabian. If Fabian is absent, I can still chat with Jack!"

Suddenly, Phoebe's angry shout echoed from inside. Han Shuo was stunned before his face turned grave. He curiously asked, "What's going on here?"

The guard smiled wryly as he looked at Han Shuo, saying in all honesty, "There's some chaos going on inside at the moment. Some big businessman called Cameron seems to want Miss Phoebe to assent to something, but she didn't. Things aren't look very good."

"Many thanks for the reminder. You don't seem to know much about my relationship with your merchant guild." Han Shuo replied before rushing in to see what was happening.

That Cameron fellow had wanted Phoebe to join his alliance last time at Lawrence's residence, but she'd turned him down. Apparently he still hadn't given up on the idea after so long. Judging from Phoebe's furious shout, the scene inside was likely not very amiable.

No matter how he looked at it, Phoebe could already be considered Han Shuo's woman. He naturally wouldn't stand for it if someone bullied her. Therefore, he dashed forward at an extremely fast speed and appeared at the source of Phoebe's angry shouts in the span of just a few breaths.

A group of ten surrounded Phoebe in a pavilion at the crack of the artificial mountain that Han Shuo and Phoebe had once hid themselves in. The familiar place was now full of tension, with some strange faces readying their weapons for a fight.

Apart from Cameron, who Han Shuo had met at the residence of Finance Minister Eevee, everyone else was unfamiliar. These people were either flowery dressed merchants, or highly skilled mages or swordsmen. The gang looked at Phoebe and Fabian's group with ugly faces, as if just one more unwanted word would cause them to spring into action.

Several guards of the Boozt Merchant Guild stood in the surroundings with rage burning in their bellies, their weapons already unsheathed as if they just needed one order from Phoebe for them to engage in a pitched battle.

“Bryan, when did you return?” Her pretty eyes suddenly brightened with delight at Han Shuo’s sudden appearance. Phoebe was ecstatic as she exclaimed in surprise.

“Humph! Just a little boy toy, what can he do?” A sturdy man, whose logo on his chest clearly indicated him as a senior swordsman, cast a disdainful glance at Han Shuo. He seemed to know about Han Shuo and Phoebe’s relationship.

“Oh, is that so?” Han Shuo gave an odd laugh before jeering, “Then try taking a blow from this little boy toy, shall we?”

When his words fell, the already annoyed Han Shuo punched out. There wasn’t any energy pulse nor powerful momentum to it, even the speed of it was neither fast nor slow. The punch seemed soft and without strength.

Accordingly, the senior swordsman still retained his mocking expression and said coldly, “Just a little boy toy indeed, even his punch is weak with no bite.”

The swordsman then raised his hand. Smiling viciously, he aimed a blow right at Han Shuo’s incoming punch. Obviously, he intended to seriously injure Han Shuo with this blow and intimidate the Boozt Merchant Guild’s guards.

The merchants with Cameron all had leisurely smiles on their faces. They looked at Han Shuo like he was a fool, sure that he would be severely injured.

On the other hand, Fabian, who stood by Phoebe’s side, showed an excited expression. Having seen Han Shuo in action, he believed that the punch was more than met the eyes. As for Phoebe, her face was cold as ice and her lips curved with a touch of cruelty.

Cracking sounds rang out. The yet savagely smiling senior swordsman suddenly emitted shrill, mad screams like the howling of wolves and weeping of ghosts after his blow collided with Han Shuo’s.

The sturdy body was blasted backwards by an astounding force, making heavy bouncing sounds. When his butt finally touched the ground, the swordsman uncontrollably sprayed out one mouthful of blood after another. Even his shrill screams were muffled by the blood. He looked at Han Shuo, horrified, as his mouth wouldn't stop whimpering tragically.

Chapter 250: Poison of Fire and Ice

Han Shuo's punch had contained magical yuan, along with the punch's own astounding destructive ability. The senior swordsman, who'd been jeering earlier, not only had the blood vessels and meridians of his right arm completely shattered, but his bones broken as well. This arm would be useless from now on.

Han Shuo curved his lips and grinned nonstop as he said coldly, "If you still dare to be boorish, then leave your life here today!"

The senior swordsman bled uncontrollably from his mouth. He looked at Han Shuo, horrified. He couldn't even finish uttering a whimper and had been completely owned by the latter.

A space archmage with a vicious appearance was standing next to Cameron. He wore a brown magic robe, his face riddled with pockmarks. His eyes flashed as he looked at Cameron. Backed up by this man, Cameron nodded slightly, as if agreeing to some idea proposed by him.

The space archmage with the pockmarked face was the most powerful person in Cameron's gang. When he saw Cameron nod his head, the archmage slightly moved his lips and quickly chanted out a magic spell.

It was as if waves of water had suddenly risen up in the surrounding areas. Magical elements violently permeated through the air, bringing with them a wondrous binding force. The whole space seemed to be restrained, and no one could move their hands or feet.

The vicious looking space archmage once again chanted another magic spell. The still space seemed to be sliced by a glass-like blade with Cameron at its center. The space slices also included Cameron's people. The invaders escaped the space imprisonment after a few sparkling white lights.

"Refusing a toast only to be forced to drink to a forfeit. It is you who seek your own death!" The archmage looked sinisterly at Han Shuo's group and screeched in a voice that sounded like a tool scratching against the glass, making one's scalp tingle.

“Mr. Aubrey, your skills are really quite amazing!” Cameron laughed loudly. Due to the space around Cameron being cut, his group could resume their movement.

“No need to be polite, I’m only following Duke Ashburn’s orders.” The space archmage replied to Cameron’s flattering with an arrogant, strict face.

“This brat is called Bryan. He made the acquaintance of Hahn of the Betteridge family at the banquet hosted by the Empire’s Finance Minister. Wouldn’t it be bad if we also detain him?” Cameron hesitantly asked Aubrey, pointing at Han Shuo.

Aubrey coldly smiled and threw back his head. He threw a disdainful glance at Han Shuo and said, “What can this brat do? You think our Duke Ashburn is afraid of that old dude Hahn?”

Putting on a smiling face, Cameron flattered, “Of course not, of course not. Since that’s the case, let’s capture them all. We can release them after I’ve taken over the Boozt Merchant Guild.”

“Mhm, this must be done quickly. The duke has already become a bit impatient. You must hold all of the Empire’s major merchant guilds in your hand in a short amount of time. As for the small ones without foundations, kill them all if there dare to disobey. We don’t want to wait any longer.” Aubrey turned his nose up in the sky with a cold face, as if he found it annoying to have to deal with this merchant.

“Understood. How would I dare not put forth my all for His Grace the Duke!” Cameron’s face was painted with an expression of loyalty as he vowed solemnly.

Nodding, Aubrey said, “Good. No more nonsense. I’ll tie up these people, making it easy for you to bring them out of the Boozt Merchant Guild. Just lock up this woman called Phoebe. Don’t get any other ideas. You’ll bring bad luck upon your own heads if you anger her master!”

Cameron didn’t dare to disagree. He repeatedly nodded his head in understanding while looking at Phoebe with a hint of shock. He appeared unable to comprehend the origin of Phoebe’s master, who even Duke Ashburn would unexpectedly have scruples about.

Aubrey took a deep breath and shook the left hand hidden in his sleeve. His space ring emitted a faint light and a blue jade magic staff appeared in his hand. He opened his mouth, about to chant another magic incantation.

Exactly at that moment, the space suddenly shattered with Han Shuo as the epicenter . A faint, cold light shot out like lightning and swam around like lightning, releasing Phoebe and the others from their rigid states.

The faint, cold light circled around once and returned back to Han Shuo's palm. Then a cold, savage killing intent emitted from his body. He calmly looked at the shocked space archmage Aubrey and asked Phoebe, "Phoebe, how should we deal with these people?"

"How could it be? Who are you? How are you able to break out of my space binding?" Aubrey looked horrified. He couldn't believe his eyes and shouted loudly. His left hand clutched the magic staff, about to release his next spell.

Cameron and his group were also shocked, shouting at the guards to protect them. They looked at Han Shuo with some fear as they retreated into the middle of the guards. Han Shuo, who had the power to destroy the binding space of a space archmage, wasn't someone their guards could deal with. The merchant bunch understood this clearly so they nervously prepared to defend against his attack.

Phoebe had a somewhat ugly look on her face. Looking at Cameron's group with resentment for a while, she sighed in resignation and said, "Let them go!"

Han Shuo was appalled. They enemies had knocking on their door, yet Phoebe actually swallowed and endured it. It didn't seem like her personality. Then Han Shuo thought about the name of Duke Ashburn and seemed to understood something. His heart was overflowing with anger, as he coldly shouted, "Isn't that too easy for them?"

"Let them go!" Phoebe sighed and said somewhat helplessly.

"Haha, what can you people do? In the Empire, Duke Ashburn's power is as high as the sky. With just your little merchant band, how can you go against His Grace?!" Aubrey was very proud. He wildly laughed and headed straight for the door.

To be able to destroy a space archmage's space binding, Han Shuo's power was definitely not lower than the caster's. With Han Shuo, who was on par or even a level higher than him, and Phoebe as well, Aubrey knew he couldn't complete the task. Naturally he wouldn't want to stay here any longer.

Seeing Aubrey flee, Cameron and his men obviously didn't dare to stay. Glancing with fear at the murderous Han Shuo, Cameron nervously followed Aubrey.

"Halt!" Han Shuo suddenly roared. Han Shuo's body was shrouded with murderous intent, a frosty, violent air bursting out like a river destroying the dam.

This air was vicious to the extreme. It was like a substance heading straight towards the throng of people who were attempting to leave. Under that terrifying pressure, even Aubrey broke out into a cold sweat. He couldn't move as his body was rigidly stuck in place.

As for the merchants, their bodies were trembling like mad, backs overflowing with sweat. Han Shuo was like a furious beast that would go berserk at any time, staring at them with a bloodthirsty red glow in his eyes. They felt as though they would be torn to pieces if they made even the slightest careless move.

"Bryan, this is the Boozt Merchant Guild, I'm begging you!" Phoebe was shocked, Han Shuo's strength had skyrocketed in just four months. She was both happy and frightened that he was emitting such a terrifying aura.

She was happy because, with Han Shuo's rapid progress, their safety would be guaranteed from now on. She was frightened because she couldn't see through his temper. He now had the power to severely injure these merchants. If he recklessly used all of his power on them, it would likely bring disaster upon the guild, so she begged with mixed feelings.

Han Shuo took in a deep breath. He'd understood when he heard Phoebe deliberately stressed on the three words "Boozt Merchant Guild". Whatever the situation was, he couldn't take action and brought her trouble. This was also the capital of the Empire. Many things couldn't be resolved by just blindly killing people.

His body flashing, Han Shuo appeared behind Aubrey. He patted the latter's shoulder, coldly stressing each word, "Aubrey is it? I've memorized your face, and you should also remember mine. Remember, those who dare to harm my people will pay the price sooner or later."

While Han Shuo spoke, the hand on Aubrey's shoulder flicked out two faint lights of red and purple between the index and middle finger. The lights were covered by his palm as they fell into Aubrey's body.

At this point, Aubrey had just about lost his wits. When he heard Han Shuo shout "halt", he'd been prepared to fight at anytime. However, Han Shuo's speed was devilish and had completely destroyed his defenses. He didn't even had time to react when he saw Han Shuo appear out of thin air and felt a large hand clamp down on his shoulder.

Even as an archmage, he had no chance of winning when he was in such close quarters with this horrifyingly powerful fellow. Aubrey's aura died down as he stood still and docile without another sound, listening to Han Shuo's threats. He could obviously feel the murderous intent when Han Shuo patted his shoulder.

Due to this nervous, tense state, he wasn't calm enough to sense any abnormalities. He also didn't notice the two hot and cold entities entering his body.

"Good. You bloody bunch of bastards can get the hell out of here!" Seeing that the poison of ice and fire was planted in Aubrey's body, Han Shuo walked back towards Phoebe with a cold face. Passing by the terrified Cameron, he randomly patted Cameron's body, and a red purple light fleetingly flashed. Han Shuo smiled blandly, "You also be careful."

After he arrived at Phoebe's side, the murderous intent was withdrawn. Aubrey and the others didn't dare to utter nonsense and hurriedly fled.

One trip to hell was enough for these people to fear Han Shuo from the depths of their hearts.

“I’m sorry. These people are under the command of Duke Ashburn. If something happened to them within the guild, it will be very difficult to handle!” After those people left, Phoebe looked apologetically at Han Shuo and said somewhat timidly.

Smiling as he nodded his head, Han Shuo no longer emitted the murderous aura. He was back to his calm and indifferent self as he said, “Don’t worry, nothing will happen to them at Boozt Merchant Guild. However, I guarantee they won’t be safe for long.”

Taken aback, Phoebe exclaimed, “You want to assassinate them? After what happened today, if you assassinate them not long after their return, everyone will know it’s us. This is not a good idea!”

Smiling mysteriously, Han Shuo assured, “Don’t worry, am I someone who doesn’t know how to look at the big picture?”

“All of you leave first. I have something to discuss privately with Bryan.” Phoebe looked at the guards, plus Fabian and several trusted confidantes of the guild, frowning somewhat worriedly as she ordered.

After this incident, the guards and trusted confidants of the guild once again were aware of their relationship. As Phoebe ordered, they silently dismissed themselves, and all disappeared from the pavilion after a while.

“Just what’s going on?” Han Shuo gently asked after those people left.

Seeing no one else around, Phoebe threw herself into Han Shuo’s embrace. She used some strength and hugged him tightly then softly murmured, “It feels really good to have you beside me again.”

The two embraced each other tightly. Phoebe told Han Shuo about what happened to her after they separated at the Valley of Sunshine. From her words, Han Shuo roughly understood that because he and Phoebe had stayed in the Valley of Sunshine for a while, Boozt had no one at the helm. Cameron had taken advantage of this and led a bunch of merchants to occupy the guild.

“Okay, I understood!” Han Shuo patted Phoebe’s shoulder to sooth her, then took out a rebirth pill and said softly, “Eat it.”

Han Shuo told her about the side effects of the pill first to prevent Phoebe from misunderstanding that it was an aphrodisiac or laxative like Fanny had last time.

Phoebe rolled her eyes at Han Shuo then swallowed the rebirth pill. Han Shuo helped her diffuse the pill. When Phoebe quickly ran for the toilet, he left to report to the Dark Mantle.

Chapter 251: Becoming a famous person

Mt. Ordas was at an altitude high above sea level and was covered in clouds all year round. The Dark Mantle headquarters were situated right in the middle of the mountain's belly, guarded by all sorts of experts. The security here was even more strict than the Empire's palace.

Han Shuo passed through the entrance using the magical transportation matrix. Identity badge in hand, he moved without impediment deep into the mountain belly. After a few turns, he arrived at the transportation matrix leading to Candide's place.

"Wait a bit, Lord Candide is currently not in the headquarters. I'll go to notify him, the Lord should come back in a short while." Only at this point did the Dark Star guide, who'd led Han Shuo to Candide's place from the transportation matrix, explained at a neither fast nor slow pace.

"Is that so? Alright." Han Shuo nodded in understanding.

"Mhm, then I'll take you to the waiting area and notify you immediately when Lord Candide returns!" The Dark Star envoy also nodded, then spun on the transportation matrix.

A white light flashed and Han Shuo appeared in a wide, square stone chamber that was as big as four basketball courts combined. There were many soft chairs and tables set up, with dazzling displays of various fruit desserts, plus some books on the table. Many people of different appearances surrounded these places, patiently either eating or flipping through the books on the tables, seemingly also waiting.

Except for the transportation matrix where Han Shuo was standing, soft carpet covered the surrounding ground. A dozen or so glass lanterns hung above, lighting up the entire stone chamber.

"Hey! Hello there, you look unfamiliar! Is this your first time here?" A short haired, young and pretty girl stood in front of Han Shuo, cheerfully greeting him.

"Mm, it's my first time here. How do you do?" Han Shuo walked towards this lively young girl with a smile on his face, intent on learning about news within the Dark Mantle headquarters.

“I’m Chrissie, a fire journeyman mage. Currently, I’m a rank three Dark Star, nice to meet you.” This girl named Chrissie was quite talkative. She smiled at Han Shuo and warmly greeted him in a familiar manner.

“Hehe, I’m Bryan, also a rank three Dark Star like you. I’m a necromancer.” Han Shuo smiled as he walked towards Chrissie and introduced himself.

However, last time he’d left Valen City for the Valley of Sunshine, Han Shuo had already known from Emily that his rank was already Dark Moon.

However, since Candide was in charge of Han Shuo, only he could upgrade Han Shuo’s badge to officially confirm his rank as a Dark Moon. Han Shuo hadn’t reported for a half year already, so although he’d advanced to the rank of Dark Moon, it had yet to be made official.

“Hah! So you’re also a rank three Dark Star! Which Lord are you following?” Chrissie giggled, and pulled up a chair for Han Shuo.

“Chrissie, you’re on the bench with no missions. Why must you keep chatting up random people? Are you trying to harm them?” A robust journeyman swordsman next to Chrissie rolled his eyes.

“Allis, what nonsense are you spouting? Who wants to harm people?” Chrissie abruptly turned around, huffing and glaring at that journeyman swordsman.

“Yet you still deny it! You fire mages make a mess of everything. On our last mission, you burned half the village, throwing my mission down the drain. The boss furiously lectured me. I’m already miserable thanks to you, so don’t go around harming others.” Allis wryly smiled, shaking his head. He turned to Han Shuo and winked, as if telling him to be careful.

Han Shuo lifted his head and grinned with goodwill, then wrinkled his brow to read the book in his hand. As it turned out, the books on the tables were actually the latest secret intelligence reports circulating internally in the Dark Mantle. They included everything in the most recent period, such as news on every aspect of the Empire. The topics ranged from large ones, such as frontier battles, to the small petty gossip about some aristocrat's odd quirks.

With Han Shuo's current brain capacity, he only needed to flip through a book once to memorize its contents. He didn't care about the small petty gossip, but those regarding Valen City and the Valley of Sunshine caught his attention.

One highlight was the Gryphon Legion's chief, Bob Ascher, betraying the Empire. According to the intelligence network of the Dark Mantle, Bob Ascher had long since colluded with the Kasi Empire. After betraying the Empire, Bob Ascher had led a group of trusted confidants to join the Kasi Empire and became one of its senior military officers.

Han Shuo's name once again appeared in the Dark Mantle's intelligence network. According to the books, it was due to Han Shuo and Emily's efforts that Bob Ascher's misdeeds were exposed. After receiving the two's report, the Dark Mantle arrived at Valen City at the fastest speed possible. They took advantage of Bob not yet erupting in rebellion to put the situation back under control.

Otherwise, if Bob Ascher had been allowed to abuse his power and creates holes in the defenses of Valen City for the Kasi Empire, who was eyeing the city like a hungry tiger, to invade, the city would have fallen quickly. Unknowingly, Han Shuo as a rank three Dark Star had become a rising star within the Dark Mantle. Han Shuo's description was attached within, and it even included his first mission where he'd uncovered the plot of wind archmage Duke from the Kasi Empire.

In addition, this intel also included news regarding the chaos in the Valley of Sunshine. The four strongest forces endlessly fighting covertly and openly, leading to daily bloodshed. This time even the Butcher and Janet's strong forces seemed to have entered the fray, joining the struggle for power in the Valley of Sunshine.

Amongst them, the Soul Destroyer mercenary band founded by Han Shuo and Trunks was gradually emerging from the fray. Under Trunks' charisma, along with plentiful resources, they had taken advantage of the disarray to attract experts to join their mercenary band. Since the Soul Destroyer mercenary band was appearing in the internal intelligence of the Dark Mantle, it showed the band already had some standing.

As Han Shuo concentrated on the book in his hands, Chrissie stood in front of him and asked again, “Right, Bryan, which Lord do you follow?”

“Hehe, I follow Lord Candide.” Han Shuo put the book down and lifted his head smilingly to answer Chrissie.

“Lord Candide, but you’re only a rank three Dark Star, how could you possibly be following Lord Candide? Mm, your name is Bryan... can it be that you’re that Bryan? Oh my gosh!” Chrissie shook her head in confusion at first, then suddenly remembered something. She looked at Han Shuo and shouted with surprise.

When the patiently waiting members around them heard Chrissie’s shout, they all put down their fruits or books and looked at Han Shuo in astonishment.

“He’s Bryan? So young!”

“What a lucky young fellow for Lord Candide to fancy him. It would be hard for him not to be promoted quickly even if he doesn’t want to be!”

“Hee hee, his looks really don’t disappoint. If I can go on a mission with him, it would be such a sweet thing!”

Chatter erupted from the surrounding members who happened to be idle at the moment. All sorts of astonishment, admiration, and odd looks were projected at Han Shuo.

“Oh my gosh, my luck is really not bad. Bryan, if you have any mission that requires more people, can you please take me? Don’t listen to that brat Allis’ nonsense, I’m a fine fire journeyman mage! I promise I won’t be a burden to you!” Chrissie immediately recovered after exclaiming in surprise. She grabbed at the corner of Han Shuo’s clothes and begged pitifully.

“Bryan, Lord Candide has returned. Please go to the transportation matrix!” A transportation member next to the matrix suddenly announced in a loud voice.

“If I need more people, I will consider you. See you!” The clothes that Chrissie had grabbed onto slipped out of her fingers like oil as Han Shuo twisted his body. After flashing her a friendly smile, he stood in the transportation matrix in front of the crowd’s surprised looks.

A white light flashed and Han Shuo appeared in Candide’s personal room. The old man had a gloomy expression on his face as always. Looking at Han Shuo without showing any particular expression, he only said in a low voice, “I remember telling you long ago, that even if you don’t have a mission, you still have to report back in the Dark Mantle headquarters once a month. You brat disappeared for a half year, no discipline at all!”

“I was honestly delayed by some things. I came into the possession of something in the past half year that I think Lord Candide will be very interested in!” Han Shuo’s expression didn’t change. He smiled faintly and responded.

Whether it was Han Shuo’s strength or experience, both were greatly different from the past. After half a year, the growth of his strength and experience had all greatly accelerated, and all aspects were significantly developed. Han Shuo didn’t feel any fear even in front of such a powerful figure like Candide and instead spoke to him as if speaking to a friend of the same status.

“You really are different compared to before!” Old fox Candide apparently saw through his changes. He gave Han Shuo a stunned look for a while then flashed a weird smile, “What things? Will I be interested?”

Han Shuo took out the handwritten notebook he had obtained from the forbidden land. It didn’t have any substantial knowledge on magic, only some experiences along with some obscure understanding of dark magic from Ayermike Cotton. Han Shuo had already copied a portion of the magic texts written in it. He had intended to give it to Emily along with the magic staff, since she practiced dark magic.

After careful consideration, Han Shuo had decided it would be best to hand over the notebook to dark grand magus Candide. Since Han Shuo couldn't fully understand the magic texts, the reflections on dark magic from Ayermike's notebook were useless to him.

In addition, from his multiple points of contact with Candide, Han Shuo felt that this old, suspiciously crafty looking fellow was actually truly protective of him. Giving this notebook to Candide would definitely bring about great benefits and a good future in the Dark Mantle.

"You take a look." Han Shuo smiled mysteriously, before handing the ancient handwritten notebook to dark grand magus Candide in a ceremonious manner.

"What is this? It does seem to have some history!" Candide took the handwritten notebook and said with uncertainty. After his eyes caught a small row of letters, he was immediately dumbfounded. His eyes and mouth were wide opened as if he were struck by lightning.

That small row of letters read, Ayermike Cotton!

Candide was one of the three heavyweights of the Dark Mantle and had the power of a grand magus, but his two hands couldn't stop trembling when he held the notebook. His eyes almost popped out of their sockets, his face revealed an extremely shocked expression.

This state lasted for a few seconds, until Candide suddenly turned his eyes to stare at Han Shuo and asked with a trembling voice, "Is, is this?"

Han Shuo nodded his head and confirmed, "That's right! This is the notebook of the legendary dark mage of the Lancelot Empire, the demigod Ayermike Cotton!"

Candide was ecstatic upon hearing these words. He wouldn't stop trembling like crazy. His mouth muttered something that Han Shuo couldn't make sense of. As for Candide's two eyes, they wouldn't leave the notebook. His trembling hands flipped the pages one by one, his whole body falling into a sluggish state.

This continued for a long time until Candide sighed out, "Too unfathomable, too wondrous! The value of this notebook is simply immeasurable!”

After he uttered these words, Candide took a few more deep breaths. Waiting until he calmed down from his excitement, he looked at Han Shuo with shining eyes and asked with some hesitation, “What do you mean in bringing this notebook to me?”

Shrugging, Han Shuo chuckled, “I’m giving it to you, obviously!”

“Bribery! Damn brat, this is despicable bribery!” Candide exclaimed, but then he suddenly shook his head and then quickly nodded, “Forget it, I want to accept this even if it’s bribery.”

Using some force to smooth down his hair, Candide spoke somewhat blankly, “Alright, I’ll take it, what’s your condition?”

Han Shuo shook his head and said smilingly, “No conditions. This thing originally belonged to the Empire. You are my boss, and me handing it over to you can’t be considered bribery, you shouldn’t worry about it!”

“Haha, right, this is the notebook of Ayermike Cotton, so of course it belongs to the Empire. I, Candide, am one of the few dark grand magi of the Empire. As long as I explain a bit of this to His Majesty the King, he will definitely allow me to read it, so how can this be bribery!”

Candide muttered to himself and laughed loudly, then he swiftly flew in front of Han Shuo and clapped the latter’s shoulder with appreciation, “Good going brat, really not bad. You did a meritorious deed again! I remember that you’re already a one star Dark Moon? Give me your badge, I’ll immediately promote you to a four star Dark Moon. To have found the relics of Ayermike Cotton, no one would dare to say anything against you jumping up two ranks. Lucky little brat, you are becoming legendary at climbing ranks in the Dark Mantle!”

Chapter 252: A high rank

Han Shuo was overjoyed upon hearing that his rank had jumped up by two ranks. He quickly handed his iron identity badge over to Candide.

The Dark Mantle organization existed on an enormous scale, holding various resources of the Empire. Candide and the other two heavyweights held power that placed them under one person and above ten thousands. No one could afford to overlook them. As one was promoted here, they could enjoy even greater benefits, and could use their power to acquire the latest information that was not yet been known to others.

Holding Han Shuo's badge, Candide couldn't conceal his excitement as he went back to his seat. He changed the rank indicated on the badge before handing it back to Han Shuo. The stars on the back of the iron badge had disappeared, replaced by four crescent moons.

"Many thanks Lord Candide!" Han Shuo glanced at the badge and placed it back into his space ring. He smiled and thanked Candide.

Candide spread his hands, the odd smile still hanging on his face. His mood was great as he laughed joyfully, "No need to thank me. This is the reward you deserved. You brat, are very good. It hasn't even been a year since you joined and you're already a rank four Dark Moon. What a miracle."

"This was just thanks to my good luck and also master's promotion!" Han Shuo wasn't arrogant or cocky as he replied humbly.

"Alright, alright, you little bootlicker of a brat!" Candide laughed loudly as he hectored a bit. Then he raised his brows and looked raptly, "I want to know all the details of how you came across this handwritten notebook."

Han Shuo knew early on that Candide would carefully question this matter, so he'd already prepared a story. He briefly described the situation at the forbidden land, hiding what needed to be hidden and said what he could say. Han Shuo gave the credit of lifting the confining force completely to the Cyclops and Gold Dragon, saying only that he was extremely lucky. He said only after the two big creatures left did he enter the forbidden land and obtain the handwritten notebook.

Candide was amazed after Han Shuo had finished. He murmured, "I didn't expect the legendary forbidden land to be so strange that no one would be able to leave. Now that it's lost that power of imprisonment, it's still simply unbelievable. Could it be that demigod Ayermike died there? There is something weird about this."

"I carefully swept over that area once. After the two super rank creatures left, there was nothing left except for the tombstone. Even if you have someone go to investigate, I'm afraid there is nothing left to discover." When leaving the forbidden land, Han Shuo had erased all traces that had been left behind in it. Even if Candide really sent someone there, they wouldn't find anything.

"Is that so?" Candide said softly and continued, "However I should still send someone to investigate. This is related to the deity Ayermike, so it shouldn't be dealt with carelessly. I think his Majesty would do the same."

"Up to you! I'm not going to go back there. I've just returned from that place and didn't find anything after searching every nook and cranny!" Han Shuo appeared uninterested in this mission, as he shrugged his arms in seeming laziness.

"Up to you, if you don't want to, then I'll just find someone else!" Candide glanced at Han Shuo and didn't nag him. He gave Han Shuo a puzzled look then said, "Right, if you don't have anything there, why keep running into that Dark Forest? That area isn't for ordinary folk to enter!"

"Heh heh, not answering this question is also my right, isn't it?" Han Shuo laughed shamelessly because he knew that the Dark Mantle couldn't pry into the members' private matters.

Glaring at Han Shuo, Candide helplessly waved his hand and said, "Forget it forget it. You already brought back this item, so I don't care for your private matters. In giving me this handwritten notebook, you've already done a deed of great merit publicly speaking, and so I owe you a big favor privately speaking."

"That's great!" Han Shuo laughed joyfully then inquired, "Mhm, good.

I've already reported in, so if there is nothing else, then I'll be leaving first, I still have some other things to deal with!"

"Wait wait!" Candide stopped him, then murmured, "I've actually prepared a mission for you, but you brat could even come back alive from the depths of the Dark Forest, and you're a necromancy adept mage now. This simple mission seems unsuitable for you now."

"Well, I have three that are a little more difficult. The first is to go to Balthazar City and assassinate a traitor called Angel. This traitor has an official role in Balthazar City, so all of his acts appear to be legitimate, so we can only assassinate him in order to avoid troubles."

The second is to go to the Bimson City in the north of the Empire. It's said that someone stored a large amount of weapons within the barren hills around the city. We need to send someone to investigate this. The third mission is to guard someone you know, Prince Lawrence.

Eh, even though his identity hasn't officially been recognized, I think you already know of it. This third mission was personally issued by His Majesty the King. Although he's already arranged some of his own men, the King is still worried that it's not enough. You can participate if you're interested."

Assessing the matter a bit, Han Shuo believed that there was still some danger on Phoebe's side. He'd just returned to the Empire and still had a lot of things that he needed to handle, so he couldn't leave immediately. Han Shuo said, "Alright, I choose the third mission. I'm already familiar with Lawrence anyway, so protecting him is killing two birds with one stone!"

"Then it's up to you. However, Lawrence's identity is special, so you have to tread carefully to avoid bringing trouble upon yourself!" Candide had long reminded Han Shuo to deal with Lawrence properly. He once again advised this when Han Shuo accepted the mission, explaining that it would even be more intense once the princes began their fight for power.

"Rest assured, I understand!" Han Shuo nodded in understanding. Then he hesitated for a moment and asked, "Master Candide, what kind of person is this Duke Ashburn?”

Candide was surprised for a moment and stared at Han Shuo, suspiciously. “Why? Does he want to recruit you?”

Shaking his head, Han Shuo said in a low voice, “That’s not it. I think I may have offended him, so I reckon that he won’t let me off easily.”

Shocked, Candide said with a darkened expression, “Politically speaking, Grand Duke Ashburn is the Empire’s minister of operations. His younger sister is the Queen, so he is the uncle of the eldest son, Prince Charles. This person is vile and always seeks revenge for his grievances. He reigns over a large amount of death sworn warriors, relying on his position and the covert support of the Queen to murder many of his political enemies. You must be careful after offending him.”

“Are you afraid of him?” Han Shuo was silent for a while before he suddenly asked.

Rolling his eyes at Han Shuo, Candide said, “It’s not that I’m afraid of him, but more that I don’t wish to recklessly provoke him either. You already know that our Dark Mantle is the King’s hand in the shadows. Everything we do represents the king. Particularly us three rank five Dark Suns are directly under his charge.”

When the King is still healthy, no one can do anything to us. Even Ashburn has to tread carefully, preventing us from grasping his weak points. However, once his Majesty the King abdicates and the power shifts, if the new king nullifies our authority, Ashburn won’t have any more scruples about moving against us, do you understand?”

Nodding, Han Shuo said in a low voice, “I understand. Alright, I’m going to find Lawrence then!”

Han Shuo immediately set off after speaking. Candide suddenly spoke up just when he was about to leave, “You are one of mine, and as you are now a rank four Dark Moon, even if Ashburn wants to deal with you, he’ll have to be cautious. Heh heh, since I’ve received the handwritten notebook of Ayermike this time, I’ll help you in moment of need!”

“Thank you!” Han Shuo turned his head and sincerely thanked Candide, then left the room.

Leaving Mt. Ordas through transportation matrices, Han Shuo headed for the house of Finance Minister Eevee. He intended to ask about how Lawrence was getting along and how things were on his side.

“I’m Bryan. I’ve come to call upon Lawrence. Please notify those within for me.” Han Shuo smiled at the guard after arriving at Lawrence’s house.

Han Shuo had long been aware that the clothes made the man. He was adorned in a perfectly tailored blue warrior outfit, the collar trimmed with several precious stone fragments. While Han Shuo looked capable and alert, the confident smile on his face made him appear even more uncommon.

The guard, who normally looked down on folks, realized that this was an exceptional person. He didn’t dare to make things difficult for Han Shuo and respectfully said, “Please wait a moment” and quickly went inside.

Lawrence personally came out not long afterwards. He already started laughing heartily before reaching Han Shuo, “You’ve finally returned! I came to look for you at the necromancy department several times already.”

Several unfamiliar faces walked behind Lawrence. Each possessed extraordinarily calm bearings. They were evidently experts with great skills. What Candide had said wasn’t wrong indeed. Lawrence was exceedingly cautious about his safety.

“Alright, nothing should happen in broad daylight. You guys can stop following me.” Lawrence turned his head to say this after walking out. He then strode quickly towards Han Shuo and gave the latter a warm hug, saying, “Why have you suddenly remembered to come looking for me?”

“Eh, I actually didn’t remember to look for you, just that I was tasked with a mission and so that’s why I came!” Han Shuo explained honestly as he smiled wryly at Lawrence.

Lawrence was stunned and then laughed out loud, “So that’s why! It doesn't matter, it's good that you've come."

"Come come come, come with me. We can find a comfortable place to chat." Lawrence dragged Han Shuo along, making straight for the carriage at the entrance.

Seeing that Lawrence was coming, the normally lazy coachman immediately became extremely spirited. He hastily ran to the side and lifted the curtains for Lawrence to enter. The unfamiliar experts spread out, either blatantly or covertly following behind, carefully ensuring the prince's safety.

"Go to the Rose Garden at the north workshop!" Lawrence ordered the coachman as soon as they had settled down.

"What's that?" Han Shuo was practically dragged into the carriage by Lawrence. He couldn't help but ask after the carriage started to move.

"Heh heh, you'll know when we get there. Don't concern yourself so much. Tell me, where did you go to mess around after we parted ways?" Lawrence smiled mysteriously, asking Han Shuo.

"Nothing much, I just stayed idle in the Valley of Sunshine for a while, then went to the Dark Forest to kill some magical beasts." Han Shuo smiled slightly. He responded effortlessly and concealed everything.

"It can't be that simple. I heard from junior sister Phoebe that you did some stunning things in the Valley of Sunshine! Heh heh, you guys made such a mess at the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band. Did you really think I'm that ignorant?" Lawrence made a you-don't-consider-me-your-brother face. He squinted his eyes and curled his lip at Han Shuo.

"Hehe, it was really nothing. Speaking of your junior sister Phoebe, you're her senior brother and yet you don't know anything. Her merchant guild was insulted and bullied, and you actually didn't help her?" Han Shuo wrinkled his brows, reflecting the blame back onto Lawrence.

Lawrence paused and was surprised by these these words. He then furrowed his brow and asked with puzzlement, "What happened?"

Han Shuo looked carefully at Lawrence and hesitated. He asked in surprise, “You don’t know?”

“This junior sister of mine doesn’t like owing anyone favors. Whenever something happens, she never wants to bother others. I know her temper, so I just didn’t know what exactly happened.” Lawrence replied frankly.

“It’s like this, Cameron’s merchant alliance wanted to acquire the Boozt Merchant Guild. Cameron seems to be backed by Duke Ashburn and almost captured Phoebe in the guild.” Han Shuo’s face was cold and grave as he responded.

Suddenly furious, Lawrence slammed his hand on the carriage. He coldly snorted, “Ashburn seems to spare no effort for Charles huh? Such despicable means.”

Stopping for a moment, Lawrence heaved a long sigh, “Oh Phoebe, really. I could’ve helped her with this, but she still won’t confide in me. If it wasn’t for you, I wouldn’t have even known known had she been taken over by Cameron’s merchant alliance.”

Thanks to the Dark Mantle’s intelligence network, Han Shuo had a general understanding of Lawrence’s abilities. He also knew that Lawrence’s men in the Gryphon Legion had taken complete control of Valen City and had now become the new chief of the Gryphon Legion.

Moreover, if Lawrence won the favor of the king, then his identity as the prince could be officially recognized. As such, he would have hopes in becoming king.

“Bryan, you offended Ashburn this time. It looks like even if we didn’t want to be good friends, it’d be hard not to.” Lawrence looked deeply at Han Shuo and said, “I currently have a good position for you. If you wish, I can help you quickly obtain a high rank in the army. This also wouldn’t conflict with your identity in the Dark Mantle. What do you think?”

Chapter 253: Paving the way

This was a very tempting suggestion, so Han Shuo was immediately interested. However, he didn't instantly agree either. Instead, he said, "As you know, I'm a member of the Dark Mantle. Furthermore, I have a lot of things that I, myself, need to do as well, so I don't have that much time that I can spend on the military."

"I think that won't be a problem. You're a mage, so you naturally should have plenty of your own time. As long as you gain the title of duke and your own land, then you are free to do with your time as you see fit, as long as there are no issues within the territory you rule," Lawrence immediately responded as if he had been prepared for his answer.

"Then, what do you want me to do?" Han Shuo was momentarily confused, then asked as he looked towards Lawrence in confusion.

"I'll help you gain a place in the military first. As long as you've made enough contributions, I can use my relationships to help you gain the identity of a noble. Once you receive the title of a duke, then I'll help you lay your hands on some territory. Everything will be good as long as your territory develops well," Lawrence seemed to be very familiar with this sort of thing as he started explaining everything to Han Shuo with a smile.

When he'd left Valen City, Han Shuo knew that his fortunes would be tied with Lawrence sooner or later. With his current strength and the existence of the cemetery of death, Han Shuo believed that he would be able to leave unscathed, even if Lawrence lost the struggle for power.

If he wanted to climb higher, he would have to depend on a person that could help him. Lawrence was definitely a suitable candidate. He was someone who'd gained the king's affection and also held some power. Additionally, with the aid of Candide, Han Shuo believed that it wouldn't be too long before he gained power.

"It looks like we truly are going to be tied together," Han Shuo smiled and said to Lawrence.

Lawrence laughed happily, then said with pride, "We were on the same side since ages ago. Ever since I went back to the Empire, I started helping you pave your path. Now that you've graduated from the necromancy department, and so swiftly at that, things have become even more convenient for me."

Han Shuo couldn't help but be shocked after hearing him say that. He hadn't thought that even Lawrence would receive news so quickly that he'd graduated, apart from Candide. It seemed like the two really did pay a lot of attention to him.

"Alright, I'll let you in on some of the details, then we'll go over the plan. With your strength and intelligence, I think that you reaching new heights in the Empire won't be a difficult thing as long as we cooperate with each other," Lawrence was clearly very happy as he said excitedly to Han Shuo.

Afterwards, Han Shuo and Lawrence discussed within the carriage for a long time, forming a bright path for the two of them between their schemes.

The carriage stopped after a long while. The carriage driver said with a low voice, "Young Master Lawrence, we've arrived at the Rose Garden in the northern workshops!"

"Alright, I need to welcome you properly upon your rare return. Come, let's go in and enjoy ourselves!" Lawrence said to Han Shuo after lifting the curtains and jumping down the carriage.

Han Shuo raised his head and looked around when he alighted. He saw a grand building in front of him with roses engraved on the walls made from white marble. At the same time, he also saw numerous beautiful carriages parked all around.

Meanwhile, the experts, that had been following Lawrence, walked over from a corner of the streets and stood behind him like guards.

"You guys stay out here. There won't be any problems inside the Rose Garden, so don't worry," Lawrence turned his head back to look at the people, then ordered faintly.

"Sorry, young master Lawrence, we're just following orders. We have to protect you wherever you go,” A rather loyal knight, wearing heavy armor, responded with a muffled voice.

Han Shuo was able to feel an intense killing aura from this knight. The symbol on his chestplate showed that he was an earth rider. From the calluses on his large hands, it was clear that he was someone who shouldn't be messed with.

“Jino, we're only going in to relax. Nothing usually happens in the Rose Garden normally. How can we go in together since you're all wearing armor. Why don't you stay outside?” Lawrence continued to smile without getting angry at the earth rider for being determined.

“No, orders are orders. We cannot defy our orders!” The earth rider named Jino was a stubborn person, and once again rejected Lawrence with a stern face.

“Hehe, then alright. I have no issues with it if you guys can go in!” Lawrence chuckled lightly, then pulled Han Shuo inside. When he reached the entrance, he cast a look at the guard with his eyes, then rushed in while tugging on Han Shuo.

Jino and the others followed, but they were forcefully stopped when they reached the entrance. The guards refused to let them in no matter how much they tried to explain.

Han Shuo knew through the yin demon's surveillance that the protectors out in the open had been left outside by Lawrence. However, the hidden guards being led by Lucky were trying their best to sneak into the Rose Garden through various other methods.

However, the defenses of this Rose Garden were astonishingly good. It was protected by experts openly and covertly. These included powerful swordsmen and mages specializing in different elements. These people were rather powerful, and protected the surroundings with great responsibility. Aside from the old assassin, Lucky, who'd managed to sneak in, all of the other experts had been stopped outside.

Han Shuo noticed that this Rose Garden occupied a great deal of land through usage of his yin demon's surveillance. There were numerous artificial mountains, flowing water, hot springs with pavilions with in, and every single room was decorated in an extremely opulent manner. There was a beautiful woman in revealing clothing who was stripping as she twisted her hips and danced a mesmerizing dance within one of the large halls.

Suppressed moans rang out from several slightly smaller rooms as many noble lords and young masters spent enormous amounts of money here to enjoy all sorts of services.

Lawrence seemed to be extremely familiar with this sort of place as he walked straight in familiarly. All of the openly stationed and hidden guards recognized Lawrence. Not only did no one stop him, they often greeted him.

“Ugh, I know what this place is now!” Since the three yin demons had swiftly circled the extremely large Rose Garden, Han Shuo couldn’t help but blurt out after he understood what sort of place this was.

“Haha, all men should know what kind of place this is. All of the expenditures here today are on me, so just treat it as me welcoming you back.” Lawrence laughed frankly as he walked straight in and arrived within a wide hall. There were young and beautiful women dancing at the center of the hall, with some people that were either rich or noble watching from the sidelines. When they saw Lawrence come in, they also greeted him with smiles.

There were many soft animal-skinned chairs around the hall alongside fresh vegetables, exquisite snacks, and glasses of expensive alcohol costing a gold coin each. A large circular chandelier, with a five meter diameter, shone down upon the scene with ambiguous light, causing the women dancing to the light hearted music underneath it to appear extremely sexy.

“Hey, Lawrence, you haven’t come in a long time,” A guy, who was clearly a fop of a rich family, greeted Lawrence as the former led in a thinly covered woman exuding sexiness.

“Bruno, why do I see you every time I come here?” Lawrence casually picked up a wine glass filled with amber wine from a table laden with numerous other drinks. He responded to this weakling dandy after taking a sip of wine.

“Life is just that boring. There are only some places in the northern workshops that spark my interest. That’s why I come over here. Isn’t it the same for you?” Bruno winked towards Lawrence and said meaningfully.

“Alright, I came here purely to entertain my friend. I won’t chat too much with you this time, so let’s have a good discussion next time,” Lawrence apologized, then dragged Han Shuo across the hall into another quiet place.

Lawrence had brought Han Shuo through a corridor, around a few corners, and into another quiet hall after a few moments. There wasn’t anyone in this hall, but there was a magic barrier around it.

Lawrence took out a magic scroll and chanted a spell. The magic scroll emitted out a hazy azure light, and the surrounding walls cracked open under the light. Lawrence turned around and indicated for Han Shuo to enter with him.

Han Shuo was shocked as he looked at the pathway under the light. He asked since he was clearly befuddled, “It’s very normal for a place like this to have a secret passageway, but why do you know about it?”

“Of course I would know about it, because I am the true owner of the Rose Garden. Bryan, since we are being honest with each other, I won’t hide this secret from you!” Lawrence laughed, then pulled Han Shuo inside. There were quite a few magical seals along the corridor that extended towards the very bottom.

There were a lot of things that made Han Shuo surprised about this hidden place. However, what shocked Han Shuo the most was that the true owner of this gold mine was Lawrence. No wonder Candide had said that Lawrence wasn’t simple during their first meeting. It seemed that he did know quite a lot of things about Lawrence.

“Come, I’ll take you to meet Phoebe and my master. I think that he must be very interested in you!” Lawrence was very satisfied with Han Shuo’s surprise as he laughed and pulled Han Shuo inside.

Chapter 254: The use of killing aura

When he heard that Phoebe's master was here, Han Shuo was even more shocked. Phoebe had already reached the realm of a swordmaster at such a young age. In addition, when Aubrey had thought that he'd captured Phoebe at the Boozt Merchant Guild, he'd still said that he needed to treat Phoebe well in order to prevent her master from getting angry.

As Duke Ashbern's subordinate, what Aubrey did represented Duke Ashbern. It wasn't hard to figure out that Phoebe's master wasn't a simple person, since even Duke Ashbern, who held tremendous power in his hands, was so wary of him.

When Han Shuo walked beside Lawrence, he had sent his three yin demons through the path in front of them, hoping that he could obtain a picture of the place underneath.

However, as the yin demons wandered about, Han Shuo noticed that there were numerous boundaries everywhere. Some invisible boundaries even stopped the yin demons' surveillance; it seemed like the defense of the place underneath the path was extraordinarily tight.

"Hehe, the space underneath the Rose Garden is more than twice as large as it appears on the surface. I'll take you on a detailed tour later, we'll meet my master first for now!" Lawrence looked at Han Shuo proudly as he revealed his prowess little by little, like he was trying to show Han Shuo that cooperating with him was the correct decision.

Han Shuo felt that they were already ten-odd meters underground after traversing a narrow path. The dim area suddenly lit up and revealed four intersecting paths that came together where Han Shuo and Lawrence stood. There were also bright lights that were placed on the side that illuminated the four paths as clear as day.

"Follow me!" Lawrence walked to the left and he led the way for Han Shuo. When they arrived in front of a white jade door, Lawrence used the scroll once again to open the boundary that was sealing the door. The door automatically opened after a flash of white light, and Lawrence led Han Shuo in.

“Young master Lawrence,” All of a sudden, an extremely ugly old man with a face full of scars appeared and bowed towards Lawrence.

The old man was covered in a bloody aura. No one knew how many people he had killed, but he was able to sense Han Shuo and Lawrence the moment they appeared. Furthermore, the closer that they approached the old man, the thicker the stomach-wrenching smell that was emanating from him became.

Lawrence was clearly uncomfortable, since the smile from his face disappeared. He said dryly, “Grandpa Bollands, is my master inside?”

The weird old man called Bollands stood straight with a hunchback, then raised his head to gaze at Lawrence with his grey eyes, and said remotely, “He’s inside, but master is cultivating.”

“Then I’ll wait outside for a bit!” Lawrence had already pushed past Bollands with his response and he quickly walked forwards, like he was unwilling to be too close to the old man.

The stone room in front of them was as large as a basketball court, with a lot of indentations where a lot of daily necessities were placed. However, the majority of them held numerous fine alcohols, as if the room was a storage room for exquisite wine.

Han Shuo first surveyed his surroundings after entering the room, then moved his attention onto the old man Bollands. The old man’s face was covered in scars, like if each one had been scratched on by something sharp. He looked as terrifying as a ghost from hell. Alongside the thick bloody aura that surrounded him, it was enough to give people an extremely powerful shock just by standing there.

Not only was there blood on this person’s hands, his strength was top tier. He was mostly likely an expert who was stronger than Phoebe by one rank; his aura wouldn’t have been so powerful otherwise. A person who was at the great swordmaster realm was not going to be a nobody no matter which country he lived in. The fact that he stayed in this secret room that doesn’t see daylight, in order to serve Lawrence’s master, really did surprise Han Shuo somewhat.

“Bryan, let’s wait here for a bit!” Lawrence had already scooted far away from Bollands and he was calling out to Han Shuo while sitting on a stone chair.

“You’re not afraid of me?” Just as Han Shuo was about to leave, the old man named Bollands suddenly looked at Han Shuo and asked.

Han Shuo nodded and replied with a smile, “Of course, what is there to be afraid of?!”

“An interesting lad,” Bollands smirked as he carefully examined Han Shuo. Then he frowned as if he sensed something, which caused him to nod, “No wonder, you have a malicious aura around you that can only be felt if you carefully feel for it. From the looks of it, you shouldn’t be even twenty-five, yet your hands are dyed thick with blood at such a young age. You truly are a character!”

Even before Han Shuo had broken into the bloodlust realm, the murderous aura had always accompanied him. He hadn’t killed a lot of people before, it was just that his body absorbed a lot of specters at the forbidden place, so they continued to surround Han Shuo, making it seem like his hands were also dyed in blood.

Han Shuo smiled, but he didn’t say much. He merely nodded at Bollands and walked past him, moving towards Lawrence.

“Young man, did you know that after killing a lot of people, the killing aura can be used to increase your strength?” Bollands was silent for a slight moment after Han Shuo had left, then he suddenly shot a weird look at Han Shuo.

When he spoke, an intense wave of killing aura exploded out like a river that had been just undammed. All of a sudden, the stomach-churning smell of blood spread out and it approached Han Shuo with cold intent, like it was something physical.

“Oh god!” Lawrence wailed, then he backed off in terror until his back was against the wall. Even then, his forehead was still covered with cold sweat as he looked at Bolland with a pale expression.

However, Han Shuo, who was closer to Bolland, was not afraid. He casually cycled the magical yuan in his body quickly, causing the evil aura hidden in his body to rush out furiously, clashing with the physical killing aura from Bolland. When the auras collided, sounds of collision could actually be heard in the air.

Even some of the table and chairs in the room continuously trembled. What was more terrifying was that after the evil aura rushed out of Han Shuo's body, it formed itself into spirals that were difficult to see with the eye, and actually started to consume Bolland's killing aura.

"When you said using killing aura, does it mean like this?" Han Shuo had a smile on his face when he plainly said this. While he spoke, he also stopped his magical yuan and the room returned to normal.

Right now, Han Shuo had already undergone three months of closed door cultivation in the cemetery of death. Adding onto the fact that he had absorbed the specters from the forbidden place, he had a much deeper understanding of the demonic arts than what Chu Canglan had left behind. His manipulation of the evil aura in the bloodlust realm had also reached a level where he could do as he wished. If Han Shuo wanted, he could absorb the killing aura in Bolland's body like he had absorbed the specters from the forbidden place.

Bolland had had an indifferent expression until this point when he looked at Han Shuo with a piercing gaze, then he said with a trembling voice, "How is this possible? How could you use it even more familiarly than me? You also know how to use this sort of power?"

Han Shuo only understood it the moment Bolland spoke. All swordsmen and knights cultivated fighting aura, but none of them could use evil aura and killing intent. However Han Shuo, who cultivated the demonic arts, was very well versed with using this type of strange power. That's why Bolland had been surprised when Han Shuo had showed off his abilities.

"No, you didn't use fighting aura at all. How is that possible?" Shock, loss, and confusion instantly filled Bolland's heart. He stepped in front of Han Shuo and glared at him with scorching eyes, like he was fighting for Han Shuo to give an answer.

Han Shuo knew that this was a bad situation to be caught in by now. He took a deep breath and explained with a smile, "I cultivate a special type of martial technique, it's different to the cultivating of fighting aura that most people do."

"Okay, Bolland, stay outside for now. Lawrence, you two can come in now!" A benevolent voice seemed to ring out from the walls at that moment.

Lawrence immediately pulled Han Shuo towards him, then apologized to Bolland, "Grandpa Bolland, my master has told us to go in. Let's chat later."

The wall behind Han Shuo split open at that moment, and Lawrence pulled Han Shuo in. After the two of them entered, the crack in the wall healed miraculously.

There was an extremely wide training field past the wall. Apart from a few strangely shaped boulders, there were no other decorations. An old man sat on top of one of the boulders at the center of the field, and even though he had white hair and beard, he still looked very energized.

The old man had a square face, and seemed rather benevolent. He sat ramrod straight in a pure white warrior uniform. Even though he was sitting down, he looked extraordinary and seemed like he would be rather tall if he stood up.

"Teacher!" Lawrence bowed and greeted the old man respectfully the moment he entered.

The old man nodded, then he looked at Lawrence and said softly, "Rise."

Lawrence straightened himself, then he pulled Han Shuo to sit down on a piece of boulder. After the two of them took their places, Lawrence began, "This is Bryan, Phoebe's boyfriend. I mentioned him to you before!"

The old man's gaze immediately fell onto Han Shuo after he heard

Lawrence's words, and he carefully examined Han Shuo carefully without speaking. After quite a while, he finally nodded and said, "Although Phoebe is my youngest disciple, she has the most talent. Her future is unmeasurable. I hope she will inherit my martial techniques. You won't hold her back, right?"

"Of course not!" Han Shuo replied with a smile that was neither reserved nor fearful. Instead, he appeared rather laid back.

Chapter 255: A powerful figure

“How is little Phoebe recently? I heard she stayed with you at the Valley of Sunshine for a while and did some interesting things?” The old man squinted, asking slowly and softly.

“Eh, she returned safely to the Empire from the Valley of Sunshine, but her current situation doesn’t seem very good.” From the way the old man said it, he must’ve been unclear about Phoebe’s situation so Han Shuo couldn’t help but explain.

“What happened?” The old man frowned, worried.

“Master, it’s like this.” Lawrence quickly opened his mouth to describe what happened, then smiled wryly, “You already know little senior sister doesn’t like to trouble others. She didn’t even tell me about something like this.”

“This old fellow Ashburn is getting more and more unbridled. He knows Phoebe is my disciple, yet he dared to act so presumptuously. It seems he and I are due for a conversation.” The old man coldly snorted, his face angry.

Seeing the old man become angry, Lawrence wasn’t the least bit anxious and instead revealed a slight chuckle as he said hastily, “Master, you know already how my father’s health is getting worse. Right now, my brothers are all prepared. The Duke spares no effort for Charles, and he dared to not give you face by doing such things.”

Han Shuo kept silent, his eyes carefully examining the two’s faces. When he suddenly understood something, he drew in his presence.

The old man chuckled and gazed thoughtfully at Lawrence, nodding, “I have my own plans. Alright, let’s temporarily not talk about these things today. Since you came to visit me, did you bring any good wine?”

“Of course, I couldn’t let you down no matter what!” Lawrence laughed heartily as he took out a crystal, jade-like bottle that contained blood red wine. He respectfully handed it over and said, “This is a specialty from a small town in the Kasi Empire, named Redbud Blood. Master, please try it.”

Having seen many kinds of wine while waiting in the hall, Han Shuo understood that Lawrence’s master must be a wine lover. Now it looked indeed so.

When his thoughts reached that point, Han Shuo suddenly remembered the good wine produced by the dwarves in the Dark Forest. He thought for a bit and took out a bottle of wine from his space ring, respectfully giving it to the old man as he spoke with a smile, “This bottle of wine was brewed by the dwarves of the Dark Forest. Perhaps it isn’t that precious, but it’s much stronger than some of the good wines in the Empire.”

When Han Shuo said so, the old man looked at him with interest before taking the wine bottle. He tried shaking it, listened to the sound, then laughed happily, “What a thoughtful child. The dwarves brew naturally good wine that isn’t any inferior. I’ve had a taste before.”

Waving his hand, the old man took the two bottles of good wine from Han Shuo and Lawrence and said, “Alright, I’ve remembered Lawrence’s matter. You all leave, I’ll drink first.”

Han Shuo was surprised, not knowing what was happening. However Lawrence winked at him, indicating that Han Shuo shouldn’t ask so much and just leave with him.

Afterwards, Lawrence took Han Shuo out to the hall where Bollands stood. When Bollands saw Han Shuo appear, his eyes gleamed as he stared at the latter, saying, “Can you tell me how you understood to use murderous aura?”

“It’s a part of the martial arts I cultivate, I have no way of explaining it to you, sorry!” Han Shuo honestly replied, of course he couldn’t speak of his demonic magic method.

“Grandpa Bollands, we’re leaving first, I’ll trouble grandpa to take care of the Rose Garden.” Lawrence’s steps suddenly became much quicker as he passed by Bollands. He evidently couldn’t adapt to the pungent smell of blood on the latter’s body.

“Alright, you are Bryan?” Bollands suddenly asked while Han Shuo and Lawrence headed back the way they came.

Pausing, Han Shuo turned his head and glanced at Bollands as he politely answered, “That’s right!”

Bollands nodded his head and curved his lips, saying, “We’ll meet again. I like the smell on your body. Heh heh, that evil killing intent!”

Han Shuo was stunned. He was about to say something when Lawrence dragged him away. They quickly left that area with a few steps.

Under Lawrence’s guidance, the two followed the same way back to the quiet hall above. Letting out a breath, Lawrence explained, “My master is Karel Ascot. He has the strength of a sacred swordmaster. His outstanding contributions have given him a high reputation in the Empire. Master can go in and out of the palace directly, and my father has great trust in him. Even though I’m his disciple, he doesn’t clearly support me, which puzzles me greatly.”

“Eh, but I know he really dotes on my junior sister Phoebe. Even this Rose Garden used to belong to the Boozt Merchant Guild. Master shares a past with Phoebe’s father. For some reason, after Phoebe’s father passed away, my master managed this Rose Garden, then handed it over to me.”

Grandpa Bollands used to be a very famous killer, and old Lucky is actually his direct disciple. I don’t know why he follows my master. The smell of blood on him is so heavy, you can imagine how many people he’d killed. I can’t control the urge to vomit every time I get near him, so I always try to stay away. Otherwise if I really vomit, I think he’d be very displeased.”

Even though Lawrence was Karel’s disciple, he hadn’t focused on learning martial arts, but instead concentrated various strategies and military abilities, possibly due to his identity as the prince. Therefore his strength wasn’t very powerful, it was normal for him to feel discomfort in front of people like Bollands.

Although he had known early on that Lawrence’s master must be extraordinary, Han Shuo was extremely shocked after Lawrence confirmed his identity. As a member of the Dark Mantle, plus his own deliberate research, Han Shuo had a decent understanding of the dark side of the Empire. Naturally, he had heard of the thunderous name Karel Ascot.

Karel Ascot was born a commoner but was a heaven-defying genius. He'd set a record with his graduation speed from the Babylon Academy of Swordsmanship. He had roamed the mainland with the strength of a senior swordsman and fought hundreds of fights in various countries, increasing his fame quickly. He'd already had the strength of a great swordmaster by the time he'd returned to the Lancelot Empire.

After accepting the invitation of the king, he'd taught at the Babylon Academy of Swordsmanship as the dean. When war broke out in the Lancelot Empire, not only did Karel cultivate numerous talents for the Empire, he'd also personally defeated several provocative figures from enemy countries. At that point, where his heroic fame was like the sun at its peak, he retired from being the dean of the Academy of Swordsmanship and went to train in the deepest part of the Dark Forest for a decade. When the Empire faced the threat of invasion and was on the brink of defeat facing the Kasi Empire, Karel appeared with the strength of a divine swordmaster and killed three great swordmasters of the Kasi Empire. This inspired the morale of the Lancelot Empire and helped it win the battle.

Many years later, all of the citizens and even the king regarded Karel Ascot as the Protector of the Empire. Even though he didn't have an official position, he could influence the king's decisions. Several of his direct disciples held great power in the government or the military.

"So it's him, no wonder!" Han Shuo exclaimed after going over this information in his head.

"I took you to see him this time so he'd know of you. As long as you leave a good impression, he'll speak a few words in front of my father. You aren't far from a prosperous future then." Lawrence spoke sincerely, in a prudent manner.

"I understand what you mean." Han Shuo smiled, nodding.

“Let’s go, the main thing is done. Now I’ll take you to play to your heart’s content.” Once Lawrence saw that Han Shuo had understood, he no longer said anything else. He dragged the latter out of this quiet deserted place to the most crowded and lively area of the Rose Garden.

“Young master Lawrence, do you need a separate room?” A man dressed in a butler’s attire, who looked to be the middle aged steward of the Rose Garden, asked smilingly after he saw Lawrence.

“Of course, I’ll use the room I usually take. You help me arrange the best service for my good friend to enjoy.” Lawrence instructed in a straightforward manner.

Suddenly Lawrence paled, he looked back behind Han Shuo as murderous intent flashed in his previously smiling face.

“Hey Lawrence, what a pleasant surprise.” A seemingly cheerful sound of greeting resounded from behind Han Shuo.

Turning around, Han Shuo saw a luxuriously dressed youth of roughly twenty-five or twenty-six years old. He came over with several flower seekers, who was obviously noble at a single glance. This young man was a little taller than Lawrence and had a handsome and tough look. As he walked, he exuded the awe-inspiring momentum of someone in a high position.

He was obviously the leader of this flower seeking group. Those flower seekers looked at him with flattering smiles and even lowered their postures, which set off his noble position even more.

“Hmph, I certainly don’t want to see you.” Lawrence’s complexion didn’t look too good as he coldly looked at this man.

“Heh heh, Lawrence, you are getting more and more impolite nowadays. According to the Empire’s rules, mustn’t you at least offer your greetings when you see me?” The tall healthy man looked mockingly at Lawrence, with a smile that wasn’t a smile.

His face twitching, Lawrence glared resentfully at this person, then grimaced helplessly, “Greetings to his Royal Highness the first Prince.”

Chapter 256: The female bandit

This was the first prince Charles!

As Han Shuo squinted at him, he suddenly had an odd thought, "Lawrence is the owner of the Rose Garden, so the mage guards around should be under the order of that murderous Bolland. For the first prince Charles to come here to seek pleasure, he's basically unknowingly gone deep into the tiger's den. If Lawrence receives the support of Karel, wouldn't he be able to soundlessly kill that Charles?"

"Haha, good, good." Charles first laughed loudly with satisfaction, then he curved his mouth and coldly provoked, "You should dispel any thoughts as soon as you can, or you may even die without knowing how."

Finishing this sentence, Charles conveniently dropped a vicious line in a low voice, "Little bastard mutt!"

"Let's go. Shall we have some fun?" Charles turned his body with a loud laugh and left with the bootlickers following closely behind him. He paid no more attention to Lawrence.

Lawrence's face twisted with anger. His two hands clenched tightly into fists, blue veins popping out from their backs. Lawrence couldn't suppress the light trembling of his entire body. His furious eyes emitted thick murderous intent as he viciously stared at the departing back of Charles. Even his breathing had become much heavier.

Looking at Lawrence's posture, that might blow at any moment, Han Shuo was truly afraid the guy wouldn't be able to control himself, and would throw everything to the wind to risk his life for a fight with Charles.

To an illegitimate child, the most humiliating thing was to be cursed as a "bastard". When this vicious curse came from the person they hated the most, it increased the humiliation by tens of times. No wonder even an introvert like Lawrence almost raged out of control.

Patting Lawrence's shoulder, Han Shuo consoled, "Let it go. We will soon return this hatred. Don't be so hasty."

“I want to kill him with my own hands. I’ll definitely kill him with my own hands...” Lawrence gnashed his teeth as he whispered, his face ferocious.

“Oh, if it isn’t Mister Aubrey? And Mister Cameron too!” The Rose Garden was a lively place for spending gold indeed. First prince Charles had just left, and Han Shuo had already bumped into the incoming fellows whom he’d previously met at Boozt Merchant Guild – Cameron and Aubrey plus several other merchants.

“Damn it, what the hell did you, petty, despicable villain do to our bodies?” As soon as he saw Han Shuo, Aubrey couldn’t help but fume and immediately curse.

It was spring time with flowers blooming everywhere. The weather was great. However Aubrey and Cameron looked somewhat weird. Aubrey’s whole body was wrapped from head to toe in a thick fur coat. He stood there and shivered, his face frozen purple.

On the other hand, Cameron was the exact opposite. In this gentle, comfortable weather, he looked like he was at a sauna. His thin clothes were damp with sweat, his mouth breathed out hot air currents whenever he opened it to speak. His face flushed beet red. Evidently he was unbearably hot.

Perhaps to balance out each other, these two weirdly dressed fellows walked hand in hand. As two great manly men, for them to appear in such a place like the Rose Garden while holding hands, it was even weirder.

These two had been injected with the poison of ice and fire. Fire and ice poisons were taking turns to attack their bodies right now, making them extremely cold for a moment and then extremely hot the next. This pain would repeatedly torture them until the poison injected by Han Shuo waned.

Throwing the two a contemptuous glance, Han Shuo viciously said, “Two great masters walking hand in hand in broad daylight. This is really sickening.”

“Damnable! What poison did you actually give us? You lowly despicable villain!” Aubrey’s two rows of teeth made clacking sounds as they chattered. He trembled as he shouted.

Lawrence was originally furious, seeing these two appear here, but now he felt a little better. He laughed heartily and shook his head in ridicule, “With this special hobby, you should have been more surreptitious. Boldly coming here like this, your morality has really degraded!”

“Bryan, I won’t let you off easily.” Aubrey furiously glared at Han Shuo and threatened with a wide mouth.

As soon as he finished those words, the poison of ice and fire swapped. His ice cold body suddenly spiked up in temperature. He hastily threw off his fur coat in a practiced manner and started cursing nonstop.

“That’s enough for today, let us leave this place.” Han Shuo persuaded. He understood that meeting Aubrey here meant that he would constantly be entangled by the latter. Since he knew the misery caused by the poison of ice and fire was unbearable indeed. Furthermore, Lawrence had certainly lost interest in having fun after the vicious remarks he had received from Charles earlier.

Lawrence seemed to have lost his mood as he nodded, “Alright. I brought you here this time mainly for the matter earlier. We’ll have plenty of time for fun later. These hated charactered really disgust me. Let’s leave. Don’t allow them to latch onto us.”

“Don’t leave. Give me the antidote first, or I won’t leave you alone.” Aubrey breathed heavily and stared at Han Shuo, shouting nonstop.

After knowing Han Shuo’s strength, the big businessman Cameron appeared to be afraid that Han Shuo would abruptly kill him. He didn’t dare to speak and just followed behind Aubrey.

Han Shuo quickly left with Lawrence without stopping. After they exited the Rose Garden, the earth rider Jino gave a loud shout. Several guards of Lawrence swiftly surrounded him.

Aubrey had yet to come close when Jino crudely pushed him aside. Lawrence and Han Shuo stepped into the carriage just like that and left the Rose Garden.

“Alright, I’m going first. Wait for me to come look for you after I pick up my graduation diploma.” Leaving the Rose Garden for a little while, Han Shuo spoke a farewell to Lawrence. He then jumped off the carriage and left by himself.

The number of people guarding Lawrence in both the light and dark weren’t few, so Han Shuo wasn’t concerned much for his safety. He didn’t need to stay and protect the latter, so he jumped out of the carriage to go handle his own personal matters.

After separating from Lawrence, Han Shuo went straight to the graveyard in the mountain back of the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force, entering the place hiding the transportation matrix.

Fanny and Phoebe needed at least three days to adapt after taking the rebirth pill. In these three days, they wouldn’t stop having stomachaches until their bodies expelled all the impurities inside. Han Shuo believed they definitely wouldn’t want to see him during this time period. For beautiful women to have to squat on the toilet nonstop, no matter how elegant their bearings were, it’d still be greatly reduced.

Lawrence had paved the way for Han Shuo’s future, but Han Shuo needed to prove himself to be an adept necromancer. He intended to obtain the diploma of the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force when he came to see Fanny, so he had at least three more days of free time.

Many things could be done in three days’ time. Han Shuo intended to go check the Valley of Sunshine first. He appeared in the cemetery of death through the transportation matrix, then used the art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens to fly towards the Valley of Sunshine.

Under Han Shuo’s instructions, Gilbert left the cemetery of death and brought the weapons from the dwarves to Trunks. They must’ve met already.

Han Shuo used all his strength and flew at the speed of a shooting star. There was only a faint light flashing through, heading towards the direction of the Valley of Sunshine.

The Valley of Sunshine wasn't too far from the Dark Forest. Han Shuo only took about half a day to arrive at the Valley of Sunshine with his current speed.

There were many forces here, so when Han Shuo reached the area, he didn't keep flying and instead walked on the ground to avoid raising attention. He moved forward, following the address that Trunks had given him.

Whoosh!

Suddenly, several arrows pierced the air and nailed the tree in front of Han Shuo.

As sounds of disturbance rang out, nearly a hundred bandits stepped out from the bushes. They were obviously well trained, and most of them held a good weapon. A small portion of them even wore a complete set of armor, the quality of which looked even better than that of the Lancelot Empire's official army.

Nearly a hundred bandits, eyes cold and momentum awe-inspiring, suddenly surrounded Han Shuo. Bows, crossbows, and spears locked onto him one after another.

There was a long red haired, unruly looking girl amongst them. She has bright eyes and white teeth, wearing a set of leather clothes. She looked quite arrogant as she walked forward with large strides and said haughtily, "We've watched you for quite a while now. You dare to fly around in our land. If you're so good, then fly here for me to see?"

Han Shuo had been flying in the air just now, so he hadn't released the yin demons to scout around. Moreover he didn't pay too much attention of the going abouts in the forest below, and naturally didn't expect to be surrounded by layers of bandits.

"You must be lady Janet. Hehe, I'm just an ordinary mage, I didn't know this area was your turf, sorry." Han Shuo gave an once over glance at the group, especially paying attention to that unruly girl, then he said with a laugh.

“It seems that you have some knowledge. Who are you? What the hell do you plan to do by infiltrating our territory?” The female bandit Janet glared at Han Shuo, interrogating.

“I just happen to pass by, I don’t have any bad intentions. Well then, I still have things to do, will you allow me leave?” Han Shuo had heard a bit about this female bandit Janet’s deeds from Trunks. He knew this girl followed the bandit job as inheritance to her ancestry. Even though her character was a little unruly and stubborn, she wasn’t a bad person. She could be considered a merciful bandit with a strict set of principles among the bandit forces around the Valley of Sunshine, so Han Shuo didn’t want to butt heads with her.

“You look so shifty. You mustn’t be any good person. The Valley of Sunshine has been chaotic recently, so who knows if you aren’t a spy sent by our enemies? Men, come and capture this fellow first, then carefully interrogate him.” Janet stared fixedly at Han Shuo. Seeing him exposing not even a bit of fear and grinning instead, she started to feel somewhat annoyed and angrily turned around to order the gang.

Chapter 257: Robbing the robbers

Several rough, bulky bandits abruptly sprang out from behind Janet. They grinned and shot towards Han Shuo.

These fellows all seemed to have cultivated fighting aura. Each bandit was about two meters tall, and emitted a pressure as fierce as a bear. Their momentum alone was enough to shock people.

“Eh, sorry, I still have something to do, so I can’t stay here long.” Of course Han Shuo wasn’t scared. When he saw these big guys closing in, he quickly shot up and slipped out of the besiegement of the surrounding men like an eel.

His speed suddenly accelerated like that of a leopard. Han Shuo leapt onto a huge tree with just a tap of his foot, then leapt backwards more than ten meters. It seemed like he’d soon be able to escape the encirclement of bandits.

“Damn it! Capture him alive for me! There must be something up with this brat!” Janet was furious. She suddenly and fiercely shot towards Han Shuo, and was actually able to move elegantly among the shrubs, her eyes fixed on Han Shuo without letting go.

Several bandits had already fired a series of arrows and spears at Han Shuo as per Janet’s order. However, they’d all heard her say “alive”, so they didn’t dare to aim these attacks at him, but instead, shot at the path that he was aiming for.

Han Shuo grinned. His body flashed left and right, up and down in an odd fashion. He only stuck to the middle of the forest and changed directions with an extremely quick speed. Not only did he avoid all of the attacks, he even leisurely explained, “Hey, miss bandit, you shouldn’t chase me like this, I’m really no spy.”

“You say you’re not a spy, but why are you running as if you are a spy?” Janet was still in hot pursuit as she furiously roared, “Brothers, who cares if he’s a spy or not? Get him!”

This bandit group wasn't weak. The big guys that were chasing Han Shuo under Janet's order all had the strength of senior swordsmen. There were several shabbily dressed mages, whose power were also similar. Han Shuo would be in big trouble if they all worked together to stop him.

However, Han Shuo's current strength was unfathomable. The three yin demons he had released could cover the entire terrain, as well as monitor the surrounding situation. Several obstacles were discovered ahead of time by the three yin demons, and so the distance between Han Shuo and the bandits gradually widened. His high speed, coupled with the extensive observation of the three yin demons, simply rendered the encirclement of Janet's gang useless.

This group of bandit seemed to have a good reputation. In addition, Han Shuo also had some plans for them, but not in the same way that he'd ruthlessly treated the Butcher's gang. He didn't immediately leave after escaping their encirclement, but instead dragged them around to observe their quality and combat effectiveness through the surveillance of the yin demons.

Out of the more than a hundred bandits, a majority of them had trained fighting aura, while a dozen or so were mages. In the process of pursuing Han Shuo, their formations were constantly stable without any particular franticness. Without Janet having to issue many commands, they all spread out in tacit understanding. If one side heard any movement from Han Shuo, they'd immediately alert the others. After which they would all rush in, swordsmen, archers, and mages would be arranged orderly in the encirclement.

"They have some strength indeed. No wonder they could become one of the most powerful forces in the Valley of Sunshine. Compared to the Butcher's bandit group, this one is much more smoothly ordered. However, the Butcher's bandits are more cruel and bloodthirsty." Han Shuo muttered to himself. He was hiding in the thick lush foliage of a huge tree while clearly observing their movements through the three yin demons.

"Where is he? You guys lost him?!" Janet was chasing aggressively when she realized that they had lost all traces of Han Shuo. She furiously shouted at the bandits around her.

Be it her speech or actions, Janet didn't have the gentle and tender demeanor of a girl at all. Perhaps because she grew up in a bandit lair, her manner had been completely affected by the bandits. Her temper was ferocious and her behavior crude. Although she looked gentle and pretty, the feeling that she gave people was that of a great, prideful man.

"Young miss, this person is even faster than a leopard and more cunning than a fox. Is he really a mage?" An old mage with one crippled leg said with a wry smile as he used the levitation skills to float to Janet's side.

"Old Billy, if he were a swordsman or a knight, would he fly to this place from afar? Damn it, are you so old that even your head is old too?" Janet was still raging, her almond eyes rolling at the crippled old man as she huffed and cursed angrily.

Old Billy wasn't angry being scolded at by her like that. He only hung his head with a wry smile, "Maybe I'm really old now, or the times have changed. How could a mage run faster than a leopard? I dare say that he was running, and not using levitation skills. Heavens, is he special like you?!"

"Search this area! This guy must be a spy, or he could be from the House of Menlo." Paying no heed to old Billy, Janet shouted to some bandits nearby.

"Not here, young miss!"

"Can't find him, he's gone!"

"He may have escaped!"

All kinds of helpless messages resounded around Janet. Obviously the bandits had no way of discovering Han Shuo's existence.

It was already nighttime. Only Janet and Billy were standing under the tree where Han Shuo was hiding. As for the other seven or eight bear-like bandits, they were in the middle of an area with tall weeds that reached the waist, around ten meters away from Janet.

Han Shuo, who was hiding in the foliage above, suddenly raised his voice to let out a long laugh then flew straight down. He reached her in the blink of an eye, smashing a blow that contained magical yuan and surging evil aura at her head.

“Damn it!” Janet cursed as she pushed away the old Billy, who was about to chant a spell. She curled her hand into a fist that emitted a dark green fighting aura, aiming it at Han Shuo’s punch above.

Seeing the dark green fighting aura, Han Shuo immediately understood that she should only have the strength of a senior swordsman. He quickly reduced the magical yuan in his punch from eighty percent to thirty percent.

Bang! The dark green fighting aura and Han Shuo’s punch fiercely collided, then their fists hit each other. A force that could row the mountains and topple the sea suddenly shot out from Janet’s small fist. This force flipped the flying down Han Shuo up again in the same trajectory that he fell.

“How could this be?!” His right hand became numb. Han Shuo couldn’t help but exclaimed, his face horrified.

The green fighting aura was the signature of a senior swordsmen. From Han Shuo’s experience, Janet could, at most, withstand about thirty percent of the power from his magical yuan. However, even though Janet’s fighting aura scattered when their punches collided, her small fist still emitted a terrifying force.

If it wasn’t for Han Shuo’s unusually tough body, her punch could have crippled his right hand. To his understanding, the green fighting aura of a senior swordsman absolutely couldn’t cause such a great force.

This female bandit was a little strange!

“Keke!” Janet revealed a satisfying laugh at Han Shuo’s horrified face. Then her space ring flashed and a studded club, bigger than her body appeared. She easily held the studded club in her left hand and giggled as she leapt up towards Han Shuo using the high trees around. Han Shuo had yet to fall down when the studded club viciously aimed at his waist and smashed downwards.

Han Shuo snorted coldly. He had just showed some goodwill and didn't expect to eat a loss in return. Seeing Janet pound her studded club right at his lower body, he became somewhat angry. His body that was hit dizzy by the strong force earlier suddenly halted mid-air, as he aimed a similar punch right at Janet's studded club.

Rumble. A huge sound rang out, followed by Janet's surprised yelp. She was using the tree trunks to leap up, but now, both her body and studded club were fiercely smashed back down. As her butt slammed on the ground, Janet looked at the proud Han Shuo standing mid-air, aghast.

"Motherfucker son of a b*tch! Pretending to be a pig to eat a tiger!" Janet couldn't help but let out a vulgar curse. Her breathing was heavy for a while before she took hold of the studded club, wanting to fight again.

Han Shuo was shocked. He didn't expect Janet to be able to stand up so quickly. Not letting him make a move again, the big mercenaries around them rushed up together. The old crippled mage Billy was also finished chanting his spell. Chilling winds whistled as they churned into piercing sharp wind blades, whizzing forwards.

He was actually a wind archmage! Han Shuo was stunned for a moment. Now that he knew of Janet's power, he didn't continue to stay here.

He flew to hide himself in the foliage of the tree behind them, then made a few leaps and dropped down to a carriage that belonged to the bandits. As soon as he landed, he used the Demonslayer Edge to slice open the carriage's top. While everyone wasn't paying attention, he grabbed a blithely unaware young woman, suppressed her strength, and flew out.

"You rogue, let me go! Hurry and let me go, or Janet definitely won't let you off!" This young woman was utterly beautiful, arching crescent eyebrows, a pair of clear and bright eyes. Her voice was soft even though she was yelling angrily.

"Janet, I'm taking this girl away. If you want to rescue her, come to the Soul Destroyer mercenary band." Han Shuo seized the young woman without any care for her shouting. He laughed loudly and left grandly.

“Scoundrel! Let go of my wife, or else I’ll never be finished with you!” Janet was raging as she roared to the heavens, then she constantly and vulgarly cursed. She hadn’t a bit of the manner that a gentle girl should have had.

Chapter 258: Headquarters

The dangerously steep cliff, that was tapering into a bottomless abyss, was covered in floating clouds. The crimson sunset was outstanding in the sky, shining on the towering cliff, which now looked like an enormous red branding iron.

This cliff was a long distance away from the Valley of Sunshine. This kind of cliff wasn't uncommon in the Kerlan mountain range. Rugged, oddly shaped rocks were scattered all over the bare cliff and no plants grew anywhere.

Standing atop the cliff, Han Shuo leapt straight downwards. In just a breath of time, he fell through the clouds and landed safely on a huge, protruding rock.

This big rock was situated in the middle of the cliff, and there was thick white mist above and below it. Part of this protruding cliff was flat, and although a little steep, it wasn't that dangerous as long as he was careful.

"Who are you?" A fellow with a bare upper body exclaimed. His face was messily bearded, his hand holding an axe forged by the dwarves as he stared at Han Shuo in a hostile manner.

"I'm looking for Trunks." Han Shuo answered with a smile.

The Soul Destroyer mercenary band was situated on a vast, flat plain on the protruding rock in the middle of the cliff. The rock was floating on this cloudy mist, and for some reasons unknown, this thick mist didn't spread to the center. Above and below this flat plain was a vast expanse of misty white, giving it a somewhat strange appearance.

A row of bamboo huts were spread out along the flat plain. Many mercenaries, with bare upper bodies, were practicing martial arts on a fighting platform as large as a football field. Behind it were several large caves which could also be used for housing.

This flat plain was truly miraculous. It was covered in thick mist above and below, leaving only the center, which was isolated by a simple enchantment. This thick layer of white mist was a natural barrier, ensuring that no one would discover the flat plain within it. There was no mist in the center of the plain and the air was fresh. It was quiet and concealed, a good hiding place.

Han Shuo was holding that gentle girl in his arms. Her eyes couldn't see and her ears couldn't hear as he had already restricted her senses. The moment he landed, Han Shuo immediately felt Gilbert's presence.

"Honored master! You've finally returned!" The pitch black Gilbert was in the middle of the fighting platform. His body was naked from the waist up, showing his glossy black muscles. He threw two entangled mercenaries aside and yelled loudly as he ran towards Han Shuo.

The brawny guy holding the axe, who'd been eyeing Han Shuo with hostility, immediately curved his mouth into a smile as he heard Gilbert call Han Shuo his master. He said in a friendly manner, "Your weapon is very good. Thank you."

Since Han Shuo offended the Church of Light and the Calamity Church at the same time, he didn't tell Trunks his other identity in order to guard against these two churches. These mercenaries only knew Han Shuo as a good friend of Trunks, but they didn't know about the other matter.

"No need to stand on ceremony. Where is Trunks?" Nodding, Han Shuo asked this brawny guy.

"He's gone out for something, but he should be back by evening. Honored master, you've returned." The naked Gilbert yelled as he walked forward. Many mercenaries on the flat plain could hear his voice. A great deal of them exited their bamboo huts and rock caves, looking at Han Shuo with surprise.

Gilbert had lazed around this place for quite some time. Even in his human form, none of these mercenaries could deal with his tyrannical dark dragon body. Evidently, he had established a powerful image during that time.

This powerful being actually humbly called Han Shuo master, shocking the mercenaries who resided on this flat plain. They couldn't help but want to take a look and see how powerful this figure was that he could make Gilbert submit.

“Many thanks to your weapons! They are really useful!”

“That’s right. This broadsword is amazing. Worthy of being a weapon forged by the dwarves!”

“Thank you, thank you. The weight of this double-edged hatchet really suits me, thank you!”

The mercenaries shouted one after another, their eyes looking at Han Shuo with gratitude and goodwill. Evidently they were extremely satisfied with the weapons that had Gilbert brought with him.

“No need to be polite. Trunks and I are the best of friends, hehe!” Han Shuo nodded and laughed in a friendly manner, his eyes shining as they assessed these mercenaries.

Han Shuo saw more than a hundred mercenaries on this flat piece of land. Each of them possessed a calm and experienced bearing. The majority were swordsmen, plus a dozen or so mages and more than thirty archers. Judging from the presence exuded from their bodies, they must be great men with extraordinary power and tough mindsets.

Compared to the bandit group led by Janet, the Soul Destroyer mercenary band also had over a hundred members. Its power was a bit stronger. Amongst them, several mercenaries were still young, yet had a cold and calm bearing. Han Shuo knew these people used to be a part of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band that he’d met at the House of Menlo. Their calm and cold manner, forged from weathering many battles, made Han Shuo look at them a few more times.

“Hey, you’re called Bryan? Hehe, you must be very powerful to be Gilbert’s master. Are you interested in exchanging blows?” A seasoned mercenary offered. He was about a meter and ninety centimeters tall, naked from the waist up, revealing his bulging muscles. He held a broadsword of one and half a meter in length as his eyes squinted at Han Shuo, measuring him with his invitation.

When he spoke, his right hand, which held the sword easily waved around as if demonstrating his strength. A dark green fighting aura suddenly flared up as a sharp blade light flickered in and out of existence.

“Alright!” Trunks wasn’t back yet anyway. In order to remove future obstacles when he revealed his identity, Han Shuo intended to leave a powerful impression and deeply engrave it into the depths of their hearts. That would be the most effective method.

Han Shuo walked towards the fighting platform, relaxed and unrestrained. As he walked, he took off his shirt, so that his body was also naked from the waist up. His body was over one meter eighty centimeters tall, each chunk of muscle was as if carved by a knife. His force was vigorous and explosive. The rows of muscles were perfectly coordinated as they were naturally formed through the tempering of his demonic magic.

As he flung off his shirts, the mercenaries around saw his body and immediately issued surprised comments. A bunch of them excitedly jumped as they yelled, “Grant, you’re in trouble!”

They were all knowledgeable people. Seeing the strong muscles and perfectly coordinated lines on Han Shuo’s body, they immediately knew that this sturdy and balanced body was most suited for fighting. Grant held a broadsword and his body was large. However, some of his muscles weren’t that visible. His muscles could achieve explosive power thanks to his fighting aura, but his speed would obviously be affected.

On the contrary, each chunk of Han Shuo’s muscles was clear and harmonious. Even in the most difficult place to grow muscles – his v-lines appeared as if they were carved. This type of body with perfect muscle coordination was the most suitable for combat.

Grant also showed a surprised expression. Seeing that Han Shuo had come empty handed, he was stunned for a moment then threw aside his broadsword, shouting defiantly, “Then we won’t use weapons, only relying on pure physical strength to compare.”

“As you wish!” Han Shuo laughed loudly. He walked towards Grant, not using magical yuan at all.

Grant was delighted. He increased his speed and charged forward without waiting for Han Shuo to close in. His body rushed violently towards Han Shuo, curving his lips and clenching his fist, aiming it straight down at the latter.

Unexpectedly, Han Shuo moved step by step without any other actions. He just watched the incoming iron fist, the corner of his mouth curving into an odd smile.

Boom!

The momentum of Grant's punch was like a rainbow as it pounded into Han Shuo's chest. A muffled drum-like sound came out of the latter's body. Han Shuo's figure stood still, even the smile on his face remained unchanged.

"Oh my god, is your body made of steel?" On the contrary, it was Grant who grimaced. His fist in pain, his face miserable.

"Heh heh!" Han Shuo made a move like lightning. He took hold of Grant's shoulder and suddenly threw it over his shoulder. The big man's one meter ninety centimeter body fluttered like a feather, flying a few meters into the air and falling just right onto a large, soft cushion.

Leisurely sweeping his eyes to glance at the nearby mercenaries, Han Shuo called out dashing, "Does any other brother want to try? Whether it's physical attacks, fighting aura, or magic, I can do them all!"

When his words fell, every single one of the Soul Destroyer mercenary band was completely silent. They dazedly looked at Han Shuo, dumbfounded. No one dared to step up.

"Wakaka, you guys are idiots! Daring to compete with my master in bodily strength. In the forbidden land of the Dark Forest, even the golden dragon, proclaimed to have the most powerful body, couldn't fight against my great master. You brats are truly crazy!" Gilbert shouted triumphantly, scaring the already stunned mercenaries into shock.

"Mighty master, you've even brought me a woman this time? You are becoming more and more considerate!" Gilbert squealed as he suddenly discovered the restrained woman that'd been put aside by Han Shuo. He excitedly walked over.

“Stop. This woman is not to be touched. I still have great uses for her. She belongs to that female bandit Janet, and so I need to use her to schedule an appointment with Janet!” Han Shuo glared at Gilbert as he snapped.

Gilbert immediately became honest upon hearing Han Shuo's shout. At this time, the sound of rustling wind echoed down the steep cliff. In just a while, Trunks, along with Odysseus and a bunch of others, landed down from above.

“Eh, you've come!” Trunks immediately said with a smile when he saw Han Shuo. As he walked to the latter, his eyes unintentionally glanced around. He was suddenly stunned as he looked at the girl that Han Shuo had brought, his expression extremely odd.

After a while, Trunks loudly cried out “Annie” then furiously rushed over to her side. The people next to him were originally from the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band. They were first ecstatic before looking at her with some suspicion as they muttered, “Something's not right!”

Chapter 259: Assembly

Trunks' expression was exceedingly off as he dashed in front of the girl like lightning. He reached out a hand to touch the necklace of crystal shards on her neck. He said with a choked up voice, "Annie, it's definitely you!"

The original Rainbow Sickle mercenary band members all clustered around Trunks and looked on with confused stares. Grant, who'd been tossed into the air by Han Shuo, couldn't help but say, "Chief, Miss Annie doesn't look like that!"

"It's definitely Annie. I gifted her that crystal necklace, and the black mole behind her left ear are all proof that she's Annie!" Trunks' voice was thick with tears as he held onto the girl and sobbed with joy.

The mercenaries, who'd been doubtful before, all cheered when they heard that Trunks had confirmed her identity. They used their mallets to bash each other's chest as they seemed to want to use pain to express how excited and happy they were.

"Annie, Annie, what's wrong? Why can't you speak?" Trunks asked frantically when he realized the girl in his grasp wasn't moving, and was as quiet as a puppet.

"Allow me!" Han Shuo dashed in front of Trunks and placed his right hand on Annie's back. A beam of black light entered her body and cleaned away the restraints placed on her.

The girl, with her head lolling to the side, suddenly had color suffuse her cheeks again. She seemed to feel Trunks' shaking as her long eyelashes fluttered, suddenly snapping open into bright eyes as she looked at Trunks, perplexed.

That lasted for only a moment. A shrill scream immediately broke from the girl's mouth. She struggled fiercely and threw punches and kicks at Trunks. She resisted ferociously and cursed loudly, "Damn it, who are you? If Janet knew, she'd kill you for sure. Let go of me, let go of me!"

However, the girl didn't seem to have practiced martial techniques. Her punches and kicks didn't cause Trunks much damage when they landed on him. Trunks let go of the girl in bafflement, "Annie, do you not remember me?"

"Who's Annie? I'm Betty. You must have the wrong person. You're crazy!" The girl dodged Trunks and looked huffily at Han Shuo. "You evil robber, what do you want with me here?"

Han Shuo didn't respond as he looked at Annie with deeply furrowed brows. Linley looked at the deeply emotional and dejected Trunks, "Trunks you're not recognizing the wrong person, are you?"

Shaking his head firmly, Trunks said, "I gave her that crystal necklace, and the black mole on her ear is still there. This is definitely Annie, but I don't know why her looks have changed and why she doesn't remember me."

"Then there's nothing wrong about it. These marks mean that it must be her. Memories are sometimes forgotten after enormous stimulus, and some magical potions can be used to change one's appearance." Han Shuo said calmly.

"That's right. That must be the case. Where did you find her?" Trunks immediately agreed when he heard Han Shuo respond.

"You jerks, what do you want to do with me? Hurry up and let me go or Janet will never let you off the hook!" The originally gentle girl became a bit frantic because of her dangerous circumstances, and she kicked up quite a fuss.

"I grabbed her from Janet's hands. It looks like we'll understand what's going on only after we find Janet. I have things to discuss with her anyways."

"Annie, where did you get this crystal necklace?" Trunks asked in a shaky voice as he walked towards the girl and pointed at the necklace on her neck.

"How would I know? It's mine. You must have the wrong person. Please, let me go. I can have Janet let you guys go too.” The young girl seemed to feel Trunks’ affection for her and begged pitifully.

“Do you remember your childhood, the matters of your youth?” Trunks’ eyes glimmered with light as he looked closely at the girl, asking anxiously.

Shaking her head like a rattle-drum, the girl bawled, “I don’t remember, I don’t remember anything and I don’t want to. Let me go!”

By now, even the original Rainbow Sickle mercenary band members could see that she had indeed lost her memory, and was sure that this had to be Annie, who’d been missing for three years.

“I’m going to find Janet and get to the bottom of this. Uncle Grant, take two small teams and make the trip with me.” Trunks had a resolute expression on his face and gave an order to Grant, then spoke softly to Annie, “Annie, stay here for now. They’ll take care of you like before.”

“I’m not Annie, let me go!” Annie wanted to cry when she saw that Trunks was about to leave.

“Come, let’s do it all tonight.” Swiping with his eyes, Trunks couldn’t bear to look at the sobbing Annie and cast a glance at Han Shuo, walking down with large strides.

There were 20 people on each small team, as well as Odysseus’ crew, Han Shuo and Gilbert walking along the flat ground. They climbed up the previously shaped stone stairs and climbed up out of the cliff.

“Why did you leave in such a hurry last time?” Odysseus asked Han Shuo with a smile as Gordon and Aphrodite also chattered away.

“It couldn’t be helped. I had a ton of stuff to do last time, plus that Ferguson was hot on my tail, so I had to leave.” Han Shuo smiled apologetically at Odysseus and explained. He looked to the right and left and saw that no one was paying any attention to him. Odysseus couldn’t help but ask a question in a low tone at this point.

Nodding, Han Shuo said softly, “Yes.”

Gordon was delighted and chuckled, "You're amazing to have created such a large mercenary band. We were only willing to join after Trunks said that the boss in the shadows was you."

Clapping Gordon's shoulder, Han Shuo smiled faintly and nodded, not saying much. The friendship of life and death that Han Shuo had formed with them in the Dark Forest was indeed becoming of use.

"A merchant happened to discover a silver mine in the mountain valley. It's said that there's even mithril inside. All of the powers in the Valley of Sunshine have fought several times for possession of this silver mine. I've received news that Laureton of the Cairo mercenary band will be going over tonight as well. The Cairo mercenary band has occupied all high ground in the valley, and it'll be difficult for the other powers to fight against him."

"Laureton has left the valley this time for mithril. The other power won't let him off the hook either, so there's certainly going to be a vicious battle tonight at the silver mine. I've come back to take some men and watch the show, and see if there are any benefits to be had." Trunks explained as he arrived aboveground from the misty flat grounds.

Startled, Han Shuo said, "Silver mines are rare enough to begin with. Mithril is the ultimate material used in forging weapons and armor. No wonder everyone's gone crazy over it. If such a mine were discovered, its value is truly unsurpassable. Therefore, all of the factions in the valley will want a share of the profits. The merchant who discovered it was killed in the first moment, but sadly the news had already travelled." Trunks nodded in agreement.

"Come, let's go take a look as well. If there are no accidents, Janet will appear there as well." Han Shuo thought for a bit and suggested to Trunks.

"Mm, my thoughts precisely!" Trunks responded.

The group of thirty some people left the cliff silently, heading for their destination with Trunks' instructions.

The mercenaries that Trunks had brought along were mostly the experienced, extraordinary members of the Soul Destroyers. They kept checking their equipment along the way and looked around alertly, carefully avoiding the other groups of people along the way.

As the sky darkened, before the crescent moon rose into the night sky, Trunks stopped in front of a boulder and pointed at a valley in the distance that was filled with ivy vegetation. “There it is, I think all the powers in the valley have arrived. The smaller forces like us who want to take advantage of the situation will also be greatly numerous. It’s going to be a bit impossible to hide without anyone discovering us.”

“The others remain here. You, me, and Gilbert will go inside first. Just follow me and be careful. No one will discover us then.” Han Shuo turned his head and calmly gave Trunks his orders.

Trunks had witnessed Han Shuo’s miracles before. He immediately turned back to the others and said, “Uncle Grant, you guys remain here and hide yourselves for now. We’ll scout ahead. I’ll use signals to notify you if anything happens.”

As experienced mercenaries, they wouldn’t have any objections about their chief’s orders once they started their operations. Grant nodded, saying lowly, “Understood.”

“Follow me!” Han Shuo called out softly and lowered his body to be level with the shrubbery. He took a step out and sent the three yin demons out around him, keeping an eye on all movement around him.

Chapter 260: Adding fuel to the flames

“This mithril mine is within the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band’s area of influence. It now belongs to our Church of Light. All of you please leave!” The light grand magus Ferguson floated in the air. He wore a pure white magic robe that shone with splendor. His left hand held a magic staff that emitted a dazzling light. He gave off an inviolable, sacred bearing.

All of the light magical elements in the valley converged towards his magic staff from all directions. Ferguson’s presence was becoming stronger and stronger. A brilliant curtain of light burst out of the magic staff in his hand, illuminating the moonless valley.

A small river was quietly flowing in the center of this valley, a few li wide. Big rocks of strange forms surrounded the whole river. The mountain wall was covered in a green, thick carpet of ivy-like vines.

The four great powers in the Valley of Sunshine, the Cairo mercenary band, the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band, the House of Menlo, and the Katar orc tribe, had all gathered here. They had divided the valley into four sections in order to occupy it. In addition, a dozen or so smaller forces were scattered in groups here and there. All of them had come here driven by greed.

Han Shuo had originally wanted to hide his traces. As soon as he heard the loud rumbling, he released the three yin demons to circle and scout the valley. After obtaining a clear understanding of the situation through the yin demons, he knew that this was a key moment in the valley, since all the forces were no longer hiding in secret.

“Let’s go. No one will notice us as long as we’re a bit careful.” Han Shuo shouted lightly, leading Gilbert and Trunks. The three cautiously slipped through several forces to a remote corner in the valley before hiding behind a large boulder.

“Mr. Ferguson, the person who discovered the silver mine was a merchant from our House of Menlo. Therefore, the mine naturally belongs to us.” Adam Menlo, head of the House of Menlo, said blandly, his face heavy as he glared at Ferguson.

Adam Menlo was a skinny old man rumored to be a sky rider. He was riding on the super rank magic creature Golden-Winged Roc, holding a golden spear in hand. He looked very heroic.

Dozens of experts from the House of Menlo were behind him. The entire group was riding on exotic, odd magic creatures, their hands grasping superior weapons or magic staffs. They all stared at Ferguson in an unfriendly manner.

“Ferguson, it’s not your Church of Light’s turn to be arrogant in this Valley of Sunshine. Our Cairo mercenary band is the true master of this place, everything here belongs to us.” The bald, robust Laureton shouted in a bell-like voice. His right hand wielded a huge battle axe in demonstration.

This battle axe showed no reflection under the light magic, as if it contained a mysterious force within. At a glance, the handle seemed rusted all over, as if it had been through many years of life.

Similarly, the elite mercenaries of the Cairo mercenary band were standing behind Laureton. He was evidently also determined to take control of this mithril mine. The chief of the Katar orc tribe stood on another side. He was roughly two and a half meters tall and carried a huge totem pole on his shoulder. The warriors of the tribe behind him were similar from their bodies to weapons.

“Looks like this battle is inevitable!” Han Shuo curved his lips into a devious smile as he said to Trunks, looking at the four great powers having their tit for tat in the central part of the valley.

“Mm, but why are Janet and the Butcher’s bandit gangs not here?” Trunk first nodded then asked somewhat suspiciously, “Logically speaking, they should have gotten the message. I didn’t expect that they wouldn’t even come for a piece of the pie.”

“They’ve actually come already. They are just hiding like us. Heh heh, these bandits didn’t dare to expose themselves, so they’ve just been hiding.” Han Shuo pointed in the direction of the Katar orc tribe chief and said, “There’s a huge rock in the mountain valley behind them, the Butcher’s bandits are over there.”

“Over there, within the ivy bush about a li behind the House of Menlo is Janet’s gang. However we shouldn’t go hunting for her for the time being. Let’s look at the situation first before deciding.”

“Understood.” Trunks replied.

Since the valley was limited in size, the parties here had only brought a portion of their elite forces. The number of people from each faction wasn’t too large. All of the powers in the light and dark had gathered here with the intention of taking the mine. The situation was an imminent stalemate in every corner and direction of the valley. At this moment, no one dared to make a move. Even Laureton didn’t dare to act first, avoiding the inevitability of becoming a target for the other forces.

After quarreling with each other for a while, the four great powers were still stuck in a battle of glares and curses. Even the lackeys only waved their weapons around like props. They hadn’t officially started the fight. Obviously, they were still having some apprehension about each other.

“These people are so troublesome. Why can’t they just make a move? I’m already so tired from looking at them.” Gilbert observed for a while, but the bunch was still quarreling nonstop. He couldn’t help but complain.

“Where is the mine? I’ll give them some impetus.” Han Shuo thought for a bit then looked to Trunks and asked.

“There’s a hidden underground cave over there at that overgrowth. Rumor has it there is silver inside, and even a very small amount of mithril.” Trunks answered as he pointed at the place where the four great factions were standing.

His heart jumped as Han Shuo suddenly had an idea. He laughed devilishly, “I have a way. This time, I must make Florida suffer continuously!”

Han Shuo's group saw Florida upon moving forward. His injuries had been completely healed after half a year's worth of recovery. He was currently in high spirits as he stood behind his grandfather Ferguson, and whispered something to Asa.

Asa and Maxine had tried to assassinate Han Shuo during his last trip to the Valley of Sunshine. Marco's right arm had been cut off in the end, and he barely escaped with great embarrassment. He seemed to yet to recover, as his face was pale without the color of blood. Even though the severed arm had been reconnected, the spasming of his fingers indicated that some aftereffects were present. His arm might never recover its original flexibility.

The little skeleton and earth elite zombie appeared after a necromancy chant. After being refined by demonic magic, the earth elite zombie no longer had the original appearance of a zombie warrior. He didn't look much different from a human.

Upon receiving an order, the earth elite zombie slowly sank into the ground and disappeared before the incredulous eyes of Trunks. There was no change in the land where he disappeared, as if he were a drop of water absorbed by the soil.

"This, what is this? He, what thing is he?!" Trunks cried out in disbelief, he seemed to be unable to accept the scene that he had just witnessed.

Pointing at the little skeleton, Han Shuo smiled and explained, "The same as him."

Upon hearing Han Shuo mention him, the little skeleton's purple eye immediately lit up and focused on Trunks. He arrogantly waved his right hand, which grasped the bone knife, seemingly disdainful of Trunks' ignorance.

"I see, wondrous Bryan! You truly know how to shock people!" Trunks exclaimed, then smiled wryly as he said, "No wonder both Ferguson and Edwin are looking for you!"

"This is the territory of the Rainbow Sickie mercenary band. You dared to break into this place and covet the silver mine. You really think too little of us!” Florida shouted on the other side with murderous intent as he looked coldly at Laureton.

Amongst the troops invading the valley this time, the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band had brought the most amount of people. Moreover, with the presence of his grandfather Ferguson and the Church of Light, Florida felt that his side was the most powerful. His manner naturally became more overbearing.

“Florida, do you think the Valley of Sunshine is your home just because you have your grandfather backing you?” Laureton coldly snorted as he mocked Florida.

Suddenly, the earth elite zombie appeared beneath the thick bush of ivy vines. His hands held a huge silver rock and enthusiastically ran towards Florida, giving the big rock to the latter under the crowd’s watching eyes.

“Very good, damn you! Florida, your people are blatantly exploiting the mine and simply ignoring our presence!” Seeing the situation, the head of the House of Menlo, Adam Menlo, immediately cursed out loud. He rode the super rank Golden-Winged Roc and rushed straight at Florida.

The Golden-Winged Roc was a dozen meters long. Its pair of golden wings unfurled and covered the moon that had just risen in the night sky. A sharp cry resounded as the huge wings were like sharp blades that were flapping rapidly, creating enormous gusts through the valley. The frenzied winds fiercely buffeted the Rainbow Sickle mercenaries on Florida’s side, making their sleeves flutter madly. Their bodies swayed as they couldn’t stand straight.

As the golden spear was raised, it emitted a thick murderous intent. Adam Menlo was at the forefront as he charged towards the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band. The men from the House of Menlo were riding all kinds of exotic magic creatures as they shouted and followed from behind.

“Your Church of Light will never have the chance to be arrogantly dominant in the Valley of Sunshine! Brothers, let him know who’s the strongest in the Valley of Sunshine!” Laureton suddenly roared to the sky, bursting out of his clothes. A terrifying aura exploded out of his body and his bald head shone brilliantly.

As his body sank into a berserk state, Laureton became extremely violent and impulsive. He carried the huge battle axe and was the first to rush out, leading the charge. The battle axe swept out fiercely. The boulders that he passed exploded with rumbling sounds as he charged forward with terrifying momentum.

Behind him, a group of Cairo mercenaries also went berserk. They roared and howled loudly as they rushed towards the Rainbow Sickle mercenaries like a group of mad bulls.

At the same time, the chief of the Katar orc tribe howled a few sentences in the orc language, fiercely slamming his huge totem against the ground. The ground immediately shook violently before the totem pole caused a great pit.

Several orc shamans also capered madly. Colorful lights fell one by one onto the bodies of dozens of orcs behind Katar. After being blessed by the chant, their muscles turned as hard as granite. Together, they raised their shining totem poles and advanced in a strange rhythm, howling as they rushed towards Florida.

“Who are you? Do you want to kill us all?!” Florida roared furiously at the earth elite zombie, his rage reaching its peak. He quickly chanted a spell, wanting to kill the earth elite zombie first before anything else.

It was a pity that the earth elite zombie quickly sank into the ground and had already disappeared without a trace before he even complete the spell. Florida eventually gathered a light sword to deal with Laureton, who was madly charging towards him.

Once the berserkers and orcs went berserk, Florida knew too well how difficult it would be to stop them. He understood that this battle was unavoidable. On the other hand, he had the intention of killing Laureton to begin with. He'd be killed heartlessly if he didn't find a way to stop the latter.

The light sword shot forward as he laughed wildly. The attack had yet to reach Laureton before it shattered into tiny pieces of light. The bald berserker sprinted towards Florida with awe inspiring momentum. Boulders were sent flying in many pieces wherever he passed. The battle axe in his hand emitted a presence that could disintegrate mountains and upend the seas.

“Formidable, they truly are experts! This battle is really interesting!” Han Shuo laughed loudly and said leisurely as he looked at the other three great powers attacking the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band.

“Honored master, what do we do now?” Gilbert couldn’t help but ask with excitement when he saw the chaotic scenes.

“Trunks, send out the signal and have our brothers come over. These people who want to fight, let them fight. You guys go harvest the mine, I will keep watch out here.” Han Shuo hastily told Trunks when he saw the scene of extreme chaos in the valley.

“But the mine entrance is right where they are fighting! Since they’ve blocked the place, whoever tries to go inside will meet with a bad downfall. This isn’t a good idea!” Trunks smiled wryly and didn’t immediately release the signal.

“Heh heh, the secret tunnel is prepared! With the earth elite zombie here, we won’t have to go that way.” Han Shuo laughed softly. As soon as he finished those words, a tunnel appeared underneath the rock where they were hiding. The earth elite zombie stood in the middle of that tunnel and waved his hand, beckoning with a broad smile.

Chapter 261: Night of madness

Ordinary earth mages could use the power of the earth to form all sorts of attacks. The earth element's forbidden magic "Falling Meteor" and "Rage of the Earth" even had the terrifying power to destroy a city. Yet, despite the earth mages being able to use the earth element to conduct all sorts of attacks, they were still unable to use the earth's power as flexibly as the earth elite zombie.

As the favored child of the earth, once the earth elite zombie stepped on the ground, he could use the earth elemental energy to commit a lot of magical and wondrous things. It wasn't hard for him to use the power of the earth to form tunnels underneath the ground.

When a tunnel appeared out of nowhere, Trunks knew that it must lead towards the mine.

The four powers of the Valley of Sunshine were currently locked in intense battle in order to claim the silver mine. Yet, the appearance of such a tunnel allowed Trunks and the others to directly enter the innermost location without any trouble at all.

"Understood!" Trunks chuckled, then let out an eagle-like shriek. Due to the clamor from the heaven shaking fighting within the valley, Trunk's shriek didn't seem out of the ordinary.

Through the yin demon's surveillance, Han Shuo was able to see Grant and the others snap to attention after hearing Trunk's shriek, then immediately move vigilantly towards the inside of the valley.

"Roar!!"

The berserk Laureton howled towards the sky and hurled the battleaxe from his hands, causing a piercing, radiant light to enclose seven people from the Rainbow Sickle Mercenary Band. All of the people that were covered in his light had their body torn savagely into pieces, blood spraying all over Laureton.

"Be careful of Laureton. If I'm seeing correctly, what he's holding should be the divine weapon of the Berserkers – Berserker's Battle Axe. Laureton is already a powerhouse who can become berserk twice over. Legends says that a berserker with the berserker's Battle Axe can use its power to enter the berserk mode once again.”

“A berserker who can become berserk three times is definitely stronger than a great swordmaster. I think he is going to be the hardest to handle in the valley, even Ferguson might not be his opponent, so you definitely have to be careful of him,” Trunks couldn't help but remind Han Shuo the moment Trunks saw the enraged, muscle-bulging Laureton release a terrifying aura.

Han Shuo actually became rather interested in trying after hearing Trunks' words and said softly, “A berserker who can become berserk three times, hehe, that's rather interesting!”

“There's also those Katar orcs, be careful not to become surrounded by them. Otherwise, when their totems hit the earth, they will form a very terrifying shockwave. Once you are swept by the impact, it would be very difficult to live,” As an old hand in the valley, Trunks was quite clear about the different faction and couldn't help but remind Han Shuo after seeing that the battle in the valley had officially started.

“Don't worry, I'll keep it in mind. Be careful when you go inside. I'll have the earth elite zombie follow you guys so that if your movement is exposed, you can leave from the tunnel immediately. With the earth elite zombie underground, your safety should be fine,” Han Shuo gazed at the group of people excitedly as bloodlust gradually rose from the depths of his heart. After saying that to Trunk, he immediately walked towards the insides of the valley in a ghostlike manner.

Seeing that Han Shuo had left, the little skeleton walked over to the earth elite zombie's side and patted his shoulders, then followed Han Shuo as usual.

In Gilbert's eyes, this wasn't anything special, since this wasn't the first time he saw the two beings communicate. However, Trunks faced with this obvious jarring of common sense, he exclaimed once again when he saw the little skeleton's strange actions.

"Chief, what is it?" Grant couldn't help but ask after rushing over when he saw Trunk's weird expression. Trunks remained dumbly looking at the little skeleton's departing back.

"No-Nothing, all of you follow me," Trunks smiled wryly and shook his head, then he waved at Grant before walking down into the tunnel.

The earth elite zombie was very intelligent. The moment he saw Trunks jump down, he went further into the darkness and led the way in front.

"What-What is going on, why is there a tunnel?" Grant couldn't help but exclaim with a face full of shock when he came down and saw an endless tunnel.

"Don't ask so much, just hurry!" Gilbert yelled, then immediately followed Trunks into the tunnel.

All of the mercenaries who'd come down were extremely confused, but once they got over their surprise, they all filed into the tunnel. After everyone had entered, the tunnel closed miraculously without a trace.

Meanwhile, the valley was in chaos. The hundred something elites from the four significant powers of the Valley of Sunshine were crashing together. When Han Shuo neared that area in interest, he found that the situation had changed in an odd way, completely out of his predictions.

Originally, due to the earth elite zombie's actions, the other three forces had rushed towards the Rainbow Sickles. Out of them, the Cairo mercenaries with ferocious war god Laureton as ferocious as a war god and slaughtered the Rainbow Sickles, who had no corresponding expert. Even though the Rainbow Sickle Mercenary Band had the advantage in numbers, if the House of Menlo and the Katar orc tribe had also attacked together, the Rainbow Sickles would have been in dire straits.

However, the situation wasn't like that. The House of Menlo and the Katar orc tribe that had rushed forward with Laureton's mercenaries all defected once they neared the Rainbow Sickles. With an explosive roar from Adam Menlo and Katar, the experts from the two forces all started attacking the Cairo mercenaries.

“Wahaha, Laureton, Laureton, you never would have imagined this, right?! The real target is your Cairo mercenary band in today’s fight. You finally left the Valley of Sunshine, so don’t think about going back, haha...” Florida of the Rainbow Sickles suddenly laughed maniacally. As he floated in the air, his loud voice passed to every single corner of the valley.

“Times have changed, the Cairo mercenaries has controlled the Valley of Sunshine for too long. No matter what, you have to move a little,” Adam Menlo’s, the master of the House of Menlo, sinister voice also rang out as he flew towards Laureton on a great golden-winged roc.

The circumstances had changed shockingly. It seemed like the Rainbow Sickles, Adam Melo and the orc tribe had all come to an agreement. The intense argument beforehand was only a way of covering the fact that these three forces had already set their target on Laureton’s Cairo mercenary band in secret.

Those accompanying Laureton were the most elite berserkers of the Cairo mercenary band. Out of the fifty-something people, there were twenty berserkers who had the ability to become berserk once, and four of them, including Harris, had the ability to become berserk twice. Add to that the presence of the four archmages and three swordmasters they’d recruited over the years, it meant that the majority of the strongest people from the Cairo mercenaries were all there.

Yet, when faced with the sudden defection of the House of Menlo and the orc tribe, six berserkers on the outer ring were immediately slaughtered by the experts from the two forces in the blink of an eye.

On Florida’s side, his grandfather Ferguson, had already descended from the sky and was watching the changes in the valley with a cold gaze. He didn’t join in the attack on Laureton.

“Roar!”

Laureton howled as the Berserker’s War Axe in his hand attacked without a pattern. Meanwhile, a powerful aura spread as the Berserker’s Battle Axe caused curtains of light to appear, and all those who were swept into the light were smashed into smithereens.

“Follow me to break out!” Laureton’s yelled echoed through the entire valley. All of the people from the Cairo mercenary band suddenly changed directions and rushed towards the House of Menlo that were charging at towards them.

Adam Menlo, waved the golden spear in his hands atop his roc, making the air sound out with his sword aura. As golden-winged roc flapped its wings, tornadoes formed in the air and swept towards the people of the Cairo mercenary band.

A fire mage of the House of Menlo released three snakes of fire that were five meters long. They spread out as if they were alive, one towards Laureton, while the other two slithered to flank the Cairo Mercenary Group in a cone-like formation. The tender green plants that they’d slithered over in their path quickly melted.

“Adam, you ancient piece of crap, if you want to die, then I’ll send you on your way!” Laureton roared in anger and leapt into the air. The Berserker’s Battle Axe flared out a curtain of light, causing the five meter long fire snake to rain down from the sky in sparks before it even managed to draw near his body.

Silver light exploded from the Berserker’s Battle Axe like satin sashes. It surged out like a waterfall as it shot directly towards Adam Menlo on the great golden-winged roc.

Ding!

Adam Menlo’s golden spear connected directly with the berserker’s Battle Axe, making Laureton’s leaping figure tremble and then fall from the sky into the middle of the House of Menlo. Adam Menlo grunted, then quickly urged the roc to fly higher, as if he was afraid of the rampaging Laureton.

As Laureton howled in anger, he made his move once again. The fact that he’d landed right in the middle of the House of Menlo also made things more convenient. Before the archmage who’d casted “Dancing Fire Snakes” could react, he was split in half by a hack from the battle axe, spilling his blood and guts onto the ground.

Laureton's savage power seemed to have found an outlet after landing in the middle of Adam Menlo's troops. He instantly caused the brutal death of several people, but the experts of the House of Menlo had managed to react by now, and they all aimed the broadswords, spears and bows at Laureton. All sorts of attacks swarmed him before Laureton was able to cause more tremendous damage.

Ding clang dong.

The Berserker's Battle Axe hand danced furiously in Laureton's as it blocked most of the attacks. However, several arrows still penetrated his defenses, and pinned his shoulders and back. A spear also appeared from a strange angle and carved a thin and long wound underneath his arm, where blood spurt forth madly.

However, the berserk Laureton did not know pain at all. Furthermore, the defenses of his body were also terrifying. Although all of the arrows and long bows had packed such power and momentum that they would pierce through a normal person's body, they only managed to scratch Laureton's skin. Regardless of arrow or spear, the missiles only entered about a nail's depth into Laureton's muscles.

"As long as we kill Laureton, I, Florida, swear to back off from the fight over the silver mine. Don't let him leave here alive!" Florida rose in the air as the exquisite staff in his hand continuously shimmered, sending out exquisite Radiant Sword Slashes and pulses towards the people from the Cairo Mercenary Band.

"Aooooo!"

The orc chieftain, Katar, howled, and led a group of orcs empowered by various shamanic spells in a charge towards the Cairo mercenaries. Although these orcs were least in number, they seemed to be immune to most of the magic attacks. Aside from causing their skin to turn redder, the water and fire spells casted by the Cairo archmages were not of any use.

A savage power impacted the ground, causing one of the archmages to become assaulted by a huge tremor. Even his rank three magical beast, the Deepwater Venom Python, was hit as well. His steed died instantly, while the archmage bled from all of his orifices. He frantically used a levitation spell to fly into the sky.

Since this fight had included all of the true experts in the four great powers of the Valley of Sunshine, the dense murderous aura due to their hatred and bitterness were all attracted by a power when they died, causing them to gather behind a huge boulder.

Han Shuo, who had been watching excitedly behind the boulder, had bloodshot eyes at the moment as waves of blood-red evil aura wreathed around him. As more and more experts died, the terrifying aura around Han Shuo's body became denser and denser.

“Roar!!”

A crazy long howl sounded out from afar, causing an enormous boulder the size of a house to suddenly break apart, its pieces flying everywhere.

The evil aura around Han Shuo had condensed into a strange wave of blood as his crimson eyes glared savagely ahead. The terrifying aura from his body spread out quickly, and everyone's gazes became fixated on Han Shuo when all of the powerhouses in the valley felt this evil, raging aura.

Han Shuo turned swiftly into a ray of blood light and shot into the midst of the Rainbow Sickle Mercenary Band like a bloodthirsty demon. He was able to pound away at three great swordmasters of the Rainbow Sickle Mercenary Band with a single punch, while the blood that spurting out from his punch condensed into plasma.

“It's him, it's him, kill him!” Florida's hatred for Han Shuo was deeply entrenched into his bones. Even though Han Shuo's appearance was very different from usual at this moment, he was still able to recognize him with a glance, causing him to yell out furiously.

However, for an unknown reason, Florida, who should have been the first one to make a move, suddenly felt deep terror in his heart. Although he yelled loudly about killing Han Shuo, he subconsciously moved back.

It was obvious that he was afraid!

Chapter 262: Resurrection of the dead

“Hehe, Florida, we meet again!” Han Shuo sneered with crimson eyes. He was terrifying, like someone possessed by a demon.

Normally speaking, once someone of the Bloodlust Realm went berserk, they would lose their mind and enter a mentality of endless slaughter, completely unable wake up. However, during the journey to the forbidden place last time, Han Shuo and the Demonslayer Edge had taken in a lot of “specters”. When the pure power had been absorbed by the demon infant, it seemed to have a miraculous effect on him.

This time, Han Shuo felt that most of the evil auras of hatred, terror, and savagery swirled around was actually absorbed by the Demonslayer Edge within his body, causing most of the things swirling around his body to only be pure evil power.

The negative emotions were the main reason why once Han Shuo would lose control over himself once he entered the bloodlust mode. Although the infinite bloodlust within Han Shuo’s heart did not decrease when those negative emotions were absorbed by the Demonslayer Edge, his firm will allowed his mind to remain clear. This differed from when he was in the forbidden area, where he’d nearly killed Gilbert since he was unable to distinguish friend from foe.

“You won’t be able to run away! You’ll die today! Kill him!” Florida fled until he was in a place that he was safe before calling out hatefully.

“You’re actually not dead!” Grand magus Ferguson of the Church of Light exclaimed as he gazed at Han Shuo.

“How could I die so quickly when you haven’t died yet, kaka!” Han Shuo laughed oddly and made as if an eagle preparing to soar into the sky. Dense bloodlust spread out with Han Shuo as the center and formed an area suffused with blood-red mist.

A terrifying and savage aura exploded out from within this area. The remaining power, that had yet to dissipate from the experts who’d just died, all coalesced with the blood mist. As Han Shuo’s aura became stronger and stronger, the area became a burning cloud that moved to cover Ferguson.

“What— What kind of magic is this?!” Even with Ferguson’s insight, he was unable to understand Han Shuo’s methods of attack. However, he instinctively sensed danger. The magic staff in his hand shone brilliantly as he cast an “Illuminate”, quickly backing away to hide like Florida.

Once the spell “Illuminate” had been cast, it was as if another sun had appeared in the sky. A ball of piercing light, carrying pure and holy power, surged towards Han Shuo.

Unfortunately, while “Illuminate” had the power to exorcise evil, it was completely ineffective towards Han Shuo’s demonic techniques. As the people underneath him died gruesomely, the aura from Han Shuo became stronger and stronger. A mist of blood, covering a large patch of area, spread out, causing the eight Rainbow Sickles to feel as if an evil power had surged into their bodies. They cried out in anguish until their bodies bulged and exploded.

“Who— just who exactly are you? You’re more evil than the Calamity Church! I won’t allow you to get away with this!” Ferguson grew furious and roared while pointing at Han Shuo, as the Rainbow Sickles instantly exploded without any hope of resistance.

“Old fart, I reminded you last time and you didn’t listen,” Although Han Shuo still retained control over his mind in the bloodlust realm, his desire for slaughter was unable to be suppressed. Thus, he spoke coldly as he controlled the demonic cloud towards the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band.

A blood-red fan 嗜血幡 flew out from the bloody mist. The intense murderous aura around Han Shuo surged crazily into the blood fan, causing the pictures of hundreds of demons on the fan to release an intense blood mist.

The Bloodlust Fan was a demonic treasure that Han Shuo had refined during his three months of closed door cultivation. It was specifically used by those within the bloodlust realm. Han Shuo’s blood essence was in the Bloodlust Fan, and it was able to transmute the murderous aura wreathing Han Shuo's body into a bloody mist that would cause blood to boil and bodies to explode.

Now that it'd been released by Han Shuo, it immediately showed a spectacular effect by converting the murderous aura. As the number of deceased in the surroundings increased, the terrifying aura of blood around Han Shuo also became more and more powerful. Wherever the blood fan passed, those ensconced by the mist were unable to control the blood in their bodies from boiling, and they all imploded with gruesome deaths.

"Use wind magic to blow away the bloody mist, quickly!" Seeing that the bloody mist was traveling over, Florida immediately lost his calm as he gave this quick order.

The wind mages on the side immediately cast tornado and gale wind spells as soon he had shouted. The dozen or so small tornadoes churned over and destroyed everything like a knife. The bloody mist that had been gathered by the blood fan was blown apart, no longer able to coalesce as Han Shuo wished.

No treasure was perfect. Thus, Han Shuo was neither surprised nor discouraged when the bloody mist of the Bloodlust Fan was torn apart by wind magic. As Florida yelled loudly and the remaining Rainbow Sickles attacked, Han Shuo's body flew backwards, and swiftly stopped in the air over Laureton's head.

"Laureton, I'll help you break through the encirclement, but that cursed shop belongs to me. Furthermore, the Soul Destroyers will have the right to publicly recruit mercenaries in the Valley of Sunshine. How's that sound?" Han Shuo stood straight in the air surrounded by his murderous aura and threw out these suggestions whilst looking down at the wound riddled Laureton.

It was obvious that three of the great factions in the Valley of Sunshine had plotted together against Laureton in this battle. If Laureton died here, then the Valley of Sunshine would immediately be plunged into chaos.

The Rainbow Sickles would then be most likely to take charge. This was something that Han Shuo didn't wish to see, and it was also detrimental to the Soul Destroyer mercenary band's development.

Due to this, even if it wasn't for Laureton and purely for Trunks and himself, Han Shuo would've helped Laureton break free as well. Of course, it would be all the more perfect if Han Shuo could secure some benefits before helping him. Han Shuo also believed that Laureton would not refuse in this situation.

As he expected, Laureton did not hesitate. He looked up and yelled back at almost the same moment Han Shuo had finished speaking. "Agreed. If our people can leave the valley alive, I'll also give you an extra ten thousand gold!"

"Deal!" Han Shuo replied calmly.

As spell after spell was chanted and the Canopy of Necromancy was released, the sky became covered by dark green clouds that were dense and unable to be broken apart. Meanwhile, several acidic swamps suddenly formed in the middle of the Katar orc tribe and House of Menlo troops. As Han Shuo chanted out various mystic spells whilst waving his hands, rays of strange light shot out beneath the Canopy of Necromancy, landing onto the bodies of the experts who had died not too long ago.

A terrifying scene occurred. The people, that had been killed not long ago, began to struggle to their feet without a hint of humanity left in their eyes. The wounds on their bodies still bled, even the intestines of some of them could be seen. What was more horrifying was that some of them had their guts dangling from their waist, as if they hadn't properly put their belts on.

When the deceased stood up one by one, it was enormously shocking and absolutely horrifying to those who were still alive. Every single live person who noticed this scene let out terrifying screams, causing the entire valley to sink further into chaotic uproar..

Resurrection of corpses was one of the most horrifying and memorable magics of necromancy. It was something that had become an ancient legend, having disappeared from the continent for several thousand years. There was no record of this spell in the now forlorn branch of necromancy magic.

However, on such a night and in such a place, the four great factions of the Valley of Sunshine had the fortune of witnessing this long lost evil magic. Legends were legends after all. When corpses stood up one by one and attacked their former comrades while waving their weapons, the shock completely destroyed their companions' minds.

"Oh, gods! How is this possible!" Ferguson let out an anguished wail as he looked at everything that was happening in disbelief.

"Laureton, don't say that I didn't help you. Quickly use this chance to break free!" Han Shuo grinned coldly as zombies and skeletons appeared out of nowhere and rushed towards the four shocked great factions, alongside the resurrected corpses. Under the cover of the Canopy of Necromancy, these beings of darkness became like fish in water, having their power and speed greatly increased.

After being reminded by Han Shuo, the immensely shocked Laureton quickly came back to himself and immediately yelled, "What are you guys spacing out for?! Charge!!"

The immense roar made the dumbly staring Cairo mercenaries return to themselves. As they looked at their intimate companions, who'd already passed away, stand up in terrifying form, the mercenaries were absolutely shocked senseless. If it weren't for Laureton's shout waking them from their stupor, they might have needed quite a while to return to their senses.

However, since they were Han Shuo's protective targets, they were still fine even when they were staring off into space. As for the other three forces, the dead suddenly latched onto some of their ankles, the subsequent terror from which might become engraved on their hearts for the rest of their lives. Some who reacted a bit slower were stabbed to death by their former comrades.

Han Shuo stood in the air and gazed coldly at the savage changes underneath. The murderous aura from his body surged and flared, releasing an evil atmosphere. When coupled with his savage look and red eyes, it caused him to look the epitome of terror.

Chapter 263: Domineering

“Grandpa, hurry and cast Radiant Glory! Expel this evil magic!” Florida shouted in a panic as he looked at the dumbfounded Ferguson.

The shocked Ferguson only reacted when he was reminded by his grandson. The magic staff in his hand burst forth again with the holy force of light as his aged voice resonated throughout the valley, “Oh noble God of Light, hear my calls. Disperse all darkness—Radiant Glory!”

A powerful light tore through the sky. Holy light elements permeated the air above the entire valley. The black-green layer of clouds created by Han Shuo’s Canopy of Necromancy immediately began to disperse under the radiance of the holy light, and disappeared without a trace in a short time.

Brilliant light scattered throughout the valley and intermixed with the numerous stars that dotted the sky to emit a soft light. As the holy force of light descended, the deathly air was quickly dispelled. The dark creatures summoned by Han Shuo started smoking under the rays of the holy light, and their speed and power were hindered.

However, the resurrected dead bodies weren’t much affected by the strong light from the Radiant Glory. Even though their skin also began emitting white smoke, they could still move freely, so they rushed straight at the troops of the three great powers.

The experts who died thanks to Han Shuo’s necromancy magic also had the presence of dark creatures on them. However, they’d only just died after all, so this dark presence was very weak. This enabled them to barely manage to resist the rays of light magic.

The Cairo mercenary band still had around twenty people left thanks to Han Shuo’s assistance earlier. They took advantage of the House of Menlo being stunned senseless to escape the encirclement of the three great powers and flee to the entrance of the valley.

Han Shuo knew the Canopy of Necromancy would certainly be dispelled wherever the Radiant Glory shone upon, and that the summoned dark creatures similarly wouldn't be spared. However, a bit of acid from the Acid Bog had been already released earlier, so the men chasing Laureton's group were more or less affected by this acid.

The House of Menlo was the one most affected. Their magical creature mounts panicked when they stepped into the acid, their feet and legs quickly consumed by the acid. This looked similar to the effects that Radiant Glory had when hitting dark creatures.

"Be careful! I'm going to kill him this damnable evil of a necromancer!" The House of Menlo had spent years of effort to finally gather this group of high rank magical creatures. Now that six of their rank two or three creatures had died in the blink of an eye, Adam Menlo was furious. He roared loudly in anger as he glared at Han Shuo.

"Keke. Wanna kill me? Come on!" Han Shuo couldn't suppress his thirst for blood and had been worrying about where he could vent. As soon as he heard the furious Adam Menlo's furious shout, his blood red pupils immediately snapped to him.

Using the Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens to float in the air, Han Shuo's entire body was filled with ferocious killing intent that was horrifying. Even Florida, who had a bone deep hatred towards him, didn't dare to issue an order to attack. On one hand, it was because Han Shuo's momentum was too terrifying, and on the other, it was because it was difficult to handle him when he was so high up in the air.

"Kill Laureton first! The Cairo mercenary is finished as soon as he's dead. Leave this guy alone for now." Florida couldn't help but shout anxiously when he saw Asa and Andy floating up and raising their magic staffs to deal with Han Shuo.

Laureton was leading a group of survivors and rushing towards the entrance of the valley. Florida had gone through a great deal of effort and was even willing to let go of the mithril mine this time to kill Laureton. He wanted to take control of the Valley of Sunshine for the Rainbow Sickles, so he naturally couldn't let the former leave alive.

Upon hearing Florida's shout, more than thirty Rainbow Sickle experts pursued Laureton together. Andy, who'd floated up and was about to deal with Han Shuo with Asa, turned and flew towards Florida after looking at Han Shuo standing arrogantly in the air.

However Asa, whose arm had been sliced off by Han Shuo by the Demonslayer Edge, didn't listen to Florida's order. He glared viciously at Han Shuo and rushed at him along with the Adam Menlo.

Ferguson released the Radiant Glory behind Asa, then softly heaved a few breaths and floated over like a fluttering willow leaf in the air.

"Shoot him!" Adam Menlo commanded from the back of the roc, his hand holding the dazzling golden spear as he lunged at Han Shuo.

The House of Menlo only had less than thirty experts left after being swept through by the berserkers and Han Shuo's necromancy magic. Under Adam Menlo's command, they each aimed their crossbow bolts and spinning axes at Han Shuo, who was standing grandly in the sky.

Three yin demons were observing the entire battlefield. Therefore, Han Shuo could clearly see any abnormal actions that occurred. When the attacks from the Menlo's troops hurtled through the air towards him, he only curved his lips into a disdainful sneer without taking any other action.

The attacks from below were just about to connect with Han Shuo when his proudly aloof body suddenly wavered, then split into four clones. These four clones looked exactly the same as the original. They flew in four different directions towards Ferguson, Adam Menlo, Asa, and the members of the House of Menlo respectively.

The bolts and spinning axes from the Menlo people below suddenly connected with empty air. They didn't even touch a corner of Han Shuo's clothes.

"This, what is this?!"

"How did he become four people? Damn it! Am I seeing things?"

Shocked exclamations poured out from the mouths of those of the House of Menlo nonstop.

Seeing one of the Han Shuos speedily closing in on them, Ferguson's side had no idea what was going on. Ferguson and Asa dodged instinctively. Only Adam Menlo on the back of the roc still met Han Shuo's attack head on with his golden spear, despite his surprise.

Successive sounds ripped through the air at this time as seven bone spurs shimmering with cold light came at Adam Menlo from all directions. The little skeleton stood proudly on a huge rock, a light dancing within his purple eye as his gaze locked onto Adam Menlo, who rode the golden-winged roc.

The seven bone spurs flew in a bizarre orbit as they attacked the golden-winged roc. The bone spurs sparkled with a brilliant jade-like light like seven eerily sharp snow blades.

The bone spurs churned into the roc's wings, causing metallic dings and sharp, low whines to emit from the roc. Blood splattered from its wounds and dyed the golden feathers. It was obviously injured.

Adam Menlo had originally rushed at Han Shuo with a ferocious momentum, he was now waving the golden spear around to block the seven bone spurs. He kept cursing nonstop, evidently angered to death.

"You old thing, you want to kill me? Keke!" The three clones suddenly vanished, revealing the original Han Shuo now standing ten meters above Adam Menlo. His pupils were deep red as he cawed madly, the killing aura around his body condensing onto his arm. As Han Shuo's hand smashed downwards, the focused killing aura rushed violently down like layers of blood.

"Damn it!" Adam Menlo cursed loudly. The spear had been defending him against the seven bone spurs was forced to change directions and head upwards instead. He pushed the fighting aura of a sky rider to its limit, forming a silver curtain of light to block the invasion of the bloody waves.

However, this force had been distilled from Han Shuo's murderous aura, a terrifying power embodied within him. A thick killing intent that could cover the heavens and earth dropped down like a cage, its force comparable to a mountain. The curtain of light formed by the fighting aura could only resist for a span of two breaths of time before it was obliterated by the bloody waves.

Rumble! A loud explosion resounded. The bloody waves were like a river from the galaxy, surging over both Adam Menlo and the golden-winged roc. They drove the super rank magical creature straight down into the ground, creating an earthquake that shook the mountain wall.

Seeing that Han Shuo had shot down both their head of house and the golden-winged roc, the experts of the family suddenly panicked. They gave up chasing Laureton and swarmed to where their leader had fallen. As soon as they arrived, they saw both Adam Menlo and the golden-winged rock struggling to their feet. The men immediately surrounded the two.

When Han Shuo saw that the House of Menlo had already surrounded their head of house and the golden-winged roc, Han Shuo stood still in the sky and didn't continue to attack. The golden-winged roc was obscuring his vision, so he couldn't see if Adam Menlo was dead or alive. His terrifying presence and blood red eyes returned to normal after a while.

Han Shuo's current strength could easily deal with a sky rider or a great swordmaster, with the little skeleton, victory was even more assured. However, the reason why he'd been able to thoroughly trounce Adam Menlo and the super rank roc just now was mostly likely due to the abundant killing aura that had filled the valley.

His one attack earlier had released all the killing aura he'd absorbed from the valley. Han Shuo had regained his calm. He once again summoned the three yin demons to surveil every moment within the valley.

Chapter 264: Stomping on a grand magus

“Who on earth is this person?”

“Too formidable! Even head Adam Menlo and his super rank magical creature were taken down. Too horrifying!”

“Just what kind of skill did he use? Why couldn’t I identify it at all? He definitely has the power of a sacred swordmaster, otherwise he wouldn’t be that powerful!”

The small powers in the Valley of Sunshine were all hiding in the valley’s periphery. They were trembling and cowering as they watched the chaotic battle unfold, and whispered exclamations.

“Aowuuuu...”

In the end, chief Laureton of the Cairo mercenary band remained behind by himself after escaping the encirclement. He emitted wailing battle cries as the battle axe in his hand emitted layers of silver light under the moonlight.

The muscles on Laureton’s bare upper body were now sparkling with silver light. His eyebrows and thick chest hair had changed from black to silver. Cracking sounds ringing out from his two meter tall body, his frame seemed to be stretched by some force as he grew another half meter taller.

He now clenched the battle axe with both hands instead of one. There was an enormous presence exuding from the weapon that now madly sparkled with silver light. Laureton was roaring as he ferociously chopped the battle axe down towards the Rainbow Sickle mercenaries who were pursuing him.

Piercing silver light shot straight forward and crackled as it swept the ground. The several Rainbow Sickle mercenaries simply had no way to defend against the invasion as their bodies were it sliced neatly through. The speed of the silver light was extremely fast, cutting through several mercenaries without impediment. It then continued to close in on the horrified Florida with incredible momentum. He fled frantically into the air, his forehead now covered in cold sweat.

“A thrice berserk berserker? Oh my gawd! Laureton is crazy!”

“That must be the divine weapon of the berserker tribe, the Berserker Battle Axe. No wonder his power has become one notch stronger. What a terrifying fellow!”

“No shit. How could he hold sway in the Valley of Sunshine if he’s not strong enough!?”

The people watching the fight in the dark couldn’t help but exclaim as they saw Laureton go berserk once again and reach a legendary status that almost no one could attain.

“Shoot him!”

Arrows, axes, and spears shot straight at Laureton in accordance with Florida’s shout.

In addition, lightning bolts, as thick as an arm, cleaved violently down at him from the sky, dancing like fire snakes. A dense mass of whizzing arrows and erupting earth spikes blasted towards Laureton.

An intense series of attacks descended. A large patch was charred, the earth cracked, and every plant was disintegrated to ashes. Arrows and spears were scattered all over the ground, dust filled the air that the wind was slowly dispersing. Laureton remained in the center of it all with his battle axe in hand, proud and tall.

Laureton seemed to fear no pain after becoming thrice berserk. Even though the skin of his singed body was cracked in many places, they were all minor skin injuries. For Laureton to stand firmly after facing such an enormous number of physical and magical attacks from experts, his power was truly, extremely terrifying.

“Aowuuuu...” Laureton howled at the moon. He unexpectedly still had some spare energy left as he charged at the Katar orcs and Rainbow Sickle mercenaries.

“What a powerful man. A thrice berserk berserker is truly, exceptionally powerful. His body was unexpectedly immune to a majority of both physical and magical attacks!” Han Shuo stood in the air, stunned. He involuntarily praised Laureton as he watched his actions.

Laureton once again threw out the battle axe that was flaring with radiance in all directions. The weapon emitted dazzling silver light as it flew in an arc. Several archers in hiding immediately had their flesh and blood rended, the gore spewing around messily.

The battle axe returned to Laureton’s hand after flying a full circle. In fact, it seemed to have a bit of the essence of the Law of Activating Magic. However the battle axe returned to Laureton only after a short flight. It wasn’t able to float in the air and follow his wishes like the Demonslayer Edge.

Han Shuo let out a sinister laugh. Taking advantage of the fact that everyone was still focused on Laureton, he suddenly released the Demonslayer Edge. A purple light blade shot out and made its way towards the thunder archmage Asa with a howling sound.

Asa resented Han Shuo the most. It was only because Han Shuo had exploded into four clones earlier that he was unable to easily kill Han Shuo. Asa’s head snapped to Laureton’s howl for only a second when he saw Han Shuo’s attack unexpectedly close. He was immediately frightened out of his wits.

“Last time I only managed to sliced off your right arm, but this time, I’ll cut off your head!” Han Shuo leered ferociously and rushed towards Asa.

At the moment, both the Rainbow Sickles and the Katar orcs were giving their all to deal with the thrice berserk Laureton. The experts from the House of Menlo were carefully protecting Adam Menlo. Only the light grand magus Ferguson was near Asa.

As Asa dodged in fright, Ferguson suddenly turned around and chanted the spell “Radiant Protection”. A translucent layer of light appeared and firmly wrapped around Asa.

Asa heaved a sigh of relief upon seeing his body wrapped in the “Radiant Protection”. As he was about to cast a lightning protection spell, he suddenly cried out in alarm, “Mister Ferguson, be careful!”

As it turned out, the Demonslayer Edge, that was originally aiming for Asa, suddenly changed its direction as it drew closer, whizzing towards Ferguson who’d just cast “Radiant Protection”. At the same time, Han Shuo also turned around and followed closely. He didn’t even spare a glance at Asa as his eyes stared coldly at Ferguson.

Ferguson suddenly realized that Han Shuo’s attack at Asa had only been a feint. Han Shuo’s real goal had been Ferguson from the start.

When he understood this, a strong dread shrouded his heart. He hastily chanted the incantation for “Radiant Protection” to thoroughly cover his body.

Clang! Clank! Sweet metallic sounds of the Demonslayer Edge colliding with Ferguson rang out. Crack after crack appeared in the layers of “Radiant Protection”. From within, Ferguson quickly focused his mental strength to mobilize the light element and desperately repair the cracks.

“Heh heh, old fart, I had warned already you the last time you pursued me. Yet you still stubbornly took action and almost killed me in the river. You didn’t think this day would come, did you?! You just cast Radiant Glory, so your mental strength is already exhausted. Now after two Radiant Protection spells, let’s see how long you can hold on for!”

Han Shuo closed in like a ghost. He didn’t withdraw the Demonslayer Edge into his body. Instead, his magical yuan furiously circulated and coalesced itself into two attacks. Han Shuo gave an odd chuckle as he unceremoniously mobilized his fists to violently assault the surface of the “Radiant Protection”.

The sound of the violent bombardment was like a loud drum. Cracks in the “Radiant Protection” spread rapidly beneath the relentless brutal attacks. Ferguson almost had an impulse to vomit blood inside the protection. He’d never felt so lacking in light elemental energy as he did now. He was giving it his utmost efforts to exhaust his mental strength.

Extreme dread branded Ferguson’s heart with Han Shuo’s continued pummeling. Only now did he realize how unfathomable Han Shuo’s heart was. He finally understood why the latter released the Canopy of Necromancy and so many dark creatures in his presence.

He had been Han Shuo's original target from the start! Everything had been to take revenge for the last time Ferguson and Maxine had chased him down at the small river! This time, Han Shuo expended quite a bit of effort on this plan. He'd first forced Ferguson to cast "Radiant Glory" in order to expend a large amount of his mental strength. He then pretended to attack Asa and made Ferguson exhaust his mental strength in casting "Radiant Protection", before finally closing in for close quarter combat.

Han Shuo had also expended a great deal of mental strength to cast the Canopy of Necromancy and summon the large amount of dark creatures. However, he was also a powerful melee attacker with a strange weapon, in addition to being a mage. Although both sides wasted a similar amount of mental strength, Han Shuo could still launch an offensive with his weapon.

If all of this had been within Han Shuo's calculations, then his unfathomable heart and his deep, sophisticated scheming were all beyond imagination. Now that Ferguson understood, he'd never feared anyone as much as he did now.

"Chase me now why don't you?! You motherfucking S.O.B.! Who do you think you are to decide my life and death? You old fart, you only know to protect your own. I'll make it so that you can't chase me in the future!" Han Shuo cursed loudly as he assaulted the "Radiant Protection".

Being smashed in both spirit and body, Ferguson finally couldn't help vomiting blood. An immense arrow of blood sprayed out onto the "Radiant Protection, dyeing its pure white color crimson. The cracks became increasingly wider.

"Florida, what the hell are you still chasing for? Your grandfather is going to get beaten to death!" Asa was casting lightning magic nonstop to attack Han Shuo. However, the latter was constantly changing his position to evade while each of his blows still ruthlessly smashed into the "Radiant Protection". Asa finally couldn't help but yell out upon seeing Ferguson vomit blood.

The thrice berserk state couldn't last for too long. Laureton had already turned to escape. Florida was chasing him in high spirits when he heard Asa curse loudly. He suddenly panicked and involuntarily looked back.

“Old fart, buh bye!” As Florida looked on in deep shock, Han Shuo grinned as he dealt a blow aimed at a crack in the “Radiant Protection”. This spell had long since been overwhelmed by the brutal attacks and finally shattered, collapsing in a burst of purple light.

The body covered in blood of Ferguson suddenly emerged, then fell listlessly on the ground. He was deader than dead!

“Keke...”

Han Shuo flew higher and higher with his round of creepy cackling. He left arrogantly under the gaze shot out from Florida's eyes that ached to rip him in half.

Chapter 265: Raw ores

Han Shuo immediately ducked behind a lush bush upon leaving the valley. He used his mental strength to contact the earth elite zombie and the little skeleton.

Whoosh! A thin white light gleamed under the moonlight, whizzing from within the valley to settle beside Han Shuo. This was obviously the little skeleton holding his bone knife.

The seven bone spurs had returned to the little skeleton's back. He held the bone knife very leisurely, like a child touring a flower garden, not caring at all about the chaotic happenings in the valley. What a veteran!

After establishing contact with his mind, Han Shuo could sense the earth elite zombie swimming towards him from the depths of the valley. Ten seconds later, the ground beneath his feet loosened and the honest earth elite zombie clambered out.

"Where are they?" Han Shuo hastily asked upon seeing the earth elite zombie return.

The earth elite zombie was taken aback. He scratched his head dumbly in a moment of thought, then sank again down to the ground, going back to the valley using the same way. However, his speed was a little slower this time. Han Shuo focused his eyes and discovered that the earth elite zombie had drilled a tunnel that one person could fit in.

It seemed that the earth elite zombie had thrown everything to the wind and returned to Han Shuo when his master had called him just now, so he'd completely forgotten Trunks and the others. Only after Han Shuo's inquiry did the earth elite zombie remember that he'd been in charge, so he used his natural talent to dig a tunnel again.

The earth elite zombie could swim freely within the earth, but Trunks and the others didn't have this miraculous talent. Thus the tunnel was essential. The earth elite zombie was using his talents to create a passage in the valley, and thus his current speed couldn't compare to his usual flying through the earth.

The three yin demons were quite a distance away. One was following the Cairo mercenary band's chief Laureton. Laureton had returned to his twice berserk state now and was escaping towards the Valley of Sunshine along with the rest of the remaining Cairo experts.

The Cairo mercenary band had taken severe damage after the intense battle in the valley. A dozen experts had been killed, incensing Laureton. However, he understood that it was simply impossible for the Cairo mercenary band to win against the three other forces outside the Valley of Sunshine. He intended to return with full effort to the Valley of Sunshine and take revenge at a later time.

Another yin demon remained in the valley. Since Han Shuo had beaten Ferguson to death, Florida had suffered a major blow. He was currently holding Ferguson's corpse and letting out earth-shattering wails. He'd simply forgotten about leading the pursuit of Laureton.

Ferguson had dearly spoiled his grandson, paving a great and easy path for his growth. It was due to Ferguson's identity, as well as support from the Church of Light, that allowed Florida to have the confidence in contesting Laureton for the position of leading power in the Valley of Sunshine. However, since the grandfather who'd nurtured him had been beaten to death by Han Shuo, it'd be hard to say if he could borrow the force of the Church of Light from now on.

To Florida, his grandfather's death was emotionally unbearable and also threw a great wrench into his practical benefits. Even the sinister leader of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band couldn't help but burst into tears under this double blow.

The House of Menlo's group wasn't very far from Florida. Adam Menlo's was covered in injuries. When taking that sky-shattering blow from Han Shuo, Adam Menlo had first circulated his fighting aura for a full body defense before wrapping himself firmly in the great roc. That was how he'd barely escaped the grasp of death.

Although he'd avoided heavy injury, his partner for decades, the golden-winged roc hadn't shared the same luck. It had almost been scraped bald by the little skeleton's bone knife, and more than half the feathers on its golden wings had been snapped. When it'd faced Han Shuo's heaven-shattering blow, the roc had protected Adam Menlo out of instinct, using its enormous body to withstand the attack. Its injuries were extremely serious.

In this moment, even though Adam Menlo's heart was dejected, he was also extremely furious. He shakily caressed the roc's bald, bloody wings and screamed with rage, "I want to kill him! I must kill him!!"

Several small powers lurking in the valley had witnessed all of the heaven-shaking changes that had taken place thus far. Han Shuo's crazy atrocities were engraved in their minds and made the name of Soul Destroyer famous. Since Han Shuo's performance tonight demonstrated his close relationship with the Soul Destroyer mercenary band, no one would dare to look down on the group's strength again.

Han Shuo used the three yin demons to observe their surroundings. After a while, the earth elite zombie leapt out from the ground again. He pulled on Han Shuo's sleeve and pointed his finger to the underground tunnel, as if waiting for praise.

Patting the earth elite zombie's shoulder, Han Shuo said with a smile, "Not bad, you did it right this time!"

"Did what right!?" Trunks followed up as he jumped out of the tunnel with a loud laugh.

Gilbert also climbed out with a large hemp sack. Grant and the others followed behind, each also carried a large sack, their faces shining with excitement.

"How were things?" Han Shuo asked with a smile, knowing from their expressions that they must have had some generous gains.

"It was hard to advance inside. There were rocks as sharp as knives. I'm afraid it'd have been simply impossible if it wasn't for your friend's help. There were several Rainbow Sickle mercenaries, we casually killed them all and took the raw ores that they harvested. We also mined some more and brought them here." Trunks seemed especially happy as he narrated with a carefree laugh.

“Looks like the Rainbow Sickle mercenaries used the advantage of geography to gain a head start. Florida had actually dared announce that after killing Laureton, they would give up the mithril mine. How shameless! Oh right, how big was the mine? How much did we harvest?” Han Shuo scorned at Florida’s pledge then continued questioning.

Shaking his head, Trunks said helplessly, “I’m not sure. We only came in contact with a limited area. What we brought back are a few raw ores with small amounts of mithril within. We need someone in the know to confirm what we’ve harvested today.”

If the metal elite zombie was refined, its natural talent could be used to scope out the size of the mine. With his ability to control metal and metal ores, the metal elite zombie could easily gather all of the resources in the entire silver mine within a short amount of time, leaving not even a piece of mithril behind.

Unfortunately, the place of extreme metal was the most difficult to find out of the five extreme areas. He was unable to refine the metal elite zombie before locating it. With the metal elite zombie, Han Shuo simply wouldn’t have to worry about lacking any ores. When the ability of the dwarves and the metal elite zombie’s natural talent to sense metal was combined, a steady supply of weapons would become a simple matter.

Sighing for a bit, Han Shuo suddenly noticed some movement from Janet’s bandit group. He immediately cursed, “Alright, let’s leave first. The valley is engulfed in chaos, so we shouldn’t stay here for the time being.”

“You guys put down the ores, I’ll put them into my space ring.” Han Shuo urged Gilbert and the rest.

Only Trunks wore a space ring amongst this bunch, even Grant and the mercenaries used bags tied around their waists. Space rings were famously expensive. These mercenaries naturally didn’t have enough gold coins to buy one.

However, Grant and the mercenaries didn’t act immediately upon Han Shuo’s instructions. They looked to Trunks, as if waiting for him to express his opinions.

“Listen to him. From now on, his commands are my commands. You guys should remember this well!” Trunks had a strict face as he carefully instructed.

“Understood!” Grant’s folks were relieved of a great burden after putting their sacks down. They hastily took the large sacks off their backs and placed them in front of Han Shuo.

The weight of these large sacks loaded with large and small broken rocks were such that an ordinary person wouldn’t be able to tolerate them. Even for these mercenaries, the way back to the Soul Destroyer mercenary base would be an unlucky, painful errand.

One white light flashed after another. All of the large and small sacks disappeared into Han Shuo’s space ring. After all was done, Han Shuo waved his hand saying, “Follow me, we’ll block Janet’s escape route. This time, we shall be the bandits and capture Janet.”

“Let’s do it like that then. I must get some clear answers!” Trunks immediately remembered Annie’s matter when Han Shuo mentioned Janet. His happy mood turned sorrowful as he shouted with a darkened face.

Two of the three yin demons had returned while the last was closely following Janet’s bandit group, paying close attention to their every move. The Soul Destroyers took a shortcut to block Janet’s way under Han Shuo’s directions, suddenly discovering some suspicious behavior from these people. Unexpectedly, Janet’s gang was laying an ambush where the House of Menlo would pass.

It seemed that Janet intended on taking advantage of the House of Menlo’s heavy losses, and make out like bandits!

Chapter 266: Captives

As Janet and her bandit gang snuck up on the House of Menlo with the intention of adding insult to injury, she didn't realize that she herself had become someone else's prey.

Adam Menlo was injured, and the roc had transformed into a blonde, middle aged man with blade wounds all over his skin. Both were under protection of the family's elites as they slowly retreated in the direction of their headquarters.

As they passed by a thick shrub surrounded by several towering trees, Janet's people immediately jumped out screaming and shouting. The old man next to Janet release several wind supporting "Acceleration" spells, enabling their people to quickly close the distance between them and the House of Menlo and begin their ambush.

Han Shuo had thought that Janet was lurking around here for the chance to pillage and loot. Contrary to his expectations however, Janet had passed down the order to kill as soon as she saw the Menlo family. Evidently, she hadn't wanted to rob them.

"Unlucky old fart Adam. Serves you right! You even dared to scheme against me. You're really tired of living aren't you!" Janet didn't make a move, only shouting loudly in high spirits. Her delicate cheeks were painted with glee.

"The House of Menlo is done for if we kill these people. See if they still dare to make trouble for us then!" The bandits screamed and shouted, furiously waving their weapons and attacking fiercely. They were hot on the heels of the heavily wounded Menlo experts, who were now escaping bedraggedly in all directions.

The major forces seemed to have come to a tacit understanding before tonight as they hadn't sent too many people on this trip to the valley. The House of Menlo had brought roughly two dozen experts total. After the berserk Laureton had killed some and more had fallen to Han Shuo's resurrected corpses, they only had a dozen members left.

Now that they faced Janet's bandit group, who was thrice their number, taking a loss was just a matter of time.

"Protect my father well. Our people are near! As long as we return to the headquarters, these damned bandits won't be able to leave alive!" A skinny, seemingly weak mage with brown hair waved his staff and shouted loudly.

Many sharp spikes suddenly shot up on the path that Janet and her bandits were using. Their momentum was quick and fierce thanks to the supporting "Acceleration" spell. They simply didn't pay attention to the changes beneath their feet. When they landed one by one, their bare feet were immediately penetrated by the spikes.

"Damn it! Shoot them dead!" Janet roared, ordering the several archers behind her.

Whoosh whoosh whoosh.

The sound of arrows piercing the air resonated as a series of shining silver arrows whizzed towards the House of Menlo, abruptly throwing them into confusion. Even the earth mage, who'd casted "Earth Spikes" earlier, was affected by the rain of arrows. He was forced to release an earth wall in defense.

Han Shuo clearly saw the happenings of the fight between Janet and the House of Menlo through the three yin demons. Currently, his group was hiding in the dark about dozens of meters away, paying rapt attention to the intense fight, awaiting Han Shuo's orders.

"Leave them to harm each other. I'll have the earth elite zombie sneak attack them in a moment and grab our person!" Han Shuo said leisurely, not the least bit anxious.

"Tonight is destined to be a sleepless night. The Valley of Sunshine will become even more chaotic starting tomorrow, and our Soul Destroyer mercenary band will take this chance to rise up!" Trunks' ambition flared as he spoke with excitement.

"You should be careful for the time being. After my brutal acts tonight, I think the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band and the House of Menlo may just cast aside everything to deal with us first. The current strength of our mercenary band isn't enough to compete with them yet. Our base absolutely must not be compromised." Looking at the blazing ambition on Trunks' face, Han Shuo couldn't help but speak out as a reminder.

"Heh heh, that's fine too. With your madness tonight, our Soul Destroyer mercenary band is definitely going to become renowned. As long as we have fame, we won't have to worry about gaining new recruits. As long as we have both money and manpower, we will grow rapidly. When we're strong enough, that's when the traitor Florida dies!" Trunks coldly said, his face solemn.

Nodding in agreement, Han Shuo said, "Indeed, the moment of the Soul Destroyer mercenary band has come!"

"Oh?" Han Shuo softly cried out and said, "I didn't think that the experts from the House of Menlo were really waiting outside to help their own. It seems that Janet's efforts are going down the drain!"

Patting the earth elite zombie, Han Shuo ordered it to quickly sneak into the ground. Then he turned to glance at Trunks and said, "I suddenly remember that since I have him, I won't need your help. You guys return to the base first. I'll bring Janet and catch up with you later."

"You really don't need backup? Since Janet can become the leader of such a large bandit group, her strength must be strong. Plus, her men are surrounding her. Are you certain you can succeed?" Trunks asked in surprise.

"Rest assured. This definitely won't be a problem!" Han Shuo smiled confidently and turned to Gilbert and the little skeleton, ordering them both to go back. He then headed towards Janet with the earth elite zombie and silently lay in wait to ambush them.

This evening was bound to be chaotic, so when the elites from the four great powers of the Valley of Sunshine had advanced into the mountain valley, the majority of their troops were waiting outside, ready to offer support.

The small powers in the valley before, deeply resentful of being intensely suppressed by the four great powers, hadn't dared to act rashly. Now that the four great powers had been seriously injured in the struggle, in addition to the deathly temptation of the mithril mine, no one would guess if they took some crazy action.

Even though Trunks and his group were familiar with the terrain of the Valley of Sunshine, Han Shuo was worried they'd meet with dangers along the way. He sent Gilbert and the little skeleton along with them. At least they could help each other along the way.

Han Shuo's brain spun furiously as he schemed on how exactly he would capture Janet. Relying on the detailed observations of Janet's every move from the three yin demons, he quickly brainstormed and considered the most appropriate method.

"Hurry and chase after them. Kill them! There won't be another chance if we miss this one!" Janet grasped the huge studded club, her delicate body dashing forward lightning fast as she chased the escaping members of the House of Menlo. Several bandits were originally by her side, but gradually got further from her as they hastily pursued the Menlo experts.

Han Shuo calmly determined Janet's route through the yin demons. He moved surreptitiously to hide behind a huge tree, slowly adjusting his breathing and heartbeat. A while later, his whole being seemed to melt into the tree. No one could detect him in the shadows.

The earth elite zombie speedily travelled through the ground and followed Janet closely as per Han Shuo's orders. He only needed but a command from his master to immediately coordinate with Han Shuo from underground.

The Menlo experts rode various different magical creatures and fled past the huge tree trunk where Han Shuo was hiding. Several bandits on Janet's side waved their weapons, yelling noisily as they gave chase. Everyone was passing right by Han Shuo.

The heavily panting Janet gradually approached at the trajectory that Han Shuo had previously predicted. She wielded the huge studded club while loudly shouting and cursing vulgarities nonstop. She didn't have the slightest bit of reservation and subtlety that a young girl should have.

Suddenly, the lurking Han Shuo jumped out like a ghost and instantly appeared in front of Janet like a dark shadow.

Janet had been swearing continuously when she suddenly saw a shadow slip out from the darkness. Startled, she raised the studded club and rushed forward. The club moved at a high speed, making a strange whistling sound. The momentum appeared quite astonishing.

Clang clang!

A metallic sound echoed as an enormous force transmitted through the studded club into Janet's body. The force was like a terrifying volcano outbreak, blasting Janet backwards.

"It's you!" Janet realized the newcomer was much stronger than her after a single blow. When Han Shuo's figure was revealed, her face immediately paled in shock as she cried out.

When she saw that her ambusher was Han Shuo, she knew her strength wasn't up to the task. She quickly retreated without a thought and yelled, "Men, capture him!"

As Janet was fiercely retreating, she was completely unaware of the earth elite zombie lying in wait. A pair of arms abruptly emerged from the ground and accurately seized her ankles, halting her escape.

Janet was scared out of her wits by this sudden turn of events. She shrilly screamed in fear, "Help! Something's latched on me!"

"Too late!" A light shout rang out. Han Shuo was already face to face with Janet. She felt her entire body stiffen up as if it wasn't her own anymore, and slowly lost strength in her limbs.

"Let her go, or you will bear the costs of our retaliation no matter the cost!" The crippled wind archmage Billy rapidly flew over as he glared furiously at Han Shuo, shouting loudly.

"I need to ask her about some matters. I will not take her life, so rest assured!” Han Shuo said, carrying the fainted Janet as he responded to the quickly incoming Billy.

“You promise not to hurt her?” On the other side, Billy was afraid that Han Shuo would make a vicious move. He held back the raging bandits around him from rushing forward as he stared urgently at Han Shuo.

“Of course, I’m not taking her life. Otherwise she’d already be dead!” Han Shuo nodded and replied, then he brought Janet and flew away, leaving some words, “At most three days. She will definitely return safely, rest assured!”

Having finished speaking, Han Shuo ordered the earth elite zombie to retreat. Together, the man and zombie left by sky and ground. They quickly drifted in the direction of Trunks and his group.

Chapter 267: Divine body

Han Shuo joined Trunks and the group on the way back. They didn't encounter any unexpected incidents, and went back to the Soul Destroyer mercenary band base in secret.

The group seemed somewhat worn out after experiencing a grueling night. However, Trunks had already waited for too many years, he obviously didn't want to waste even a second. Those around who'd been an original member of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band were now gazing at Han Shuo with shining eyes.

"You people, you people really captured Janet?" When the sleeping Annie was woken up, she yelled noisily. However she immediately paled and stuttered when she saw the unconscious Janet.

Patting Janet on the cheek, Han Shuo intended to pour magical yuan into her body to wake her up from the coma. But his brows suddenly raised when he was surprised.

Exclaiming "oh" in a light voice, Han Shuo placed his big hand on the back of Janet's head. Five strands of magical yuan as thin as silk swam inside her body, suddenly discovering that her body structure had some places different from an ordinary person. Her meridians were a bit more fragile, but she had a dozen more bones.

"Bastard! How dare you take advantage of Janet?!" Annie furiously cursed upon seeing Han Shuo press his big hand on Janet's back.

"How is it?" Trunks was waiting for Han Shuo to wake Janet up. However, Trunks couldn't help but inquire upon seeing Han Shuo's face turn puzzled while Janet had yet to come to.

"This Janet is very strange, her body structure has many differences from a normal person's!" Han Shuo was astonished. He was even more careful after that, letting the magical yuan run a few more rounds. He finally determined that Janet's body was indeed the same as human being, but the composition of bones and meridians was different from normal human's.

“There’s really such a strange thing as this?” Trunks was surprised. He stared fixedly at Janet a few times over then nodded, “It is indeed her. I’ve known her for several years now, this is definitely Janet. How can her body be different from normal human?”

“There’s no mistake about it. Her body is absolutely different from ours. I’m sure this Janet has some oddities!” Han Shuo said with certainty. He then suddenly recalled the last time he fought Janet. Her deep green fighting aura had already scattered, but still had the ability to make his arm tremble, this had sown some doubts in his heart.

After Han Shuo listed out the peculiarities about Janet, Trunks was stunned for a moment and then opened his mouth to say, “I actually know something about this. When Janet had yet to cultivate fighting aura, she actually already possessed a very powerful strength. I heard it showed when she was a child.”

“I see, I know what it is now. Janet must have a legendary divine body blessed by the gods. Her body structure has been different from ordinary people from birth!” Han Shuo exclaimed, suddenly remembering Fanny’s remark about his body before.

Han Shuo could have such a rapid progress was entirely due to the practice of demonic magic, but Fanny had mistakenly believed that he had a divine body. At that time Han Shuo thought the divine body talk was just gibberish. Now that he’d sussed out Janet’s body structure, he understood there were truly some magical things on this continent.

“Oh my god! This female bandit actually has a divine body. According to the legend, those with a divine body will become an extremely powerful figure. I didn’t think we could actually encounter one here.” Trunks too was quite shocked as he looked at the unconscious Janet.

“Scared already? Quickly let us go or Janet definitely won’t let you go easily!” Annie clenched her tiny hand, shaking her fist at Trunks in threat.

Shaking his head slightly, Han Shuo mocked with a smile, “So what of a divine body? She was still captured by me!”

“Wake up!” Han Shuo lifted the restriction on Janet’s body and patted her face, smiling cutely as he spoke.

Janet didn't say a thing as soon as she woke up and instead turned to Han Shuo and cursed nonstop. Han Shuo felt really weird for such a pretty girl to spit out vulgar curses one after another.

"I'll leave her to you. She can move her mouth now!" Han Shuo stood up with a wry smile, patted Trunks' shoulder, and walked out.

When Han Shuo left the mountain cave, Odysseus and the other fellows were quite self aware and followed him out. Only Trunks and some old comrades remained inside to interrogate Janet about Annie's past.

"Bryan, it's been quite a while since we met, let's have a drink tonight!" Odysseus walked out and immediately smiled at Han Shuo as he offered. This place was still covered in thick mist in the evening, but for some reason the mist up in the sky had gradually dispersed, allowing the bright and clear moonlight to directly sprinkle down.

Almost all of the other mercenaries were sleeping as it was late into the night. The Odysseus gang were quite tired after a busy evening, so they all just sat down at the practice area.

"Good!" Han Shuo had nothing to do and picked a random seat, sitting down cross legged with Gilbert, Odysseus, and the others. He took out the wine crafted by the dwarves and handed it to Gordon's group.

Even the water adept mage Aphrodite and the female elven archer Nia didn't refuse Han Shuo's goodwill. After a few sips of good wine, they all looked up at the moon and shared the desires and aspirations in their hearts.

"I want to become a great swordmaster. Sooner or later, I'll have everybody know of the name Gordon!" Gordon, who'd advanced to senior swordsman, said proudly after a few mouthfuls of wine.

"I too need to practice my magic and become an archmage. As long as I advance to archmage, I can be bestowed a title in any country and become a superior noble!" The water adept mage Aphrodite softly expressed her desire, a smile hanging on her lips.

“Ah right, Bryan what do you desire?” Odysseus turned to glance at Han Shuo.

“More powerful strength, money, privilege, and beautiful women!” Han Shuo lazed around as he lay on the sparring stage, his hands resting behind the back of his head. He looked at the sky and responded clearly.

“Eh, Bryan, you’re really straightforward!” said Odysseus.

“Haha, don’t people live to strive for these things? Although different people have different desires, frankly speaking, don’t they all revolve around these things?” Han Shuo said with a smile as he glanced humorously at Odysseus.

“Hehe, that’s quite true!” Odysseus pondered for a moment and nodded.

After Han Shuo and the group had drunk wine and chatted freely for quite a long time, Trunks walked out alone from the mountain cave. He plopped down next to Han Shuo, picked up the wineskin on the ground near Odysseus, and threw back his head for a long gulp.

Trunks poured more than half of the good wine left into his mouth with a gurgling sound, then abruptly threw the empty wineskin to the sky. His eyes were deep red as he said in a low, choked tone, “I must kill Florida and the Butcher Gustav, and also Bradley Pillon from the Kasi Empire!!”

Bradley Pillon was the younger brother by blood to the king of the Kasi Empire, Brady Pillon, and a grand duke of the Kasi Empire. His territory encompassed only Cesar City, a location separated from Valen City by the Kerlan mountain range. He was a grand aristocrat below one person but above ten thousand in the Kasi Empire, holding enormous power in his hands.

When Gryphon Legion chief Bob Ascher had betrayed the Lancelot Empire, he’d sought refuge under someone else. That someone else had been the lord of Cesar city. It was easy to imagine how much power the younger brother of the Kasi king possessed. It was simply impossible to deal with such a an immense figure with Trunks’ current power.

Patting Trunks’ shoulders, Han Shuo consoled, “Rest assured, I’ll help you, nothing is impossible!”

Trunks violently smashed his fist down. The blow didn't contain any fighting aura. It hit a hard rock and caused the back of his hand to crack, bleeding. Trunks roared like a caged beast, “Damnable bastards! I'll definitely make them pay the price!”

Janet suddenly walked out with a cold face, looking at Trunks with veins throbbing in his forehead as she said, “For Annie, I too shall kill them!”

“Grant, cover her eyes, take her out of here.” Trunks turned to sweep a glance at Janet and abruptly shouted.

The bulky Grant held Annie as he walked out of the mountain cave, his eyes red and swollen. Looking pitifully at the sleeping Annie, he sobbed, “Chief, what do we do about Annie?”

“Annie is a close person of mine. Believe me, I will protect her from any harm. If she stays with you guys, sooner or later she'll remember about the past, then I'm afraid she'll...”

“No need to say anymore, take her away, help me take good care of her!” Trunks abruptly cut off Janet's remaining words and said in a resolute manner.

Janet nodded without another word and willingly let Grant blindfold her. She slowly climbed up under Grant's guidance and escort.

“Good. I assure you this vengeance shall be taken!” Han Shuo once again patted Trunks' shoulders and cautiously said with a grave expression.

Even though Trunks and Janet hadn't clearly said anything, Han Shuo could generally guess from their attitudes about what happened to Annie's body.

Trunks treated Annie like his own sister, this hatred obviously had to be returned!

Chapter 268: A pleasant surprise

Trunks drank all night, holding his face and crying loudly nonstop with bloodshot eyes. Han Shuo wanted to console him, but nothing he did worked. Trunks seemed to forget everything else as he wallowed in his inextricable agony.

That night, Han Shuo took out three of the remaining five Rebirth Pills and handed them to Odysseus, Gordon, and Aphrodite to reform their bodies. The other two pills were for Trunks and Emily.

At noon the next day, Han Shuo left the Soul Destroyer mercenary band and traveled to the Valley of Sunshine by himself.

The merchants inside the Valley of Sunshine weren't affected after last night's battle outside. They woke up early, busy as usual and simply not knowing about the happenings of last night.

When Han Shuo reached the fence, the soldiers from the Cairo mercenary band immediately recognized him and respectfully welcomed him. Looking around carefully, Han Shuo discovered that there wasn't much change to the merchants in the Valley of Sunshine. However the number of Cairo mercenary band soldiers was much higher than usual. They frequency at which they appeared on the street was very high.

Everyone from the Cairo mercenary band nodded respectfully towards Han Shuo along the way upon seeing him. Evidently, they all knew of the aid he had given them last night.

Han Shuo bought a great deal of precious herbs from the old orc's family shop last time in the Valley of Sunshine. This time, he made straight for the orc's shop.

The shop owner immediately recognized Han Shuo upon his appearance. He'd been lying down sluggishly inside when he stood up abruptly and enthusiastically welcomed Han Shuo, chattering away, "Long time no see, haha! Do you see anything good this time?"

Sweeping a few glances around, a hint of delighted surprise flashed across Han Shuo's eyes. He hastily picked a dozen herbs and placed them in front of the orc, laughing heartily, "I want all of these. You can calculate the price."

In addition to the Dragonfly Fruit, Extreme Frost Grass, and Goldmarrow Grass that Han Shuo had seen last time, he also discovered the Ninejade Flower during this visit. This was truly a delight beyond imagination. Han Shuo had affirmed his belief that this shop could always give him a pleasant surprise.

The Ninejade Flower had nine petals that were as shiny and translucent as jade, emitting a fragrance that permeated the heart and soul. The Ninejade Flower could be used with several magic herbs to refine the Yuan Repair Pill, in which the Ninejade Flower was the main ingredient. This herb was normally very difficult to find.

"You decide the price!" Having experienced Han Shuo's generosity last time, the old orc seemed to have realized something and casually said with a smile.

Han Shuo's joy could easily be imagined after collecting so many precious herbs. He immediately took out two heavy bags of gold coins from the space ring and plopped them in front of the old orc. He asked smilingly, "A thousand gold coins. Would that suffice?"

"Haha, such a generous young man, many thanks!" The old orc quickly grabbed the two bags of gold coins and laughed loudly in a great mood. His mouth was open so widely that it seemed like he wanted to eat a person.

"You again!" An exclamation suddenly rang out from the door. Cecilia, one of the three Dark Mantle heavyweights, approached leisurely. She called out immediately when her vivid eyes caught sight of Han Shuo. She wore a blackish purple dress today, with soft long hair casually let loose down to the shoulders. Two small, middle-aged men followed behind, their eyes gazing around full of vigilance.

Seeing Cecilia as soon as he turned around, Han Shuo was a little surprised. He nodded indifferently at her, his hands starting to collect the herbs on the table as he intended to leave the shop.

“Hey pretty lady, you’ve come again! What would you like to buy this time?” Cecilia seemed to be a regular here. The old orc also welcomed her with warm hospitality and a big smile.

“He already bought whatever I wanted. Damn it, he was one step ahead again!” Cecilia frowned at Han Shuo and lightly shouted somewhat in anguish.

“This...” The old orc didn’t know what to say. He wrung his hands, expressing that he was out of ideas.

Han Shuo was about to leave the shop when he suddenly remembered something. He stopped at the door, turned to look at Cecilia, and said, “If you tell me where Emily is, I’ll give you an herb from my purchase just now.”

The disappointed Cecilia immediately rejoiced at his words. She looked at Han Shuo and asked, “Is that so? You’ll let me choose from the herbs you just bought?!”

Nodding his head, Han Shuo took out the herbs that he’d just bought with a thousand gold coins. He laid them out and pointed at them saying, “I’ll let you choose one!”

“I want this one!” Cecilia pointed at the Ninejade Flower and said softly.

The corner of his mouth spasmed slightly. Han Shuo considered for a moment, then suddenly said coldly, “This one won’t do, transaction canceled!”

The Dark Mantle higher-ups should know of Emily’s whereabouts. If Han Shuo couldn’t get the answer from Cecilia, he could still ask Candide for help. Moreover, he needed this information just because he wanted to give Emily the Rebirth Pill and help her remake her body. This wasn’t a critical matter, so Han Shuo wasn’t in a rush at the moment.

The Ninejade Flower, however, could only be met by chance and not found, so it was a very important to Han Shuo. He could refine a cauldron of Yuan Repair Pills using this flower as the main ingredient. Han Shuo immediately went back on his word when forced to choose between the two options.

Cecilia had been reaching out for the Ninejade Flower when halted upon Han Shuo saying “transaction canceled”. She was dumbfounded for a while, then frowned as she looked at him, “You renege on your word!”

“I didn’t promise you anything. It doesn’t count as going back on my word. I can let you take two others except for this flower if you’re still willing to tell me!” Han Shuo first placed the Ninejade Flower into the space ring and then shrugged his shoulders, speaking to Cecilia as if nothing happened.

Sparks flew out from Cecilia’s eyes as she looked at Han Shuo. She remained frozen for quite a while before nodding bitterly, saying, “Stingy brat!”

She took two blades of Extreme Frost Grass, then glared at Han Shuo and answered, “After Emily completed her mission with me, she should have return to the Empire’s Ossen City. To think that the person that Emily greatly respects is actually this petty. I really don’t understand why she values you so much!”

“This has nothing to do with you!” Han Shuo chuckled. He felt quite secure after knowing about Emily’s location and that he was going to return to Ossen City soon. Emily would take the initiative to find him once she knew. He could then use the Rebirth Pill to help her.

“You there! Don’t move, or don’t blame us for being rude!” Suddenly, ten mercenaries from the Cairo band surrounded the old orc’s shop, pointing their crossbows at the three in Cecilia’s group.

“What is this? Is this how the Cairo mercenary band treats us merchants?” Cecilia asked, her expression angry as she coldly looked at the leader.

“We always treat merchants nicely, but you people didn’t enter normally. Otherwise we would have your records. Come with us!” At this point, a mercenary stared unceremoniously at Cecilia and said coldly.

It seemed Cecilia's group of three hadn't come in through the fence, but had used another way instead. The Cairo mercenary band might not have found out if this had been normal times. However, after the fiasco last night, the Cairo mercenaries were on high alert. They were all extremely cautious, so no wonder they had discovered the abnormal happenings.

"Mister Bryan, please be careful with these people!" The leading mercenary's attitude towards Han Shuo compared to his attitude towards Cecilia, was as different as the heavens and earth. His tone was sincere, his manner respectful, and even a touch ingratiating.

"Mister Bryan, when our chief knew you'd arrived at the Valley of Sunshine, he immediately wanted to meet you. If you wait for just a moment, the chief himself will come to see you regarding last night's agreement after he handles the matters within the valley. We will fulfill the promised amount of gold, so please wait just a bit!" Another mercenary bowed respectfully to Han Shuo and said in a humble tone.

What is this? Cecilia looked at Han Shuo suspiciously. She secretly thought, Han Shuo is only a Dark Mantle envoy, while the other person is the violent lunatic Laureton. Why is he treating Han Shuo so kindly? This is truly confusing! Laureton is notoriously arrogant and hard to please, but is so unexpectedly respectful towards this fellow? Weird, really too weird!

"Hey, we're together, you must've been mistaken!" Cecilia suddenly came up with an idea. She abruptly walked up to Han Shuo with a charming smile, patting his shoulder as if their relationship was very intimate!

Han Shuo was dumbfounded. He glanced at her with a cold face and was about to open his mouth to say something when he heard Cecilia whisper, "We are carrying out a mission. As a fellow member of the Dark Mantle, if you have the guts to not help me, I'll definitely report to that old fellow Candide when I return!"

"Hehe, we are together indeed!" Cecilia and Han Shuo stood side by side as he suddenly relaxed.

"Mhm, they are my friends, so I guarantee that they won't do anything detrimental to your mercenary band's interest. I'll wait for your people to meet me at the shop. If your chief comes, I'll let him know about this!" Han Shuo smiled and nodded at the mercenaries, then put his arm around Cecilia's waist with naughty intentions. His actions screamed of an ambiguous relationship due to this act.

Cecilia's small waist was plump and firm. The thin dress couldn't hide its amazing elasticity. Han Shuo couldn't help but secretly praise as he held it. This young woman didn't only have a beautiful face, even her body was truly tempting.

"So it's like that!" The mercenaries suddenly realized and spoke apologetically to Cecilia, "Our apologies, we didn't know of your relationship with Mister Bryan, we've been rude!"

"Let's go, there is no problem in this area. Let's go inspect the other areas. Do not let any suspicious characters slip through our fingers!" After bowing respectfully to Han Shuo, the leader loudly shouted a command and led the group of mercenaries to leave in a blink of an eye.

Chapter 269: The arrogant Dark Moon envoy

Cecilia turned, her eyes huge as she glared furiously at Han Shuo, yelling with her voice as cold as ice, "Let go already!"

With an awkward, dry laugh, Han Shuo withdrew his hand and pretended as if nothing happened. He spoke casually, "I only meant well. Heh heh, the Valley of Sunshine has been chaotic recently, so you'd best be a little careful!"

"Don't you worry, you despicable brat!" Cecilia bluntly replied in rage. She secretly wondered why Laureton would value such a despicable character. How very odd!

Paying no heed to Cecilia, Han Shuo strode away towards the shop with the extreme place of water. He arrived in about ten minutes.

Except for the dust covered rooms, the shop wasn't much different since the last time he'd left. The formation outside hadn't changed either. The elements of the place of extreme water was still as rich as before. It seemed like no one had lived here after they'd left. The materials for refining the water elite zombie were still a bit lacking. That was being taken care of by Phoebe, so Han Shuo knew not to be anxious for now. He made a few circles around the yard before randomly sitting down in a chair in the middle of the courtyard, waiting for Laureton to arrive.

In the afternoon, Han Shuo was studying a book on magic when he suddenly put it away and stood up. He squinted, looking towards the front door. The brawny, rough, bald Laureton entered by himself a bit later with heavy footsteps. His face didn't look very good. He was a bit pale, both eyes bloodshot and swollen. He must've had a sleepless night.

"Many thanks for your assistance last night!" Laureton drew upon his energy reserves after seeing Han Shuo and spoke with a forced smile.

Last night, the Cairo mercenary band had suffered heavy losses, even severely injuring vice chief Harris. To prevent the other three great powers from taking advantage of these chaotic times, Laureton had been hard at work all night making arrangements. He'd mobilized all of the Cairo mercenary band experts in the Valley of Sunshine. This could only be described as cautious to the extreme.

"Hehe, we could be considered friends. The Church of Light and Florida also had a grudge with me, so of course I wouldn't mind lending you a helping hand!" Han Shuo lazed around in his chair and smiled leisurely. He didn't mention that last time he'd left without saying farewell.

Laureton didn't ask either. He took out a deed and a crystal card from within his space ring, placing them on the stone table before Han Shuo, saying with a proper expression, "This is the deed for this shop, along with a ten thousand gold coin crystal card with no owner. In addition, I will personally allow the Soul Destroyer mercenary band to openly recruit in the parts of the Valley of Sunshine that are overseen by the Cairo mercenary band."

These were the three conditions agreed to by Laureton that Han Shuo had proposed last night in exchange for his help. During the brutal battle last night, Laureton's group would've been hard pressed to escape the mountain valley if it weren't for Han Shuo's sudden interference. Laureton was a straightforward person, so he handed over the promised items as soon as he'd arrived.

Han Shuo nodded with a smile. He placed the deed and crystal card into his space ring, then looked at Laureton and said, "Last night, I killed Ferguson and heavily injured Adam Menlo. My grudge with them cannot be resolved now. Since we now have a common enemy, we'll have many chances to cooperate in the future."

"Of course. I admit that I underestimated you. Someone who could kill Ferguson and heavily injure Adam Menlo is a person worthy of my true cooperation. In the current power struggle in the Valley of Sunshine, as long as the Soul Destroyer mercenary band cooperates with me, I guarantee it will develop greatly." Laureton's eyes twinkled as he looked at Han Shuo, seemingly aware of the latter's relationship with the Soul Destroyer mercenary band.

“Trunks will discuss with you later. I’m only his friend, so I have no right to decide the future of the Soul Destroyer mercenary band!” Han Shuo was stunned for a moment, but still responded indifferently.

“Heh heh, from what I know, your relationship with the Soul Destroyer isn’t that simple!” Laureton grinned and continued, “How about this? I’ll offer some gold coins and hire the Soul Destroyers to help me deal with the other forces. What do you think?”

“For this matter, you’d have to go find Trunks and talk to him about it. Hehe!” Han Shuo laughed lazily, then exhaled softly and said, “Right, I have a friend who might have not entered the Valley of Sunshine through the main entrance. I hope you can give me some face and not trouble her.”

“No problem!” Laureton agreed without saying anything extra. He then thought for a bit and stared mysteriously at Han Shuo, saying in a low voice, “You killed Ferguson and even used the terrifying Corpse Reanimation spell of necromancy. No matter how magnanimous the Church of Light is, they won’t let you off. You’d best take good care of yourself.”

“I’m not afraid of their revenge since I dared to kill him. You shouldn’t worry about such trivial things. Also, we will have a chance to cooperate in dealing with Florida. I’m afraid we’ll have to add the House of Menlo to the list of enemies as well. When I want to take action, I may come looking for you.”

“Then you’d best be quick, or I’m afraid you will miss your chance to do so!”

Laureton’s eyes were bloodshot and overflowed with murderous intent. It seemed that he intended on exacting revenge for the grievances that he’d suffered last night. With the power of the Cairo mercenary band, it would be an extremely brutal scene if Laureton started a bloody vengeance despite all consequences.

“Then I wish you good luck!” Han Shuo said no more after this sentence. He closed his eyes, seemingly bathing in the sun with leisure.

Laureton knew Han Shuo had no interest in further conversation upon seeing this posture. He nodded in understanding, "Alright. I still have other things to attend to, goodbye!"

"Sure, I won't send you off now!" Han Shuo answered with his eyes closed.

Not long after Laureton left, Han Shuo suddenly rolled his eyes towards the roof and said with a tone of indifference, "Since you've come, why not come down and join me?"

There were no other sign of life around. It was as if Han Shuo was just speaking to himself.

Han Shuo's expression sank as he said with displeasure, "Master Cecilia, do you need me to personally invite you to come down?"

A reaction finally appeared in the area where he was looking when he finished speaking. Cecilia abruptly appeared on the empty, sunlit roof. She looked at Han Shuo in surprise and said lightly, "Even Laureton couldn't discover me, so how did you do that?"

"Alright, tell me what you came here for. Could it be that your current mission is related to Laureton?" Han Shuo didn't answer Cecilia's question and cut straight to the chase. Since he'd stopped talking to Laureton as soon as he'd noticed her arrival, Cecilia simply didn't know what they'd been talking about.

"Tell me, how did you realize I was up there?" Cecilia looked down at Han Shuo from above, asking with the tone of a superior talking to their subordinate.

"Sorry, you have no right to know. Even Master Candide has no right to ask about my secrets, let alone you, someone who is not in charge of me. Moreover, my place doesn't welcome you, so please leave!" This kind of attitude from Cecilia displeased Han Shuo. He immediately and bluntly drove her away upon seeing her arrogant manner.

"You, you actually dare to talk to me like that?" Cecilia pointed at Han Shuo, appalled. Her body trembled slightly. She was angry as nobody seemed to have ever treated her so rudely like that. She looked extremely furious and stomped her feet violently as she huffed, "I'm not leaving, I'll see what you can do to me!"

Precisely at this moment, a distant call from the Dark Forest echoed in Han Shuo's mind. This call, that came from the depths of the soul, was like a joyous call from the most intimate of family.

Han Shuo was stunned for a split second, then overjoyed. He understood that the wood elite zombie in the forest trolls' holy land had formed. He was making the call based on the virtue of the blood essence in his body.

"If you won't leave, then I'll leave!" Han Shuo was too lazy to pay attention to Cecilia anymore. He immediately stood up, hurriedly left the shop and promptly shut the front door. He rushed straight out of the Valley of Sunshine.

"You look down on people too much, really look down on people too much! That lowly Dark Moon envoy actually dares to be so arrogant?!" Seeing Han Shuo unhesitatingly leave as if avoiding a plague, Cecilia abruptly shouted in rage. It seemed she'd taken a major blow.

None of the guards at the entrance to the Valley of Sunshine blocked Han Shuo from exiting. Everyone from the Cairo mercenary band nodded at him in a friendly manner, showing their deep respect.

Being able to kill a light grand magus and heavily injure the chief of the Menlo family at the same time, while lending his aid to the Cairo mercenary band, this character had immediately gained their goodwill. They all expressed their respect and extreme gratitude towards Han Shuo.

Upon leaving the Valley of Sunshine, Han Shuo flew rapidly forward by fully leveraging the art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens. He only took fifteen minutes to reach the Soul Destroyer mercenary band.

Trunks had yet to wake up after getting drunk the night before. Yesterday, when nothing was on his plate, Han Shuo had intended to wait for a while before helping Trunks reform his body. Now that the wood elite zombie had awakened, things had to happen now.

Not caring about the sleeptalking Trunks, Han Shuo rushed directly into his cave. He promptly picked up a wineskin on the ground, mixed the Rebirth Pill into it and forced it into Trunks' belly.

Firmly pressing down on Trunks in order to ensure he couldn't struggle, Han Shuo used his magical cultivation to force Trunks to refine the Rebirth Pill in his stomach. Afterwards, he left and said to Grant, "Take him to the toilet. He will be like Odysseus and the others. You guys look after him well."

"Understood!" Grant didn't understand this at all, but he knew Han Shuo wouldn't harm Trunks, so he immediately nodded in agreement.

"Gilbert, you stay inside the mountain valley to help Trunks for the time being. I'll look for you when I need you. Absolutely do not create any trouble for him!" Han Shuo left only one command for the dark dragon. He couldn't wait to leave the mountain valley as he rushed towards the Dark Forest.

Chapter 270: The religion of the Evil God

In the Dark Forest, the sacred place of the forest trolls.

Under the blazing sun, a rainbow spectrum cut through the sky. Like an arrow going against the flow of time, the light swiftly landed in the center of the Dark Forest without a sound.

After four months, the lush and thick plants in the place of extreme wood had once again gone through an earth-shattering change. All of the towering old trees had withered, the weeds on the ground were without a trace of their original lively green. The originally lush place of extreme wood didn't have a single green leaf now.

Plants no longer grew, and the dry, cracked, and hard ground was revealed. At a glance, the entire scene was that of desertification. Due to the existence of the formation, the wood elements, that had originally filled the place, were now gathered in the body of the wood elite zombie in the center of the formation. This had caused all the plants to wilt as they lost the wood elemental energy they'd originally possessed.

Han Shuo relied on the yin demons' reconnaissance upon landing. He discovered from afar that several forest trolls were stationed here, evidently protecting the holy land.

Intimate calls resounded one after another from roots of the oldest, largest dried tree. The wood elite zombie had Han Shuo's blood essence flowing in his veins. He had sensed the latter's arrival based on their connection.

"Come out!" A series of black lights converged towards the place where the wood elite zombie was concealed as Han Shuo used the secret arts.

Rumble...

Tremors spread out on the ground as the old, dried tree suddenly exploded. Pieces of bark and wood flew in all directions as a dark cave was revealed at the base. Deep underground old roots were buried there.

Whoosh! A green shadow jumped out from the dark cave.

A green armor covered the wood elite zombie. This armor looked as if it were made from tree trunks as it shimmered with a green light. The wood elite zombie was tall and thin. He really did look like a tree branch at a glance. His shiny green eyes were full of joy at this moment, rolling around as they stared at Han Shuo.

A dense mist of wood elemental energy drifted out along with the emergence of the wood elite zombie. The wood elements, that had been tightly bound and absorbed by the wood elite zombie, now gradually escaped bit by bit, blowing a fresh breath of air into this almost desertified land.

Han Shuo understood that this area would gradually return to normal after the wood elite zombie left. The dead plants would burst forth with vitality again, and the entire place should be able to restore itself to its original lush state in less than eighteen months.

The little skeleton and earth elite zombie appeared together after an incantation. The little skeleton arrogantly walked over immediately upon seeing the wood elite zombie. He jumped and patted the wood elite zombie's shoulders like a general inspecting one of his soldiers.

This wood elite zombie seemed surprisingly afraid of the little skeleton. His sparkling green eyes shone brightly as he took the initiative to lower his shoulders in order to allow the little skeleton's patting.

The earth elite zombie lumbered over to the side of the wood elite zombie and dumbly touched the latter's shoulder, seeming to want to welcome the latter like the little skeleton. However, the green eyes glared at him. The earth elite zombie was dumbfounded, withdrawing his right hand that'd been about to pat the wood elite zombie's shoulder. In the end, he patted his own shoulder, his posture quite comical.

"Let's go, let me see what you have mastered." Han Shuo glanced at the wood elite zombie and started walking out.

They left the place of extreme wood and arrived at a river bank in the forest after walking for a while. As soon as they arrived, the green eyes of the wood elite zombie shone brightly without stopping, and the trees around them started dancing in the wind. The towering old trees, that needed several people to fully embrace them, twisted their soft, ribbon-like tree branches like snakes, moving in accordance with the green light emitted from the eyes of the wood elite zombie.

The plants around Han Shuo all seemed to be affected. They were all either whipping around or growing rapidly. The wood elite zombie was showing off, and his figure disappeared out of sight when he leaned on a nearby tree.

Han Shuo knew early on that the wood elite zombie could manipulate plants. His thoughts spun as he recalled the strange ability of the druid Caspian. Feeling that there were some similarities between the two, his heart couldn't help but feel somewhat peculiar.

With the wood elite zombie, Han Shuo's strength would once again be increased when he entered the Dark Forest again. The Dark Forest was dense and brimming with life, while the wood elite zombie was like a ghost that could control the plants in it accordance to his will. He could randomly merge with a big tree, or mount a surprise attack. No one would be able to catch him when he retreated.

"Not bad, not bad, very good. You three brats can all go back!" Han Shuo watched for a bit before nodding his head. As usual, he left a Dark Seal in the wood elite zombie, then sent the three fellows back to the other dimension.

It's been three months. I wonder why the fire elite zombie hasn't been completed yet. Forget it, let's leave this place for the time being. He will call me when he's ready. Han Shuo thought for a bit then returned to the cemetery of death. He didn't intend on going to the place of extreme fire to inspect the situation. Who knew if the Lord of the Flames would go nuts again? Best not to go if he didn't have extreme confidence.

Han Shuo wasn't in a hurry to leave after returning to the cemetery of death. He went to the depths of the building inside instead.

He'd been halted at the first level before due to lack of sufficient mental strength. Now that his strength had progressed greatly, Han Shuo intended to try again.

He passed through the first passage easily. In the second level, Han Shuo rammed straight into the invisible forcefield. A strange force suddenly pierced through his brain and a heart wrenching pain abruptly spread through his mind. It was as if Han Shuo was being torn apart by a tornado of sharp blades—twisted, stabbed, and dragged into an endless abyss.

Fortunately Han Shuo's current state of mind was durable to the utmost now. Despite the extreme pain of a thousand cuts being inflicted on his body, he grit his teeth and coalesced his mental strength, pushing the magical yuan through. A crisp cracking sound echoed as he fell downwards.

Suddenly, the Eye of Darkness in Han Shuo's hand sent out a dazzling green light. Under that shining light, he found himself in the center of an oval altar. The whole altar was suddenly cloaked in a green halo as the green light touched it. An enormous, strange force converged on Han Shuo from the corners of the altar.

These ribbons of green light all poured into the Eye of Darkness in Han Shuo's hand. A mysterious force abruptly entered through his palm and flooded his brain like water released from a dam.

"My child, you've proved to at least have the mental strength of an archmage by being able to enter the second layer. Now, let go of everything and accept this mental strength. It will help you reach the power of a grand magus!" The shadowy figure from the first layer slowly formed and spoke calmly.

Han Shuo was ecstatic. He immediately sat down and relaxed his soul to welcome the mysterious force in. As soon as this force entered, it merged directly with his mental strength in a mysterious manner, giving Han Shuo a very comfortable, wonderful feeling. The extreme pain from before had long since vanished without a trace. Right now, Han Shuo seemed to be bathed in sun dappled, warm water. He enjoyed it with complete leisure and comfort.

The green layers of light shrouded the entire altar and slowly united with the Eye of Darkness at the epicenter. The enormous, pure force integrated with Han Shuo's mental strength. His brain, that had been reinforced by the demonic magic, rapidly underwent changes.

This process lasted for an unknown period of time. Han Shuo forgot everything and indulged himself in the wondrous feeling of having full control over his mental strength. He even forgot his own existence.

"Child, necromancy magic is the most powerful, most marvelous magic on earth, yet some people don't allow it to exist. You, as the legitimate heir to the ancient necromancy magic, hold the responsibility of promoting its profound meaning and the glory it used to have to the world."

"To have the Canopy of Necromancy cover the earth, to enable necromancy magic to cause tremors in every corner of the world, to shower every place in the evil light of necromancy magic—this is your responsibility to bear. You cannot escape, nor can you refuse..."

The voice of that shadowy figure slowly, yet alluringly infiltrated Han Shuo's mind with the strange force. As Han Shuo's mental strength was continuously reinforced, another current of force suddenly erupted. This force attempted to invade his soul, forever drowning him in evil.

This force had the ability to change the soul. When it finished merging with the soul, it would turn Han Shuo into a most loyal follower, forever subjected to the dominion of some evil god.

"Aowuuuu..."

Han Shuo threw back his head and released a long howl to the heavens, circulating his magical yuan like mad. Another intense force surged out from the demon infant, reaching the brain in just a second. It latched onto the force trying to invade his soul.

"No, no!" Han Shuo roared, his eyes a deep red as he panted. His firm strength of mind kicked into gear as he utilized the magical yuan to its utmost, forming layer after layer of obstruction in his brain to fight against the magical brand of the evil god.

There was as if a violent torrential outbreak in Han Shuo's mind. It desperately resisted the force invading his soul with the demon infant as the main power. During this process, Han Shuo experienced excruciating agony, rolling and screaming about on the altar. However, the green light around the Eye of Darkness became more and more brilliant.

Chapter 271: The tricolored bone staff

“Aowuuuu...”

Han Shuo was roaring in extreme agony on the oval altar in the second layer of the cemetery of death. Thick green light wreathed his body. His head in particular was showing a jasper-like luster. The ethereal light seemed to be the most lustrous green jade.

Han Shuo's mental strength still grew at a crazy rate during this process. However, the brand from the evil god from an unknown source actually wanted to penetrate deep into his soul, ordering him to become a loyal follower of the religion of the evil god until death. This was a kind of soul brand similar to the one that Han Shuo imprinted on the little skeleton and earth elite zombie. Once his soul was stamped by this brand, he would never be himself again.

This was absolutely something that Han Shuo didn't want!!

Although his brain felt like it was being cut by ten thousand blades, Han Shuo still held on, his eyes bulging in agony. He roared madly in rage, trying to alleviate the pain in some way.

However, the power of the soul brand was becoming ever greater as the growing green halo above the altar grew brighter. In his panic, an enormous, pitch black figure appeared in Han Shuo's consciousness. The massive body seemed to blot out the sky. Its green pupils were like two huge full moons. The eyes glanced over all beings as if looking down upon weak, tiny ants.

The enormous pressure filled the heavens and earth, making it difficult for Han Shuo to even breathe. This kind of endless presence tasted of immortality, like a star existing for billions of years in the galaxy.

“Submit. There will be no pain, only eternal life!”

A spirit imprint suddenly broke into Han Shuo's mind, repeatedly tempting him. It seemed that if he just relaxed and accepted this brand, the suffering would be gone in the next moment, and his life would be endless.

“No!!”

Han Shuo screamed tragically, his hands clutching his head as he rolled around on the ground. The Demonslayer Edge stored in his body abruptly shot out terrifying amounts of killing intent. The negative feelings of fear, resentment, and thirst for destruction coalesced into a force that instantly flowed into the demon infant to form a resistance.

The Demonslayer Edge shrank into a beam of light, bringing every fiber of power within Han Shuo to bombard the shadowy figure that'd been born from the panic within his mind.

Crack...

A crisp sound like the breaking of fragile glass resounded clearly in Han Shuo's mind. The colossal figure shattered into spots of starlight. The lights suddenly gathered into the Demonslayer Edge.

In a blink an eye, the agony that had ripped apart his heart and pierced his lungs retreated like the tides. Within his consciousness, the frenzied rate of growth of his mental strength suddenly stopped. The green light curtain above the altar also disappeared without a trace.

The Eye of Darkness in Han Shuo's hand vanished, replaced with a green bone staff. The upper part of the staff was formed by three skulls.

The bone staff was one meter and thirty centimeters in length, and was made out of a green, jade-like material. The three skulls weren't human, and were respectively yellow, blue, and purple. The yellow skull had three big eye sockets, the blue one had a horn, while the purple one was riddled with finger-sized holes.

Although their shapes were strange, the skulls were as small as a fist, each one looking more sinister than the one before. These three skulls integrated perfectly with the staff, with the three skulls looking in different directions crowning the top.

Han Shuo slowly calmed his breathing. In the end, he fainted and fell listlessly to the ground in a comatose state.

However, whilst unconscious, the bone staff in his hand emitted yellow, blue, and purple rays of light from the three differently shaped skulls. The three lights were like silk ribbons that glided into his nose and mouth at the same time.

Blood was still flowing from Han Shuo's mouth and nostrils due to the piercing agony he had just experienced. Each plume of hot blood slowly drifted into the three skulls under the guidance of the tricolored lights. The three skulls gleamed with increasing light.

The three skulls finished absorbing the fresh blood from Han Shuo's mouth and nostrils. The staff shone with brilliant light that slowly dispersed. The bone staff then returned to normal.

After who knew how long, Han Shuo gradually came to. His whole body ached to the extreme, as if his meridians and bones had shattered. There wasn't a place that didn't scream out with pain.

On the other hand, after experiencing explosive agony, his mind was now clear and comfortable. When Han Shuo looked down at the bone staff, he was startled. His eyes were full of confusion as he simply didn't know where this bone staff had come from.

"Ah, where is the Eye of Darkness?!" Han Shuo was greatly shocked in the next moment as he discovered that the Eye of Darkness, that had been in his hand during the whole ordeal, had vanished.

The Eye of Darkness was the key in and out of the cemetery of death. Once it disappeared, he could only use the transportation matrix to leave the cemetery of death, which would be a tremendous setback.

Suddenly, Han Shuo looked closely at the bone staff and noticed that its jade-green color was the same as the color of the Eye of Darkness. The staff felt extremely familiar in his hand.

A thought struck him. Han Shuo tried to use the bone staff in the same way he'd used the Eye of Darkness. When the bone staff immediately shot out a familiar green halo, Han Shuo understood what had happened.

Staring fixedly at the bone staff for a while, Han Shuo became more and more surprised. However, when he recalled the matter of the evil god invading his soul, he fearfully put the staff into his space ring. He didn't dare to try out its power when his magical yuan was exhausted and body extremely fragile.

Closing his eyes to recall the events that occurred before he fell unconscious, Han Shuo couldn't help but feel fortunate. He secretly thought that this cemetery of death was really not that simple. When that evil god infiltrated his mind, the horrifying pressure from that shadowy figure on him had been truly unthinkable for Han Shuo.

Han Shuo was certain that the colossal figure was definitely the true appearance of the evil god. Han Shuo completely understood what the evil god's brand wanted to do to him. This made him even more grateful to have escaped, and he became more cautious of the cemetery of death.

In the next moment, Han Shuo remembered what the shadowy figure said, "Let go of everything and accept this spirit force. It will help you reach the power of a grand magus!"

Ecstatic, Han Shuo chanted a spell to summon one ordinary skeleton. Eight skeletal warriors immediately appeared on the altar. Feeling the smooth circulation of his vast mental strength, Han Shuo was overjoyed upon discovering that his mental strength had made a shocking advancement.

The same necromancy spell meant that the results would be different based on the strength of one's mental strength. Generally speaking, a magic spell could be divided into five levels based on one's mental strength.

Take summoning a skeletal warrior for example. A novice magic apprentice with weak mental strength could only summon one skeletal warrior. However, for journeyman mages, they could release the second level of the spell due to their stronger spirit force, allowing them to call upon two skeletal warriors.

Han Shuo summoning eight skeletal warriors meant that he had reached the fourth level of the spell. This was more than enough proof for his terrific improvement in mental strength. According to the explanation in necromancy magic books, Han Shuo understood that one would reach the fourth level for the skeletal warrior summon only when their mental strength advanced to grand magus.

“Truly unexpected! This was all true! To advance to grand magus all of the sudden! This cemetery of death is strange, but truly miraculous!” Han Shuo was ecstatic. He couldn’t help but laugh heartily despite his fragile current state.

Struggling to sit up, Han Shuo’s eyes shone brightly as he look around. He saw that this second level was half the size of the first one. The surrounding area was empty, except for the oval altar in the center. No items were stored in this secret room.

The second level centered around the altar beneath Han Shuo, a mysterious magical formation was set up to occupy the entire room. There was nothing else except for it, seemingly a place to cleanse the soul and improve mental strength.

Han Shuo rested for a while before leaving the second level of the cemetery of death. He sat in the center of the magical formation, slowly gathering his exhausted magical yuan and restoring it bit by bit.

After about five days, Han Shuo heaved a sigh of relief and murmured in good spirits, “Although the evil god invaded my soul this time, it was actually rather useful. Not only did my mental strength advance to grand magus level in one fell swoop, even my magic cultivation showed signs of great improvement!”

Han Shuo wasn’t in a hurry to leave. He stayed in the cemetery of death, spending the entire day and night to indulge in the study of necromancy magic. Although he had the power of a grand magus, he still needed to brush up on some necromancy spells. Thanks to the absorbed memories from Clarendon, Han Shuo could officially begin his preparation for the archmage level. The memories played an important role.

Han Shuo practiced necromancy magic in the cemetery of death without rest or food, as if he was possessed. He repeatedly cast all archmage level spells. He practiced every day until his mental strength was completely exhausted. Afterwards, his mental strength improved slightly with meditation.

Over ten days, Han Shuo could skillfully release the several archmage level necromancy spells that he'd gained from Clarendon. As for the two new spells written in the book of "Necromancy Magic" that he'd picked up in the cemetery of death. However, it was difficult to grasp them in a short amount of time. Han Shuo decided to not waste any more time and left the cemetery of death via the transportation matrix.

Chapter 272: The effect of the Rebirth Pill

Lancelot Empire, Ossen City, the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force.

“Master Fanny, you’ve become more and more beautiful!” Gene looked at Fanny and praised sincerely in the testing fields of the necromancy department.

“That’s right, master Fanny. How did you do it? Can you please tell us how?” Lisa looked at Fanny with admiration and asked sweetly.

“Master Fanny, what herbs did you use? Please tell us!”

“Yes yes, please!”

Several female students of the necromancy major surrounded Fanny, chattering nonstop. For women, beauty could be said to be the matter that they were most concerned about. Like the forest trolls’ love for pillaging, a woman’s love for beauty was innate. No woman was an exception to this.

“I’ve told all of you many times already. There is no secret method. I only relaxed my mood and the change occurred naturally. You shouldn’t be so surprised.” Fanny explained with resignation. Although she knew her students wouldn’t believe her, this was the only answer she could give them.

Fanny was as if reborn after consuming the Rebirth Pill. Her mental strength had undergone a huge improvement and increased by twice as much when she meditated. Her mind was suddenly clearer. The magic theories she used to have problems with were now easily understood.

Fanny’s skin was also creamy, similar a newborn baby’s. Her face was a glowing white with a touch of rosiness on the cheeks, like a delicately crafted porcelain doll, giving people the feeling of surreal beauty. This miraculous transformation had occurred over ten days. The female students and teachers had all witnessed it. Even Fanny herself was unable to say that this was a natural transformation. Many female teachers had come to consult Fanny about this matter, even Dean Emma herself asked.

Only Fanny herself knew that this was thanks to Han Shuo’s Rebirth Pill.

She had taken a three day leave and spent almost all of it on the toilet. She'd been mad at his prank. However, when she looked in the mirror three days later, she was dumbfounded. She froze for dozens of seconds before exclaiming nonstop in ecstasy, "Bryan oh Bryan, you cute little fellow!"

"Master Fanny, Master Fanny!" Gene shout loudly a few times.

Startled, Fanny looked at Gene and said, "Master Gene, what is it?"

"Class is over. Master Fanny, I noticed that you've been staring off into space more often recently!" Gene had recently discovered that when he talked to Fanny, she often didn't pay much attention to him. The times he saw her fall into a daydream, her eyes flickered with yearning.

"Oh, class is over? Hehe, thank you for reminding me." Fanny responded apologetically. She turned to the students to advise them about something before walking back to her laboratory alone.

Hateful fellow, he said he would come see me in three days time, and yet he hasn't appeared for twenty days already, making me distracted all the time. You really anger me to death! Fanny gnashed her teeth in rage, walking to her lab with her head down.

Thud! Not paying attention to the path, Fanny suddenly bumped into a person.

"Sorry, sorry!" Fanny apologized nonstop before lifting her head. However, when she looked up, she was stunned for a second before exploding with anger. Her fists hammered as she cursed, "Damn you, you only know to return now? It's been twenty days, don't you know that you'll make people worry? Where did you get off to before only coming back now..."

She screamed, cursed, and hit the evilly smiling Han Shuo on the chest. Fanny seemed to vent all of her feelings as she listed all of his wrongdoings. Her voice gradually grew strange before turning into sobs at the end.

Han Shuo originally wanted to tease Fanny just a little. However, upon hearing the strange tone in her voice and the footsteps closing in, he embraced her and jumped behind the big tree. His mouth rushed towards Fanny's fragrant lips for a kiss.

"Mmmm..."

Fanny's scolding turned into long moaning. Her hands desperately pounded against Han Shuo's chest, but her fragrant lips responded with enthusiasm.

This was a separate road to Fanny's lab surrounded by rows of ancient trees. When Han Shuo heard the incoming footsteps, he hastily embraced Fanny and jumped behind the large tree out of fear of being discovered. As Fanny responded intensely to his kiss, Han Shuo felt as if he was sinking into a beautiful dream. This charming, wondrous feeling instantly ignited upon the contact of their lips and ran deep into his soul. Han Shuo relaxed his vigilance and loosened his body, completely indulging himself in this feeling.

It was a while later that Fanny finally stopped beating his chest. Her slender, jade hands snaked euphorically around his neck. She was on the tips of her toes, kissing him fervently. She completely forgot everything else, forgetting that they were out in the open.

After who knew how long, Fanny panted and struggled, pushing Han Shuo away. She glanced alluringly at him as she protested coquettishly, "You thousand times damnable brat, why don't you ever keep your promises?"

"Mmm..." As she'd just finished speaking, Fanny covered her mouth and inhaled softly. Her cheeks instantly flushed as she looked behind Han Shuo with an exclamation.

Turning around, they saw Lisa holding a magic book, standing alongside Gene. Their eyes were filled with heartbreak as they stared at this side, dumbfounded.

"Master Gene, it's very immoral to peep on others' intimate actions!" Han Shuo was completely calm. He turned around and spoke unhappily to Gene without letting Fanny out of his embrace.

“I, I didn’t mean to. Just that Lisa was unclear about some magic knowledge that I couldn’t explain it, so we came to look for Master Fanny to resolve our doubts. It was really an accident!” Gene’s facial expression was ugly, but he still stammered an explanation upon seeing Han Shuo’s displeasure.

Fanny had surpassed Gene on some complex magic knowledge thanks to the effect of the Rebirth Pill. After the great changes to Lisa’s family, she’d suddenly become hard-working and seized every chance to improve her magic. Lisa and Gene had some questions to ask Fanny. They came for a look when hearing the panting, and hadn’t expected to see something that they shouldn’t have seen.

“I didn’t think, didn’t think that you were actually this intimate with Master Fanny. Master Fanny, Bryan, I hate you!” Lisa said these words out of rage, then turned around and ran off in tears.

“Master Fanny, I give you my blessing!” Gene was an adult after all. He suppressed the pain in his heart and whispered this sentence. He too then turned around to leave, his departing back seeming a little bleak.

“Bryan, you go console Lisa. I know how much she likes you, I’m afraid she can’t take this blow!” Fanny softly sigh at the events and told Han Shuo.

Shaking his head, Han Shuo said in a low voice, “Forget it, this isn’t the appropriate time to see her. Give her some time, Lisa is much stronger than you think.”

“Let’s go, I’ll give you your certificate proving your achievement as an adept mage in the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force. You can graduate!” Fanny pondered for a bit and said no more. She let Han Shuo put his arm around her as they walked back to the lab, where she gave him a book with a magical brand on it.

“You should pay some attention to Lisa in the next two days. I think she’ll think it through.” Han Shuo said as he took the book. After such a thing happened, he was temporarily in no mood to act intimately with Fanny.

“Bryan, you’re leaving again?” Fanny was stunned. She suddenly hugged Han Shuo tightly and looked up at him, speaking very unwillingly.

“I’ve officially graduated from the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force. Now that something like this has happened, I don’t want Lisa to feel sad, so I can’t stay here for the time being!” Han Shuo had wanted to stay with Fanny a little longer, but could only let go after giving it some thought.

“Then, where should I go if I want to see you? I don’t want you to disappear for months at a time without receiving any messages from you!” Fanny frowned and hugged Han Shuo tightly, not letting him move. She seemed like she wouldn’t let go until she received a reply.

Han Shuo had a headache as he thought about it. He said, “It seems I need to find a mansion within the Empire. Mhm, so be it, I’ll tell you my address after seven days at most. I promise to not suddenly disappear for a long time!”

“Okay. Oh right, my father may come to the Ossen City soon. I want you to meet him then!” Fanny nodded, her cheeks turning crimson. She said softly as she buried her face in his chest.

Han Shuo was dumbfounded. He secretly thought about his relationships with Phoebe and Emily. If this was discovered by Fanny or her father by chance, something serious might just happen. However he couldn’t refuse now, so he bit the bullet and said, “Alright, I’ll come see him at that time!”

Forget it, I’ll worry about it when it happens. I can only take one step at a time. Han Shuo secretly thought and said, “Alright, I’m going!”

“Mmm, right, thank you for the herbal pill. It was really miraculous. Do you have any more? I want to eat a few more!” As Han Shuo was about to leave, Fanny asked excitedly with shining eyes.

“Eh... This pill is extremely expensive, I only had that one pill. One pill is enough, any more would be useless!” Han Shuo sweated. Afraid that Fanny wouldn’t listen, he hastily left.

Chapter 273: Climbing up step by step

After leaving the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force, Han Shuo went straight to Lawrence's house. Together, they left for the barracks of the northern city guards.

Ossen City was divided into four sections, South, East, North and West. Each section had a big city gate and an independent army of guards responsible for maintaining law and order.

As they arrived at the city's northern campgrounds, Lawrence opened his mouth to speak, "Although we're ten days late, I think there's no problem!"

What greeted the eyes was a grand castle wholly made of solid rocks. Several armored guards stood in front of the city gate, looking over the recruitment of ordinary civilians with strong physique. They were being examined before they could join the rookies.

Lawrence walked over to them with Han Shuo and said with authority, "He is an adept mage who's just graduated from the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force. He'll join your magic corps from now on."

An officer was lying lazily on a chair, his mouth munching on the fruits on the plate. As soon as he heard Lawrence's voice, he scrambled to his feet and put on a flattering smile, "Greetings to the young master Lawrence!"

Lawrence nodded and pointed at Han Shuo saying, "He's my friend. He intends to join the magic corps of the city's northern guard. We'll proceed based on the formal procedures."

"An adept mage!" The officer was shocked. His expression was much more respectful as he looked at Han Shuo, "May I see your certificate?"

There were three jobs in the Profound Continent: swordsman, knight, and mage. Swordsmen held the lowest status, knights were a little higher, and the rarest and highest were the mages.

To a country, a mage of the same level brought more benefits to the army. For instance, a senior swordsman or senior knight could only kill several soldiers in one attack no matter how powerful they were.

However, if an adept mage released a magic spell of great lethality, they could kill dozens or more than a hundred of soldiers in an instant. The higher the mage's level, the more powerful their spell was. For example, if a sacred magus released a forbidden spell, he could even destroy a city and kill tens of thousand soldiers in a second.

Because mages possessed magic spells with a large area of destruction, they were very useful in the military. Their status was obviously higher than swordsmen or knights. Generally, in any country, if a mage reached the level of archmage, they would be bestowed with a noble title and their own territory.

As for those of the grand magus or sacred magus level, they were the talent that every country competed over. The king of that country would agree to any of their conditions from wealth, position to beautiful women. Everything could be theirs.

That was why the officer's attitude had taken a complete turn for the opposite upon hearing that he was an adept mage who'd graduated from the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force. Over the years, the Academy had produced many of the most outstanding figures in the Empire. Currently, several notable figures who were the best in their fields of expertise had all graduated from this academy.

"Of course you can!" Han Shuo took out his graduation certificate from his space ring and handed it to the officer.

Only now did the officer realize that Han Shuo wore a space ring. He was a slightly surprised, an adept mage who could possess a space ring was definitely not ordinary. The officer became even more respectful. He held the certificate and skimmed it before handing it back to Han Shuo with both hands, saying in all honesty, "There's no problem at all. We of the city's Northern Guard welcome you to join us. You will be a member of the Northern Guard's magic corps. Please follow me, I'll help you with the documents."

“I’m going with you!” Lawrence smiled at Han Shuo and followed the latter into the castle. The officer seemed to know Lawrence as he didn’t stopped him from following.

The three yin demons had been released earlier to circle around the castle. Han Shuo discovered that the castle was divided into several areas. The bottom floor was the rooms of ordinary soldiers, it could accommodate nearly a thousand people. The second floor was for ordinary officers, the third floor for senior generals and the members of the magic corps. Han Shuo paid some attention and realized that there was a basement was storing weapons and food.

Even though this castle was inside Ossen City, its defenses weren’t weak. The castle walls were ten meters tall with several guards in each direction. There were several heavy defensive weaponries and even three magic towers set up.

This was the base camp of the Northern Guard. Many more soldiers were stationed outside. The scattered Northern Guard was divided into three portions. One portion trained in the jungle, another stood defense at the northern gate, and the remaining was in charge of patrolling to prevent brawling inside the city.

Before he’d came here, Han Shuo knew Lawrence was acquainted with the highest commander of the city’s Northern Guard, Count Boris Carlin, so he hadn’t been worried at all.

In the Lancelot Empire, the majority of military power was in the hands of the nobility. Lawrence’s uncle, Boris Carlin, for example, was a count of the Empire. The Carlin family in the Empire was regarded as a grand family. Lawrence’s father in name and Boris’s older brother, Eevee Carlin, was one rank higher as a Marquis of the Empire.

Eevee Carlin had an intimate relationship with the King due to his connection with Lawrence. With Eevee’s support, plus his own extraordinary military talent, Boris Carlin was able to sit on the position of the Northern Guard’s highest commander.

Obviously Lawrence arranged for Han Shuo to be here because his uncle was in charge of this organization. The soldiers in the castle all knew of the relationship between Lawrence and Boris, that was why they treated the former so respectfully. Even Han Shuo, following Lawrence, also received the same treatment.

“Oh, my lovely Lawrence, you haven’t come to see me in such a long time!” The group was heading to the third floor of the castle, when an army man of one meter eighty centimeters in height with a rough, bearded face, called out loudly from a distant staircase.

“Hi dear uncle, aren’t I visiting you right now? Hehe, I’ve brought an outstanding person here. Isn’t your nephew good to you?” Lawrence laughed all the way as he pulled Han Shuo to Boris.

Boris laughed heartily with a resounding voice. He swept a glance over Han Shuo and said, “Is this the Bryan that you’ve mentioned to me many times? Haha, his body is unexpectedly strong, and he’s an incredible mage to boot. Truly unimaginable!”

Due to his practice of magical cultivation, Han Shuo was now one meter ninety centimeters tall. His back was as straight as a javelin, naturally emitting an extraordinary presence. Although he was wearing an ordinary magic robe, this presence emitting from his body simply couldn’t be concealed.

“Greetings honored Count Boris. Please take care of me from now on!” Han Shuo had a firm grasp on the situation. He smiled and bowed respectfully.

“Well said, well said!” Boris laughed loudly again and spoke to the guiding officer, “Gilok, you help Bryan complete the procedures.”

“Lawrence, Bryan, come come, come to my room for a bit!” Boris waited for the two to step up the stairs before enthusiastically grabbing onto them, leading them straight to the biggest room on the third floor. All the guards respectfully saluted Boris along the way.

Boris’ hand was rough like an old tree bark’s. Han Shuo immediately understood from the sensation that he used heavy weaponry. Han Shuo had heard Lawrence mention that Boris was an earth rider.

Boris' room was built in with big boulders, bright and spacious. There wasn't any luxurious items, only some simple furniture. It seemed Boris wasn't an extravagant person.

"All of you are dismissed. Don't let anyone in for now!" Boris ordered upon reaching the doorstep. The two senior swordsmen withdrew themselves without a word and stood guard at a distance from the door.

When the three had settled down in the room, Boris went straight to the point, "Bryan, I'll be frank on account of your relationship with Lawrence. Since you've come here, I'll help you obtain the title of duke in the fastest way possible. Lawrence told me that you have endless potential and will definitely become a great assistant of his. I believe in his vision."

"Thank you, Sir Count!" Han Shuo nodded slightly and smiled with gratitude.

"No need to be polite. Hehe, helping you is helping Lawrence, which is also helping myself. We'll have you stay in the magic corps for now with no particular status. However, when you make a military achievement to the Northern Guard, plus your identity as a mage, I can help you apply for a noble title. From then on, your rank will gradually increased based on your contributions." Boris looked at Han Shuo and slowly explained.

"Uncle Boris, for this period when Bryan is in the Northern Guard, the Viscount title will do just fine. The higher titles aren't as easily acquired through the Northern Guard, I have my own plans!" Lawrence had long since made his plans about Han Shuo's position. Considering the achievements and power of the Northern Guard, it might only be enough for Han Shuo to become a viscount here. Even Boris was only a count after all, it would be difficult to promote Han Shuo once more in the Northern Guard.

"Hehe, you little boy. Good, I just have something here, if you can do well Bryan, your credit will definitely be recognized. I can help you obtain a title faster then!" Boris rolled his eyes at Lawrence before telling Han Shuo with a smile.

His thoughts moved, Han Shuo was immediately interested, "What matter?”

Chapter 274: Who dares to act wildly?

“The Imperial weapons factory has developed a new type of chariot that can consecutively shoot bolts thousands of miles away. This secret arsenal was located in the wilderness to the north of the city and was originally under the responsibility of our Northern Guard. However, one night about half a month ago, a group of assassins suddenly snuck in and killed the guards, in addition to a dozen inventors there. They also took the blueprints of the chariot.”

“His Majesty the King was furious when he heard this news and gave me a month to arrest this gang and retrieve the blueprints at all costs. This matter is really stressing me out. If you can help me resolve it, I guarantee that you’ll easily receive the title of baron!” Boris turned gloomy upon talking about this matter, his hearty laugh from earlier had long since disappeared.

“Mhm, I too am thinking of a way to resolve this. If we don’t capture those people and take back the blueprint within a month, it could affect my uncle’s career!” Lawrence sighed softly and turned to Han Shuo as he spoke, somewhat worried. Boris was his backer. In his struggle for the throne, whether or not Lawrence could stand out mainly relied on the power of his supporters.

First prince Charles currently had the biggest influence and also the most supporters. Lawrence had the weakest force due to him being an illegitimate child. His status would certainly be affected if the people closest to him lost their standing.

Han Shuo wrinkled his brows, thinking for a bit before opening his mouth to say, “If it’s been half a month, wouldn’t they have left the capital already? If they really did, it’d be like finding a needle in a haystack if we want to catch them!”

“They shouldn’t have. I immediately reported this to His Majesty before anything else when this happened. Master Candide, one of the three heavyweights of the Dark Mantle, took notice of this and ordered the guards to strengthen the defense of the four gates, not letting any suspicious character leave. I'm positive that they haven't been able to leave Ossen City!" Boris said in a low voice, his face solemn.

"I see. Then did Master Candide tell you who was taking charge of this mission?" Han Shuo asked. Everyone with a high position all knew of the Dark Mantle's existence. Candide was the most mysterious, most difficult to reach figure. Han Shuo understood the protocol of the Dark Mantle. An enemy country must be pulling the strings behind such a major matter, so the Dark Mantle couldn't afford to not send anyone to handle it. Boris smiled wryly and shook his head as he replied, "I only know of his name, but didn't have the honor of meeting him. I got this information from a higher-up. Although I tried to check afterwards, I wasn't able to find out who's in charge of this."

Han Shuo nodded with a faint smile and said, "This I understand. I will try my best. When I see Master Candide, I will ask him about what's going on."

Boris was shocked, he urgently asked, "You, you know Master Candide?"

"I forgot to tell you uncle, but Bryan has another identity as a Dark Mantle member!" Lawrence turned to explain to Boris, then asked with the same shocked expression, "Bryan, I only know you're a member of the Dark Mantle, but can you really meet that old monster Candide directly?"

"He's directly in charge for me!" Han Shuo nodded with a smile.

Lawrence was immediately ecstatic upon hearing this. He looked at Han Shuo with eyes full of excitement, "I really didn't think that you had such a special position in the Dark Mantle to directly answer to that old monster. It seems like I've truly made the right choice!"

"Very good!" Boris was also overjoyed. He gave Lawrence a grateful look and said to Han Shuo, "Then I'll leave this matter in your care completely. As long as you can handle it, I'll take care of obtaining a baron title for you!"

"I'll do my best!" Han Shuo didn't dare to guarantee anything. After all, he didn't know the specifics of the situation. The Dark Mantle might have a wide network, but it wasn't omnipotent.

"Alright. Uncle Boris, Bryan belongs to your magic corps only in name, so you needn't assign him to any jobs. He won't come to the Northern Guard if there's nothing else. We'll be going for now." Lawrence stood up and said straightforwardly. He didn't mouth empty pleasantries in front of his uncle.

"Rest assured, I know what to do. Helping him is helping you, and also helping myself. I understand this clearly!" Boris obviously wouldn't keep Han Shuo in the camp to do petty chores after knowing the latter's identity as a member of the Dark Mantle. He understood Han Shuo had joined purely to accumulate military credit and rely on the Northern Guard for a quick promotion. Han Shuo absolutely wouldn't stay for long.

Lawrence and Han Shuo left the Northern Guard together. As they exited through the city gates, Lawrence asked Han Shuo, "Are you certain you can handle this? This matter is related to my uncle's career, I'll leave it in your hands!"

"I can only try my best. After all, I don't know the specific details yet." Han Shuo replied. At this moment, when he was getting onto Lawrence's carriage, Han Shuo suddenly frowned and whispered, "Lawrence, be careful on the way!"

Lawrence was stunned and asked in a low voice without a flicker in his expression, "Is someone attempting to kill me?"

"You get in the carriage first, I won't leave together with you, but will protect you from the shadows!" Han Shuo nodded, indicating that Lawrence shouldn't act rashly and alert the enemy.

"Alright, then I'll be going first!" Lawrence said loudly, his face flashing a smile like nothing had happened as he got into the carriage and left.

As soon as Lawrence had left in the carriage, Han Shuo turned down another street. He walked dozens of meters before seeing a carriage in a corner. He shouted lowly, "Chester, why are you here?"

Chester, wearing a coachman outfit turned his head upon hearing the familiar voice and exclaimed in delighted surprise, “Bryan, why are you here?”

Two small hands suddenly lifted the curtain. The touchingly charming Emily appeared, covering her mouth as she lightly shouted in joy, “Rascal, what are you doing here?”

After a long time, Emily was ever heartbreakingly beautiful. Her long hair was done up high, and she wore a long purple dress, along with her figure elegant and solemn eyebrows revealed an inviolable holiness. Her presence was completely different from the flirtatious manner the first time Han Shuo had met her.

“I went to the Northern Guard for a job. I discovered Chester looking around so I came to see. What are you guys doing here?” Han Shuo wrinkled his brows, asking urgently.

“The Northern Guard lost a chariot blueprint. I’m in charge of this mission and have sent people to inquire about the details of the situation.” Because of their relationship, Emily told Han Shuo about the secret mission without hesitation.

Delight flooded his heart, Han Shuo said, “So that’s why. Haha, we are really destined to be together! Okay, I’ll talk to you when I come to the Dark Mantle’s base in the city’s northern castle tonight. Now I have some matters to deal with, see you tonight.”

As he finished speaking, Han Shuo nodded towards Chester and quickly vanished into the night, not paying attention to Emily, who was full of confusion.

“Master Bryan is becoming more and more mysterious these days. I heard he made a great achievement again, the Dark Mantle network is spreading legends of his power!” Chester couldn’t help but say in admiration upon seeing Han Shuo disappear in the blink of an eye.

“He only pretends to be mysterious. Why hasn’t that brat returned yet? We need to quickly handle this matter and return to the base in the northern stronghold as soon as possible!” Emily was impatient when she saw Han Shuo appear. She began to begrudge her man who’d gone over to the Northern Guard.

“Be careful!” Sitting in the carriage, Lawrence lifted the curtain to speak softly to earth rider Jino, who was riding a horse beside him.

“Rest assured, we will protect the young master well!” Jino rode a war horse. He wore shiny silver armor, his hand grasping a silver spear.

“Mm, just be very careful!” Lawrence was completely calm, but still repeatedly advised.

After his partnership with Han Shuo in Valen City, Lawrence knew very well about the latter’s miraculous ability, so he had no doubt about Han Shuo’s words. With Jino leading the experts out in the open and old assassin Lucky near him for personal protection, Lawrence wasn’t too worried.

Moreover, Han Shuo had told him he’d secretly protect him before leaving, so Lawrence was even more assured, given his understanding of Han Shuo’s strength. After all, Lawrence had personally seen his terrifying power.

When the group reached a long alley, a long, shrill whistle suddenly resounded. The ground violently shook before a three meter long earth spikes shot towards Lawrence’s carriage. The spikes also ambushed Jino’s group on war horses at the same time. The horses were pierced and killed in the blink of an eye.

Fortunately, Lawrence’s group had been on alert. As soon as the ground had trembled, they’d immediately jumped out of the carriage and off their horses to an area free of the earth spikes.

Several archers shot a series of sharp arrows from the rooftops around the alley. The arrows howled through the air as they whizzed straight towards Lawrence’s group. Jino and the knights quickly spread out to surround Lawrence and raised their shields in defense.

“Pollak, continue to release the earth spikes!” A black robed mage shouted towards another rooftop.

“I’m Bryan from the Northern Guard’s magic corps. Who dares to act wildly in my jurisdiction? Are you tired of living?” Bryan came out from another direction, laughing coldly, his hand holding a head dripping with blood.

“Pollak!” The black robed mage immediately screamed in shock upon seeing the head in Han Shuo’s hand.

Chapter 275: Killing two birds with one stone

There were a total of ten people in the group that had ambushed Lawrence—three mages, four archers, and three swordsmen.

Amongst the three swordsmen, only one was a swordmaster, while the other two were senior swordsmen. Except for the earth adept mage that Han Shuo had already killed, there was one space adept mage and the black robed dark archmage.

The black robed mage felt a chill down his spine when he saw Han Shuo appear with Pollak's head in hand. The two mages had been back to back, yet he hadn't even noticed when Pollak was killed. This indicated the absolutely extraordinary strength of the newcomer.

"Kill this person first!" The black robed mage shouted, about to chant a magic incantation.

Suddenly, the big tree next to him swayed in an odd manner. Like a peacock displaying its tail, the tree branches turned into sharp arrows and shot towards the mage in a hail of sharp missiles that covered the sky. He simply had no time to react as dozen of branches transformed his body into a pincushion. He turned into a hedgehog, his blood flowing profusely.

The mage's eyes were still wide open as he died. He couldn't accept the fact that the tree had suddenly turned into a murder weapon. Why did the ordinary tree suddenly turn into an unblinking murder weapon?

The two senior swordsmen were dressed in black nightwalker outfits as they jumped down from the rooftop, intending to kill Han Shuo firsthand. Ludicrously, three cracks somehow appeared on the ground where they landed. They'd wanted to borrow the force of their movement to spring towards Han Shuo, but let out a tragic scream as they were swallowed by the cracks like flies casting themselves into a spider's web. The remaining people looked on, dumbfounded at the weird happenings with perturbed hearts. The swordmaster assassin then ordered in a grave tone, "Retreat!"

The four archers and the space adept mage were as if granted amnesty by this word. They quickly turned around, about to flee.

"Want to escape? Heh heh, it's my first day of work today! I'll gain some standing for catching all of you!" Han Shuo leisurely gave chase while smiling cutely.

The swordmaster leapt, his feet about to tap the small tree next to him when the tree unexpectedly came to life, the snake-like branches tightly wrapping around his ankle. More and more of branches twisted like octopus tentacles and tightly bound the lower half of his body.

The swordmaster's face was dreadful as he waved his sword, attempting to hack off the soft branches. However at this precise moment, old assassin Lucky emerged from the shadows and approached like a ghost to finish the struggling swordmaster.

Han Shuo was about to act, but halted upon seeing Lucky approach. He understood this swordmaster would be hard pressed to escape death, so he turned his sights to the four archers and the space adept mage.

"Bryan, capture one alive!" Lawrence was both surprised and overjoyed. He didn't expect Han Shuo to be so stunning and calm in the face of so many experts. He'd used some unexpected method to casually play with them in his hand.

"Ah! Murder murder! Shut the door, quickly shut the door!" Even though this alley was remote, there were still people in the broad daylight. Several civilians opened the windows to take a peek upon hearing Han Shuo's shouts, then hastily shut both their windows and doors in horror of the fear of being implicated.

Han Shuo's sensitive hearing soon caught the sound of a cavalry team quickly approaching from afar. He looked in the direction where the four archers had escaped and laughed sinisterly.

His body flashing with a whooshing sound like a stone thrown from a catapult, he landed in the midst of the four archers in the blink of an eye.

The Demonslayer Edge instantly took three lives like a demon summoned from hell.

Han Shuo restrained the last archer by grabbing the back of his neck, lifting him up using one hand. The archer was only one meter and seventy centimeters tall, so his legs flailed around upon being lifted up. He grunted gutterly and couldn't utter a complete word as he looked down in horror at Han Shuo.

The quiver on the back of this poor archer had long since been thrown away. Although he struggled with all that he had, he couldn't reach Han Shuo since his two arms were shorter than the latter's. It looked quite comical.

"Kid, be good and your crime will be lessened!" Han Shuo grinned. He walked back towards Lawrence while easily holding the archer.

The other space adept mage didn't get to take a few steps before he was coldly shot down by a dark arrow in the middle of his back. The dead mage fell from the rooftop to the ground.

The person who shot the arrow was the old assassin Lucky. Han Shuo had seen the happenings clearly, so he wasn't surprised about the space adept mage's death.

"Who, who dares to fight on the street!?" The cavalry rushed from a distance only when everything was over. The leading officer was fully armored as he shouted loudly.

"You city guards are truly unreliable!" Lawrence on the other side shook his head and let out a long sigh. He didn't spare a glance towards the officer and looked towards Han Shuo with appreciation, "Many thanks, Bryan!"

"Alright. I choked this person unconscious, so you look after him yourself. Remember that I protected you this time, so the Dark Mantle higher-ups will take note of this accomplishment. In addition, I protected the order of the northern castle and prevented a malicious assassination, so the Northern Guard should record this credit for me!" Accomplishing two deeds in one go, what a great harvest! Han Shuo was secretly smug.

“Got it!” Lawrence understood what he meant and answered with a smile.

“Mm, there’s no more danger on the road, I’ll be leaving then!” Han Shuo only flung out these words before leaving in style.

The officer had originally wanted to stop him, but he simply didn’t have to courage to say anything and let Han Shuo leave leisurely when he recognized Lawrence and saw how the two were chatting warmly.

Han Shuo reached the Dark Mantle’s northern stronghold at night as he’d promised. Emily had been waiting for quite some time. When she saw Han Shuo appear, she immediately waved her hand to signal Chester to withdraw so that she could be intimate with Han Shuo.

The two discussed what had happened after they’d parted at the Valley of Sunshine. They also talked about the Northern Guard’s stolen blueprint.

“Are there any clues?” Han Shuo asked Emily after listening.

“I’m inspecting this closely, but I can be certain that the people haven’t left Ossen City since the Dark Mantle immediately started investigations. Our people are stationed at all four gates. The foreigners are being detained by the Empire, so they have no chance to slip out.”

“We actually discovered a few suspicious groups recently. However, we can’t be sure if they were the ones behind this. I’m investigating this with full force. As long as I can determine which group did this, none of them will be able to escape Ossen City. You just wait for my news. Although this problem is tricky, the Dark Mantle will definitely handle it properly since it occurred inside the city.” Emily had a cautious expression as she whispered in a low voice.

“Store these two things well. They will definitely help increase your power!” Han Shuo took out the magic staff embedded with three amethysts, and a notebook in which he recorded everything he remembered from Ayermike Cotton’s ancient notebook. He handed them over to Emily.

“For, for me?” Emily was stunned upon seeing these two things, her mind temporarily dizzy. She understood clearly how valuable these things were.

Ayermike Cotton’s handwritten notebook had recorded his experiences, understandings, and feelings about dark magic. It was a sacred object that every dark mage would give an arm and a leg for. As for the magic staff, its value was even more difficult to calculate, given the terrifyingly rich dark elements on the surface.

Emily had already had a faint premonition when she heard Han Shuo say he had taken down a copy of the notebook. However, her heart still pounded wildly in disbelief when he actually handed these two treasures to her.

“Of course, they belonged to you the moment I got them. However you need to prepare a reason for this magic staff so it won’t rouse Candide’s suspicion!” Han Shuo had turned in the original handwritten notebook to Candide, but concealed the matter about t Ayermike Cotton’s magic staff. To dark mages, this magic staff certainly wouldn’t have the ordinary effect of magnifying magic spells. Han Shuo reminded Emily in advance so that she could evade Candide’s scrutiny.

Emily inhaled deeply and murmured, “The Dark Star staff belonged to magic god Ayermike Cotton. It’s thick covering of dark element can help dark mages gather their mental strength faster. Be it training or casting magic, the speed should be five times faster when using the Dark Star staff. This staff is considered a divine artifact for dark mages”

“Then there’s also the comprehension of dark magic from magic god Ayermike. If I can completely understand everything, my power will increase by leaps and bounds and reach new heights. These, these two things are simply priceless artifacts for dark mages!”

“No need to be so moved. I know full well of their value. They belong to you now!” When Han Shuo saw Emily so happy to the point of forgetting everything else, he hugged her by the waist and continued, “Eat this pill. It can give you eternal youth and is very beneficial to the study of dark magic.”

Emily’s heart almost stopped beating from excitement when she heard the two words “eternal youth”. One good thing after another was falling on her head today, all of which was brought about by Han Shuo. This was the first time she’d ever experienced such a thing in her life, and it also proved her position in Han Shuo’s heart.

“Eternal youth, eternal youth...” Emily was most concerned about her age. Her being older than Han Shuo had been a knot in her heart. Now that there was a medicine that could maintain eternal youth, she was willing to pay any price no matter what. Her whole being became distracted as she muttered nonstop.

“Eat it, I’ll help you dissolve the pill!” Han Shuo whispered. He pulled her over by the hand and brought the Rebirth Pill to her lips.

Emily’s eyes shone brightly, she swallowed the Rebirth Pill without hesitation. Afterwards her bones emitted cracking sounds as the Rebirth Pill reformed her body bit by bit Han Shuo’s help.

Like Fanny and Phoebe, Emily also had a need for the toilet. She only felt assured after Han Shuo told her the pill’s side effect.

Han Shuo left the stronghold and went straight to the Boozt Merchant Guild.

In the deserted training field inside the guild, Phoebe was wearing a pure white warrior outfit, her hair braided and tied into a ponytail. The sword in her hand whistled as it danced around. Her body moved like a lightning bolt within the field, shadow images appeared one after another from the high speed. Extremely sharp silver crosses blossomed from the sword as they hacked a huge rock into fragments with rumbling sounds.

Suddenly, Phoebe seemed to discover something. She raised the sword in her hand and shot spinning cross-blades towards a small tree. Cracking sounds echoed as the tree exploded into hundreds of pieces.

A black light flashed, a shadow behind the tree rushed forward at a very high speed and slipped through the spinning cross-blades. A huge killing aura enveloped Phoebe and restrained her. Dread spread from the depths of her soul and filled her mind. In the blink of an eye, everything around her seemed to be confined by the killing intent. Phoebe suddenly felt her body stiffen up, she simply couldn't move. A deep fear surged in her heart.

However, the violently churning killing intent suddenly stopped when it almost touched Phoebe's delicate body. It spread to the sides, not hurting her in the least bit. When the killing intent disappeared and she relaxed her whole body, Han Shuo appeared right in front of her eyes with a slight smile.

"Congratulations! I didn't expect you would reach the rank of great swordmaster at such a young age. Truly incredible!" Han Shuo looked at Phoebe with a smile and congratulated her.

Phoebe rushed into Han Shuo's chest with happy surprise, like a young swallow returning to its nest. A faint fragrance, mixed with a dash taste of sweat, instantly assaulted his nostrils. She tightly embraced Han Shuo and said in a sweet, excited voice, "All thanks to that medicinal pill or I wouldn't be able to breakthrough so quickly. Take a look, how am I different from before?"

Like Fanny, Phoebe's skin was soft and delicate like silk. Her already beautiful smile was now even more soul-shaking after the Rebirth Pill's reformation.

"You've become much more beautiful!" Han Shuo replied honestly.

"Mm, I'm all sweaty, let me take a bath first!" Phoebe softly pushed Han Shuo away and walked to her bathroom, somewhat embarrassed. Suddenly, she stopped halfway and said in a light voice that couldn't be lighter, "Come with me!"

Chapter 276: The lovebirds shared a bath

Ossen city palace, to the west in a luxurious residence...

NSFW

First prince Charles was currently pressing down on a plump, beautiful woman on a table. He moved strongly from behind, the beautiful woman's white buttocks swaying along in rhythm. She was like a ** enjoying his **.

After a bit, Charles let out a moan. His two legs trembled, his body softening like cotton candy as he collapsed on the beautiful woman's body and groaned, "Treasure, you are really charming!"

"Your Highness First Prince, please be sure to help my younger brother!" The beautiful woman lay still without moving, letting Charles' hands wander all over her body as she whispered coyly.

"Rest assured, the whole Empire is mine in the future, this small matter is nothing much!" Charles let out a perverted laugh. He took out an aphrodisiac pill, about to swallow it for another round of "battle".

However, at that moment, a strange sound echoed in the room. Charles' expression changed. He immediately put the pill away and quickly put on his pants, saying in a hurry, "I have an important matter to attend to, you must leave. Now!"

The beautiful woman hurriedly pulled up the dress pooling around her knees upon hearing this. She left through the side door without another word and disappeared in a blink of an eye.

The thin and tall duke Ashburn rushed in directly following the strange sound. He gave Charles a glance and said with displeasure, "I can't believe you still have the heart to be licentious at this moment."

"Sorry uncle, what happened?" Charles looked very humble in front of Ashburn. He bowed and honestly admitted his wrongdoings.

"Failure. Of the killers sent by Shadow Ghost, one was captured alive, the rest were slaughtered." Ashburn said in a low tone, his face gloomy.

“How could that be? We investigated clearly earlier, even if those killers couldn’t kill him, they shouldn’t have ended up like that?” Charles was shocked, he couldn’t understand how Lawrence had done it.

Ashburn was in a bad mood. The Shadow Ghost had suffered a heavy loss and one killer had even been captured alive, which made him very worried. He said again in a gloomy manner, “Something unexpected happened. That meddling Bryan seems to played a major role, otherwise the situation wouldn’t have been so bad!”

“The boyfriend of the Boozt Merchant Guild master Phoebe? How could it be?! He’s but an adept mage, what could he do with that kind of power?” Charles could hardly believe it. He had met Han Shuo last time in the Rose Garden and felt that Han Shuo’s power wasn’t enough to be feared.

“This person isn’t simple. After Aubrey came back from the Boozt Merchant Guild, his body was hot one moment and cold the other, and it turned into a serious illness a few days later. Even Aubrey, with his power, fell victim to this person’s trap. Bryan definitely isn’t easy to deal with. It seemed we first have to get rid of this hindrance now that he’s appeared again.” Ashburn paced back and forth as he thought for a while before saying coldly.

“All will be as uncle says!” To Charles, this uncle was his important backing. Ashburn held a great deal of power and played a crucial role in Charles’ fight for the throne. Moreover, Charles didn’t dare not listen to Ashburn given their familial relationship.

Nodding his head, Ashburn said, “Phoebe’s master is the sacred swordmaster Karel Ascot. He came to visit me earlier. The old fellow hasn’t expressed if he supports Lawrence or not, so we temporarily shouldn’t make an enemy out of him. This old fellow knows very well that I also have some experts, so I can’t allow them to act because of Bryan’s intimate relationship with Phoebe. The Shadow Ghost is now severely damaged and may not be able to mobilize their men again in a short time. Only you can kill Bryan!”

“No problem. A while ago at the Brut Merchant Alliance, the great swordmaster Leah Cain offended the lightning sacred magus Reynold Dila. He took advantage of the chaos in the Brut Merchant Alliance to escape to the Empire and flocked to my banner. He'll arrive in two days. No one knows about this yet, so he's the perfect one to send out."

"That maniac?" Ashburn was started, then nodded as he said with a sinister laugh, "Then I can be at ease!"

.....

Phoebe's room.

The sound of running water echoed from within. Phoebe's clear, cheerful voice sweetly resounded, "Heh, are you comfortable?"

Gentle mist covered the whole room from a spacious bathtub, the water inside decorated with countless petals emitting a fresh fragrance. Han Shuo was wearing shorts as he lay on the edge of the bathtub. Phoebe had a thin veil draped over her body. She sat next to Han Shuo and leaned over to massage him, helping his muscles relax.

Han Shuo squinted his eyes as he lazily lay still. He said, somewhat disappointed, "Comfortable yes, just not in the way I imagined it. I thought you wanted me to join you in the tub and do something else!"

"Humph, I knew you'd have naughty thoughts. Giving you a massage is good enough! I haven't ever given anyone a massage up until now, but you still aren't content!" Phoebe had her hair up in a high bun, with a few strands naughtily falling on her shoulder. The thin veil couldn't cover up her youthful air as her white jade skin revealed a natural rosininess.

Han Shuo had done it with Emily before coming here, but still found it hard to contain himself. It was a pity that he promised to not force Phoebe, so no matter how difficult it was, he could only grit his teeth and bitterly endure for fear that she'd be truly angered.

"Bryan, what was that pill you gave me? How could it be so miraculous? If you can refine a lot of it, our guild will definitely earn a lot of money. I'm afraid no woman can resist the temptation of this medicinal pill even if they have to pay a sky high cost!" Phoebe softly asked Han Shuo like a little wife. However, her mind was still thinking business as she massaged Han Shuo's shoulders.

"Forget it. That pill cost too much in precious resources. Besides, the Rebirth Pill can not only give you eternal youth, it can also help you revitalize yourself. Be it body or spirit, both will be reinforced immensely. I had to spent a lot of time collecting the treasures of heaven and earth in the depths of the Dark Forest to finally refine a few. You think it's easy to make?!" Han Shuo explained with a wry smile. Both Fanny and Phoebe were obsessed with the Rebirth Pill. Han Shuo gave them the Rebirth Pill as he was mostly worried about their power. Unfortunately, they only cared about maintaining their beauty and didn't focus much on raising their strength.

"Is that so? Then there's really no way!" Phoebe exclaimed in disappointment, then softly giggled, "That's also fine. From now on, no one can have such beautiful skin like me, hehe!"

Han Shuo's heart immediately jumped upon hearing her say so. He secretly wondered if Phoebe, Emily, and Fanny would detect anything from each other's delicate skin when they met each other. If so, then wouldn't he be hoisting himself high on an execution stage of his own making?

Slightly shaking his head, Han Shuo didn't want to think about it anymore. He turned his body to embrace Phoebe tightly. Her soaked, smooth, white skin seemed to merge with the thin veil, causing him to have naughty thoughts.

"Just kissing okay?!" Phoebe said softly with a chuckle and turned her fragrant lips to Han Shuo.

When their lips touched, Han Shuo finally couldn't suppress himself. However, he was in a bind as he remembered his promise to Phoebe earlier.

Suddenly, an idea popped in his head. Han Shuo recalled several secret demonic magic methods from Chu Cang Lan and formed a secret plan. While he intensely kissed Phoebe's cherry lips, his hands caressed some of her sensitive areas. He tried using a few provocation methods to see if they were really that miraculous.

“Oh...”

Phoebe moaned out sobbing-like sounds. Her soft body's temperature kept soaring as her smooth skin flushed red. Her breathing grew more and more urgent. She finally couldn't suppress it any longer and hugged Han Shuo tightly like an octopus.

Phoebe was already this aroused after Han Shuo had surreptitiously used two moves. This truly made him happy inside. He secretly thought that the demonic magic from that old monster Chu Cang Lan was truly useful. He moved his hands up and down then rested them around her small waist while kissing Phoebe.

It wasn't long before Phoebe lost control of herself first. Her eyes glazed as if she'd fallen into an erotic dreamland. She took the initiative to take the thin veil off her body. She panted and glided over to Han Shuo, softly calling, “Bryan... Bryan...”

Secretly rejoicing, Han Shuo put on an evil smile and said, “If we continue like this, I'm afraid I won't be able to hold myself back. Let's stop here today?”

“You scoundrel, I knew I couldn't escape the palm of your hand. Forget it, forget it!” Phoebe softly exclaimed and slowly removed everything on her body, revealing a perfect figure. Highly protruding peaks, flat belly and a pair of long, extremely beautiful legs appeared just like that in front of Han Shuo without cover.

Letting out a light cry, Phoebe took the initiative to move over to Han Shuo and reached out with her jade hands to help fling off his shorts. She used her strength to hug Han Shuo tightly and buried herself into his broad chest, whispering, “After seeing you relieve yourself last time in the Valley of Sunshine, I had already intended to give it to you then. From now on, you don't need to hold back anymore!”

Han Shuo was between laughter and tears, but had no way to explain. He hadn't thought that a misunderstanding would lead to this. It seemed this was also thanks to Emily's assistance.

NSFW

Han Shuo naturally wouldn't be polite when a beauty was right in front of him. He turned and pressed Phoebe down, his broad chest squeezing her high twin peaks. His hands unceremoniously caressed her body and skillfully parted her firmly closed legs. He looked directly at her face and asked, "Why do you like me?"

While he spoke, his pole also lifted and touched Phoebe's wetness. His hands didn't stop caressing her sensitive areas to rouse her lust.

"I don't know, maybe after that assassination. I hated you then, but your image kept appearing in my head. I didn't know when this resentment gradually disappeared, but your image couldn't be dispersed from my mind." Phoebe answered quickly in the midst of her gasps. It seemed these words had been in her heart for a long time and had never ceased.

The moment Han Shuo stepped into this world and started practicing demonic magic, he had decided to not live life with any restraint. The more he came in contact with this originally cold beauty, the more he understood his feelings for her. He knew he couldn't leave her, even though it wasn't the same obsession that he had for Fanny.

While Phoebe twittered, Han Shuo closed his eyes for a moment in silence, his hands subconsciously casting the demonic magic provocation method. He himself didn't know how effective this secret method was, but Phoebe had tacitly given her approval. While he had yet to act, Phoebe suddenly let out a loud scream.

A moment later, Han Shuo felt his lower body being wrapped in a warm, humid grip.

After a long while, Han Shuo sluggishly sat in the bathtub. Phoebe was sitting on his strong thighs like a kitten, her hands wrapped around his neck. She buried her face in his chest in a weak, lazy, but satisfied manner.

"Did it hurt?" Phoebe's earlier performance could only be described as insane. This was her first time, so Han Shuo couldn't help but ask in concern.

“I, I don’t know. I think I went crazy. There was basically no pain. When I snapped out of it I was already like this!” Phoebe was embarrassed, her voice small as a mosquito’s.

Han Shuo was shocked upon hearing these words. He secretly thought that the demonic sexual provocation method was truly overbearing indeed. Even a girl with a resolute mind like Phoebe couldn’t help but fall into madness. If it had been an ordinary woman, they might have lost all reason and become a harlot begging for punishment.

“I’m dead tired, let’s rest for a while!” Phoebe was truly tired. She’d initiated the earlier lovemaking and had demanded madly from Han Shuo. Moreover it was her first time, so her whole body was sluggish.

“Mm, you rest!” Han Shuo gently picked Phoebe up and placed her on a warm place next to the bathtub. He himself sat cross-legged in the bathtub and circulated the magical yuan.

Chapter 277: Advancing to Archmage

Necromancer

The eastern section of Ossen city was where the business organizations gathered and associations were established. Aside from all sorts of shops, the Magic Association, Swordsman Association, Archer Association, Thief Association, and Mercenary Association were all located in the eastern part of the city.

These large and small guilds were extremely influential and spanned the entire Profound Continent. They were in every single country and were accredited organizations for all professions. As long as any mage or swordsman was accredited by the association, they would be able to receive an appropriate rank that was recognized by any country on the Profound Continent.

The Magic Association's building was like a tall tower. It looked like a magic tower from afar. Unlike the Swordsman Association and Mercenary Association buildings, its entrance was not filled with endless people. Instead, very few people entered, causing the Magic Association's entrance to appear rather deserted.

Mages were the most mysterious group of people on the Profound Continent. In terms of numbers, they were naturally unable to compare to the vast number of swordsmen and knights. That was why there appeared to be so few mages that came to the Magic Association to be tested.

Since Phoebe was too tired right now and had yet to wake up. Han Shuo arrived at the Magic Association by himself after daylight broke, after putting her on the bed properly. Right now, Han Shuo had the mental strength of a grand magus, but was still an archmage in name. Furthermore, Han Shuo had fully assimilated Clarendon's soul and could now proficiently use all the necromancy spells that the latter had known after several days of endless practice in the cemetery of death.

However, aside from the magic abilities that Clarendon possessed, he'd also gained the knowledge of two new spells, "Plague" and "Soul Shock", from the book entitled “Necromancy Magic” that he had found in the Cemetery of Death. “Plague” was similar to “Corpse Reanimation”. It was a most notorious, as well as the most feared, large-scale killing magic. The spell “Plague” had made a great contribution as to why necromancers were so feared.

“Plague” was a pure destructive magic. The scale of this magic was not large, but what was terrifying was that it had the ability to spread quickly. As long as one person was affected by “Plague” within a town or city, unless they were immediately burnt to death and buried, the spell would follow the person wherever they went, infecting more and more people and cause them to die as their bodies rotted.

As long as a village, city, or even an empire did not quickly deal with it, the place might become a hellhole. If coupled with the spell “Corpse Reanimation”, an archmage necromancer, who was at the archmage level, would be able to reanimate all of those people who had succumbed to “Plague”, creating a terrifying zombie army out of nowhere.

Han Shuo did not plan to practice “Plague” yet, since this spell was truly too terrifying. Once “Plague” was casted, even Han Shuo himself would find it hard to control. This sort of pure destructive magic was a nightmare for any country. There was no question about him being the public enemy of the entire continent if he were to cast such a spell, so he decided not to practice it after careful consideration.

“Soul Shock” was a spell that directly affected the soul. Archmage necromancers had a higher understanding of the soul, and could use their own mental strength to attack the opponent’s soul as a kind of surprise attack.

Normally, a mage’s mental strength was far stronger than that of a swordsman or a knight. In face of this sort of direct attack on the soul, they were still able to defend a bit with their mental strength, but swordsmen and knights had much weaker mental strength compared to mages, so they would be at a huge disadvantage in face of this sort of attack on the soul.

Han Shuo was currently practicing “Soul Shock”, but since Clarendon’s memories did not have any experience in using this spell, it was impossible for him to quickly grasp it. Spells of the archmagus level were far deeper and difficult to understand than spells of the previous levels. Even if one knew the incantation, it was still very difficult to cast it correctly. Only when their recognition and understanding of the soul reached a very high level would they be able to cast it. Although Han Shuo had yet to reach this realm, it would not be able to stop him from advancing to the archmage level.

“Excuse me, did you come to advance your level?” A young woman, wearing a sky blue one-piece, asked with a smile after Han Shuo walked into the Magic Association.

Han Shuo nodded, then said with a smile, “That’s right, I plan on advancing to a necromancer archmage, so where should I start?”

“First, you need to provide proof that you are indeed an adept mage. Then you have to pay a thousand gold coins as a testing fee. Regardless of whether you succeeding or not, this fee will belong to the Magic Association. Do you accept?” This girl replied politely with a kind smile, while looking at Han Shuo with a bit of shock. There were not many mages that practiced necromancy. It surprised her that such a young man had the confidence to advance to the rank of archmage.

A thousand gold coins. It seems that this Magic Association is very profitable! Han Shuo momentarily blanked, then asked directly, “No problem, when can we start?”

“Give me your certificate and the gold coins, I can only tell you after going upstairs and asking about it!” The young woman replied with a smile.

Han Shuo handed over his graduation certificate from the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force, as well as two bags of gold coins to the girl. After a glance at Han Shuo’s proof, her expression became very odd, and looked at Han Shuo as if she saw a monster, before quickly saying, “Wait a moment, I’ll be right back!”

The moment she finished speaking, the girl hiked her skirt a little, then ran up the magic tower. Her expression was extremely strange, causing Han Shuo to be a bit surprised.

There were five floors in the Magic Association in total, with large-scales boundaries on every floor. There was dense magical essence within the boundaries. Although Han Shuo felt a bit confused by the girl's actions, he didn't release a yin demon to go and pry due to the existence of the magical boundaries.

After a while, a kind-looking old man with white hair hurried down the stairs. From the magical symbol on his chest, Han Shuo could tell that he was an earth grand magus. There were also a few mages behind the old man, two water archmages, two thunder archmages, and four adept mages.

"I am Ares Hosein, the person in charge of the Magic Association in the Lancelot Empire. I am in charge of the advancement exams for mages in the Lancelot Empire. Are you planning to advance to the rank of necromancy archmage?" The old man walked over with Han Shuo's certificate and looked at him with glittering eyes, as if he was a bit surprised.

Han Shuo nodded and said with certainty, "That's right, are there any problems?"

"No-no problems at all!" Ares quickly said and looked at Han Shuo's certificate. "You advanced from a mage apprentice into an adept mage in less than two years. This-This is a miracle! Especially since you practice necromancy. If it weren't for that fact that I am familiar with your dean, Emma, and recognize that she created this certificate, I would definitely think that you had faked it."

So this was this was the case! Han Shuo thought with surprise. Then he smiled, "Then, can I start?"

"Of course, of course. Our test is different from your academy's. We only need to test your precise mental strength. You just need to release the strongest magic you are capable of releasing in order for us to determine if you passed or not,” Ares’s attitude was surprisingly good. He said amiably, “Come with me to the second floor, we’ll conduct the test there.”

There was a blue boundary in the middle of the second floor, while the hard wall was engraved with all sorts of magic symbols. After arriving on the second floor, Ares took out a magic stone used to test mental strength and handed it to Han Shuo, “Pour your mental powers into it. We can use the data from it to confirm whether your mental strength fits the criteria.”

As Han Shuo slowly infused mental strength into the magic stone, it slowly began to glow. When Han Shuo noticed that Ares was revealing a satisfied expression, he stopped infusing mental strength in order to not pass the archmage mental strength test in a surprising manner.

“Not bad, your mental strength has indeed reached the level of an archmage. Next, you can stand inside the boundary and cast one of the strongest spells you know. We can determine through the spell whether you have truly reached the level of an archmage!” Ares’s attitude towards Han Shuo was extremely good as he pointed towards the boundary kindly and said.

With the level of development of Han Shuo’s brain, his speed in gathering and releasing mental strength was ten times that of normal mages. Last time in the Babylon Academy of Magic and Forces testing, Han Shuo had understood that when other people tested their mental strength, the magic stone would glow slowly, but because Han Shuo’s brain was different from normal people’s, the speed at which he gathered mental strength was extremely quick. Thus, he pretty much instantly caused the magic stone to glow at the brightest luminosity.

During the test with the magic stone today, Han Shuo intentionally released his mental strength slowly, and didn’t completely release his mental strength of a grand magus in order to avoid unnecessary trouble. Therefore, he didn’t pass with any surprise.

“No need to stand in the boundary. Us necromancers don’t need to be that troublesome!” Han Shuo smiled lightly, then properly chanted out a necromancy spell. An evil knight, in pitch black armor, riding a warhorse with both eyes spurting fire and carrying a huge bone stick appeared on the ground out of nowhere.

It was a publicly acknowledged fact that evil knights could only be summoned by archmage necromancers. When Han Shuo's evil knight appeared, it basically proved his level as an archmage. This was even more convincing than other powerful spells.

"God, you actually became an archmage from a magic apprentice in less than two years. This is too unbelievable! Oh yes, why did Dean Emma allow you to leave the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force? Her necromancy major shouldn't have an archmage necromancer yet. She should've tried to keep you," The moment Ares saw the evil knight appear, he knew that there was no need to say anything more. Han Shuo truly did possess the power of a necromancy archmage.

Chapter 278: A crazy proposal

“So, can you confirm my qualifications now?” Han Shuo understood full well that his magical cultivation played a huge role in his achievement today. Another reason was that his luck was quite good.

“No problem. Please wait for a moment and I’ll complete everything the rest for you!” Ares replied readily and turned to nod at the archmage next to him. The baggy-robed archmage took Han Shuo’s documents to the third floor.

“Mister Ares, that person has come by again.” The young girl, who’d been waiting downstairs, tapped her way up and informed Ares.

Ares was stunned. He waved his hand and said, “Let him come up!”

Not long after, Candide came up with a remote expression. He was immediately a bit dazed upon seeing Han Shuo standing there.

Han Shuo was also stunned, as he hadn’t expected to meet Candide in a place like this. A glint flashed through his eyes, which quickly returned to normal. He stood still while still maintaining his smile.

“You old thing. Only now did you find time to spare to come visit me!” Ares laughed heartily. He seemed to have known Candide for a long time.

“I wouldn’t bother coming if I didn’t have something to ask. What, are you busy with something right now?” Candide swept a glance at Ares, then over at Han Shuo. He asked with a frown, pretending to not know who Han Shuo was at all.

“Hehe, nothing! The Babylon Academy of Magic and Force just produced a magic genius. It took him less than two years to go from a mage apprentice to archmage. This is truly a great thing! His records will become an important note in the Magic Association.” Ares pointed excitedly at Han Shuo and introduced him to Candide.

Candide too was clearly shocked. He truly hadn’t expected Han Shuo to have reached the rank of archmage necromancer. His eyes glinted as he stared at Han Shuo a few times over before opening his mouth to speak, “Ares, if you don’t mind, I would like to have a private chat with this young magic genius.”

“I don’t mind, but I don’t know if he minds or not!” Ares glanced at Han Shuo, leaving it up to him.

Ares obviously didn’t know of the relationship between Han Shuo and Candide. Han Shuo understood what Candide was saying, so he turned to nod at Ares, “I have to wait for my documents anyway. Since I have nothing to do, I don’t mind chatting with him for a bit!”

“Alright, then I’ll go upstairs first. The rest of you guys can go downstairs. I won’t allow anyone else to come up!” Ares ordered the people on the second floor before turning to Candide with a smile, “His archmage certificate will be completed by the time you two are done chatting. Just come up and let me know then.”

“No need to nag, I already know what to do!” Candide likely had a very close relationship with Ares, as he impatiently urged the latter.

Waiting until Ares and his group left, Candide looked at Han Shuo in an odd manner and said, “I’ve just got news from the Valley of Sunshine that you killed Ferguson from the Church of Light. I was going to find you to get a better understanding of the situation. I didn’t expect you to be here, with the identity of a archmage necromancer to boot. You’ve truly given me a surprise!”

Han Shuo wasn’t able to suppress his heart’s desire during the chaos in the Valley of Sunshine. He had acted out madly, killing grand magus Ferguson of the Church of Light and heavily injured chief Adam of the House of Menlo. This news had spread all over the Valley of Sunshine. Candide had no reason to remain in the dark towards this matter as one of the Dark Mantle’s three heavyweights.

Han Shuo silently looked at Candide, knowing that he didn’t need to say anything about this matter since Candide already knew about it. On the other hand, he knew Candide would mention this, so he’d prepared something to say beforehand.

Seeing Han Shuo sink into silence and not say anything, Candide looked raptly at him, saying in a low tone, “I don’t know how you managed to kill Ferguson. I likely wouldn’t be able to kill him myself. Ferguson is dead now, but with the great influence of the Church of Light, you’ll meet an endless amount of trouble.

“Moreover, I heard that you cast the lost spell Corpse Resurrection? I think the Calamity Church will certainly try to recruit you. These two churches have a massive amount of believers all over the Profound Continent. They have dozens of methods to deal with you, so how are you going to deal with it?”

“Different situations call for different measures. If they dare to act against me, I’ll kill all of them without leaving a single one behind!” Han Shuo’s face was ruthless. His body naturally emitted a killing intent as he said in a voice as cold as ice.

Han Shuo didn’t need to conceal anything since Candide already knew about this matter. When he released the killing aura from his body, a figure at Candide’s level immediately reacted.

Nodding his head, Candide replied with a grave expression, “I believe that your power is by no means weak. However, the Church of Light doesn’t only have Ferguson. They don’t even need to deal with you directly. They only need to pressure the king. I think His Majesty won’t run the risk of offending the church for a minor character like you.”

Han Shuo was even more silent upon hearing these words. With his current intelligence and Candide’s reminder, Han Shuo could naturally understand what he was trying to say.

Taking a deep breath, Candide said, “You’re someone that I brought into the Dark Mantle myself. I’m very happy that you have such a great amount of power. Now that you have the identity of an archmage, I will give you an idea!”

Han Shuo’s thoughts raced, he asked in surprise, “An idea?”

Han Shuo had already been mentally prepared on how to live his life afterwards before he had killed Ferguson, so he wasn’t too worried. If the Lancelot Empire sold him out under the pressure from the Church of Light, Han Shuo was confident that he could use the cemetery of death to escape. However, it'd be more difficult to move around from then on.

Now that Candide had an idea, Han Shuo naturally wanted to know if there was a way to deal with this two pronged attack against him.

“Be it the Church of Light or the Calamity Church, both are religious institutions. Their power can't dictate the movement of the Lancelot Empire, despite their widespread influences. The Church of Light is a little more difficult to deal with since they act in the light. However, if you can somehow prove your strength to be powerful enough to make His Majesty value you more than the Church of Light, given my understanding of him, the king won't care one whit about the church's pressure.”

“As long as his Majesty is willing to protect you, even the Church of Light wouldn't dare to do anything to you within the Lancelot Empire. After all, they aren't powerful enough to destroy the Lancelot Empire.” Candide looked at Han Shuo and voiced his advice.

Han Shuo was enlightened by Candide's words. What a country needed most was indeed talented people. Those with potential were especially important to the future of the country. The Lancelot Empire had been able to maintain its strong standing for so many years due to the efforts of deity Ayermike Cotton.

A sacred magus could release a terrifyingly strong magic that could directly destroy a city. A deity at the demigod level was even more powerful and could create unimaginable destruction. It was precisely due to the existence and assistance of Ayermike Cotton that the Lancelot Empire became so prosperous.

After many years passed, a supernaturally powerful figure was still the most important resource to a country, particularly holy existences, such as sacred swordmasters, sacred magi, and sacred knights. The number of powerful figures was the best basis on which to determine the strength of a country. If Han Shuo could prove to the king that he could reach such a level, the king wouldn't be concerned about the threats from the Church of Light and would even wholeheartedly ensure his safety.

“Candide, do you mean...?” Han Shuo understood his advice, but hadn’t thought of a specific way to actually do it. After all, words alone weren’t enough to prove to others that one was very powerful, were they?

“The simplest way is to challenge others and prove your strength through challenging powerful people. I’ve heard that you’ve been hanging out with Lawrence in the city’s Northern Guard. What can Lawrence hide from me? It would actually be faster for you to obtain a noble title through challenging others. When your strength arouses interest from His Majesty, you’ll be able to become a noble without any accomplishments to your name. Why bother with trying to achieve military feats?” Candide mocked, seemingly dismissive of Han Shuo and Lawrence’s plans.

“Challenge, challenge powerful people. Good idea...” Han Shuo muttered to himself. He then took a deep breath and sincerely thanked Candide, “Many thanks lord Candide. I know what to do now!”

Nodding his head, Candide said casually, “If it weren’t for the fact that you are under my charge, and you brought back Ayermike Cotton’s notebook, I wouldn’t go to such lengths for you. I already came up with this plan to help you once I heard that you’d killed Ferguson. Challenge the people listed on this scroll one by one. You can kill them all, as they’ve committed crimes worthy of death, but have managed to escape the punishment of the Empire’s laws. Even the Dark Mantle can’t find any evidence to catch them, so we want to borrow your ability to execute them.”

“Since you have the power to kill Ferguson, it won’t be hard to execute these people openly and fairly. I will help record your credit. You can quickly gain fame by killing these people. As for the king, I’ll be responsible for communicating with him and obtaining the title of viscount for you if all goes well. Not only will His Majesty not exert pressure on you due to the Church of Light, but he can even warn them against you. As your position and fame rise, that kid Lawrence will be very excited. This is really killing many birds with one stone!”

Candide laughed craftily with a sinister face after finishing his speech. It seemed like he had considered this for a long time, and was very smug about this idea.

“Master Candide, why do I feel like I’m being used?!” Han Shuo was flabbergasted. He understood that this method was good. However, upon seeing Candide laugh so sinisterly, he still felt that the old man helping him was only one aspect, and the main purpose was to use him to eradicate opposing elements.

Rolling his eyes at Han Shuo, Candide said, “Consider this a mission. I’ll record the credit under your name. These damn dogs thought they could escape from my palm? Heh heh, this time, you’ll all die together!”

“Understood!” Han Shuo nodded in agreement. He knew from Candide’s insidious sneer that the old man already had some sort of plan.

“Good. I still have some magic knowledge to consult Ares about. Ayermike’s notebook is truly too profound. even I couldn’t fully understand and have to ask that old thing!” Candide complained and started walking upstairs. At the door, Han Shuo saw him release some magic to dispel the previous enchantment formed before their conversation had begun. Then Candide called out, urging, “Come, quickly give this brat his certificate! He’s very impatient!”

“Coming!” Ares replied as he came down with a slight smile. He walked over to Han Shuo and handed him the certificate before saying with a smile, “Congratulations Bryan, with this certified proof from the Magic Association, you are now officially an archmage.”

“Thank you.” Han Shuo replied with a smile. He glanced at Candide, who was looking on with a sinister face, secretly cursing in his heart before walking downstairs.

“Congratulations, you’re something alright! Already an archmage necromancer at such a young age!” As Han Shuo reached the first floor, the receptionist offered her congratulations with admiration.

Han Shuo nodded and flashed a bright, radiant smile at the girl before taking a direct path away from the Magic Association.

The girl blushed at his brilliant smile, her heart beating many times faster than normal. She secretly thought that he was so tall, young, and handsome!

Han Shuo was one meter ninety centimeters tall and possessed a natural evil temperament due to his practice of demonic magic. Him attracting the attention of the opposite sex was simply a matter of course.

“First target – Colbert, a swordmaster who’s raped and murdered seven girls. Currently residing in the outskirts of the Empire’s Bimson City, mayor of Billow, title of baron!” Han Shuo raked his gaze over the list that Candide had given him after leaving the Magic Association. He smiled coldly as he walked towards the Empire’s transportation matrix.

Chapter 279: The arrogant challenger

Lancelot Empire, in a small town named Bellow on the outskirts of Bimson City.

—

Mayor Colbert had just finished eating a snack under the sunlight and was humming a little song as he lazily lay on the highest, most luxurious balcony in town. He squinted at the town girls walking around, trying to decide whose house he would visit to relax for the evening.

This small town wasn't big, but it could still produce a few thousands gold coins in tax revenue every year. Colbert could live somewhat comfortably off of this money. From time to time, when his interest was roused, he could randomly use brute force or abuse his privilege on the women in town. No one dared say anything.

That was because he had the title of a baron and the power of mayor, and he himself was a powerful swordmaster. All of these conditions were more than enough to make him an emperor of this small town.

"Ai, when will this kind of life end?!" A civilian had just returned from the mountains and was complaining in a low voice.

"I heard that Roots' wife was raped by Colbert again. This is the ninth time this year. How about we leave Bellow? This is no way to live!" Another civilian let out a long sigh and said helplessly.

"Mhm, we need to be a careful if we want to leave. We will die very miserably if he finds out. Truly evil!"

"Excuse me, is this Bellow?" Someone suddenly asked while the two were whispering to each other. The speaker was a very tall youth with a bright smile on his handsome face.

"That's right. Young man, what did you come here for?" One of them asked, puzzled.

"Does your mayor go by the name Colbert?" Han Shuo smiled and asked again.

The person nodded, his expression changing slightly as he added with disgust, "You know our mayor? And what do you do?"

"I have some small matters, where does he live?" Seeing this civilian reveal an expression of disgust upon hearing Colbert's name, Han Shuo immediately understood the situation in his heart.

"Go straight ahead. The biggest, most luxurious house you see is where he lives!" The other person answered then pulled his friend away from Han Shuo, whispering, "Don't you want to live anymore? You see how tall and strong he is? He's definitely a friend of that bastard Colbert. Don't bring trouble upon yourself!"

The two whispered back and forth as they quickly left after throwing Han Shuo a disdainful look. Han Shuo's sensitive hearing caught it all. He secretly thought that this Colbert was truly devoid of conscience. Even as a mayor of this small town, there wasn't a bad thing that he hadn't done.

Han Shuo quickly walked to the biggest house and said to the guard at the gate, "I want to meet mayor Colbert."

"Who are you?" The guard frowned and threw Han Shuo a glance as he replied.

The three yin demons surveyed the rooms in the house and took note of every detail for Han Shuo. He smiled and said, "I heard that mayor Colbert was a powerful swordmaster. This time I've come especially to challenge him to a fight. Please report this for me!"

"The mayor has no interest in you. You'd better leave while you can!" The guard rudely replied, seeming to have no intentions of making a report.

Taking a step forward, Han Shuo broke apart the door. He raised his voice and shouted, "Colbert, you coward! As a swordmaster, you still don't dare to accept my challenge?"

"Boy, are you purposely trying to make trouble?" The two guards were instantly shocked. They drew their swords, about to make a move.

Han Shuo fanned out two slaps, pushing back the two guards before they could see anything. Smiling as he look at the two clutching their faces, Han Shuo said leisurely, "It would be best if you two were not to seek your own deaths!"

Han Shuo's loud shout echoed so far that half of Billow heard it. The townspeople immediately stopped what they were doing to come watch when they heard that someone had come to challenge Colbert.

Colbert had been squinting, leering randomly, when he obviously heard Han Shuo's voice. He shouted furiously from the high balcony, "Where do you come from, brat? You dare come to Billow to cause trouble!"

A dozen soldiers rushed out from inside the house to accompany Colbert's shout. Afterwards, Colbert walked out from the broken door with a cold face and shiny set of silver armor.

"What the hell are you looking at?! You damnable bunch of lowly people, scram!" The first thing Colbert did after walking out was roll his eyes and glare, cursing the civilians. Then he angrily looked at Han Shuo and said, "Little brat, you deliberately came to cause trouble, didn't you?"

"I have heard of Baron Colbert's great name as a swordmaster. I also train in the ways of the sword and was passing through Billow, so I hoped to ask your Lordship for some guidance. But I don't know whether your Lordship... has the guts to accept?" Han Shuo smiled blandly, waiting for Colbert's answer.

Colbert glared at Han Shuo and said in rage, "You, a little brat who doesn't know the height of the sky, dares to challenge me?! You really must be tired of living. Good! I accept your challenge. However, don't blame me if you die!"

"Of course!" Han Shuo replied straightforwardly.

"You guys back off. See how I kill him!" Colbert waved his subordinates away. He drew his sword, taking a deep breath. He suddenly calmed down.

"Young man, I'll let you attack first!" Colbert put on a generous face and said calmly to Han Shuo.

"Alright!" Han Shuo didn't drag his feet. As soon as he finished speaking, he walked calmly to Colbert and deployed a punch.

“Oh?!” Colbert was a little stunned seeing Han Shuo not take out his sword. However, he was even more surprised upon seeing no fighting aura radiating from that punch. Feeling strange, Colbert sneered and raised his sword to stab right back at the punch.

“Heh heh, courting death!” Han Shuo also spared a moment to jeer. His magical yuan condensed, dazzling red light bursting out from the punch.

The red light instantly surged and destroyed the milky white aura surrounding Colbert’s sword. The punch smashed into the sword, making a metallic clang. A current of hot air burst out, accompanied by Colbert’s tragic scream. He was blown away along with his sword and couldn’t stop vomiting blood.

“Oh my god, the demon is heavily wounded!”

“Great! I hope he just dies this time! We’ll be free then!”

“He’d best die, or Billow Town won’t have a day of peace!”

After seeing Colbert become heavily injured after just one hit, the townspeople, who were watching from a distance away, became as joyous as if it were a holiday and murmured in low voices.

“I, I have no hatred nor injustice with you, so why did you come for me?” His mouth overflowing with blood, Colbert immediately understood that Han Shuo’s strength was far above his after being heavily injured by a single punch. However, he didn’t know how or when he’d offended Han Shuo.

“Heh heh, because you deserve to die!” Han Shuo smiled coldly. He slowly approached Colbert and said, “I am Bryan, and you are the first!”

Bang! echoed a blow. Colbert had no strength to resist when the punch smashed down on his head. He immediately bled from all seven orifices and died on the spot.

“I fairly and openly killed him in a challenge, and all of you are witness to this.” Han Shuo turned to the lackeys, expressing that he didn’t do it on purpose. After saying this, he left Billow Town in style under the shocked, puzzled, and fearful gazes of the people.

The Empire wouldn't pursue the matter if one killed the opponent after a challenge was accepted. Candide had explained clearly to Han Shuo earlier. The old man would take care of the aftermath, so Han Shuo wasn't worried at all.

"Second target – water archmage Deborah in Bimson City. Killed a family of eighteen people three years ago in a magic shop over a magic staff. The aftermath was handled cleanly, leaving no clues. Successfully escaped the punishment of the Empire. Mm, she's the one!" Han Shuo took out the paper Candide gave him and skimmed it.

Candide had put his heart into it indeed. Each target was in close proximity to the previous one, making it convenient for Han Shuo to act.

Two hours later, In Bimson City, at the residence of Count Chapman Dean.

Han Shuo wore a mage outfit, his hand grasping the white bone staff. He gracefully appeared at the residence of Count Chapman Dean and spoke to the guard with a smile, "I'm looking for the honored water archmage Deborah."

"Follow me." This guard saw Han Shuo in a mage outfit with the white bone staff in his hand to boot. Therefore, he didn't dare be discourteous and led Han Shuo in respectfully.

When they arrived inside a big courtyard, the guard spoke, "Please wait a moment, I'll go inform Master Deborah!"

A while later, a short, slightly fat woman of around forty years of age walked out. She wore a luxurious magic robe and a blue space ring on her finger. She frowned suspiciously at Han Shuo and asked, "Who are you? I don't think I know you?"

Nodding, Han Shuo answered with a smile, "Of course, this is our first time meeting. However, I have admired your great name for a long time. This time, I came here to ask for your guidance on some magic knowledge,

I hope you agree!”

Upon hearing Han Shuo’s words, Deborah impatiently waved her hand, “And I wondered who you were. Don’t care. Scram now. Don’t make me angry, damn brat!”

Sweeping a look at the guard, Deborah reprimanded, “Next time clearly ask who the visitor is. Don’t think that all mages are acquainted with me. I have no time to deal with this immature brat!”

Finishing her speech, Deborah treated Han Shuo as though he were nonexistent and walked back inside, intending to continue fiddling around with some new magic potions.

“Ugly old granny, you don’t dare to accept my challenge? Or do you think that you’re so ugly that you wouldn’t want to let others look at you for too long?” Still with a smile on his face, Han Shuo deliberately played the old trick, using vicious words to anger his opponent.

Sure enough, Deborah immediately fumed over Han Shuo’s malice. She abruptly turned around, staring sinisterly at Han Shuo and said with a cold smile, “Fine. I accept your challenge. I’ll send you on your way to the underworld.”

A light flashed as a blue magic staff appeared in her hand. Deborah chanted an incantation and three men, five meters tall and each made of water, suddenly appeared out of nowhere on the rooftops and shot towards Han Shuo. The water men wielded sharp ice awls that emitted a brilliant cold light as they stabbed towards Han Shuo.

“Interesting!” Han Shuo let out an odd laugh. The white bone staff in his hand trembled as he quickly chanted an incantation. A white bone shield suddenly appeared in front of his body.

The five ice awls were faster than the water men and rammed straight at the shield’s surface with a huge amount of force. The ice awls shattered as cracks also appeared in the shield.

Han Shuo unhurriedly shrank the white bone shield’s size. The white bone staff once again shone. Two hate warriors, one evil knight, a dozen zombies, and twenty-odd skeletal warriors in addition to a team of flying gargoyles appeared in the air, filling the yard.

The evil knight rode a warhorse spitting fire, his hand holding an enormous bone lance. He stabbed out at the five meter tall ice man, piercing a big hole through the latter. The evil knight ordered his skeletal warhorse to spew out a breath of fire, and the rest of the ice men evaporated into mist with a sizzling sound.

“You, you’re actually an archmage necromancer!” Deborah was terrified, her voice trembling as she shouted.

Necromancy mages were at a disadvantage against light mages of the same level. However, they held a major advantage against other magic majors due to their ability to summon powerful creatures. If it hadn’t been for the disappearance of the realms of grand magi and sacred magi as chronicled in the Necromancy Codex, the number of necromancy mages wouldn’t be as few as they were now.

When the Canopy of Necromancy spread out across the sky, the speed and strength of the dark creatures inside suddenly increased immensely. Caught within the Canopy of Necromancy, two water men were surrounded by a huge number of dark creatures.

The evil knight in particular now charged forward with terrifying force directly towards water archmage Deborah. The hovering gargoyles flashed out as deadly shadows, one after the other in, a manner that appeared very fast and strange, thanks to the aid of the Canopy of Necromancy.

Han Shuo didn’t need to rely on the little skeleton, earth elite zombie, and wood elite zombie nor his magical cultivation in this fight. He had gained an absolute advantage using purely necromancy magic alone. Except for light archmages, no other mage at the same level as him could be his match. Even if the opponent was a light archmage, Han Shuo could still easily kill them as the little skeleton, earth elite zombie, and wood elite zombie were all immune to light magic.

Therefore, Han Shuo was invincible when fighting mages of the same rank, even without using demonic magic!

Chapter 280: Infamy

“Damn it!” Deborah cursed in a low voice. She had clearly felt that something was wrong and immediately retreated to her room. She was actually very quick, despite her short and fat stature. She intended on hiding in her room to hinder the attacks from the dark creatures.

She released a high level water magic ice spell, creating a white fog that covered a vast area. A crystal clear ice wall sealed the door and emitted white mist beneath the sunlight.

The evil knight spurred his warhorse forward, holding a bone lance bigger than his body, as he charged. He raised the bone spear and stabbed fiercely at the ice wall.

Clang!

Miraculously, the ice wall condensed by the ice spell actually had great defensive ability. The huge bone lance had created such a huge impact upon colliding with the ice wall, but could only drill a small hole. It couldn't break through the defenses of the ice wall.

“Ice Blade Slash!” Deborah's shout echoed from inside the room.

Cold wind howled as snow scattered across the sky. Blades of ice spun as they shot towards the dark creatures that occupied the yard. The low level skeletal warriors couldn't withstand the ice blades, causing their bones to scatter across the ground. Even the flying gargoyles fell down in succession under the attack of the ice blades.

However, higher ranked creatures, such as zombie warriors and hate warriors, still stood firmly after being struck by the ice blades. The group slowly advanced towards the room that Deborah was in, joining forces with the evil knight and assaulting the ice wall.

Han Shuo smiled coldly as he stood proudly in the yard under the Canopy of Necromancy. He leisurely watched the fight between the dark creatures and Deborah, and secretly exulted in the most appropriate way to use necromancy magic.

Clang!

The ice wall finally crumbled into pieces beneath the ferocious stabbing of the bone lance in the evil knight's hand. He rushed into Deborah's room with his warhorse. Two hate warriors and several zombie warriors followed behind and instantly surrounded the room.

"I surrender, I surrender!" Deborah paled in horror and involuntarily screamed.

When the evil knight destroyed the ice wall and charged into the room with its necromancy troops, Deborah knew that defeat was nigh. She was instinctively scared by the ferocious, heartless eyes of the evil knight and immediately shouted out in a desperate attempt to preserve her poor life.

Whoosh whoosh whoosh!

A dozen bone spears hurtled through the windows, two of which ambushed Deborah behind. Deborah had yet to react when they pierced through her chubby body and pushed her towards the evil knight.

The evil knight raised his huge bone lance up high. When the lance fell, Deborah's head also went flying. A stream of blood spewed out and fell upon a smoking green potion, causing it to blow up.

"Murder, murder!" The guard, who'd led Han Shuo in earlier, was instantly horrified when he realized from Deborah's tragic scream that she must've been killed. He shouted loudly while running to the courtyard in the back. Through the yin demons' surveillance, Han Shuo noticed troops quickly approaching in the distance. Since his target Deborah had been handled, Han Shuo wasted no time. He immediately sent the necromancy creatures back and cut off the mental strength that'd been used to maintain the Canopy of Necromancy, before leaving the yard using the levitation skills.

Over the next five days, Han Shuo used the transportation matrices to visit various cities and towns in the Empire to challenge powerful people. Not only did he win every fight, he even killed his opponents on the spot. His infamy speedily spread through the Empire.

Han Shuo's identity was slowly acknowledged amongst the ranks of the powerful in the Empire thanks to Candide deliberately spreading the news. Many nobles heard of this powerful young man's story and expressed their strong interest in him.

In a strictly guarded, luxurious hall in the Lancelot Imperial Palace, His Majesty the King, Uhtred Lancelot wore a loose robe, sitting on his throne as if waiting for something.

Uhtred was almost sixty years old and his body had become increasingly weaker due to his licentious youth. He looked thin despite his big bones and his hair was still black and glossy thanks to the treatment of special magic potions. It was a pity that his complexion didn't look too good.

"Your Majesty, Lord Candide has arrived!" A guard suddenly came in and softly informed.

This guard was clad in a shiny armor, his bearing cold and calm. His entire body emitted the air of a top expert. It could be seen from the insignia on his armor that he was a powerful sky rider.

"Let him in!" Uhtred instructed in an even tone upon hearing of Candide's arrival.

After a while, Candide respectfully came in with his darkened face and said in a low tone, "Candide greets Your Majesty!"

"Sit. I heard that one of your subordinates is a kid who has become very famous in these two days. What's going on?" Uhtred glanced at Candide and asked casually.

"He is called Bryan and was indeed recruited by me. This kid's strength is extraordinary, and his mindset is mature. He hasn't been part of the Dark Mantle for long, but has already helped with several major events. Oh, the notebook of Ayermike Cotton was also brought back from the Dark Forest by him. He's truly a rare genius." Candide explained in a respectful manner after sitting down.

"So he's Bryan, hehe, interesting, interesting. I remember that just yesterday, the Red Archbishop Kosse from the Church of Light sent people to ask for Bryan. I didn't expect to hear about him today. Candide ah Candide, isn't this a little too coincidental?" Uhtred spoke in a pleasant voice, as if he was recalling the past with an old friend.

Candide was secretly shocked, and he hastened to explain, "Your Majesty, please pardon this offense. This was arranged by me with the purpose of tying up some loose ends that are unfavorable to the Empire's peace. Bryan's strength is extraordinary. He not only passed the archmage test of the Magic Association, but has also mastered a special cultivation technique. The Empire needs such a young rare genius like him."

Uhtred looked at Candide and coldly snorted, "Candide, you think this kid is worthy enough for me to worsen our relations with the Church of Light?"

"I do think he is! Bryan is only eighteen this year. He entered the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force and became an archmage necromancer from a mage apprentice in less than two years. His skills are excellent. The future of such a person is limitless."

"It's just that he practices necromancy magic and has mastered some knowledge that is disadvantageous to the Church of Light, so they have deliberately acted against him. There was a light grand magus called Ferguson in the Valley of Sunshine. Bryan ultimately killed him and earned their rage."

"Being able to kill a light grand magus already proves his power. On the other hand, the most important point is that Bryan is still very young, so his future development is limitless. I think such a talented person shouldn't be let go. It's worth it even if we have to offend the Church of Light!" Candide answered respectfully.

Uhtred's eyes flashed upon listening to Candide's rant. He slightly straightened his body and looked at Candide, saying, "From an apprentice to an archmage necromancer in less than two years, and able to kill a light grand magus? Candide, are you sure that all this is true?"

"Your Majesty, you also know that my wife is the Dean of the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force, so I'm absolutely sure this is true. I gave him the order to challenge some notorious powerful people because I was originally doubtful of his strength. Now given the information that I've gathered, he indeed has the power."

"The rarest thing is that, such a genius like him actually has a very clean background. He has a strong sense of belonging to the Empire and is willing to serve the Empire. I believe he will grow bigger and might even become another figure like Karel Ascot as long as we give him the proper amount of time. Oh right, he's also the boyfriend of Phoebe, the most beloved female disciple of Karel Ascot!" Candide continued to explain.

"Oh, you say he has some sort of relationship with Karel Ascot?" Uhtred's face finally changed, surprised as he asked Candide.

"Yes. Not only so, he's even a good friend of His Royal Highness Lawrence. You know that His Highness studied military strategy at the Knight Academy, and is a disciple of Karel Ascot as well. The relationship between Phoebe and Han Shuo is very good. Last time in Valen City, Han Shuo contributed the most in exposing Bob Ascher's conspiracy." Candide was striking while the iron was hot upon seeing Uhtred reveal his surprise.

Uhtred fell silent as he listened to Candide. He thought for a moment before opening his mouth to speak, "Is that so? Then this Bryan is very interesting from what you've said. Oh, I heard that great swordmaster Leah Cain of the Brut Merchant Alliance has come to Ossen City. He's been quite arrogant these past couple of days. I lost three experts of his level to that guy. If that Bryan is as powerful as you say he is, let him challenge Leah Cain. If he can defeat that guy as proof for his talent, not only will I be willing to offend the Church of Light for him, but I can even bestow him with a title of nobility."

"Humph! This crazy swordsman Leah Cain has been too notorious. He fled to our Lancelot Empire after having offended sacred magus Reynold Dila in Brut. Such a despicable cowardly absconder actually dares to act so wildly? He's seeking death!"

"Understood!" Candide was slightly horrified upon hearing that Uhtred wanted Bryan to challenge Leah Cain. He was silent for a while, then secretly let out a long sigh as he agreed with resignation.

Chapter 281: Getting famous

Han Shuo was very busy over the next couple of days. He traveled through the majority of the Lancelot Empire through the teleportation matrixes. Within these few days, Han Shuo had killed three archmages, four swordmasters, and a great swordmaster all through challenges.

At the start, the challenges were rather smooth because Han Shuo's age was extremely deceiving. His enemies would think that he was of no threat, and would furiously accept the challenge after being provoked by Han Shuo. Later on, after continuous successful challenges made Han Shuo's name infamous, and when many powerful people linked together the identity of the people who had been killed, they silently started to have their own ideas.

Towards the end, the last three powerhouses on the list suddenly disappeared. Even after the Dark Mantle conducted thorough searches, they were unable to obtain any intelligence. Whenever Han Shuo reached a city, all of the experts within city would become worried, regardless of whether they'd done anything that they should feel guilty about. All of them were afraid that Han Shuo would look for them, and so they all disappeared under the guise of travelling.

These people couldn't help it as the people that died in Han Shuo's hands in recent days were all heavyweights. If they did not accept Han Shuo's challenge, then it would have a huge impact on their reputation. But once they accepted it, they might lose their lives. That's why they had no other choice but to find an excuse and hide.

When a great swordmaster died in Han Shuo's hands, the caused the notorious name of the young expert Bryan to reach its climax, causing the rest of the names on the list to disappear. That was why Han Shuo could only return to Ossen city for further instructions from Candide.

"Lord Candide, it's not that I didn't try my best. The three people in the end disappeared completely. It seems that I can only wait until you find them," Han Shuo and Candide were in a room in a small room at the north of the city.

“You did very well. His Majesty has already heard about your work, there is temporarily no need to take care of those three guys. We have another troublesome matter on our hands. If you can complete this task, His Majesty will definitely help you and grant you a noble title,” Candide said with a low voice. He frowned and taking a sip from the cup of tea in his hands.

“Oh? What is it?” Han Shuo momentarily blanked then asked.

“Leah Cain of the Brut Merchant Alliance also has the power of a great swordmaster. This person is titled the Crazy Swordsman. He is extremely vicious and savage, but have great power. He’s currently in our Ossen city. In the recent few days, he’s challenged three great swordmaster in Ossen City and was extremely disrespectful after winning. This has caused His Majesty to greatly dislike him.”

“His Majesty means to have you challenge Leah Cain. If you can defeat Leah Cain, then His Majesty will ignore the Church of Light’s pressure and fully protect you and bestow upon you a noble title. It’s just that Leah Cain’s strength is extraordinary, and possessed the strength of a great swordmaster more than ten years ago. According to the Dark Mantle’s news, this Leah Cain is very close with His Highness the first prince, Prince Charles. Due to your relationship with Lawrence, I’m afraid that you might lose your life if you are unable to beat him!” Candide looked truly worried about Han Shuo.

“Where is this Leah Cain right now?” Han Shuo was not afraid at all as he asked Candide with a smile.

“In the Garden House at the northern part of the city. The Garden House is the property of the first prince, Prince Charles. Other people doesn’t know this, but the Dark Mantle naturally does. It is also through him staying at this place that we guessed that he is related to the first prince. What, are you planning on challenging Leah Cain? Although they’re both in the great swordmaster realm, the difference in strength between one just entering it and one that has been in it for ten odd years is really large.

Furthermore, Leah Cain is called the Crazy Swordsman, he will be extremely difficult to deal with!" Candide exclaimed.

"Don't worry, I will deal with him!" Han Shuo finished the entire cup of tea in one gulp and directly stood up. Then he smiled, "To be honest, I kind of got addicted to the continuous challenges recently!"

In the recent few days, Han Shuo had continuously fought against several powerhouses, causing him to subtly feel like his strength was about to break through to the next level. The only way to quickly improve in the bloodlust realm was through battle and slaughter. When he did so against master, his strength improved even more quickly.

In eight continuous battles, Han Shuo challenged archmages and swordmasters, all of them powerhouses who were rather famous. He challenged a great swordmaster at the very end. That person was very dangerous. It was only through that fight that Han Shuo felt like that he showed signs of a breakthrough.

By now, Han Shuo definitely wouldn't use the little skeleton, earth elite zombie, or wood elite zombie. With his magical cultivation in the bloodlust realm, he was able to face a great swordmaster head on. If he didn't use the magical advantages he had, Han Shuo still had strength equivalent to a great swordmaster.

Leah Cain was possibly a bit stronger than a great swordmaster. Perhaps Han Shuo might run into some trouble, but if he used the little skeleton, the earth elite zombie, and the wood elite zombie, Han Shuo believed that he would absolutely succeed in killing Leah Cain, and so didn't pay heed to Candide's worries at all.

"Be careful, this guy is just very dangerous. He is famous for being hard to deal with in the Brut Merchant Alliance. Don't relax your guard!" Seeing that Han Shuo was walking outside, Candide issued a reminder as he was still worried.

"Understood, I'll be going then!" Han Shuo replied, then walked outside.

"Bryan!" Just after leaving the inn, he heard Emily's voice ring out from a carriage at the corner of the street. Chester, dressed like a carriage driver, waved his hand towards Han Shuo.

The Dark Mantle's information network was everywhere, adding onto the relationship between Emily and Candide, it was not hard if she wanted to find Han Shuo. Han Shuo also knew that Emily would come and find him. That why he hadn't been surprised at all when he heard Emily's voice.

Han Shuo looked around and suddenly saw a carriage parked afar. The knights at the entrance of the carriage were all familiar faces. The curtains of the carriage were lifted to reveal Lawrence's face. Lawrence was looking at him with a face of excitement as if he had a lot to say.

Han Shuo first stepped towards Emily and said, "Wait a moment for me."

With that, Han Shuo then quickly walked in front of Lawrence's carriage and called out softly, "What are you doing here?"

"Hehe, I accidentally found Madam Emily's carriage hurrying over here. I thought about it then followed, I didn't think that I would actually find you," Lawrence gave a soft, odd laugh as he said to Han Shuo.

Han Shuo understood that Lawrence might know about the relationship between him and Emily, so he merely rolled his eyes at Lawrence without saying anything. "Alright, what did you come to find me for?"

"Haha, I heard that you beat several experts in a row, and that you now have an enormous reputation. I didn't think that you were no longer hiding yourself and had started to truly reveal your prowess. This is for the best! In the last few days, I went to the royal palace twice, His Majesty asked me some things about you, seeming to be very interested at you. This is a good sign!" Lawrence was clearly very happy as he spoke with a smile.

"Of course he is paying attention to me. His Majesty told me to challenge Leah Cain, so I'm thinking about killing him now." Han Shuo said plainly.

The moment he said that, Lawrence felt shocked, then insanely happy as he said, "Leah Cain is on the side of the first prince, Prince Charles. I am certain about this through my own means. Bryan, are you confident in killing him?”

“What do you think?” Han Shuo looked towards Lawrence with a smile that was not quite like a smile, and replied with a question.

“Of course you do. You are very miraculous, I believe you! How about this, I’ll help you since you are going to challenge Leah Cain and spread this far and wide. As long as you can beat Leah Cain, your notorious name can be bleached. Hehe, since Leah Cain is someone of the Brut Alliance, there is probably no one in our nation who likes him!” Lawrence laughed evilly.

“Do as you’d like. If there’s nothing else, then I’ll find you after killing Leah Cain!” Han Shuo said.

“Nothing else, nothing else. Go and busy yourself with your own business!” Lawrence smiled strangely as he looked towards Emily’s direction.

From Lawrence’s expression and speech, Han Shuo understood that the former already knew about the relationship between himself and Emily. This was likely because he’d noticed Han Shuo and Emily hiding behind a fake mountain and getting intimate during his family’s banquet. He become even more certain about this after the events of Valen City.

However, with Han Shuo and Lawrence’s relationship right now, Han Shuo naturally believed that Lawrence would seal his mouth shut. There was nothing good about this for Lawrence at all if it came to light.

“Mhmm, I’ll be off then!” Han Shuo replied, then turned and walked towards Emily’s direction.

“Let’s go!” said Han Shuo after arriving at Chester’s location and entered Emily’s carriage.

“Mmm... Bryan, too miraculous. That pill was too miraculous!” Emily leapt into his embrace the moment Han Shuo entered the carriage, grabbing him tightly and voluntarily presenting her lips, in obvious emotional agitation.

Chester acted like normal, pretending that he hadn't heard anything as he slowly drove the carriage down the street.

After Chester's carriage left, Candide gazed at the direction the carriage left in out of the shadow of a corner. He muttered, "I was wondering why Emily would help him so much. So this is why. This brat's courage for lust is truly huge, he's with Emily alright. God, what a playboy!"

Chapter 282: The reputé of a genius

At the Garden House in the northern part of the city, lush palm trees filled the structure that was suffused with the fresh feeling of spring. The garden had been arranged in an exquisite fashion, with all sorts of flowers emitting pleasant fragrances, and had been planted in the surroundings. Several maids moved carefully amongst the flowers, watering and pruning them.

First prince Charles was squinting as he conversed with a crude-looking man on a soft patch of grass. The latter had two criss cross scars on his neck, was a meter and seventy five centimeters tall, and looked very sturdy with his brawny arms and legs. His eyes glinted with a brutal, beastly light.

“Mister Leah, olou shouldn’t have challenged those three great swordmasters as soon as you arrived. You’ve just arrived here from the Brut Merchant Alliance after all, and our nation is prejudiced against foreigners. If my father finds out that you’re one of my people, this could affect his impression of me.” Charles frowned with displeasure, clearly irritated by Leah Cain’s unauthorized acts.

Leah Cain leered and chuckled, saying brazenly, “Your Highness first prince, although I’ve joined your banner upon arriving in the Lancelot Empire, I don’t have to listen to you for all matters. I am a swordsman first and foremost. Since I’ve come all the way to the Lancelot Empire, I will challenge the local experts as according to my habits. How else will I be able to improve my skills?”

Damn it, what a brute! Why don’t you go challenge Karel Ascot if you’ve the balls to! Let’s see how horribly you die then! Charles cursed inwardly, his expression darkening even further. He turned to Leah Cain, “Let’s just drop this matter. I hope you tell me before you do anything like this next time. Do you remember the Bryan whom I mentioned to you? The one I wanted you to help me kill?”

Leah Cain blanked momentarily, then nodded. “Oh, the kid with the strange techniques that you mentioned last time? What? Has he appeared in Ossen City? Do you want me to kill him today?"

Shaking his head ruefully, Charles said, "The situation is different now. Bryan's reputations has greatly increased over the past couple of days during his leave of absence from Ossen City. His reputation has grown greatly after challenging these experts, and now, word on the street is that he's returned to challenge you."

"After this news was released, all of the nobles and experts within Ossen City began paying close attention to this. You've been training in the Garden House, so you may not have been aware of this, but even my father is interested in this matter now. It's no longer appropriate for you to kill him secretly. What I mean for you to do is why not go and challenge him directly then kill him in that way? No one will be able to say anything about this then. What do you think?"

"No! Absolutely not! Who am I? I'm Leah Cain! How can I lower myself to challenge this unweaned brat? Hmph, I'd welcome it if he challenged me, but I'd never go to the door of an infamous kid just to challenge him!" Leah Cain rejected this suggestion soundly, with no room for discussion.

Sitting in his chair, Charles viciously swiped at the arm rests and cursed inwardly again. If it wasn't for you really having some skill to your name, I'd already have someone kill you where you stand, damn it! You're just a brute! How dare you repeatedly talk back to me??

"Alright then. There are many people paying attention to this matter now. There have been some people circling the Garden House for the past two days. They're likely waiting for Bryan to come and challenge you. I'm not at liberty to come find you. You just need to mind yourself. If Bryan comes, you must kill him immediately to prevent further troubles from developing!" Charles was a bit irritated as he stood up after speaking to Leah.

"Don't worry. He'll be dead without a doubt if he dares to challenge me! Hmph, all young men are asking to die these days by acting so cockily! I'll have him learn just how much stronger his seniors are than he is!" Leah Cain snorted coldly. After traveling to many ears, the news quickly spread to every corner of Ossen City. Only a few experts and nobles of Ossen City heard of it in the beginning, but once someone upgraded this to a matter of national pride, even commoners learned of it as well.

In this way, Han Shuo's birth and origins were slowly revealed in utmost clarity!

A slave when young, the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force made an exception and enrolled him when he demonstrated surprising potential. He ascended from a lowly rank of mage apprentice to a rare archmage necromancer in less than two years. He even had a mysterious technique about him. All of this added together made Han Shuo out to be genius.

As citizens of Ossen City discussed this matter fervently, a few large guilds were already placing bets on this. Gamblers expressed high concerns towards this matter, and no one knew of the Boozt Merchant Guild betting enormous sums against Cameron's Merchant Guild.

On the west side of Ossen City, in the middle of the night.

Out of the north, south, east, and west parts of the city, the west side was the dirtiest and poorest part. This place could be considered the congregation zone of all the poor. There was trash everywhere on the streets, with flies and bedbugs everywhere. Some beggars, with rags on their bodies, were dozing off in the corner. A stench permanently permeated the surrounding air.

However, the moon still shone, even on the poorest areas. As the pure, white moonlight shone down, it cast long shadows for Han Shuo and the others. Some stifled sobs traveled out slightly from one of the ugly and crude houses.

"I really didn't want to come here!" Chester's expression was long as he sighed.

Although Emily stayed within the carriage, her brows were knit tightly together as well. Her tender and white skin was as clear as white jade, and the precious jewels on her head and closely tailored silks and laces marked her as being quite at odds with the surroundings.

Emily had seen Chester's information and knew that he was born a commoner. Before he had entered the Dark Mantle, he'd spent some time in the western part of Ossen city. However, he didn't miss those days. That was easy enough to see. No one would think too fondly of a place like this.

"Alright, we'll leave as soon as we're done. There are the poor and rich in every country. This is a truth that will never change, and we don't have the power to change all this!" Han Shuo called out softly as he sat within the carriage.

A troop of about a hundred knights were following behind the carriage at a leisurely pace. The troop was in a long formation in the narrow streets.

"Come on. We don't have much time, so stop complaining!" Emily also rushed Chester onwards.

Chester didn't say much else as he skillfully drove the carriage down the quiet streets. He headed for the dirtiest and poorest part of the west side after making it down this street.

Chester slowed down the carriage after a moment in a place filled with sewage and a disgusting stench. "Master Emily, the broken down buildings ahead are where the intelligence seems to point to."

Emily changed into a black robe in the carriage and hid her identity as a senior executive of the Dark Mantle. She slowly stepped down from the carriage and spoke to Han Shuo, "According to the intelligence, it's the buildings in front of us. The enemy is a leader from the Angel Empire called Yoland. He seems to be a sky rider."

Nodding, Han Shuo released three yin demons and bade them slowly slip inside. He himself walked towards the troop of knights who were trailing them, telling an officer, "Don't prematurely alert our enemies. Spread out through the buildings and create a perimeter. Try to approach slowly. Capture anyone alive if you can. Otherwise, execute them on the spot. We can't let a single one escape."

"Understood!" The officer responded and made a gesture towards the knights behind him. The knights slowly spread out and encircled the buildings from a distance away.

There had been several mages in the center of the knights, who were now revealed due to the knights spreading out. The mages in the Magic Corps of the Northern Guard were all journeyman or adept mages. There was only one thunder archmage. Boris had told him before the mission had started that he was to listen to Han Shuo's commands.

Some of them had been unruly and rebellious at first, but when Boris told them of Han Shuo's identity, all of became docile and didn't dare to not listen to Han Shuo's commands.

Han Shuo had traversed half of the Lancelot Empire in the past few days, challenging villains with infamous reputation. They'd all been killed on the spot, and that kind of violent, ruthless method made Han Shuo's evil prestige come to life. The group of mages in front of him had all quieted down afterwards.

Someone who could kill numerous experts was someone that they couldn't afford to antagonize, not to mention that he had full control over the team from the commander of the Northern Guards. They would be foolish as to provoke Han Shuo.

"Alright, all of you find your positions. It's best to stay in between the knights. Listen to my orders afterwards and attack with the strongest spells you've got!" Han Shuo flicked a glance over the thunder archmage and gave his orders.

"Understood, Sir Bryan!" The thunder archmage said respectfully with a nod. He wasn't angry at all about Han Shuo taking his position as the commander of the Magic Corps.

Chapter 283: Coolly composed

Before Han Shuo's arrival at the Northern Guards, thunder archmage Killua had been the leader of the Northern Guards magic corps. However, due to Han Shuo's appearance, he could only take Han Shuo's orders now.

Killua had originally been a bit reluctant, but after Boris spoke a few words to him, he immediately understood that Han Shuo only come to the Northern Guards to gain some military achievements, and that the magic corps of Northern Guards would be just a jumping board for Han Shuo. After that, not only did that remove any complaint he might have had, he would even intentionally curry Han Shuo's favor in hope of a little bit of help when Han Shuo became successful.

"Be careful, they have twenty something people and they're all pretty strong!" Han Shuo said quietly when he returned to Emily's side after giving his orders.

"I understand, what do you think we should do?" Emily nodded in reply, then asked for Han Shuo's opinion.

"When the hundred knights surround this area, immediately use magic to destroy all obstacles. Capture the experts if you can, otherwise, it's fine if you kill all of them. As long as we can find the blueprints, we've essentially finished this mission!" Han Shuo thought about it and said quietly.

"We'll do as you say. Those Northern Guards seem to trust you very much. You have to command them well, so that they don't mess up!" Emily said docilely in front of Han Shuo, she had already become used to having him in charge.

"Then alright, pay attention to Yoland, don't let him escape!" Han Shuo replied before slowly floating into the air.

Han Shuo quickly passed through the knights and mages like a ghost. Using the three hundred and sixty degree surveillance of the three yin demons, Han Shuo continuously gave orders to the surrounding knights. He had them discard their horses and hide in the surroundings. The contingent of knights slowly surrounded the other party, keeping a hundred and fifty meter buffer.

Han Shuo stood proudly in the sky and calmly commanded the knights and mages of the Northern Guards. He made sure to put suitable men in every location. In the meantime, everyone lowered their voices and quietly approached the dirty and broken down building.

The distance slowly decreased as the encirclement tightened. When the two parties were only fifty meters apart, Han Shuo waved at Killua and the others. Upon seeing his action, they immediately started to chant magic spells quietly, their expressions solemn.

“My lord, we’ve been surrounded. I can hear unusual sounds from the wind!” A wind mage said anxiously to Yoland, who had a dark and muscular body and was riding a tattooed beast.

“How is that possible!” Yoland suddenly sat up from a pile of straw he’d been resting on. He quickly looked out the window, his expression immediately darkening as he shouted softly, “Everyone, assemble. Find a chance to break through the encirclement!”

The twenty something people within the room all stood up silently after hearing that. All of them unsheathed their swords and knives and prepared to charge out.

As the leader, Yoland remained calm in the face of such a terrible situation. His space ring brightened slightly as he took out the blueprints that he’d spent much effort in obtaining. He carefully dug a hole in the wall and said quietly, “The brothers that have come on this operation are all not afraid of death. I will put the blueprints in the widened gap in the wall. If any of you can leave this place alive, you can wait until Ossan City is no longer so heavily under guard before returning to take back the blueprints to the Empire. Do you hear me?”

“Don’t worry my lord. We know what to do!” That wind mage replied seriously. The other people in the room also had on determined expressions, prepared to make the sacrifice.

Suddenly, five rays of lightning struck down from the sky. The zigzagging lightning illuminated the pitch dark sky. At the same time, several walls of flames appeared around the building, causing the surrounding temperature to spike up to dangerous levels. Meanwhile, the ground started to tremble as spires started to project from the ground.

Yoland and the others who were within the house understood that the attack had already begun. All of them leaped out from the door and windows, and started to charge separately from all directions through the attacks of lightning, fire snakes, and rock spikes.

“Kill!” Han Shuo’s cold voice rang out through the entire night.

Killua’s lightning suddenly slammed down. When the houses were struck, every single one of them exploded with a deep rumble. Two men rushed out from those houses. They instantly fell limp onto the ground when they were struck by a bolt of lightning.

The hundred knights of the Northern Guards were all elites of the military, every single one holding the strength of a companion-at-arms or a sergeant. Under Han Shuo’s orders, each one methodically blockaded the roads. Once they noticed someone dashing towards them, they would immediately move to block the target mercilessly.

“Send three knights to the north to stop them. Killua, have the Magic Corps attack the four experts rushing in from the south. Yoland is in the west, he is a sky rider, so those in the west have to be careful...”

Using the vision of the three yin demons, Han Shuo sent his commands forth leisurely. He would accurately mention the other party’s strength and numbers every single time, then send out suitable number of troops to stop the charge of the assassins.

Emily and Chester slowly approached the direction that Yoland was charging towards under Han Shuo’s directions. As a thief, attacking straight on wasn’t Chester’s forte, so he remained among the group of the knights that was setting up the blockade and left it up to Emily, who was ready to attack any time with dark magic.

“Damn it, why is the enemy so clear about our movements!” Yoland had told everyone to separate and attack using the strongest force they could muster. He'd noticed a few weaker areas in the beginning that could have been broken though. Sadly, before they'd even drawn near, those places had suddenly become heavily guarded, causing those trying to break through to suffer enormous losses.

The mages all cast spells in directions that they couldn't see under Han Shuo's orders. Yet, the spells would always leave Yoland's people in dire straits, and heavily wound or even kill those people waiting in the dark.

"I didn't notice anyone casting Sky's Eye. I don't know why the enemy is able to see our movements so clearly!" The wind magician's voice was frantic as his anxiety broke through.

"Everyone, if you think that you can escape easily after breaking the law in the capital city of the Lancelot Empire, then think again! Hehe, everyone here is clear on your identities. As long as you lay down your weapons, surrender, and identify yourselves, we can allow you to live and wait for the mediators from your country to negotiate," Han Shuo fired off a string of orders before hollering at them with a smile.

Their actions were completely revealed to Han Shuo through the yin demons' surveillance. Then, he would organize experts of appropriate skill to stop the would-be escapees. He had successfully killed enough of the assassins, leaving only thirteen. On the other hand, the Northern Guard only had four lightly wounded and one heavily wounded when the other party fought back until the brink of death. Aside from that, there was no one who had died.

Yet, only fearless attacks were the answer to Han Shuo's announcement. None of the assassins from the Angel Empire showed the slightest bit of hesitation. After Han Shuo had finished speaking, they viciously tried to break through the encirclement again.

Han Shuo could determine that these people were all death sworn from their reactions and strength. They probably hadn't had any thoughts of surviving after entering the Lancelot Empire. It was an unrealistic notion to capture these people alive. Thus, after a bit of hesitation, Han Shuo suddenly commanded, "Everyone, don't hold back any longer, just kill them all!”

“Brothers, rush out with all your might. Even if you can’t, you have to bring several of them down with you!” shouted Yoland after hearing Han Shuo’s merciless orders,

“You have no more chances!” Emily’s cold voice sounded as she glared at Yoland from her black robes, “The technicians in the military factory were all helpless civilians. All of them were killed savagely. You guys truly do deserve to die today!”

“Haha, since they were not people from my empire, so what if they died!” Yoland laughed maniacally as he raised a huge broadsword and rode atop of his tattooed beast. He dashed directly towards Emily. “Woman, are you stop me by yourself?”

“Foolish!” Han Shuo’s thick murderous aura spread out with lightning speed before Emily could chant a spell. The Demonslayer Edge shone with crimson light as the blood red sword aura cleaved down towards Yoland from the sky with unparalleled ferociousness.

Yoland had been dashing towards Emily and hadn’t thought that Han Shuo would suddenly attack like this, not to mention from above. Although he had the strength of a sky rider, he still found it a bit difficult to face this sort of sudden attack. The broadsword that he was holding horizontally had to quickly rise to meet the Demonslayer Edge attacking down from above his head.

Clang!

Sparks exploded everywhere and a clear crack appeared in Yoland’s broadsword. He snorted as his shoulder trembled, while the four short legs of the tattooed beast underneath him snapped, unable to withstand the force. The tattooed beast fell onto the floor as its wolf-like head continuously spat out blood.

“Haha, don’t think of obtaining the blueprints even if you kill me. All of the technicians were killed, you won’t be able to create the war chariots without the blueprints!” Yoland looked tragically at the tattooed beast underneath him first before laughing savagely with a grimace. Since he had no way of attacking Han Shuo in the sky, he could only sprint quickly towards Emily.

“Isn’t it just hidden in the gap in the walls? What’s so hard to find about that!” Han Shuo said with contempt. Han Shuo ignored Yoland as the latter’s expression drastically changed and dashed towards the room the targets had originally been hiding in with lightning speed.

Chapter 284: A big gamble

Though Yoland had been about to attack Emily, his heart suddenly spasmed when he heard Han Shuo reveal his most closely guarded secret. Just as he intended to turn around and run back into the room to destroy the blueprint, several bolts whizzed at him with whooshing sounds. Emily waved the magic staff in her hand and a sharp Grim Reaper's Blade sliced across Yoland's body with a deathly glint.

"Stop him! Don't let him take the blueprint!" Yoland's voice was shrill. He hastily raised his broadsword to block the Grim Reaper's Blade.

The assassins of the Angel Empire were originally about to break through the encirclement, but abandoned the idea upon hearing Yoland's shout. They swiftly turned back, one by one, and rushed straight at Han Shuo.

Unfortunately, their power was a far cry from Han Shuo's. The difference in speed was like heaven and earth. Han Shuo utilized the Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens and flew into the room like lightning. The assassins only caught up with him after he'd pulled the blueprint from a hollow corner on the wall.

"Die!" Han Shuo coldly shouted before landing with the Demonslayer Edge. He walked towards the furiously sprinting assassins of the Angel Empire.

When Han Shuo released the Mystical Glacial Spellfire, the Demonslayer Edge exploded with brilliant purple-red light. The light sparked like a rainbow on the tip of the blade, and rapidly formed one willowy flame after another. The beautiful light from the flashing purple red flames danced on the blade of the Demonslayer Edge. They gathered into twisting threads of fire that entangled each other, creating two magic nets of flame—one purple, one red.

The madly charging Angel Empire assassins only had one obsession in their heart, to destroy Han Shuo. Faced with the two blazing hot and icy cold magical nets, they all released their strongest level of fighting aura, trying to tear the nets apart.

However, Han Shuo had firmly grasped a whole new level of the Mystical Glacial Spellfire at his current strength. The two nets of magic twisted and swayed about in the air as if two fishing nets thrown into the sea. The lights from the swords simply landed on empty holes and wasn't able to penetrate the beautiful flames.

"Not good! Fall back!" The distant Yoland, who'd desperately dodged the Grim Reaper's Blade, also rushed towards Han Shuo. Upon seeing his subordinates' swords unable to rip apart the magic nets, he immediately understood that these nets of unknown material couldn't be torn by just the sword. That was why he couldn't help but shout a reminder to his subordinates.

However, the two strangely swaying magic nets in the air actually possessed an extremely fast speed. The nets didn't wait for the assassins to react before they spread out and shrouded the whole group.

When the red net fell down, the flame threads touched three assassins like scorching hot iron. A thick smoke erupted as their skin and flesh was burned to a crisp. Every one of them was paralyzed and fell to the ground amidst their own tragic screams. The purple net blanketed the remaining four assassins. Their limbs instantly stiffened, and their bodies shivered as if they had been trapped in an ice block. The cold air maintained their previous dodging or attacking postures.

"I'll end my life with yours!" Yoland had finally reached Han Shuo. Upon seeing his brothers shrouded in the nets, each either burned to ashes or frozen solid like ice, he roared and raised his sword, rushing at Han Shuo without a care for his life.

"Heh heh! I'm afraid you won't have that chance!" Han Shuo released the Demonslayer Edge with an indifferent smile on his face, and charged towards Yoland.

Yoland's expression turned hideous as he raised his broadsword to receive Han Shuo's attack. Yoland kept laughing maniacally when he saw Han Shuo quickly close in. He was about to disregard everything to risk his life to fight Han Shuo, when a pair of arms suddenly emerged from the ground where he stood and tightly grabbed his ankles.

“Shoot him dead!” Han Shuo had been rushing towards Yoland when he suddenly screeched to a halt in body mid-air. He shouted to the dozen Northern Guard soldiers who were holding bows and approaching in the distance.

Yoland couldn't budge his feet. He stared dumbly at Han Shuo, floating in the air. The latter was only about five meters away, right in front of him, but Yoland had no way to move. When Yoland slashed downwards on the pair of big arms with his sword, the arms holding his legs retreated back into the underground. His two feet suddenly felt a soul-shaking pain as two bone spikes shot out from the ground and pierced deeply from his feet to his knees.

While he was wailing like a pig being butchered, several arrows quickly shot towards Yoland, whistling through the air until they penetrated his body. Before he died, his killing intent, filled with resentment, transformed into an air barely visible to the naked eye and was absorbed by Han Shuo.

The lineup of the twenty-odd assassins from the Angel Empire had no survivors left, including Yoland. None of their resentful killing intent had escaped Han Shuo's absorption, enabling his demonic magic to grow increasingly perfect. The feeling of breaking through was becoming increasingly stronger.

Han Shuo walked to the four frozen assassins and shot out four pitch black lights into their bodies. Four cracking sounds echoed as the originally frozen stiff assassins fell limply down. Han Shuo turned to speak to the leader of the Northern Guard army, “These four aren't dead yet. Guard them strictly, and don't let them commit suicide. This will be our answer to His Majesty as well.”

“Rest assured, Master Bryan, we know what to do!” The leader readily agreed and ordered the soldiers behind him, “Men, tied up these four assassins and gag them. Don't give them the chance to bite their tongues and kill themselves!”

Following the orders of their leader, the dozen soldiers quickly walked forward and took out special binding tools from the bags that they always carried. From their practiced actions and plentiful equipment, Han Shuo could instantly confirm that it would even harder for these four assassins to seek death.

When they were brought to the Northern Guard's prison, they would be anesthetized, and their spirits drained of strength. They would be too weak to even bite their tongues. It might actually be possible to torture something out of them.

Han Shuo stopped paying attention to these four. He walked to Emily's side, took out the blueprint and gave it to her, saying, "Take this. This mission can now be considered completed. I will give you the blueprint so you can hand them in to the Northern Guard. As you have the blueprint that the Northern Guard's been desperately seeking, you can report in to His Majesty now!"

Emily naturally wouldn't stand on ceremony with Han Shuo. As she couldn't reveal her identity, she didn't say anything to him and only nodded before turning around. She swiftly walked to Chester's carriage and got in. They left together and quickly disappeared out of sight.

"Master Bryan, we could successfully capture the assassins of the Angel Empire and recover the blueprint they'd hidden this time only thanks to you. If Count Boris can say a few good words in front of His Majesty, this deed is enough to grant you a title." Lightning archmage Killua walked over to Han Shuo and offered his sincere congratulations. He seemed even more excited than Han Shuo.

"Hehe, it's everyone's credit. I wouldn't have been able to catch them all by myself, without everyone's combined efforts. Mm, you all get back to work. I still have something to deal with, I'll need to leave for a moment!" Han Shuo looked at Killua and said with a smile.

"Alright then master Bryan, please leave first. We can take care of the aftermath!" Killua respectfully replied.

Nodding his head, Han Shuo didn't linger. He chose another direction and quickly disappeared from sight in a dirty, chaotically slum of the city's west end.

When night fell and everyone was resting, Han Shuo soundlessly appeared at the Boozt Merchant Guild. He followed the familiar path to Phoebe's room.

"No need to consider anymore. I believe that Bryan will definitely win. Our crisis may even be completely over with this gamble. Let's take out all of our active funds and fight it out with Cameron and his group!" Phoebe stood in the middle of the living room, voicing her resolution in a competent and astute manner.

"Little Phoebe, this needs reconsideration. I know of the relationship between you and Bryan. His strength is good, but Leah Cain has been famous for too long and is also very powerful. Everyone agrees that he has a better winning chance. This bet is no trivial matter. If we lose, I'm afraid that our Boozt Merchant Guild will also go down with it!" Boozt Guild veteran elder Andrew leaned on his walking stick and spoke, somewhat worried.

Andrew was an original elder of the Boozt Merchant Guild. Before Phoebe had taken over, he had wholeheartedly cared for her, so she was very much concerned about his viewpoints. However, Phoebe had gained majority control of the guild after becoming the owner. During this period, the Guild had actually made great progress under her hand. Andrew was satisfied, understanding that Phoebe wasn't one to work based on her emotions. He might not have been so worried if it wasn't for Leah Cain's widespread fame.

"Rest assured grandpa Andrew, Bryan's strength is much more formidable than you can imagine. Moreover, Cameron has forced us to this state already. The merchant alliance he has lead is intensely suppressing us, and it's difficult for us to do anything now. Even without this gamble, they will still pressure us bit by bit until we're exhausted. If we can win this time, we can reverse the situation. Those merchant guilds cooperating with Cameron won't give him face if he faces a heavy loss. Only when we hold a huge amount of gold coins, can we truly control the situation.” Phoebe calmly explained her analysis to Andrew.

“Aii, since you’ve said so, let’s do it like that. I hope Bryan won’t disappoint us, otherwise our Boozt Merchant Guild can be considered finished!” Andrew thought for a while before finally nodding in agreement to Phoebe’s proposal. This showed the immense crisis the guild was facing. Otherwise, they wouldn’t have chosen such a gamble to save the situation.

Chapter 285: Dazzling

Phoebe sat alone after Andrew left, frowning in contemplation. It seemed that the crisis the Boozt Merchant Guild was facing was indeed very serious. Otherwise Phoebe wouldn't choose to strike using a gambling method, given her cautious nature.

Han Shuo slowly came in without a sound, his eyes bright as he looked at Phoebe as soon as he entered the door. After a moment of silence, Phoebe was suddenly surprised. Looking up to see Han Shuo, she revealed a smile and said with delight, "You've come back?"

"Rest assured, Leah Cain will die to my sword tomorrow, without a doubt!" Han Shuo smiled and walked towards Phoebe. He reached out his hand and smoothened the spot between her wrinkled eyebrows before speaking softly.

"I believe you. Our Boozt Merchant Alliance took out seven hundred thousand gold coins this time. Cameron will have to compensate us five times that amount based on the current odds as long as you kill Leah Cain. Cameron won't be able to bear the costs no matter how much money he has. After this victory, our Boozt Alliance will have an enormous amount of gold coins and the danger from Cameron's group will naturally disappear!" Phoebe very much enjoyed Han Shuo's tenderness. She relaxed her body and leaned on his chest, saying softly.

"Alright, go rest early. I'll meditate here for tonight. I'll go to the Garden House tomorrow to issue a challenge to Leah Cain and settle this problem as soon as possible!" Han Shuo patted Phoebe's shoulder and urged.

Phoebe nodded meekly upon hearing Han Shuo's words. Her expression relaxed into a smile as she said, "Rest assured, I'll come with you tomorrow and watch you kill Leah Cain for myself. I know you'll definitely win!"

Phoebe didn't stay after finishing speaking. She walked into the back room with a chuckle and softly said, "After you win, keep me company for a nice chat!"

Han Shuo sat cross-legged in the hall after Phoebe left. He silently circulated his magical yuan and recovered his mental strength bit by bit, gradually adjusting the state of his body.

In Han Shuo's body, the demon infant was as if surrounded by a bloody whirlpool. Each drop of blood essence was like a precious ruby, sparkling translucently as each drop formed a red, lustrous crystal shape. The drops of blood essence swirled into a whirlpool and nourished the demon infant in its center. The layers of blood red mist, which was the killing intent gathered in the bloodlust realm, surrounded this whirlpool, also nourishing the demon infant.

The demon infant was a copy of Han Shuo, except about the size of a fist. A black spot appeared between its eyebrows where the Demonslayer Edge was stored. The enormous amount of killing intent absorbed during this time had been stored in his body and condensed into a black spot in the demon infant's glabella.

In this way, the connection between Han Shuo and the Demonslayer Edge constantly matured. The demon infant and the Demonslayer Edge could also support each other to absorb even more energy. Once the Demonslayer Edge successfully developed its own soul, its connection with Han Shuo would be another step closer. Slicing off a human head from a thousand miles away with only a thought wouldn't be an impossible feat.

In the past several days, Han Shuo had been going to war everywhere and killing many experts. Han Shuo had swallowed and absorbed their killing intent and resentment in order to improve himself bit by bit. He'd already absorbed an enormous amount in particular from his trip to the forbidden land, which had helped both him and the Demonslayer Edge improve immensely.

Han Shuo had slowly gained control over his nature in the bloodlust realm. Once the killing intent accumulated to a certain extent, it would gradually transform from quantitative to qualitative. Only then would he be able to break through to the separate demon realm and his strength would take another step forward. Not only would Han Shuo be able to practice higher level secret demonic skills, but he could also separate his consciousness from his body. He would possess some unimaginable miraculous abilities.

After a night of meditation, Han Shuo was in high spirits the next day as he left the Boozt Merchant Guild with Phoebe and went to the Garden House where Leah Cain resided.

The past several days, news of Han Shuo challenging the Crazy Leah Cain had spread throughout Ossen City, thanks to the deliberate work of Candide and Lawrence. Many aristocratic spies were lurking in the neighborhood of the Garden House. In addition to them, experts from all walks of life were full of enthusiasm as they waited for Han Shuo's arrival.

Han Shuo stepped down from Phoebe's carriage and was walking alone to the Garden House when someone recognized him. Amidst the whispering and discussion, the spies of every house quickly sent in reports of this news. The whispering turned into a hubbub in the blink of an eye. More and more people gathered at the Garden House upon hearing the news.

Leah Cain was famous among the aristocrats and powerhouses as the Crazy Great Swordmaster of the Brut Merchant Alliance. Such a character had raised a storm when he had appeared in Ossen City and defeated three of the city's great swordmasters. It was a pity that Leah Cain was a foreigner, otherwise the Lancelot Empire's civilians wouldn't be so upset about this.

Han Shuo's fame had bloomed just the same during this time period. Of course, his reputation wasn't that good either. Because he had continuously killed his opponents, his infamy had spread far and wide. Even though Han Shuo's reputation was bad, he was still a citizen of the Lancelot Empire after all, so everybody hoped for his victory.

The nobles and civilians cheered as they sent him in on the way to the House Garden. These people had known to come here early because Lawrence had revealed to them that Han Shuo would walk down this path within the next two days. They tried their luck whenever they were idle and waited in this place. Everyone danced in happiness, as they didn't expect Han Shuo would really come today.

Han Shuo was one meter ninety centimeters tall. He wore a simple and capable-looking black warrior's outfit, his figure handsome and masculine. After a long time of cultivating demonic magic, cultivators would possess a striking evil temperament. When the noble ladies saw Han Shuo for the first time, they already harbored goodwill for him regardless of right and wrong. People were first whispering in discussion, but later, they all screamed nonstop upon throwing a glance at Han Shuo's blazing eyes.

"Humph! I'll die from anger! He disappeared for so many days in one go and made me wait again this time. If it weren't for the uproar this time, I'm afraid I wouldn't have known when I'd be able to see him again!" On a path to the Garden House, Fanny was leading a group of people from the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force. She looked towards Han Shuo from afar and bitterly whispered her complaints.

"Master Fanny, what did you say just now? Look, it's really Bryan. When I first heard of this news, I thought it was fake! I didn't think that it really was Bryan. He's unexpectedly challenged that wicked Leah Cain, everyone is so excited about this!" Amy from the necromancy major animatedly waved her fists as she watched Han Shuo walking towards the Garden House. She turned to Fanny and noisily screamed.

"I, I didn't say anything!" Fanny covered up with a smile and said, "I didn't expect this brat to be so calm in front of so many people. It seems that he has really matured!"

"Bryan is really very powerful. His deeds have spread everywhere in Ossen City. Even our necromancy major has gained some new students. These new students actually chose our weak necromancy major as soon as they entered the Babylon Academy. The tables have turned!" Athena was excited all the same. She looked at the proudly walking Han Shuo and exclaimed.

Lisa tagged along this time, but she was silent compared to the past. She was no longer constantly twittering and only quietly followed the distant, dashing Han Shuo with her gaze. Seeing him acting so leisurely, even in the presence of so many people, Lisa suddenly felt that he should have been this dazzling from the start.

“I am Bryan, I have come here to see Mister Leah Cain!” Upon reaching the gate of the Garden House, Han Shuo spoke smilingly to the guard.

A great number of nobles and civilians had crowded the alleys and gazing pavilions around the Garden House. The news of Han Shuo’s challenge had soon spread. Leah Cain had also left an order earlier, so the guard naturally knew what to do.

“Mister Leah Cain is currently training. He has been expecting your arrival and has made arrangements. You can enter as soon as you arrive.” The guard said respectfully.

“Great then, please lead the way!” Han Shuo said with a smile.

Han Shuo came in following the guidance of the guard. All of the onlookers were blocked outside. After all, this place was private property, so no one could enter without the owner’s permission.

“Let us in, let us in!”

“That’s right, we have waited a long time for this! Please let us in!”

“I am Count Asi of the Lancelot Empire, I want to see Mister Leah Cain!”

After Han Shuo entered, the nobles and civilians outside tried various methods to access the Garden House. Not far from the place, several carriages slowly lined up. The decorations of these carriage were extremely luxurious. It only took a look to know they belonged to the nobility.

First Prince Charles led a group of aristocrats in a slow approach. The group included Mister Hahn and Emily of the Betteridge family, finance minister Eevee, along with Lawrence, Boris of the Northern Guard, and many other nobles.

Candide, along with tall, handsome Amyes, who had a refined presence and was one of the three heavyweights of the Dark Mantle, also appeared in a gazing pavilion opposite of the Garden House. Everyone was raptly watching the inner area of the Garden House.

Chapter 286: The challenger

“Is this kid the Bryan you’ve been telling me about?” One of the three Dark Mantle heavyweights, Amyes, asked elegantly as he observed Han Shuo in the Garden House with amusement.

“That’s him. He’s truly done a lot of big things during this short span of time. His strength also seems to be unfathomable. However, I haven’t really seen it for myself. Let us use this opportunity to see his real strength?” The remote looking Candide said to Amyes.

Amyes only looked to be around thirty some years old. He wore a fitting white robe without any other ornaments, which gave him a clean and pure look. This elevated his extraordinary handsomeness even more. In addition, there was an attractive, graceful charm about him.

However, to the nobles of the Lancelot Empire, Amyes’ ever elegant smile and graceful handsomeness was shrouded by a shadow of death. A noble was simply out of luck if they were targeted by him. At the bare minimum, they would be thrown in jail after their property was seized, and at worse, instant execution.

Of the three heavyweights of the Dark Mantle, Cecilia usually carried out activities in foreign lands, Candide was responsible for gathering domestic intel and investigating other Empires’ assassins. As for Amyes, he was in charge of monitoring and intimidating the dignitaries. The three of them coordinated with each other very well. Candide and Cecilia rarely showed their faces and never posed any threat to the Empire’s nobles, so Amyes was the one that most of them were familiar with and also feared the most. There wasn’t an aristocrat that wasn’t afraid of him.

“You should know very well of Leah Cain’s strength. Besides, he has a relationship with the First Prince Charles. If this boy can’t win against Leah Cain, I’m afraid he won’t be able to leave this place alive.” Amyes squinted to look at the proudly standing Han Shuo in the Garden House, and said to Candide.

“Heh heh. That’s hard to say. Ferguson was a light grand magus like you, and yet he still died by Bryan's hand. From what I know, Ferguson's reputation isn't any less than Leah Cain's. If he could kill a light grand magus, he should be able to kill Leah Cain all the same!" Although Candide wasn't so optimistic about Han Shuo privately, he still had to put up a front before Amyes. After all, Han Shuo had been promoted by him.

Amyes smiled elegantly and nodded slightly before sitting down leisurely on a stone bench above a high platform. He took out a set of fine tea accoutrements and began to enjoy it.

Han Shuo was currently quite worried in the Garden House. Through the three yin demons' observation, he found Emily, Phoebe, and Fanny outside. Even though they weren't in the same spot, he knew they'd definitely rush to him once he left the Garden House.

Han Shuo wasn't too worried about Emily. After all, she was much more open in the matter of romance. She might feel a bit unhappy, but the possibility of her causing a scene was the lowest. However, that couldn't be said for Phoebe and Fanny. They both knew nothing about his current situation. Once these two met, they'd raise a storm without a doubt.

As Han Shuo wallowed in anxiety from this situation, the great swordmaster Leah Cain walked out to the center of the Garden House. He carried a broadsword, his face cold, and the look in his eyes brutal as he swept a glance at Han Shuo. Leah Cain sneered, "Little guy, are you that Bryan?"

"That's me, you must know everything already, so there's no need for nonsense. The two of us will fight it out on this spacious lawn and settle everything in one go. Does that sound alright?" Han Shuo immediately threw all of his worries to the wind upon seeing Leah Cain appear. He looked raptly at the latter and replied casually.

"That works. I will teach you a good lesson!" Leah Cain laughed coldly. He swept a glance around the crowd outside of the Garden House and suddenly proposed an idea, "If you don't mind, can we allow the outside people to come in and watch the fight?"

Han Shuo wrinkled his brows in thought for a bit before saying, "I don't mind myself, but there are too many people outside. I'm afraid it isn't very appropriate to allow all of them in here!"

"Then just let the nobles in. That shouldn't be a problem!" This proposal was due to Charles' prior reminder, otherwise, Leah himself didn't care about any of this.

Han Shuo was afraid of some unexpected stormy situations if the three women were to meet, so that's why he'd been hesitant. Now that he heard Leah Cain's words, he remembered that both Fanny and Phoebe didn't have noble titles. He instantly nodded and said, "Then so be it!"

Upon hearing the approval, Leah Cain waved his arm towards the guard standing in the distance. The guard seemed to have known beforehand as he shouted, "Those with a noble title in the Empire can come inside to watch. Civilians will not be allowed entry."

The nobles wandering outside one by one elegantly walked in with their noses up. The civilians in the surroundings had no opposition to this. The nobility held certain privileges on the Profound continent. The people here all understood and were used to this, so they didn't feel surprised

The nobles walked in with their followers. Phoebe and Lawrence also took this opportunity to come in as a couple. Phoebe suddenly felt that someone was watching her the moment she walked inside. She lifted her head to notice Emily's surprised look.

Emily was wearing a purple dress, her skin delicate like white jade as she stood with old Mister Hahn's group. She looked beautiful with an inviolable, noble air and had none of the melancholy that could usually be seen from a widow. She was too dazzling for words.

"Damn that Bryan! This Emily must've used that magical pill too. Does he have some relationship with Emily?" Phoebe immediately recognized that it was the effect of the Rebirth Pill with just one glance at Emily's delicate, pure white cheeks. On the other hand, Phoebe's eyes were filled with surprise as she looked at Emily. The two women only needed a single glance at each other to understand the matter.

"Hey! Bryan, you'll definitely win!" Lawrence was very optimistic as he cheered for Han Shuo from afar.

“Humph, want to win with his strength? Dream on!” Not far from Lawrence, first Prince Charles said disdainfully. The bunch of nobles behind him immediately chimed in to lick his boots, taking turns to analyze the reasons Han Shuo would lose. Their goal was to gain some goodwill from Charles.

There was a grassy lawn as big as a football field in the middle of the Garden House. Han Shuo and Leah Cain were currently standing in the center of this lawn. The Lancelot Empire’s nobles sat in the surroundings. They brought their own highly skilled guards and kept their distance so they didn’t need to worry about their safety.

Leah Cain’s facial expression was sternly cold and he didn’t care much for Han Shuo. When he saw the nobles came in, his eyes moved to Charles. The chattering First Prince slightly nodded in response to Leah Cain’s gaze, indicating that he could start making a move.

Only now did Leah Cain look at Han Shuo again as he gripped his broadsword. His voice resounded coldly, “Little guy, ready to die?”

Taking in a deep breath, Han Shuo cleared all distractions from his mind. His face instantly became cold and ruthless, the arrogance in his voice wasn’t any less, “Mister Leah Cain, before this fight, let me remind you that I’m also an archmage necromancer in addition to being a martial artist. I hope you’ll be careful!”

“Humph, nothing but a useless archmage necromancer, wasting your power to train that kind of useless magic. I can already imagine how much skill you have. I really don’t understand what kind of garbage that great swordmaster that you killed was. He couldn’t even win against a brat like you who doesn’t focus on training martial arts. It seems like your Lancelot Empire doesn’t have a single truly strong expert!”

Leah Cain was truly too cocky. He had offended every noble around him with just a few sentences. Even the nobles betting on his victory revealed angry expressions.

Fool! Even if you win, don’t even dream of a gaining a foothold in this Lancelot Empire anymore. No wonder you had to flee from the Brut Alliance. With your hot temper alone, you should've long since been killed if it weren't for your power! First prince Charles cursed nonstop in his heart as he looked at the arrogant Leah Cain. He secretly made up his mind to absolutely not reveal his relationship with Leah Cain, even if the latter managed to kill Han Shuo. He needed to prevent this from impacting the nobles' opinions of him.

"Mister Leah Cain, I hope you won't let me down!" Han Shuo's mind moved with a thought and the Demonslayer Edge appeared in his right hand. The two-meter long edge didn't look very sharp, the body of the weapon was an unusual dark brown. Basically, the Demonslayer Edge didn't look at all prominent without being injected with magical yuan.

"Little guy, since you dared to find me, I'm sure you must be well prepared. Today, I'll let you know the true power of your seniors. Don't think that you're invincible just because you won against some garbage!" Leah Cain let out a cold harrumph. He pointed his sword at Han Shuo and said haughtily.

Han Shuo no longer responded to Leah Cain, his face ice cold. He slightly raised the Demonslayer Edge and shot forward. His extremely fast speed created several shadow images on his path, so fast that it was difficult to tell which one was real and which one was false with naked eye.

Chapter 287: Standing proudly in the sky

Even though Leah Cain was completely contemptuous, he immediately focused all of his attention when Han Shuo truly made his move. He raised the broadsword in his hand with a cold snort. A silver sword light suddenly spread out in front of him.

Leah Cain had stepped into the rank of great swordmaster many years ago. He had indulged in this realm for a long time, challenging and defeating many experts back in the Brut Merchant Alliance, and gaining the title of Crazy Great Swordmaster at the same time. If he hadn't offended the lightning sacred magus Reynold Dila of the alliance, he might have never had to flee to the Lancelot Empire.

The silver sword light instantly enveloped the area in front of him. Han Shuo could feel an enormous sword aura hidden within the light as he flew over to Leah Cain. He immediately infused the Demonslayer Edge with magical yuan. This indestructible weapon then burst out with black light and stabbed directly towards the silver sword light.

The Demonslayer Edge shot forward explosively with a black light and heavy killing intent. It abruptly bombarded Leah Cain's sword light. The silver sword light intertwined with the black light as several metallic pops sounded. Spots of light scattered out like stars before fading away in the air.

"Nngnn." Leah Cain let out a light cry and quickly retreated a step back. He looked at Han Shuo with shock, "Not bad little guy, your weapon is quite strange. It actually isn't fighting aura!"

The black light from the Demonslayer Edge snuffed the silver sword light into thin air. However when the silver sword light collided with the Demonslayer Edge, a huge force flooded into Han Shuo's arm through the weapon, numbing his arm a little.

Han Shuo didn't rush to make a next move. His face cold as he stared fixedly at Leah Cain, he focused his mind to the peak. After this exchange, he knew that Leah Cain was indeed much more powerful than the great swordmaster he killed last time. They were both swordmasters, but Leah Cain had swelled in this rank for many years. His strength was truly extraordinary.

“This Bryan has some power indeed!” Amyes looked at Candide in surprise and exclaimed softly on the platform opposite of the Garden House.

Candide’s eyes shone brightly, his face full of interest as he replied while looking at Han Shuo, “This is my first time seeing him fight as well. Although he has no fighting aura, he could unexpectedly break through the sword light that Leah Cain had gathered from his fighting aura. It looks like his body is hiding a lot of secrets!”

The nobles around exclaimed incredulously nonstop upon seeing Han Shuo shatter Leah Cain’s sword light with his stroke. Amongst them, Lawrence and Phoebe were visibly joyous.

“This boy really isn’t bad. He saved us once last time at Eevee’s house, it can be considered that we owe him a favor. I hope that he won’t be harmed by Leah Cain!” Old mister Hahn laughed and said to Emily next to him as he looked at Han Shuo.

“It seems this Bryan may just win!” Emily replied with a chuckle. She knew in her heart that Han Shuo’s strength wasn’t just that simple. Based on the fact that he could fly through the air, that alone was a huge advantage as it wasn’t something Leah Cain could do.

“Haha, hopefully so!” Old Hahn laughed heartily.

As everyone discussed noisily, Leah Cain snorted coldly, “You do have some strength, but it’s a pity that you shouldn’t have challenged me!”

Leah Cain raised his broadsword after his words and stepped towards Han Shuo. His speed wasn’t fast and each step was heavy. The two scars on his neck looked ferocious as they crossed each other, his pupils filled with a mad fighting desire.

Leah Cain’s momentum was stronger with each step, the broadsword in his hand emitting a dazzling silver halo beneath the sunlight. The silver fighting aura finally converged with the broadsword into a brilliantly beautiful rainbow that shot towards Han Shuo from a dozen meters away.

The speed of this silver rainbow was lightning fast. It whizzed right to Han Shuo's face as if having leapt over the distance of a dozen meters. This attack contained such an enormous force that several watching nobles around could also feel it clearly.

Han Shuo just stood there, like he been stunned by the extremely fast attack of the silver rainbow. He seemed to have not reacted yet. Everyone stared dumbly as the silver rainbow cut down on his body. It looked like he didn't know how to dodge.

"Quickly, run!" Many onlookers were worried for Han Shuo, they all screamed out to warn him. Unfortunately the speed of their voice couldn't match the attacking speed of that silver rainbow sword aura from Leah Cain.

A frightening sound boomed right out at the ground where Han Shuo was just standing dumbly right after the onlookers' warnings rang out. A gully fifteen meters long instantly appeared in that area. The deep gully was as if one had just sliced into a piece of tofu.

The silver fighting aura wreathed around the gully and didn't disperse. The enormous destructive force of this strength assaulted the two walls of the deep gully, creating loud rumbling sounds. When the terrifying sounds had stopped, the already enormous gully was now even bigger. All of the weeds within the fighting aura's area of effect had all turned into green dust.

"What a terrifying attack. The poor challenger must be done for!"

"Aii, he was still too young after all. It's inevitable he'd be vulnerable against an attack from an expert who's been famous for a long time!"

"Let's go. That young man must've died and fallen into that crack. The fun's over!"

"Mm, such a handsome man had actually died to that ugly monster. That damned foreigner!"

All sorts of pessimistic comments about Han Shuo resounded from the audience. They had dumbly watched on as Han Shuo hadn't make any move to evade Leah Cain's sword attack. Everyone was certain that Han Shuo had died and lost his life in that gully.

Suddenly, a loud shout resounded, "Oh my god, look to the sky!"

Throwing their heads back to look at the sky, everyone saw Han Shuo standing tall in the sky with the Demonslayer Edge in hand. He looked remotely down at Leah Cain. He wasn't injured a least bit.

"How can this be?!" Even Leah Cain couldn't help but exclaim in shock. He looked up, unable to believe his eyes.

If a swordsman wanted to float in the air, they had to reach the rank of the legendary divine swordmaster in order to fly using fighting aura. While mages could fly by using the levitation skill upon reaching the rank of archmage, the casting speed of the levitation skill wasn't as fast or as smooth as Han Shuo's skills.

Even though Han Shuo was a necromancy archmage, he couldn't have been able to dodge that rapid attack using that slow levitation skill. That was why even Leah Cain was shocked beyond belief upon seeing Han Shuo stand safe and sound in the sky.

"Amyes, can you sense any magic elements on his body? Why can't I sense any at all?" On the high platform, Candide exclaimed with surprise as he looked directly at Han Shuo standing proudly in the sky.

Even an usually relaxed and calm person like Amyes was startled. He shook his head, saying, "Strange, too strange. He doesn't use any magic or fighting aura, but can actually stand in the sky so miraculously. Just what is this?"

"It seems this has something to do with his unique cultivation art. Amyes, this art he practices is very wondrous. If the Lancelot Empire's army also knows how to fly that quickly, then the power of our army would be multiplied!" Candide exclaimed with excitement as he thought of this.

“Pay close attention. We have to stop Leah Cain if he deals a killing blow even if it violates the rules. This Bryan is truly magical. He is too useful to our Lancelot Empire, we absolutely cannot let him die!” Amyes said with determination, having determined to set everything aside in order to ensure Han Shuo’s safety.

“Let’s do it like that then. After this, I think is Majesty also knows what to do now!” Candide agreed immediately. His gloomy eyes focused on Leah Cain. The dark elements on his body suddenly became dense as he prepared to make a move at anytime without regard to his identity.

A person was watching Han Shuo on a lush, towering old tree. He was the one whom Han Shuo and Lawrence had met in the Rose Garden, super rank assassin Bollands. He was crouching within the foliage, his eyes were wide open as he observed Han Shuo and muttering, “Truly amazing. He can actually use a skill directly to stand proudly in the sky. It seems this Bryan is hiding other secrets besides his extraordinary attainment with murderous aura. Master was right to send me here this time!”

“Little guy, don’t think you are formidable just because you are an archmage who can fly in the sky. Get down here if you’re so good!” Leah Cain shouted furiously down below as he looked up at Han Shuo in the sky.

Even though he was a great swordmaster, he couldn’t fly in the air. He had no choice but stare dumbly, helpless, whilst looking up at Han Shuo in the sky.

“As you wish!” Han Shuo let out a long laugh in the sky before diving down like a meteor. The Demonslayer Edge emitted a purple-red spellfire that two meters long . A thick murderous aura emanated in every direction with Han Shuo as the epicenter. The surrounding onlookers all felt a wave of palpitations and involuntarily stepped a bit further away, shocked as they looked up at him shooting down from the sky.

Chapter 288: Ripped asunder

“Not bad, little guy!” Leah Cain could clearly sense the enormous murderous intent from his opponent. His eyes shone with excitement for the fight. Fighting aura continuously gathered on his broadsword. He didn’t wait for Han Shuo to land on the ground as the silver fighting aura shot directly at the latter’s head like a silver rainbow.

A murderous aura condensed nonstop around Han Shuo’s body. His pupils had become a deep red, his expression ferocious. The sinister, evil aura in the form of a bloody mist rushed to swallow Leah Cain. The purple-red spellfire that was two meters long floated down eerily in a strange trajectory, like a large, beautiful feather floating with the wind.

An explosive rumbling echoed, the spellfire smashing into the silver fighting aura. Bursts of brilliant fireworks bloomed in the air as the two lights intertwined with each other. Deep red light, silver aura and purple lights shimmered endlessly. Metallic collisions resounded nonstop from the mystically beautiful fireworks.

Leah Cain was standing on the ground, his two legs forced knee-deep into the ground due to the powerful pressure from the explosion above. The violent reactions kept ringing in his ears. An alternating force of two polar opposite powers, hot and cold, shrouded his brain. The strange force was like a ghost slipping through his pores before violently flooding his internal organs.

Leah Cain first shivered all over from the cold, then suddenly felt as if his body was frozen solid. A blazing hot current then burst through his body like a volcano. The two hot and cold airs intermingled within, giving Leah Cain an extremely surreal and painful feeling.

“Aowuuuu...”

Leah Cain looked like a madman as he wailed crazily to the sky. He ripped apart the clothes on his upper body with one hand, revealing his strong muscles. Streams of silver light could be seen clearly as they wiggled around the his bare upper body. Purple and red glints reflected from within. It looked extremely odd.

“I’m going to tear you apart!” Leah Cain roared. The broadsword in his hand had gathered every fiber of silver light. He looked to Han Shuo, who happened to be standing indifferently in the air.

The silver halo on the broadsword in Leah Cain’s hand suddenly shrank. The silver light faded away, and the glossy broadsword didn’t reflect a single gleam beneath the sunlight. This appeared extremely weird.

Han Shuo understood that Leah Cain’s strength was indeed extraordinary after exchanging blows with him. He hadn’t gained any advantage even after utilizing his full force of the bloodlust realm. If it weren’t for the Mystical Glacial Spellfire with the property of both fire and ice invading his body, Leah Cain wouldn’t have ended up so miserable after the attack either.

Han Shuo dived downwards while fiercely pouring magical yuan into the Demonslayer Edge despite his numb hands. Precisely at moment when he’d focused his power and was waiting for a chance to deal a fatal blow, Han Shuo suddenly discovered that the light from Leah Cain’s broadsword had suddenly vanished. Han Shuo’s instincts detected a grave danger. His extraordinary senses once again were at play. Han Shuo immediately contacted the three yin demons. Just as the broadsword in Leah Cain’s hand trembled, Han Shuo abruptly split into four clones and landed in four directions.

The previously dull broadsword suddenly burst out with glaring lights at the same moment. Icy awls as sharp as needles shot towards the sky in a drizzle, covering an area of about five meters. This attack had a terrifying penetration ability in addition to its intensity. It pierced through the sky before disappearing in the blink of an eye.

A yin demon had transformed into a clone to replace Han Shuo in the place he’d just been standing. As the icy awls pierced through that area, the invisible yin demon was also penetrated by a strange force. The violent fighting aura had coalesced into tiny shapes, unexpectedly possessing a particularly destructive force on the yin demon. The yin demon was pierced through like a beehive, its presence fading to the extreme.

“What a terrifying attack!” Han Shuo couldn’t stop feeling horrified after landing.

Leah Cain was indeed terrifying. He could gather his fighting aura into such a small and intense form. When the fighting aura was condensed into thousands of icy awls, the destructive force hidden in those awls actually increased by a hundred times. Even an intangible existence like the yin demon had suffered injuries from this attack. Han Shuo believed that if he hadn’t reacted fast enough and swapped his body out, he definitely would’ve become a mangled mess.

While Han Shuo was shocked at Leah Cain’s attack, Leah Cain the attacker himself felt even more incredulous. He could never expected Han Shuo to evade his strike.

Han Shuo’s four clones and landed on the flat ground. The three figures transformed from the yin demons slowly faded like a reflection on a lake being hit with a stone. The shadows twisted and swayed for a bit before disappearing, leaving only one Han Shuo behind Leah Cain.

“Too powerful!”

“Woah! What was that just now? A rain of swords? So stunning! I didn’t think this ugly fellow could have produced such a beautiful attack!”

“Bryan was the formidable one here. If I didn’t see wrong, there was four Bryans just now. My gosh, truly miraculous!”

“You didn’t see wrong. I also saw four Bryans. What skill is this? It’s really too powerful!”

The whole audience burst into a hubbub after a moment of silence. All of the watching nobles, along with their followers, were discussing with surprise. Their faces was full of shock and excitement after seeing the astounding performance earlier.

“What, what’s going on?” Candide’s expression was that of disbelief as well on the high platform. He exclaimed with incredulity while looking at the distant Leah Cain and Han Shuo.

“That Leah Cain is truly terrifying. According to the intelligence of Dark Mantle, he’d always used that rainbow of a silver sword aura to gain the advantage before defeating his opponents in his fights during recent years. It seems his trademark move is the attack he’d just deployed, the dense drizzle of ice needles. I could feel the destructive force within. I really didn’t expect this crude, brainless looking Leah Cain to hide such a sinister and meticulous skill. Truly a terrifying person!”

Sighing in astonishment, Amyes stopped for a bit and continued to exclaim in excitement, “Candide, your Bryan is even more magical. There’s almost no way to avoid that attack, yet he used such a miraculous skill to instantly split into four and escape the area of attack. What an incredible boy!”

“Of course, otherwise why would I spend so much effort on him?!” Candide was secretly taken aback, but still answered smugly after hearing Amyes’ words.

The surrounding was filled with the mix of endless discussion and loud noises. Given this level of excitement from the audience, it was likely that the discussion would only stop when the two fighters resumed their battle.

Leah Cain and Han Shuo now had some certain understanding of their opponent’s strength after such an intense exchange. The originally confident Han Shuo had to tread with more caution, and the dismissive Leah Cain had to put aside his arrogance and treat Han Shuo as his most powerful opponent thus far.

The two were standing around fifteen meters away from each other at the moment. Leah Cain once again stood on the ground, panting lightly as he glared at Han Shuo.

The two men just stood there, staring at each other without a word. After a span of ten breaths, Han Shuo’s lips curled into a grin, “Leah Cain, you’re going to be dead today without a doubt. Your attack just now was truly very powerful. Unfortunately, it needs a long time to gather and moreover, exhausts a great deal of fighting aura, doesn’t it?”

Leah Cain instantly paled in shock as Han Shuo’s words sounded. It seemed Han Shuo had hit upon the weak point of this skill!

Han Shuo shot towards Leah Cain like a lightning bolt at this precise moment. The Demonslayer Edge was flying one step ahead like a snake baring its fangs and biting down on its prey. As Leah Cain used his broadsword to block, the Demonslayer Edge would circle around to attack from another side.

Han Shuo also rushed towards Leah Cain but didn't attack in the manner of the Demonslayer Edge. Instead, he flew up in the air and leisurely took out the white bone staff, his mouth starting to chant some incantation. When the Canopy of Necromancy blotted out the sunlight, two evil knights leading a troop of dark creatures appeared one by one on the lawn and tightly surrounded Leah Cain.

Two evil knights, five hate warriors, twenty zombies, seventy skeletal warriors and two teams of thirty gargoyles each had appeared. Leah Cain was entangled by the Demonslayer Edge and could only stare dumbly at the materializing dark creatures that were encircling him.

"Leah Cain is done for!" Amyes said gracefully before looking at Candide with a smile, and added, "Let's go, we will go together to meet His Majesty. His Majesty will definitely make the right decision with Bryan's value. Hehe, that boy Lawrence's luck isn't bad alright, we should grow closer to him!"

"That's right!" Candide nodded before drifting away with Amyes towards the direction of the Imperial Palace.

The two had yet to completely clear the area when Leah Cain's tragic roars echoed nonstop throughout the entire Garden House area.

Lurking underground, the earth elite zombie had grabbed on Leah Cain's ankles. The humble little skeleton had then caused great injuries to Leah Cain with a surreptitious ambush. The two evil knights trampled him to death afterwards. In the end, over a hundred dark creatures rushed in and ripped him apart. There wasn't a single piece of bone left behind.

Chapter 289: A medal of merit

Leah Cain's fate had been sealed when more than a hundred dark creatures appeared. After all, a great deal of his fighting aura had been exhausted after exchanging blows with Han Shuo. Particularly in that last attack, Leah Cain had consumed a massive amount of fighting aura to produce the ice needles.

Han Shuo had the mental strength of a grand magus despite not being able to release the necromancy spells of this level. Such a huge mental force was enough for him to summon a large number of dark creatures. Amongst these creatures were the remarkably powerful little skeleton, the earth elite zombie and the wood elite zombie.

The three bizarre dark creatures lurked within the necromancy grand army and would randomly release attacks that caught an average person off guard, rendering them unable to defend themselves. Leah Cain had to deal with the Demonslayer Edge's all-pervasive attacks while facing two evil knights, creatures famous for their tyrannical strength. That obviously took most of his attention.

The three bizarre creatures took the opportunity to utilize their unique attacks to their hearts' content. This strategy was naturally effective as Leah Cain was instantly heavily injured by the little skeleton's sneak attacks. It was a matter of course for him to be trampled to death by the evil knights.

The hundred strong dark creatures instantly drowned Leah Cain and blocked the vision of the surrounding nobles as well as that of their entourages'. These people couldn't see what was happening at all. They could only hear the shrill, tragic roars from Leah Cain.

Han Shuo was standing grandly in the sky as Leah Cain's tragic screaming started to subside. He unhurriedly chanted an incantation, sending his summoned dark creatures back to the other dimension. Apart from the traces of blood scattered on the grass, there was nothing, not even a piece of bone left on the lawn to indicate these creatures had been present.

Everyone understood that Leah Cain was finished! He must have been ripped apart and eaten cleanly by those dark creatures. The big, still wet patches of blood on the lawn were proof of this truth.

“Done, done just like that!”

“Leah Cain is dead! I mean, he should be dead!”

“Uhh, how can this be? He was finished so quickly?!”

The onlookers around all sent horrified looks at Han Shuo standing proudly in mid-air. They then looked back down at the bloodstains on the lawn and understood that the battle was over. Han Shuo had successfully killed the Crazy Great Swordmaster Leah Cain of the Brut Merchant Alliance. He’d won fair and square, and had shown his unique skills from beginning to end of the battle.

He’d used the necromancers’ most brilliant, common, and effective tactic of numbers in the end to directly stomp on the great swordmaster. No matter from what perspective one approached this battle, this match could be regarded as a classic one for the books. Leah Cain’s dense rain of ice awls and Han Shuo’s unique skill in splitting up into four copies were all deeply engraved into everyone’s memory.

A hubbub of discussions rose and fell. Han Shuo had been standing proudly in the sky when he suddenly let out a resounding shout and left a blinding speed. His elegant, dashing figure gradually turned into a black spot until the crowd could no longer see a trace of him.

It weren’t just the audience inside the Garden House who knew of Han Shuo’s grand victory, the civilians on the streets outside all deduced the result when they saw Han Shuo fly away in the air. Everyone cheered and yelled, the atmosphere as joyous as a holiday.

First Prince Charles’ face was terrifyingly gloomy. He never expected Leah Cain to lose, no matter how much he speculated about the match. To him, this was simply unreal.

A face that looked even more embarrassed than Charles’ belonged to merchant Cameron. He stood right behind Charles with a bleak expression on an ashen complexion, his eyes glazed over as he stared into space. He simply didn't know what to do now. As the operator behind the scenes, Cameron had to draw out all of his capital for this bet like everyone else. He already had to pay an arm and leg for just Phoebe's Boozt Merchant Guild alone.

Phoebe was the complete opposite of him. Her usually cold face was currently full of uncontrollable excitement, her cherry lips muttering nonstop, "I'm rich, I'm rich!"

"Heh heh, heh heh, Bryan ah Bryan, you really didn't let me down!" Lawrence had never felt happier than he was today as he looked at Charles' gloomy face. He laughed loudly and left with Phoebe, walking arrogantly past Charles and Cameron.

"Let's go, father-in-law!" Although Emily soon knew of this result, she still felt an infinite glory as Han Shuo's secret woman when she saw his godly strength on display. The corner of her lips slightly turned up in a delightful smile as she turned to speak to old mister Hahn.

"Incredible, incredible little guy, heh!" Old mister Hahn showered nonstop praises, then left the Garden House with Emily.

When the nobles exited the Garden House, the details of Han Shuo's grand victory over Leah Cain quickly spread. At this moment, the entire Ossen City was discussing Han Shuo. Many noble young ladies secretly regarded him as the target of their admiration and adoration. Countless aristocrats wanted to recruit Han Shuo.

Ossen City, the Imperial Palace.

The two who'd left early – Amyes and Candide – were in a chamber with the king of the Lancelot Empire. They were softly narrating the details of the battle.

King Uhtred suddenly spoke loudly in joy after a while, "Good, very well done! I heard just yesterday that he'd found the blueprint, and today he's already killed Leah Cain of the Brut Merchant Alliance. This boy is truly worthy of enormous investment!"

“Not only that, your Majesty. Bryan also possesses an unique art. Not only can he become a top notch expert, his martial art can create an immeasurable impact to our Empire if widely promoted!” Amyes waited until Uhtred happily finished his speech before adding cautiously.

As these words fell, Uhtred asked in surprise, “What is this about?”

“It’s like this...” Gloomy Candide, one of the three heavyweights, carefully explained to Uhtred as he went over the details of how Han Shuo defeated Leah Cain. Then he added, “Your Majesty, Bryan has a clean background and is wholeheartedly loyal to the Empire. He’s worth it no matter the cost!”

Uhtred naturally had extraordinary insight since he’d been able to become king of Lancelot. His eyes sparkled when he heard Candide talk about the miracles about Han Shuo. He was silent for a while before issuing an order, “Candide, I intend to bestow him the title of count, award him with a mansion in the city’s north end, along with ten thousand gold coins. Promote him directly from Dark Moon to Dark Sun envoy with the right to access all Dark Mantle intelligence. In addition, you will personally lead Bryan and let him have his pick of territory. Don’t ask him about his martial arts for the time being. We first need to show him our sincerity.”

“Your Majesty is wise, I think Bryan will be very grateful!” Candide flattered.

“Mm, Candide, this Bryan was personally mentored by you, your credit is great. I now bestow you with a Medal of Bravery, consider this your reward!” Uhtred said to Candide with a smile.

“Many thanks to Your Majesty, your subject is very grateful!” Candide was overjoyed as he knelt down to receive the honor.

The Empire’s Medal of Bravery carried a special meaning. Only those with outstanding contributions to the Empire could be awarded this medal. Having this Medal of Bravery meant that Candide could enjoy the special privileges of the Empire in his lifetime. Even if the current king passed away, the next inheritor of the throne could never use brute force against the Imperial heroes who possessed a Medal of Bravery. Moreover, this medal was hereditary. Even when Candide died, his direct descendents could still enjoy the special privilege.

Although the Medal of Bravery carried no tangible benefits, this little medal was like a card of privilege that gave an identity even much superior than an average noble title. Therefore, Candide was overjoyed upon hearing Uhtred bestow him a Medal of Bravery. He secretly thought that this Bryan was indeed his lucky star!

“Candide, congratulations!” Amyes elegantly turned to offer Candide his congratulations.

“Many thanks!” Candide smiled in response, his face couldn’t conceal his joy.

“Alright, this is a reward you deserve because you’ve discovered a person who can become a sacred swordmaster and sacred magus for the Empire. I hope you will provide Bryan with more guidance and make even more contributions for the Empire!” Uhtred smiled as he looked at Candide and spoke slowly.

“Rest assure your Majesty, I will help Bryan adapt to aristocratic life as soon as possible. This boy is highly intelligent, he will become a pillar of the Empire sooner or later !” Candide was so pleased after he received the Medal of Bravery that he immediately made these promises.

Nodding his head, Uhtred said smilingly, “Good. You can all leave now. I will warn the Church of Light and won’t allow them to act wildly in our Lancelot Empire. Hehe, I believe the title of count is just the beginning for this boy. I hope he won’t disappoint me!”

Candide and Amyes glanced at each other. They didn’t say anything else and bowed respectfully. They then left through the secret tunnel and returned to the Dark Mantle headquarters within Mt. Ordas behind the Imperial Palace. After arriving, Candide started to prepare for Han Shuo’s ennoblement matters.

Chapter 290: First function of the bone staff

Han Shuo's name spread all throughout Ossen City in just a short few days. Thanks to his identity as an archmage necromancer and his deed of killing Leah Cain, this proved his strength. Uhtred used the fact that Han Shuo had recovered the blueprint to bestow upon him the title of count.

Uhtred also awarded him a gorgeous mansion in the northern part of the city, which included guards, maids, servants, and all that one could possibly want. The mansion had more than a hundred rooms of various sizes.

Even though Han Shuo had yet to officially receive the title of count, this didn't stop others from admiring and wanting to make friends with him. The gorgeous mansion already belonged to him from the moment he had left the Garden House.

Over the next couple of days, dignitaries from various noble houses came by to pay their respects to him. Unfortunately, the steward kept saying that the owner had yet to move in. Those who had come to visit could only leave their gifts behind.

Although he was currently the center of attention, Han Shuo himself actually didn't know about the situation going on outside. He flew alone to the mountain behind the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force after leaving the Garden House. There, he opened up the transportation matrix and returned to the cemetery of death.

Han Shuo had reaped many benefits from his battle with Leah Cain. He slowly digested the experience from this battle as he gradually recovered his magical yuan and mental strength. Han Shuo's body reached its peak condition by the time evening came. He immersed himself in the bloodlust realm, his deep red pupils furiously circulating with magical yuan.

After a few days passed like this, Han Shuo's deep red eyes gradually returned to normal. He heaved a soft sigh, "Just one more step. It's a pity that this step seems to be an unbreakable bottleneck. I really don't know what's going on."

Han Shuo could faintly sense that he'd soon break out of the bloodlust realm. However, he couldn't bridge the gap no matter how much effort he put in. Breakthroughs in magical cultivation required opportunities and comprehension. Perhaps the day that Han Shuo became spontaneously enlightened, he would directly break through into the next realm. He could instantly succeed once he firmly grasped this step.

Blind, stubborn practice wasn't a good idea. When Han Shuo felt that he could no longer advance by relying on arduous training, he immediately stopped practicing demonic magic. He took out the tri-colored bone staff after some thought.

At this point, Han Shuo was certain that this bone staff was the result of the Eye of Darkness transforming, as the top of the staff and the Eye of Darkness gave off the same feeling. When Han Shuo focused his mental force into the bone staff, he could use it to successfully open the cemetery of death.

This bone staff was much more intricate and ancient compared to the white bone staff that Han Shuo had taken from the Calamity Church. The three different skulls seemed to contain three different kinds of power. Han Shuo could subtly feel this every time he grasped the bone staff.

The bone staff was, without a doubt, a treasure that belonged to the cemetery of death. Shaking the staff a little, Han Shuo muttered, "Let's try out this bone staff."

"Souls of the fallen soldiers, heed the dark herald's call and reveal your existence!" Han Shuo waved the bone staff and chanted an elementary skeleton summoning incantation. The tri-colored skulls on the bone staff suddenly shone brightly upon being infused with his mental force. A row of sixteen skeletal warriors appeared out of thin air afterwards.

Han Shuo was momentarily dazed, shocked even, as he looked at the sixteen skeletal warriors. Mental strength at the grand magus level would only result in eight skeletal warriors being summons when using the white bone staff. But when he cast the spell using this bone staff, he'd unexpectedly reached the highest level of the skeleton summoning spell – level five. The number of summoned dark creatures had straight up doubled.

“This is too amazing!” Han Shuo exclaimed involuntarily. He started chanting the incantation to summon evil knights. When he had finished chanting, two evil knights appeared on the ground.

“Twice the results!” Han Shuo was utterly delighted. He then tried summoning the hate warriors and zombie warriors and achieved the same results. The number of summoned creatures had doubled when he used this bone staff whilst chanting the incantations.

After a successful experiment, Han Shuo couldn't help but continue and try incantations for Canopy of Necromancy and Acid Bog. He discovered that the area of effect for both spells were now twice as wide.

“Good stuff! This is really good stuff!” Han Shuo caressed the bone staff, never wanting to let go of it. He hadn't expected this bone staff to be so magical. It'd doubled the potential of the spells and increased his power by another level.

The bone staff was designed in an odd fashion and seemed quite ancient. In addition to doubling the power of necromancy magic, Han Shuo subtly felt that this staff hid several other secrets within it as well. It was a pity that he had no other methods to test it besides using it to release necromancy magic.

A white light flashed in the transportation matrix in the cemetery of death. Emily's figure appeared within the light. She opened her mouth to speak as soon as she saw Han Shuo, “I knew you'd be here!”

The transportation matrix leading to this place was stationed in a corner of the graveyard. Han Shuo was accustomed to arriving at the cemetery of death by using the hidden location in the mountains behind the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force. Only Emily knew this habit of his. When she went there and saw the magic sticks in the corner of the grave, she immediately knew that Han Shuo must've headed to the cemetery of death.

“Oh, what brings you here?” Han Shuo smiled upon seeing Emily appear and pulled her into his embrace.

“Hurry and return to Ossen City. His Majesty the King has prepared to bestow upon you the title of count. Everything is ready and waiting for you to return to Ossen City. Who knew that you’d disappear for a few days? Even the Dark Mantle couldn’t find a single trace of you. Master Candide is very anxious, so he asked me to help him find a way to contact you. I guessed that you were at the cemetery of death, and it seems that I wasn’t wrong!” Emily rolled her eyes at Han Shuo in explanation.

“So that’s the case!” Han Shuo replied, then asked with a strange chuckle, “So His Majesty intends to grant me the title of count?”

“Yes. In addition to the title, he’s also bequeathing upon you a mansion in the northern part of the city and ten thousand gold coins. Candide seems to have prepared everything for you already, and it only awaits you to take it!” Emily said.

“Fantastic. I didn’t think that giving Leah Cain a beating could bring such great benefits. Heh heh, it seems that noble titles really aren’t so hard to get!” Han Shuo said with a smile before activating the transportation matrix and returning to the Ossen City with Emily.

Mt. Ordas, the Dark Mantle headquarters.

“Stinking brat, why don’t you disappear for ten more days huh?” Candide scolded with a dark face upon seeing Han Shuo appear.

“I was slightly injured after my fight with Leah Cain, so I had no choice but to recover first, so I returned a bit later.” Han Shuo lied, and smiled at Candide and congratulated his mentor. “Congratulations Master Candide, I heard that His Majesty the King bequeathed upon you the Medal of Bravery two days ago. Congrats congrats!”

Candide’s gloomy face finally revealed a hint of a smile when Han Shuo mentioned this, but he quickly recovered and said with a stern expression, “Alright alright, let’s not talk about this anymore. Give me your badge. His Majesty has ordered me to promote you to a rank one Dark Sun envoy. Little brat, your luck is truly too good!"

"Let's go, come with me to meet His Majesty. His Majesty will bestow upon you a noble title and grant you a territory!" Candide said before leading Han Shuo through the secret transportation matrix in the Dark Mantle headquarters that led directly to the Imperial Palace.

Not long after, King Uhtred summoned the various nobles of Ossen City to gather in the middle of the spacious Lancelot Imperial Palace. He granted Han Shuo an audience and read the proclamation to begin the ceremony, "Bryan aided the Lancelot Empire many times in defending against foreign enemies... I bestow upon you the title of count, a mansion in the north of the city, and ten thousand gold coins. I hope you will continue to make great contributions to the Empire!"

"My thanks to your Your Majesty!" Candide had reminded Han Shuo of what to do and say earlier, so Han Shuo sincerely voiced his gratitude at this moment.

"Mhm, Brettel City in the furthest east shall be your territory. Brettel City is vast but extremely chaotic. I hope it will soon be restored to order under your leadership!" Uhtred raised his voice to speak loudly.

Several nobles revealed surprised expressions when they heard the territory would be Brettel City. It seemed that this city was very famous.

"Thank you, Your Majesty. I will definitely take good care of Brettel City and help restore the city to the order that it should possess in the Empire!" Han Shuo respectfully replied.

"Good. This shall be it for today. You are all dismissed!" Uhtred glanced at Han Shuo several times over before waving his arm to signify the end of the meeting. Everybody left one by one.

Chapter 291: Mansion and territory

Brettel City was located to the east in the Lancelot Empire and bordered seven constantly warring duchies. These duchies weren't as powerful as the Lancelot Empire and were plagued with conflict almost all year round.

However, whenever the Lancelot Empire would try to invade these seven duchies, they would stop their internal conflict and tightly join hands to resist the invasion of the Lancelot Empire.

One duchy by itself couldn't compete with the Lancelot Empire, but seven of them together had the power beyond that of the Lancelot Empire. Fortunately, these seven duchies would never be united forever, otherwise the Lancelot Empire would truly be hard pressed to face their attack.

Brettel City was precisely a Lancelot Empire city that bordered the seven duchies. The size of the city was vast, but unfortunately its location was awkward. The city suffered from the impact of the chaotic warring between the seven duchies, so it was the place where crooks mixed with honest folk.

"Bryan, normally a count such as you has no way to control such a large territory. Brettel City is almost the size of the Valen City, only someone with the title of marquis is qualified to oversee such a city. Hehe, Brettel is chaotic indeed, but it's just right for a spirited young man like you."

"It would greatly benefit your future career if you manage Brettel City well. It will be up to you to grasp opportunities well if you wish to obtain the title of marquis or duke." In the secret chamber of the Dark Mantle, Candide looked at Han Shuo and explained in a low tone.

Sitting directly opposite of Candide, Han Shuo was perusing the information about Brettel City. He nodded at Candide's words and placed the documents to the side, lifting his head to say, "Brettel is a barren land, the soil cannot nurture any type of crops. It can only produce some specialized iron and silver ores. The city has been caught in the midst of warring between the seven duchies for a long time while bandits and thieves have run rampant. Even several official armies of the duchies have disguised themselves as bandits to invade and pillage the city. This is a chaotic place where the city folks are tough. It's actually a very interesting area!"

"How so? Do you have any ideas yet?" Han Shuo was a count not, and he'd also proved his power last time in the Garden House by killing Leah Cain. Even Candide no longer had the attitude of a boss talking to a subordinate when he spoke with Han Shuo. He was viewing Han Shuo as he equal on the same level.

"No ideas yet for now. I want to go to Brettel City and see the situation for myself first!" Han Shuo replied indifferently.

"Then alright. Take these documents, they are proof of your identity as the Brettel city lord. The former city lord was removed due to his incompetence. The Brettel City's castle now belongs to you, you can show these documents to officially take ownership of it."

"Mm, in addition, Brettel City currently has three thousand guards all under your command. Perhaps you aren't well versed in leading the army to war. However, I think Lawrence can help you with this aspect. You only need to protect Brettel City from the invasion of the duchies and bandits, as well as maintain its order. That should be enough." Candide said.

"Alright then, I'll be leaving now. I'll contact you through the magic mirror in Brettel City's Dark Mantle stronghold if anything comes up!" Han Shuo nodded and said to Candide before exiting the Dark Mantle headquarters.

Han Shuo walked into a mansion in the city's northern end. A steward was already waiting in front of the gate. He immediately said respectfully upon seeing Han Shuo, "Respected Sir Count, you've finally come. My name is Kallas, I am your steward."

"Hello Kallas, what can you tell me about this mansion?" Han Shuo asked with a faint smile.

Kallas was a gray-haired old man wearing clean and simple clothes. His speech was refined and his behavior courteous. He must have been in his position for quite a few years. Kallas immediately responded respectfully to Han Shuo's question, "Your Lordship, this mansion has belonged to you since the moment you defeated Leah Cain. Everything is operating normally. In the past few days, a total of thirty nobles from Ossen City have come to pay you a visit. We have received seventy-three types of gifts in total, all of them are being properly stored..."

Han Shuo remembered every detail as Kallas softly summarized the situation within the mansion. From Kallas, Han Shuo knew that many nobles didn't have territory in the Ossen City. Instead, they had a mansion here which they stayed in when they came to meet His Majesty the King.

Of course, there were also aristocrats whose territories weren't bustling enough for their tastes. As they didn't enjoy the life in their own territory, many nobles always resided inside the Ossen City. It was fine as long as they returned to their territory regularly, handled some matters, and made sure that no trouble cropped up in it.

There were maids, servants, stewards and all necessary resources inside the mansion. Han Shuo had the right to remove them, or needed to pay them a certain salary each month so they could maintain the normal operations of the mansion. Kallas described some of the miscellaneous things very carefully.

"Alright, Mister Kallas, I've understood everything. Mm, take me to the living room. Invite Lawrence and young Miss Phoebe here, I want to see the two of them. If other people ask for me, tell them I'm not here." Han Shuo discovered through the three yin demons' surveillance that many people had come to visit him. These people had been placed in different rooms so they didn't know of each other's movements.

One yin demon had been injured last time in the battle with Leah Cain. It had recovered after being nourished by the blood essence in the cemetery of death. Even though Han Shuo had spent a few drops of his essence blood, it was good that the yin demon was fine.

"Yes, Your Lordship!" Kallas replied. He brought Han Shuo to a big living room before withdrawing respectfully.

This living room was as big as a basketball court. Seven large, vibrant lamps were hanging above. A soft carpet covered the floor. Many comfortable chairs was placed around the surroundings. The room looked bright and spacious.

Lawrence and Phoebe walked in together after a while. Lawrence laughed heartily and said to Han Shuo as soon as he arrived, "Congratulations Bryan, I heard that the king bestowed a title upon you today. I thought you would come back to your mansion, so I brought Phoebe with me."

Phoebe's face was glowing, a beautiful, bright smile blooming on her lips after she'd won an enormous amount of gold coins. Her eyes blazed as she looked at Han Shuo and said, "Bryan, Cameron is finished this time. His merchant alliance has suffered a heavy loss thanks to him, so his allies no longer trust him. The crisis of our Boozt Guild has been resolved."

Looking at the two happy people, Han Shuo nodded smilingly and said, "I intend to go to Brettel City. This city is full of mayhem, it's very interesting. If this Brettel City can develop well in my hands, it can be very beneficial to you, Lawrence."

"I've knew about you taking charge of Brettel City. This city is chaotic indeed, the civilians there are much tougher than in the Ossen City. The bandit armies of several grand duchies constantly pillage the villages in the surroundings. In recent years, the city lords of Brettel City have all been incompetent. This has caused all the businessmen to leave, and the nobles and civilians to lose their confidence in Brettel City due to this. It may not be easy if you want to quickly grasp control of the situation!" Lawrence said with a frown. He was quite worried upon hearing Han Shuo mention Brettel City.

The Lancelot Empire had sent out its armies repeatedly and tried to invade the seven grand duchies through Brettel City. However, the Empire had to withdraw every single time and eventually banished this idea. Whenever the main troops retreated, the few tens of thousands remaining Brettel City guards were insufficient to defend against the invasion from any duchy. The duchies took advantage of that opportunity to loot and raid, as was their habit.

However, even though the seven grand duchies had the power to take over Brettel City, they didn't dare to because they still had suspicions about each other, while also being afraid that they'd really infuriate the Lancelot Empire. This was why they only pillaged from time to time and never truly occupied the city.

Therefore, the former city lords of Brettel City had been much aggrieved and frustrated. The city was much weaker than any of the grand duchies. In addition, the land was barren, so there wasn't much benefit from it despite the vastness of the area. The King also wasn't willing to waste an enormous amount of manpower and resources in stationing an army inside the city to defend against the seven grand duchies.

Brettel City had become a kind of useless and meaningless existence ever since then. It would be a pity to give up, but not giving up wouldn't bring any benefits either. The situation was very awkward.

"Rest assured, I understand what kind of place Brettel City is. I already have a plan. After all, His Majesty has spoken. Brettel City is fully under my responsibility, I'll take good care of it!" Han Shuo let out a strange cackled and responded in a mysterious manner.

"What do you intend to do?" Lawrence asked, dumbfounded.

"You'll know when the time comes. I will make Brettel City even more chaotic!" Han Shuo spoke with an evil laugh.

Chapter 292: Three hundred thousand gold coins

“Senior brother Lawrence, there’s something I want to speak to Bryan about alone.” Phoebe glanced at Lawrence and said softly.

Lawrence was startled but soon reacted. He smiled meaningfully and said, “Alright. Rest assured Bryan, I’ll arrange some fine military leaders to arrive at Brettel City before you travel there.”

Nodding his head, Han Shuo said with a slight smile, “Many thanks, I’m really not very good at military strategy. Your people will surely be a great help to me!”

“Alright then, you guys talk, I’ll go back first. I’ll personally come to Brettel City after a while to pay you a visit.” Lawrence flashed a wink at the two before exiting the room with a smile.

Han Shuo stepped forward and gathered Phoebe into his arms as soon as Lawrence had left, following up with a long, lingering kiss. Han Shuo picked her up and walked straight into the bedroom. He dropped her right on the spacious, soft bed and pressed himself on her.

Clothes flung out, the two naked bodies intertwined. Phoebe let out one sultry whimper after another, trying desperately to match Han Shuo’s pounding movements. She kept going until she had exhausted of every bit of strength.

After stormy turbulence, Phoebe lazily leaned onto Han Shuo’s strong chest. Her delicate fingers gently glided across his body as she murmured in satisfaction, “I can’t leave with you for now. Cameron’s merchant alliance is facing a crisis of disbandment due to their loss in his huge gamble. This has opened up an opportunity.”

There was normally a secret chamber in the mansion of every noble for storing precious goods or engaging in secret endeavours. This mansion the King had bestowed upon Han Shuo was no exception. Candide had told Han Shuo everything about this mansion when he met with Han Shuo in the Dark Mantle headquarters, including the underground secret chamber.

Han Shuo saw a big, empty room after walking down the tunnel. There was nothing inside except for a few empty closets.

Setting up the magic sticks into a closet, Han Shuo arrived at the cemetery of death through the transportation matrix. The cemetery of death was gloomy all year round. Except for the stark white bones scattered everywhere, there was no vitality nor any changes. Han Shuo heaved a soft sigh of relief upon exiting the cemetery of death. He looked to the depths of the Dark Forest and spread out his senses.

“Why hasn’t the fire elite zombie been completed after so long!” Han Shuo frowned and muttered to himself, unable to comprehend things.

The earth elite zombie and wood elite zombie certainly hadn’t taken as long to emerge as the fire elite zombie. If it weren’t for Han Shuo being able to sense its presence, he would really have thought that it’d met with some troubles.

“Could it be because of the fire attribute treasure – the fire lotus, or the Lord of the Flames?” Han Shuo pondered for a bit and made this guess.

In contrast to the earth elite zombie and wood elite zombie, the place of extreme fire had given birth to a fire attribute treasure – the fire lotus. What would result from it hadn’t been mentioned in Chu Cang Lan’s memory. There had been a terrifying Lord of the Flames inside as well that had taken the fire elite zombie to be its child, which put an even odder spin on things. So many strange happenings together might have impacted the formation of the fire elite zombie. Otherwise, it shouldn’t have taken that long to emerge.

“Forget it. Let’s start the water elite zombie for now!” Han Shuo decided to stop thinking about it. He understood that there was no issue since he could still sense the presence of the fire elite zombie. He decided to go to the Valley of Sunshine and place the water elite zombie into the place of extreme water.

After flying through the air for a while, Han Shuo traveled from the Dark Forest to the territory of the Valley of Sunshine. He jumped down the strange cliff to look for the Soul Destroyer base.

Surprisingly, Han Shuo couldn't sense Gilbert's presence at all. He only saw Grant when he walked in. The latter immediately paid his respects upon seeing Han Shuo and explained, "The chief and Gilbert have taken accepted a mission, they aren't here for now."

"What's the current situation?" Han Shuo ordered the three yin demons to circle around. He discovered that there were over two hundred mercenaries still present. As these two hundred people looked completely unfamiliar, he immediately understood that the Soul Destroyer mercenary band had expanded.

"What else could have happened? The great powers have switched from covert to direct fighting. During this chaotic period, Laureton's Cairo mercenary band has been the strongest. The other three powers was forced to join hands in order to take a stand against the Cairo mercenaries. A few strong bandit forces also participate from time to time. The current Valley of Sunshine has become a chaotic mess." Grant explained to Han Shuo with a smile.

"Oh right, after what happened last time, did the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band and the House of Menlo make trouble for you guys?" Recalling the events in which he'd killed Ferguson and heavily injured Adam Menlo, Han Shuo couldn't help but ask with surprise about what had happened after.

"Heh heh, those two do indeed hate us Soul Destroyers very much. It's a pity that they don't know where we are. They can't proceed even if they want revenge!" Grant looked smug as he laughed loudly.

"I see many new faces in our band. There aren't any problems with these people right?" Concern struck him as Han Shuo asked.

"Rest assured. We only picked these mercenaries after a strict inspection. Those who can come in here are all trustworthy. Hehe, Laureton has allowed us to recruit people in the Valley of Sunshine thanks to you. This has saved is a lot of effort. " Grant looked gratefully at Han Shuo and said smilingly.

“Good. I’ll be leaving now since Trunks isn’t here.” Han Shuo said goodbye to Grant after obtaining the information he wanted and flew straight to the Valley of Sunshine.

The members of the Cairo mercenary band in the Valley of Sunshine all knew of Han Shuo now. They dismissed all procedures necessary from him to enter the valley. Everyone greeted Han Shuo with a smile, their attitude towards him quite amiable.

Han Shuo went straight to his shop as soon as he entered the Valley of Sunshine. He started to operate the formation without another word before jumping into the well. He took out the materials from his space ring one by one and sank down to the depths of the waters. The waters were cold to the bones. Han Shuo summoned the little skeleton upon reaching the bottom.

The little skeleton located an ordinary looking zombie as per Han Shuo’s order and disappeared after bringing the later out. Han Shuo placed this zombie warrior in the center of the place of extreme water. He threw in the strange materials one by one afterwards and directed all of the available water elements in this place to gather at the zombie warrior.

Chapter 293: The Temple Knights

Han Shuo didn't expend too much effort in refining the water elite zombie. Thanks to the earth, wood and fire elite zombies, he was well versed in the process. After everything was finished, Han Shuo jumped out of the well and suddenly felt two unfamiliar presences.

The deathly air of the Shura Soul Formation was quietly circulating in the shop's courtyard. Dark grand magus Edwin of the Calamity Church and the female alchemist Belinda was wandering around outside. They didn't dare to come in, and could only look down in shock at this gloomy yard from the rooftop.

A concentrated sense of death could be found within the Shura Soul Formation. The two people absolutely couldn't see what Han Shuo was doing inside. But for Han Shuo, he only needed to lift his head after jumping out of the well to see the two experts of the Calamity Church clearly.

Edwin and Belinda obviously knew there was a great danger hidden below. They looked down in shock at the changes, not daring to risk entering the formation. They appeared very wary and cautious.

Thanks to the Rainbow Sickle ambush last time, the two already knew that this place was extremely dangerous. Han Shuo knew they knew, so it was understandable that these two didn't dare to draw close.

After circling around the courtyard to inspect it, Han Shuo walked towards the eye of the formation and shot a black light onto it. The violent, gloomy deathly air in the formation instantly dispersed and the formation returned to its inert state.

Han Shuo sat down on a chair in the courtyard, lazily looking up at Edwin on the rooftop. He asked indifferently, "Mister Edwin, it seems that you're always this surreptitious when you pay a visit. Can it be that this is how your Calamity Church operates?"

Edwin still didn't dare to come down even though the changes in the courtyard had disappeared. Having heard Han Shuo's words, he chuckled and said, "My apologies. We'll stay up here for our little chat. Congratulations on killing Ferguson. However, you've also completely offended the Church of Light. They'll spare no costs in dealing with you now. So, heh heh, our Calamity Church sincerely invites you to join us. We're willing to pay any price as long as you're willing to join us."

"Sorry, not interested!" Han Shuo had declined before, and he was still determined to turn them down all the same. He left no room for further negotiation.

"Alright then. Since you don't want to join us, let's discuss a bit about cooperation instead. Hehe, the Church of Light has dispatched a small troop of Temple Knights, whose goal is to deal with you. The Temple Knights don't number many, but each one is a true expert. This troop is the sword that the Church of Light uses to eradicate heretics. They are currently marching towards Brettel City, just waiting for you to arrive."

"Even if you hadn't come to the Valley of Sunshine today, my people would have still gone to inform you when you arrived at Brettel City. But I didn't expect to be able to meet you here, and that's why I'm telling you in advance to see if we can possibly cooperate!" Edwin was truly sincere, he'd informed Han Shuo of this important information at first opportunity.

Han Shuo involuntarily frowned at Edwin's words. The main headquarters of the Church of Light headquarters was positioned in the most powerful nation of the Profound Continent – the Oden Empire. This Empire was separated from the Lancelot Empire by the Angel Empire. The Temple Knights had always protected the Temple of Light loyally. It seemed the Church of Light was truly determined this time if they'd dispatched a small troop of Temple Knight just for Han Shuo.

"I won't cooperate with you for now. However if I need something, I just might contact you!" Han Shuo thought for a while before telling Edwin.

Edwin immediately grinned upon hearing Han Shuo's words and said, "The Calamity Church and the Church of Light are death sworn enemies in the Profound Continent! Alright then, if you encounter any trouble, our Calamity Church may just appear at your side. Let's meet again then!"

Edwin and Belinda didn't linger after speaking these words. They swept a casual glance around the surroundings before cautiously leaving Han Shuo's rooftop and disappearing out of sight.

Han Shuo immediately stood up after Edwin and Belinda left. He released all three yin demons and had them follow after Edwin and Belinda. He intended to see why these two had come to the Valley of Sunshine.

Edwin and Belinda were very careful, they made a lot of turns along the way, guarding against the tracking of any possible enemy. However, they couldn't hide their presence from the three yin demons' surveillance.

In the end, the two people unexpectedly entered the Cairo mercenary band's headquarters. Han Shuo was secretly tracking them this time so he didn't enter the headquarters openly. Instead, he hid in a corner of the valley that wasn't very far away and used the three yin demons to spy on Edwin's actions.

To be honest, when he saw the two walk up to the door, Han Shuo could somewhat deduce that Edwin had reached an agreement with Laureton. Otherwise, Edwin and Belinda couldn't have come to Han Shuo's door so quickly after he'd just returned to the Valley of Sunshine less than a couple hours ago. The Valley of Sunshine was within the Cairo mercenary band's sphere of influence. The Calamity Church's spy network had spread far and wide.

"Mister Edwin, did you go see Bryan?" Laureton asked first when Edwin arrived.

Nodding, Edwin thanked him with a smile, "Many thanks for letting me know. I've just seen Bryan. Right, how's the preparation going? Three hundred Death Guards from our Calamity Church will arrive at the Valley of Sunshine in two days. After all, anyone but the Church of Light can have the mithril mine. If they craft mithril armor for the Temple Knights, it will bring us great trouble in the future!"

Laureton's expression was cold as he said ferociously, "Rest assured. I will immediately mobilize the Cairo mercenary band as soon as your Death Guards arrive to flatten those powers around the mithril mine. Humph! I almost lost my life there last time, I won't be so careless this time. Those three great powers will definitely pay back this debt in blood!"

"Heh heh, that'd be best. Since the Church of Light wants the mithril mine, we'll fill the mine with their lives!" Edwin laughed in a sinister fashion as he discussed the details of the plan with Laureton. Han Shuo listened for a while and carefully memorized their conversation. When Edwin and Laureton were about to leave, Han Shuo moved one step faster than them and soundlessly exited the area.

Han Shuo immediately departed the Valley of Sunshine after leaving the Cairo mercenary band. He returned to the Soul Destroyers to ask about the movement of Trunks' group. From Grant, Han Shuo knew that it would be some time before those two returned.

Han Shuo didn't linger in the Soul Destroyer base. Instead, he rushed back to the cemetery of death and returned to the secret chamber in his mansion. Kallas stepped into the secret chamber not long after his return and said respectfully to Han Shuo, "Your Lordship, a young lady called Fanny wants to see you. She said that you'd definitely see her if I informed you of her name!"

Han Shuo was dumbfounded. He suddenly remembered his promise to Fanny. He'd said that he would find her in a few days when he'd left last time. He hadn't expected to be so busy and had forgotten about this. Now it was Fanny who'd come looking for him.

"Where is she? Take me to see her!" Now that Han Shuo had his own mansion, if Fanny and Phoebe came to find him too often, his relationships with them would be exposed sooner or later. Just thinking about it gave him a headache.

Seeing him so anxious, Kallas was quite surprised. He immediately said in a respectful manner, "Your Lordship, please follow me!"

After winding through a couple of hallways, Kallas led Han Shuo to the room where Fanny was. He pointed inside and said, "Miss Fanny is in there."

"Mhm, you are dismissed, don't let other people come here!" Han Shuo instructed.

Han Shuo waited for Kallas to leave before he bit the bullet and walked inside. He immediately saw Fanny sitting in the middle of the room. She was wearing a navy blue dress instead of her usual magic robe. She instantly humphed upon seeing Han Shuo walk in, coldly looking at him as she said, "Your Lordship finally has some time to spare for us common civilians?"

"I'm so sorry. There was something that happened so I was delayed a little. This won't happen again. Fanny, you must forgive me." Han Shuo smiled wryly and apologized as soon as he came in. He was indeed in the wrong, it was natural for Fanny to be so angry.

"This isn't the first time either. You never honor your promises!" Fanny still maintained her iron face as she fixed him with a cold stare.

Han Shuo smiled wryly as he looked at Fanny, putting up his hands in surrender, "I was wrong. You can punish me however you want!"

"Then good, just promise me that you'll be an honorary professor for our necromancy major and I'll forgive you." Fanny thought for a bit before glaring ferociously at Han Shuo.

Honorary professor was just a title for show in the Babylon Academy of Magic and Force. A person with this title basically wasn't bound by the Academy's rules. They only need to occasionally give a speech in accordance with the Academy's request. There was strong competition amongst the different majors in the Academy. The ability to invite famous, powerful figures to be honorary professors was the standard with which to measure a department's influence.

"No problem!" Han Shuo readily agreed.

"You scoundrel, how do you have the ability to kill someone so evil as Leah Cain? How did you become an archmage necromancer? How many things are you actually still lying to me about?" Fanny was happy when she heard Han Shuo's ready acquiescence, but then her many doubts flooded her heart and just burst out.

Chapter 294: A massive amount of explosives

Han Shuo only needed half an hour of honeyed words and gentle caressing, to make Fanny, who'd come to incriminate him, beam with joy. Smiles blooming on her lips, Fanny left Han Shuo's mansion in contentment after listening to his sweet talking.

Han Shuo then traveled at the fastest speed possible to the Boozt Merchant Guild to find Phoebe. He immediately requested upon finding her, "I need a ton of explosives, ones with the maximum fatality. The amount should be enough to destroy a small mountain!"

"Gosh! What do you need it for?" As a normal girl, Phoebe was shocked upon hearing that Han Shuo was in urgent need for a huge amount of lethal explosives, the stronger the better. She only needed to use her toes to figure out what he was going to do.

"Don't ask so much. Hurry and help me get my hands on them. Also, don't let anyone know about this matter." Han Shuo had made up his mind regardless of anything. Time waited for no one, so the faster the better.

Once a woman entered a physical relationship with a man, she would change because of him, even if that woman was the cold and arrogant Phoebe. Moreover, she knew that Han Shuo was very clear-headed, so he wouldn't do anything stupid. Therefore, she didn't ask anymore questions despite her doubts. When Han Shuo urged again, she nodded and said, "Give me some time, I'll collect them using all means possible."

"Good! I'll come for the explosives the day after tomorrow. You should temporarily avoid going out for the next two days." Han Shuo instructed before leaving the Boozt Merchant Guild in a hurry.

After quietly returning to the secret chamber in his mansion, Han Shuo used the transportation matrix to arrive at the cemetery of death once more. He then utilized the art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens and flew towards the mountain valley with the mithril mine. There, he summoned the earth elite zombie.

Three yin demons slowly drifted towards the center of the mountain valley, rapidly transmitting images and scenes into Han Shuo's mind. The alliance, of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band, the House of Menlo, and the Katar orc tribe, was here. More than a thousand of their members were stationed near the valley, surrounding it within layers and layers of encirclement.

That mithril mine was still operating as usual. However, harvesting this mine was no easy matter due to its steep and narrow terrain, especially as the mithril was mixed in with the silver ores and located in the deepest place. The three powers were still unsatisfied with their progress, even after increasing the amount of overtime the past several days.

The three yin demons scoured every corner of the valley. The earth elite zombie lurked underground, shooting to and fro as the child of the earth. Under Han Shuo's commands, he dug out an undiscoverable hole deep under the mountain valley. This hole would be the container for the explosives he would receive from Phoebe.

Han Shuo knew there'd be a bloody battle in this mountain valley from Laureton and Edwin's conversation. The majority of fighting force from the four great powers were going to participate in this war, including Laureton's Cairo mercenary band. Laureton had recently used various incentives to lure over ten minor forces to his side.

The other three great powers had also poured in a great deal of troops into the valley due to the existence of the mithril mine. Once the fighting broke out, this mountain valley would become the biggest battlefield in all of the Valley of Sunshine's history. All Han Shuo needed to do was put enough explosives under this battlefield to destroy all of the enemy forces, subduing them all in one fell swoop.

This had to be done with caution. Only the earth elite zombie's miraculous ability to drill soundlessly underground enabled him to accomplish this task. The three yin demons hadn't registered any powerful earth mages at this time, so he boldly allowed the earth elite zombie to die according to his arrangements.

Even with his miraculous ability, the earth elite zombie still took quite a long time to lay out the preparations for the explosives in the mountain valley. Han Shuo constantly kept watch on the experts present through his three yin demons. He was afraid that they would sense the movements underground and discover his plan.

Fortunately, everything went fairly smoothly. Han Shuo immediately left the mountain valley once the earth elite zombie had finished his preparations. He returned to and stayed in the cemetery of death, carefully studying the archmage rank spell, Soul Tremor. This spell was extremely obscure and was quite difficult to grasp.

“Soul Tremor” directly attacked the opponent’s soul using one’s own mental strength. One first had to grasp a certain amount of knowledge concerning the soul before they could master this spell. On the other hand, they also needed to master the method of using their mental force to attack. Just this step alone, of shaping the mental force into an attack was already very difficult to execute.

Han Shuo continuously practiced in the cemetery of death, frowning as he pondered the way to utilize his mental strength as an attack.

He could clearly sense this invisible mental force when he concentrated his mind. However, Han Shuo couldn’t materialize it into an attack no matter what method he tried.

“This is indeed somewhat difficult!” Han Shuo muttered. He was unable to gather the requisite mental force and turn it into a tangible attack.

“The consciousness is formless, but its power limitless. The heart is the foundation of the attack. When the heart moves, the soul too, will move...”

Han Shuo suddenly recalled an incantation about the consciousness that was described in demonic magic. Upon reaching the separate demon realm, cultivators could distinctly sense their consciousness. The consciousness was actually reinforcement for the soul. Cultivators in the separate demon realm could transform their soul into their consciousness.

They could live forever as long as this consciousness wasn't completely destroyed.

Since the consciousness was a formless existence, the cultivator would gain many miraculous abilities once their soul transformed. The most basic benefit would be the ability to use their consciousness to sense movements in the surroundings. The sensitivity and scope depended on the strength of the cultivator's consciousness. In a fight, the consciousness could form all kinds of exotic attacks, as long as it was strong enough. For instance, a mirage or a tangible attacks could manipulate the opponent's mind, turning them into a puppet or have other amazing effects.

The consciousness could also attack the opponent's soul like mental force, with much more varied and mysterious ways than a simple mental strength to attack. According to the demonic magic's teachings about using consciousness to attack, Han Shuo vaguely felt that consciousness and mental force were similar in their uses.

The main difference was that the consciousness was the transformed soul of demonic cultivators, and was an important part of the foundation, like the demon infant. In fact, consciousness was even a bit more important. The demon infant was the source of his magical yuan. Once it was destroyed, a demonic practitioner would lose all of their power. They'd become an ordinary person once their body was void of magical yuan.

The consciousness was the soul of a demonic cultivator. They could still make use of their past experiences and expend time to build another demon infant if theirs was destroyed, as long as the consciousness was preserved. However once the consciousness was destroyed, cultivators would have their souls disperse into nothingness, leaving behind no traces in this world. Mental force was similar to the concept of demon infant. Once completely lost, a mage would, at most, lose their ability to gather magic elements and cast magic spells. They would just become an ordinary person instead of losing their life.

In the cemetery of death, Han Shuo was constantly contemplated, particularly with regards to attacking with his consciousness. He carefully sifted through his understanding and seemed to gradually grasp a clue. When he completely focused all of his mental strength in a calm state of mind, a thought flashed through his head. The mental force churned fiercely, giving birth to a wondrous resonance.

Han Shuo quickly chanted an incantation at this moment. A strange force appeared from who knew where and swiftly merged with his mental force. A kind of wave spread out like water ripples.

“Mm, that’s some improvement. Just a little bit more!” Han Shuo breathed out a whisper. Just now, he’d felt his mental force form a tangible attack. However, since there was no soul in front of him, his attack had no target, so he was unable to truly test its effectiveness.

“It seems I need to find a live test subject!” Han Shuo muttered to himself as he thought for a moment. He left the cemetery of death when he found that it was already somewhat late.

Han Shuo went straight to the Boozt Merchant Guild without prior notice. He found Phoebe in her room and asked, “How goes it?”

“I’ve managed to collect a few. However, due to the short timing and explosives being dangerous, prohibited goods in the Empire, the amount I collected wasn’t enough to destroy a small mountain. Mm, if you can give me a little bit more time, I can go look in some cities farther away.” Phoebe looked helplessly at Han Shuo, speaking somewhat apologetically.

“There’s not enough time. Just gather as many as possible then. Mm, this matter would best be kept secret, otherwise trouble may arise.” Han Shuo said with a frown.

“Rest assured, I used some small businesses and acquired them in great secrecy through batches. I think there should be no problems.” Phoebe replied.

Phoebe’s space ring then shone nonstop. A carefully wrapped bundle of explosives appeared in Phoebe’s hand and was placed into Han Shuo’s space ring. When Phoebe finished handing over all of them, she finally asked, “Bryan, what do you intend to do? You don’t want to destroy Brettel City, do you?”

“This has nothing to do with Brettel City. I haven’t even gone there yet.” Han Shuo casually answered. He hugged Phoebe and gave her a kiss before saying with a smile, “Alright, don’t worry about me, I know what my limits are.”

Han Shuo hurriedly left the Boozt Merchant Guild beneath Phoebe’s surprised gaze. He returned to the cemetery of death through the transportation matrix and quickly flew to the mountain valley with the mithril mine.

Chapter 295: Undercurrents

The inky veil of night shrouded the entire mountain valley. Spring had arrived and the fragrance of flowers was still intoxicating, even at night.

In the quiet night, the low buzzing sound of insects accompanied the latent danger. Teams of mercenaries were stationed in every corner of the mithril mine in the mountain valley. The seemingly calm space was filled with prudence and alertness.

A group of black-armored people slowly crept through the thick bushes like shadows in the night, bringing with them a creepy, sinister atmosphere. Dark grand magus Edwin drifted above them in the air, guiding the way. Three hundred Death Guards followed closely behind without making a sound, similar to wraiths.

Two thousand mercenaries of the Cairo mercenary band followed behind the three hundred Death Guards under Laureton's leadership. They slowly approached the mithril mine in the mountain valley. A mix of a dozen or so small forces were behind the Cairo mercenary band. There were probably more than a thousand experts wearing mercenary outfits of various colors.

Even though the three great powers had gathered to guard the the mithril mine, they still needed to leave members behind to guard their base. That was why they had only dispatched roughly a thousand mercenaries total. This number was only a third of Laureton's two thousand elite mercenaries, the Calamity Church's three hundred Death Guards, and the thousand plus experts from a dozen small forces.

A black mass of gas slowly suffused through the air as dark grand magus Edwin released a dark spell. A faint layer of mist suddenly shrouded the moonlit area in front of the mountain valley, as if all the moisture in the night had condensed together.

The originally buzzing sounds of the insects gradually died down for an unknown reason. The House of Menlo's wind archmage Arthur had been resting with his eyes closed and seemed to sense the abnormal movement.

Opening his eyes to scan the mountain valley, he muttered to himself, “What’s going on? Why did the sounds of the insects stop?!”

The voice of the orc warrior Caloric echoed from the tent to Arthur’s left, “Hey, Arthur, it’s late already. Hurry up and get some rest.”

“I feel like something’s not right. I’m going out to take a look.” Arthur mumbled before exiting his tent. He slowly floated up using the levitation skill and looked out towards the area beyond the valley. “Hmm! Why is it all fogged up?” Arthur asked himself and drifted out of the mountain valley.

There were all sorts of tents scattered around the mountain valley, and some energetic mercenaries patrolling between them. These people immediately welcomed Arthur when they saw him drifting in the sky. Several mercenaries from the Rainbow Sickle joked in a light tone, “This fellow can’t sleep at night, could it be he’s gone out to find some fun? Heh heh, this makes sense. It sucks being assigned to this kind of place.”

“Leave him be. We only need to worry about our shift.” Another mercenary promptly responded.

“Shush!” Edwin, approaching from this side, suddenly let out a light cry. He made a gesture to the Death Guards behind him. The shadowy advancing Death Guards quickly crouched down, hiding in the bushes without revealing a single sign of life.

Laureton’s eyes were sharp as he caught Edwin’s action. He immediately waved his hand towards the back. A lineup, as long and twisted as a dragon, instantly quieted down to slight breathing. These people were quite far from Arthur, so their slight breathing wasn’t heard.

Arthur flew out of the mountain valley, frowning as he looked out into the distance. However, he couldn’t find anything unusual. He stayed for a while, muttering a few words before returning to the mountain valley.

At this moment, the positions, according to the distance from far to near, relative to Laureton’s group were: the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band, the House of Menlo, and the Katar orc tribe. An orc warrior guarding outside the Katar orc tribe’s area was abruptly jolted by an ear-piercing whistle. After he reacted, he discovered an arrow nailed into the large tree next to him. A letter was tied to the still trembling tail of the arrow.

Adam's House of Menlo was next. The two guards here were similarly snapped awake by an arrow with a letter tied to it. Lastly, it was the Rainbow Sickles' turn. They were right in front of the mithril mine and also received a letter tied to a still shaking arrow.

At that moment, the leaders of the three great powers were jolted awake from their various states. Holding the letters in hand, they urgently summoned their troops and woke up all of the soundly sleeping mercenaries. Everyone rushed at top speed to the mithril mine in the mountain valley.

After sending out three warning letters using his speedy hang gliding techniques, Han Shuo once again soundlessly returned to his hiding place near the mithril mine in the mountain valley. All of the explosives had been planted beforehand. Han Shuo quietly and coldly observed every change within the valley through his three yin demons, waiting for a tragic battle to break out.

There were more than a thousand mercenaries in the alliance stationed at the mithril mine. Once Laureton destroyed this army, the three powers would be hard pressed to save the day even if they joined hands together. Last time in the mountain valley, the three great powers had plotted against Laureton and earned his undying hatred. He would show them no mercy this time. It'd be their turn to bear brutal revenge once Laureton slaughtered the experts guarding the mithril mine.

As the three other leaders had a firm standing in the Valley of Sunshine, none of them were stupid. They naturally understood this truth and would rather believe the letters in their hands than not. The three sent out experts to contact each other, mobilizing most of their remaining forces at the bases to rush towards the mithril mine at top speed.

Time passed quietly at the mithril mine. The original alertness of the mercenary guards slowly drifted away. They began to yawn one by one, their mental state reaching its lowest point.

Edwin was currently hiding outside the mountain valley with Laureton next to him. He observed the mountain valley with a sinister expression on his face. He suddenly threw a glance at Laureton and said, "We can make our move now."

His eyes flashed with killing intent and his bald head seemed to be emitting a cold light, Laureton nodded and said in a low tone, "Our brothers died in this mountain valley last time. This time, I intend to make them pay that back a dozen, a hundred times over. Chief Hagen, are your men ready?"

"Rest assured Chief Laureton. We have long since been ready for a split of this mithril mine." Knowing their power wasn't a match for any of the four great powers, the ten small forces had quickly gathered into an alliance. Hagen of the Raging Flame mercenary band was this alliance's spokesperson.

"Very good! Not just this mithril mine, even the territories of these three powers are yours to split among yourselves as long as you help me take them down. The Cairo mercenary band will still only occupy the Valley of Sunshine. I hope you guys won't disappoint me!" Laureton spoke out so readily while laughing coldly in his heart.

"Rest assured. We know what to do!" Hagen let out a cunning chuckle, expressing that he completely understood what Laureton meant.

"Alright, no need for nonsense. Just be careful. I will take advantage of the fog around the mountain valley to get in. Don't make any noise once you're inside. It's best to let them die in their sleep!" Edwin impatiently blurted out, not concealing the arrogance on his face.

The Calamity Church was a notoriously tough character to chew in the Profound Continent. Except for the Church of Light, very few powers could compete on even ground with them. Even Laureton wasn't anything much in Edwin's eyes. Of course, a chief of some small mercenary band wouldn't enter his eyes. That was why Edwin didn't show them sincerity and politeness like he had with Han Shuo.

The small forces naturally didn't dare to provoke Edwin upon learning of his identity. Just the sinister atmosphere from the three hundred Death Guards alone was enough to terrify them and send their hearts palpitating. They had long since heard that the Calamity Church was brutal and ruthless, treating lives like weeds. They all turned into yes-men in response to Edwin's words upon seeing his impatient expression.

Edwin was feeling a little bit smug upon seeing these peoples' fear. Extremely comfortable as he bathed in the feeling of superiority, Edwin softly humphed with arrogance before swinging his arm to order a tall, slim Death Guard at the front, "Forward, kill them all!"

The Death Guard was a group of people who worshipped the Evil God. They were the most extreme of fanatics who offered all of their beliefs and spirits to the Evil God. They carried with them the will of the Evil God and terrifying power as they slaughtered the enemies of the Calamity Church all over the Profound Continent. They were a group of inhuman executioners. Having been granted certain powers after their sacrifices to the Evil God, the Death Guards easily possessed the ability to dominate the life and death of others.

The gray pupils of this Death Guard filled with a fanatical excitement like Laureton going berserk thrice over after hearing Edwin's commands. His teeth tightly gritted, the Death Guard issued a horrifying sound like he was chewing on beast bones. His action was agile as he led the three hundred Death Guards rushing into the mountain valley under the cloak of mist.

Florida, Adam Menlo, and Katar were also leading the three great powers and hurrying to the mountain valley. A fire burning in their hearts, the three constantly issued orders to urge their men forward, afraid that they wouldn't arrive in time.

Chapter 296: A tragic battle

In the mountain valley, members of the alliance were either lightly snoring, nodding off, or dead asleep. Very few were able to stay awake. The few solitary, cautious folk also gradually closed their heavy eyelids beneath the sleeping effect of the fog.

Everything seemed perfect. The outcome seemed predestined the moment the Death Guards started to advance into the mountain valley. This sneak attack could simply be considered a classic one for the books, if it hadn't been for a frightening, loud rumbling sound.

Rumble...

A surge of wind blew from who knew where, just as the Death Guards crossed the channel into the mountain valley. The power of it was violent. The wind first uproot a small tree on the mountain, creating a strange butterfly effect. One tree after another fell in bizarre succession. This finally caused the unbelievable collapse of the rocks on the mountain.

Moss-covered rocks, as large as a millstones, smashed straight down on the mountain valley. This kind of movement created earth-shattering sounds, waking up all of the mercenaries that were sound asleep. They abruptly jumped up, as if faced with the greatest enemy of their lives, grabbing their weapons before looking at the situation.

Edwin was also an accomplished alchemist on the side. He understood that only sleeping drugs with minor effects would be the kind not as easily discovered by experts. Edwin had been gloating over the victory within his grasp when the rumbling sound completely destroyed his wishful thinking. He looked at the mercenaries stationed in the valley all looking around with weapons in hand and then at the Death Guards entering the mountain valley. Edwin had to swallow back his curses and issued an order to attack, "Forward, kill!"

Both Edwin and Laureton understood that their ambush would no longer be perfect thanks to the rumbling avalanche. The two secretly cursed as they hastily issued orders to attack, while their eyes looked up and down at the epicenter of that tumultuous incident. A strange suspicion filled their hearts.

Why had that avalanche happened? How could its force have been so large? How could it have generated such an astonishing effect? If it were man made, then who'd done it?

Doubt after doubt instantly piled up in their hearts, but only for a moment. The two couldn't think much as all of their attention was pulled back to the slaughter that was about to take place in the mountain valley.

"Enemy attack, enemy attack!"

The thousand mercenaries in the mountain valley were jolted awake by the rock avalanche. A small portion of the mercenaries near the edge of the valley constantly dodged the falling rocks. The mercenaries at the outermost region, who were responsible for night patrol, had now discovered the Death Guards by now. They immediately started yelling loudly.

The mercenaries of the alliance immediately reacted. They took out weapons, started to chant magic incantations, and notched their arrows. They all aimed at the entrance of the mountain valley.

The Calamity Church's three hundred Death Guards spread out like wraiths in the night, whizzing about like faint shadows under the moonlight. Evil, sinister air permeated their bodies, their eyes filled with frenzy and excitement. Exotic spiked weapons were grasped in their hands, they speedily glided across the ground into the mountain valley.

The ground trembled as a series of sharp earth spears pierced out of the ground. A blazing fire quickly gathered into a defensive firewall. Lightning bolts twisted and flashed across the sky above the mountain valley then smashed downward. Mermen and water dragons gradually materialized and rushed away from the zone of the firewall.

Whistling sounds accompanied arrows that fell endlessly upon the Death Guards. Mages and archers formed layer after layer of obstacles within the mountain valley. They instantly hindered the momentum of the rushing Death Guards, itching to kill the entire bunch of blatant invaders.

However, as the religious scourge, whose notoriety had spread all over the Profound Continent for so many years, the Calamity Church's Death Guard naturally weren't that easy to deal with.

The speed of the three hundred Death Guards didn't decrease, but instead spiked at an alarming rate. The blackish gray robes that they wore had a strong resistance to magic, the coming flames were snuffed with just a wave of their sleeves. Even the violent thunderbolts only made them pause a little without causing any fatal damage.

"Hmph! The Death Guard's armory is one of the secrets of our Calamity Church. How could normal magic attacks have any effect!" Dark grand magus Edwin landed behind and looked forward with a sinister face, speaking contemptuously. He could have soundlessly exterminated the majority of the force in the mountain valley. He naturally felt irritated now that this unexpected incident had thrown a wrench in his plans.

Laureton stood next to Edwin, clutching the divine artifact Berserker's War Axe. He let out a loud, malicious laugh and said, "It's also fine this way. We'll only waste a bit more time. It's more interesting to let them struggle in their death."

The Cairo mercenary band had expended all of their elite forces for this battle. Add to that the Calamity Church's three hundred Death Guards and the alliance of a dozen small forces, this was a proper amount of strength to annihilate the powers inside the mountain valley. Laureton was someone who thirsted for battle to begin with. This was why he'd been even more excited when the mercenaries of the alliance woke up, as the ambush had turned into open combat.

Curling his lip, Edwin didn't say a thing. He looked at the waves of mercenaries rushing into the mountain valley and secretly calculated how much more he should extort from Laureton. After all, the cost of dispatching three hundred Death Guards wasn't small. Even though their purpose had been to block the Church of Light, he'd also helped Laureton, hadn't he? Therefore, the latter should also pay up a little.

The Death Guards were definitely worthy of their reputation as forces of the Evil God. They rushed forward with an unstoppable momentum, even when attacked by violent magic spells. The three hundred Death Guards scattered into groups of ghostly shadows, using sharp, spiked weapons to poke bloody holes into the mercenaries' bodies.

These Death Guards cultivated a strange type of fighting aura. They seemed able to borrow the Evil God's power in a fight. An evil presence naturally appeared on their bodies, and their eyes could attack the souls of their opponents. The strange fighting aura possessed an intense corrosion with it that could destroy the defense of the opponents, causing injuries to the body.

Han Shuo was sitting cross-legged on a cliff of the mountain valley. After secretly lending a hand to help kick start the dreadful battle, he silently circulated his magical yuan to absorb the power from the dead that had not yet dissipated. He also paid attention to the battle in the mountain valley at the same time.

The astonishing performance of the Death Guards shocked Han Shuo. He could even sense a bit of the Evil God's presence from their bodies.

Clarendon, who'd ultimately died a tragic death in Han Shuo's hand in Valen City, had used an altar to call upon the three-eyed demon god Ansidesi. The figure of an evil god, that was three hundred meters tall, once again appeared in Han Shuo's mind in the lower layers of the cemetery of death. Han Shuo could sense a bit of the presences of Ansidesi and the evil god from the Death Guards.

The Death Guards could obtain a bit of the strange force from the Evil God due to their fanatical belief. Perhaps they could only borrow one out of a hundred thousandth of the Evil God's power. However, that power released still couldn't be looked down upon, as evident in the tragic death of the mercenaries who faced them.

Three hundred Death Guards wasn't a big number, but the damage they caused was terrifying. Since the Temple Knights of the Church of Light possessed were at a similar level of strength as these Death Guards, Han Shuo could imagine that the former's power was certainly just as impressive.

“Heh heh, it’s getting more and more interesting!” Han Shuo muttered to himself with a cold smile. He abruptly heaved a breath of relief, “What will come will come. Otherwise it would no longer be interesting!”

Dark grand magus Edwin also frowned when Han Shuo finished saying these words. He abruptly used the levitation skill to float up and out of the mountain valley. He carefully took note of his bearings before quickly returning to the mountain valley. He landed swiftly near the now twice berserk Laureton, “A large number of mercenaries are gathering here. How could this happen?”

“The Rainbow Sickle mercenary band isn’t far from here. They must have discovered something because we’ve caused such a big movement in this place. Heh heh, four to five hundred out of the one thousand mercenaries in the mountain valley have already died. Florida will only be coming to his death if we make good use of time and kill them all. Just his Rainbow Sickles alone simply can’t stop our momentum!”

Laureton randomly threw out an answer as he chopped a two meter tall orc warrior in half with a wave of his Berserker’s War Axe. He then rammed into the crowd in front, seemingly insane with happiness as he was able to indulge in battle.

“That’s not it. It isn’t just the Rainbow Sickles. There’s also a large group of orcs!” Edwin shouted to Laureton as if there was a fire was raging in his heart.

“Damn it! How can that be?” Laureton was startled. He abruptly jumped to Edwin and asked with horror.

“Kill them!” Adam Menlo was riding a ten meter long flaming bird in the air. He rushed forward with his family members, who were behind him, also riding various magic creatures.

The dull sounds of iron hooves pounding against the ground outside of the mountain valley were heavy, like a beating drum. The experts of the three great powers were gathering in the valley, tightly blocking Laureton’s group’s retreat.

“Shove it all and bring forth all your efforts to bear, or none of us will be able to escape!” Since the situation had become like this, Laureton naturally understood what was to follow. He let out a long howl to the heavens. His ferocity burst as he rushed straight forward to kill the remaining mercenaries in the mountain valley.

Chapter 297: Explosion

It was a scene of three thousand, including three hundred notorious Death Guards from the Calamity Church, against six hundred people. The difference in power was completely disproportionate. The fate of the remaining six hundred people was destined to be death, just that the exact moment of their demise was dragged out for a few more minutes.

Life became cheap with every ear-piercing, miserable scream of the mercenaries that were from various races and of different skin colors. They slowly and listlessly fell in a pool of blood. Streams of air, barely visible to the human eye, drifted upwards from the dead bodies before gathering in a corner of the mountain valley.

Han Shuo was the hand in the shadows that'd pulled the strings of this battle. With the three yin demons observing the overall battle, he sat on the sidelines in a surreptitious corner, extremely comfortable as he absorbed each burst of scattered energy. The desires of the bloodlust realm were churning, wanting to explode out. However, his rational mind tightly forced the urge down.

Lives perished as time passed. The original group of six hundred mercenaries guarding the mine were now down to two hundred. The mages in this group were ceaselessly releasing various spells. Their targets were naturally the mercenaries with the vivid colored outfits. No one would waste their magic on the Death Guards.

Adam Menlo and the experts from his family were the first few to arrive. However, they could only used magic and arrows to attack Laureton's group in the mountain valley from a distance. They stood still as they watched their remaining family members in the valley get slaughtered.

It wasn't that they didn't want to, but rather that they just didn't dare!

Those elite members of the House of Menlo, who could fly in the air, were all magic creature riders. This elite army was the foundation of the family. It was a pity that their numbers were few, far fewer than the number of experts in Laureton's Cairo mercenary band. Adam Menlo's heart bled as he watched his family members die one by one. However, he didn't dare to come in close to rescue them. He knew full well that once he landed, what awaited his group would be destructive blows.

He was waiting, waiting for Florida and Katar's groups to arrive. The new arrivals would be able to surround Laureton's group from outside the mountain valley. He was waiting for more members of the three forces to assemble and then vent their accumulated rage towards Laureton.

"Honorable father, save me!" A middle-aged man, with a face similar to Adam Menlo's, was riding an armored Black Buffalo in the middle of the valley. His eyes flooded with helplessness as he called out miserably to Adam Menlo, who hovered in the air on his fiery bird.

Laureton stood in front of this middle-aged man, holding his Berserker's War Axe, leering widely. Several berserkers were next to Laureton, also grinning maliciously as they coordinated to keep watch on the middle-aged man. Laureton wasn't in a hurry to kill him.

Instead, he lifted his head to look at to the sky, as if waiting for Adam Menlo to draw nearer.

However, he only saw Adam Menlo turn around with his shoulders trembling slightly after waiting for a while. It seemed that Adam had made the right decision despite the agony he felt in his heart.

"No!" The middle-aged man bitterly growled. Laureton approached and cleaved him in two. The echoing sound of his dying cry made the distant Adam Menlo falter on the back of his flaming bird.

The heavy sounds of dull hooves were finally heard. Florida and Katar were leading a large number of mercenaries to advance upon the mountain valley. Adam Menlo's eyes were bloodshot as he held up beneath the heart wrenching agony of the scenes displayed in front of him. He was the first to rush into the center of the valley. Fighting aura burst out from the spear in his hand and intersected with the blazing flames from the flaming bird's beak, instantly taking several lives.

The battle had become even more devastating, taking place in the mountain valley like a raging fire. Han Shuo absorbed the killing intent quietly and indifferently. He coldly watched the battle that had turned the mountain valley into a level of hell and desperately suppressed his intense desire to join the fray.

The evenly matched forces fought each other until they became crazed with bloodlust as time went on. Ninety percent of the Valley of Sunshine's forces had become involved in this, either for the mithril mine, or to gain privilege in the Valley, or to vent their deep hatred accumulated over the many years.

The life force of the unyielding powerhouses was happily absorbed by an opportunist. Soon, the bodies piled up all over the whole mountain valley and began to hinder the battle itself. The races slaughtered each other to their heart's content out of interest and hatred.

Blood red mist began to materialize around Han Shuo from the large amount of energy he'd absorbed. The sky above the mountain valley was suddenly blotted out by a bloody red mist. This terrifying evil murderous intent brought along with it a nauseating, bloody smell as it enveloped the entire mountain valley.

However, the forces were all obsessed by battle and didn't notice this strange happening. All of their attention was focused on the enemy in front of them. Each and every individual had gone completely insane, using their weapons, bare hands and feet, or even their teeth to attack.

Han Shuo almost lost control of himself as he fought against his own bloodthirsty urges. He finally issued an order to the earth elite zombie lurking underground. Han Shuo understood that this wasn't the right time, since one side hadn't obtained victory yet. He could still wait a bit longer. Unfortunately, Han Shuo knew that he was in an extremely bad state. He'd absorbed far more killing intent than he could bear. He was afraid that he'd lose his rationality and miss his chance.

Ninety percent of the forces in the Valley of Sunshine was here, locked in battle. Of that, a fourth of this number had already perished. This battle was absolutely the most intense one that had ever occurred in the history of the Valley of Sunshine, with the greatest amount of participants as well.

Suddenly, the forces that had been fighting to the death, felt a violent tremor from the ground. Every corner of the entire mountain valley seemed to explode before they could react, the strong smell of explosives instantly spreading.

As every corner in the mountain valley had opponents fighting each other, the explosion caused massive damage. The mercenaries instantly exploded into clouds of blood mist. The earth was shaking and mountains cracked with the endlessly echoing series of explosions. More than half of the forces that had been lucky enough to survive until now died to the violent explosions.

The huge rocks above ground shattered into pieces due to the underground explosion. Each piece was bigger than a person, and tumbled down like a shower of rain. The impact from the momentum of rocks that were falling from an altitude of several hundred meters was extremely terrifying. Careless experts were smashed into meat paste by them.

The parties in the mountain valley were dumbfounded by this violent explosion. Ninety percent of the Valley of Sunshine's forces were located here, but this earth-shattering bombardment hadn't distinguished between friend nor enemy. The damage it caused was amplified even more. No matter how dimwitted Laureton's group was, they too could smell a conspiracy going on here.

Countless rocks were still falling, the entire mountain valley was sealed off. The startled experts were snapped out of their bloodlust by the sound of explosion and reacted abruptly. They looked up and cursed loudly before madly fleeing for their lives. The voices of Laureton's people were extremely resounding among the scene, each screaming and roaring before quickly evacuating.

Perhaps these people would have discovered Han Shuo existence if it weren't for the avalanche obscuring the bloody mist surrounding him. After all, the fiendish image that he'd established in people's hearts after using the blood mist to attack last time had left an unforgettable impact in their hearts.

However, the big rolling boulders had dispersed the barely noticeable mist. In addition, the downpour of rocks was so terrifying that no one had the heart to carefully watch the sky. Everyone put all their effort into fleeing, so Han Shuo's existence wasn't exposed.

The leader of the great powers could smell conspiracy, and so their resentment and hatred overflowed like rivers and seas. However, they knew full well this wasn't the time to pursue the matter. Like Laureton, all of the leaders ordered their subordinates to retreat from this place as quickly as possible.

Florida's group had already felt an ominous premonition when they received the arrows. The bloody battle had already started by the time that they had arrived at the mountain valley. The series of explosions constantly bombarded them before they could finish distinguishing between friend and foe. Florida immediately understood that the people in the mountain valley had been plotted against.

Florida's group was terrified. They even thought that this was an act from the three great empires surrounding the Valley of Sunshine, the purpose to eradicate all forces and take complete control of the Valley. Due to this, Florida naturally believed that this attack using explosives was just the beginning. Perhaps a great number of soldiers from some empire was baring their fangs at them already.

Therefore, when Laureton fled, they also chosen to flee in panic. No matter how they thought about it, they hadn't expected this to be orchestrated by a single person, and that an attack with such a massive impact was created by just the earth elite zombie alone. This sent all of the forces into complete disarray.

The leader of a force was naturally much more meticulous in his calculations. However, not all of his followers were as smart. The majority of these mercenaries, who lived by their blades, were simple-minded fellows. The disastrous battle in the mountain valley had taken the lives of their comrades, and their enemies were now running madly around them. They didn't think much and attacked immediately.

And just like that, the great powers still fought each other tooth and nail even as they tried to escape, due to the irreconcilable hatred between each other. The sounds of metal colliding with metal echoed outside the mountain valley, tragic dying screams resounding endlessly for a long time.

At this moment however, the culprit was shrouded in a thick, blood red mist and was on the verge of breaking through. The Demonslayer Edge hovered in the sky above the mountain valley, absorbing the various energies in Han Shuo's stead.

Chapter 298: Breakthrough

Corpses were scattered everywhere in the mountain valley after the tragedy. What was even more horrifying was that most of the corpses weren't complete. Broken off heads seemed to be leaking rubber balls as they had their own trail of blood. Fresh bloodstains stood out on the big and small rocks on the valley's bottom. Bodies with their limbs cut off lay quietly in the narrow gullies of the mountain valley like hacked off tree trunks.

The moon shone down serenely on this scene from hell. The souls that had yet to disperse upon death were pulled along the cliff of the mountain valley, gathering into a spiral that shimmered in and out of existence. This spiral was slowly and carefully absorbed by a sharp weapon sparkling with brown light.

The Demonslayer Edge currently lacked its dazzling luster as it hovered quietly over Han Shuo's head, like a loyal follower guarding its master. Its brown edge didn't shine beneath the moonlight. However, it emitted a strange combination of lights and killing intent around Han Shuo when the plumes of souls drifted over.

Spots of light shone like the stars within the blood red killing intent. The brilliant stars swayed and danced like little elves, slowly blossoming into a charmingly beautiful light for a moment before finally gathering in the dark brown Demonslayer Edge.

The strength of two thousand dead souls wasn't weak at all, their combined power was immense. Han Shuo was able to absorb sixty percent of this soul energy, and the Demonslayer Edge took in the remaining forty percent. As the main instigator behind the scenes, Han Shuo's random eavesdropping had caused the leaders of the various powers in the Valley of Sunshine to speculate widely in fright. It had also created a chance for Han Shuo to break through the bloodlust realm, and make the flames of battle dance along the length of the Demonslayer Edge.

There were clouds of red mist that were so dense they could not disperse. They wrapped tightly Han Shuo, twisting into bizarre knotted strands. His skin glinted with a deep red light from within the mist, the bones all over his body constantly emitting crisp crackling sounds. A terrifying deathly air and killing aura alternated nonstop between a weak and strong state. Han Shuo's tough, handsome face trembled in an aberrant manner.

He maintained this state from night till sunrise. As the sun rose, it discovered a valley gradually blanketed in a crimson fog. Dense as only fog could be, it actually covered more than half of the skies above the mountain valley. Impervious to sunlight, the sun only made its crimson hue even more brilliant. The entire mountain valley looked as though it was relocated amidst a bloody hell. With the dead bodies scattered across the valley, this halo of blood mist made the scene even more desolate, evil, and terrifying.

The powers in the Valley of Sunshine were confused and fearful day and night for the next three days. Clouds of blood were still constantly shifting into different forms within the mountain valley. Faint shadows started drifting out from the back of Han Shuo's neck, gradually merging with the bloody clouds. Devil heads then slowly took on clearer form, their appearance abnormal, frightening, and ferocious.

Fog and clouds of blood all melded with the shadows. Twelve uniquely shaped, but equally creepy and ferocious monsters finally took shape after five days. Some came with a spiky head and sharp claws, others had thick row of fangs like a shark, and some even had thorny barbs all over their backs. These twelve grim demons were each different in appearance but possessed a similar presence, Han Shuo's unique presence.

They all possessed Han Shuo's unique presence as they were created from his body. The little skeleton, earth elite zombie, and wood elite zombie hiding in a valley gully didn't make any unfriendly moves towards the grim demons thanks to this familiar presence.

Seven more days passed. The shapes of these twelve capering monsters constantly changed, there were times when they even took Han Shuo's appearance. The strangest thing was that, on the fifth day, Han Shuo was surrounded by twelve exact copies of himself. On the last day, the twelve ever changing “things” returned to their original grim demon appearance before turning into red rays and hiding in Han Shuo’s body.

Exhaling a soft breath, Han Shuo finally opened his fey-like eyes after all of the grim demons had concealed themselves in his body. Sweeping a glance around the mountain valley that exuded a dank stench rising to the skies, he murmured, “Finally, the separate demon realm!”

The mountain valley had violently shook and collapsed under the massive explosion. All of the paths into the mountain valley were blocked. The only thing able to enter was the warm sunlight pouring down from the sky. During this period, the three dark creatures—the little skeleton, earth elite zombie, and wood elite zombie, had dedicated their all to guarding Han Shuo.

The forces in the Valley of Sunshine had sent out people to spy shortly after the tragedy, but unfortunately, no one could leave the place alive after being ambushed by the three dark creatures. The spies all turned into mournful souls just like the mercenaries in the mountain valley. In the end, even their corpses quickly rotted away.

The stench in the mountain valley really was unpleasant. Han Shuo frowned as his mind spun. He reached out his hand to grab the hovering Demonslayer Edge next to him. The Demonslayer Edge instantly turned into brown spots of light and disappeared in a strange manner upon touching Han Shuo’s hand. Utilizing the Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens, Han Shuo tore through the air, leaving the mountain valley in a blink of an eye.

On a low mountain top five miles to the north of the Valley of Sunshine.

Laureton of the Cairo mercenary band, Florida of the Rainbow Sickle mercenary band, chief Adam of the House of Menlo, Katar of the orc tribe, and leaders of various forces, including even Trunks who’d just returned from his mission, had been invited.

All of the major power holders in the Valley of Sunshine had gathered at this location today. Everyone had ugly expressions on their face, especially those who'd fallen victim to the mithril mine's tragedy. They were all investigating the matter with the intent of visiting furious revenge on whoever was responsible. They were here today to brainstorm a strategy for the future of the Valley of Sunshine.

"Who did it?" Everyone shared the same question in their hearts.

With the exception of the great powers who'd suffered heavy damages, all those who hadn't participated in the battle were a suspect. Even those small forces who'd only come to watch and fled the quickest, thus suffering only small losses, were targets of suspicion.

"Trunks, your Soul Destroyers didn't participate in this battle. Your mercenary band is the strongest amongst those who didn't join. Currently, only your Soul Destroyer band is completely unharmed while we are all heavily damaged. Your strength isn't far off from ours now either. It seems like your group benefitted the most this time! I'm thinking, was it you who did this good deed?" Florida of the Rainbow Sickles stared at Trunks as he spoke in a sinister tone, his handsome face full of menace.

Trunks was secretly delighted and had no idea how to repay the person behind the scenes. However, he maintained an expression dripping with sorrow. Trunks had been faking long, heavy sighs when he heard Florida's words. Trunks abruptly stood up and violently slammed his hand on the stone table, breaking it into pieces.

Trunks didn't even spare a glance at the experts around him who were defending themselves against the stone fragments. He glared furiously at Florida and said, "If you want to slander us with unfounded accusations, then let's fight to the death! Our Soul Destroyer band accepted a mission half a month ago. All of the elite members, including me, had left the Valley of Sunshine to handle it. Chief Laureton is the one most clear about this. Florida, everyone is here today. If you want to kill me then do it fair and square, no need for plots and schemes!"

When Trunks shattered the stone table with one blow, the ray of silver aura emitting from his palm hadn't escape the eyes of those assembled. Everyone here was sharply intelligent, who didn't know what silver fighting aura meant for a swordsman? Thanks to his own efforts and the Rebirth Pill, Trunks had advanced to the rank of great swordmaster. In addition to being a demonstration of his strength, the blow was warning the leaders here to think carefully.

The Soul Destroyer mercenary band had been able to openly recruit experts in recent times. Add that to the abundant funding it received, Trunks' fame, and the mercenaries' previous foundations as Rainbow Sickle members, the mercenary band had developed at an astonishing rate in just a short amount of time.

Perhaps the Soul Destroyers wouldn't have been noticed by Laureton and Florida if it weren't for the tragedy in the mountain valley. It was a pity that these forces had suffered a major blow in the valley, their accumulation of strength over many years destroyed in just the blink of an eye. Their power had dropped so drastically that they had no confidence that they could easily swallow Trunks. Moreover, the Soul Destroyers existed in the shadows. The various powers still didn't even know where the Soul Destroyer base was. This made them into a force that was truly on par with the four great powers.

By displaying his powerful strength at the great swordmaster rank in such a tough manner, Trunks was directly provoking Florida. This altitude was obviously far different from how he'd kept a low profile in the past.

Even though he practiced thunder magic along with light magic, light archmage Florida still hadn't fully recovered from the last time in which Han Shuo had wounded him. If he fought Trunks, whose strength had rapidly advanced to great swordmaster, with his current power, plus their previous bone deep hatred, Florida had no doubt that Trunk would take this chance to rip him to shreds.

Therefore, Florida's cheeks twitched in anger as he glared darkly at Trunks before he opened his mouth to speak in a stiff voice, "The most important thing now is to find out who was behind this. I have no time to fight you!"

When these words sounded, the leaders in the Valley of Sunshine all understood one thing. Florida was afraid!

Chapter 299: Ceasefire

Trunks didn't pursue things either. He said with a sigh, "As a member of the Valley of Sunshine, it saddens me greatly that such a tragedy has occurred, but the first and most important thing is to determine the truth of the matter. Otherwise, we'd suffer a series of assaults if our enemy attacks us again after this. It will be unbearable for any of us!"

None of the leaders present believed one iota of Trunks' lamentations. The huge happenings in the mountain valley hadn't affected the Soul Destroyers in the slightest. They didn't believe that Trunks wasn't laughing at their disaster. Of course, they wouldn't be so stupid as to provoke Trunks at the moment, especially when the latter had just shown that he had the strength of a great swordmaster.

After an awkward moment of silence, Laureton finally opened his mouth, "I think the goal of the perpetrator was all of the forces in the Valley of Sunshine. The Soul Destroyers were lucky enough to avoid disaster. None of the people I sent to the mountain valley returned. Perhaps our Valley of Sunshine is facing a great deal of trouble this time."

The forces had been locked in bloody battle just a few days before. They wouldn't be having such a friendly discussion if it hadn't been for mutual devastating damage. Florida stared discourteously at Laureton, his face clouded over with resentment, his voice cold and sinister, "What do you think we should do then?"

Taking a deep breath, Laureton seemed to have chosen his words carefully. His eyes, as large as bronze bells, swept in a circle across everyone's faces. He finally said in a low voice, "Let's temporarily set aside the grudges between us and find out who the hand in the darkness belong to. The power to control the Valley of Sunshine will be handed over to whoever figures out the truth first. What do you all think?"

As the person who'd always grasped the major power in the Valley of Sunshine, Laureton was absolutely not someone this generous. In fact, he was famous for being as stingy as he was berserk. Truthfully speaking, these words shouldn't have come from his mouth at all.

However, the strength of the Cairo mercenary band was now far weaker than it had been due to the huge change of scenery in the mountain valley. On the other hand, although the other three great powers had also suffered heavy losses, the Cairo mercenaries still wouldn't be able to resist their combined might, even if they held the advantage of superior terrain in the Valley of Sunshine.

In that case, he'd rather happily and openly let go of the privilege that he would no longer be able to hold onto. The power over the Valley of Sunshine could be the bait to seduce the three great powers, causing the alliance to fracture because of this hard to grasp benefit. Laureton wasn't simple-minded, despite being brawny. This fellow was definitely a great schemer as he was able to sit on the highest position in the Cairo mercenary band.

The moment Laureton's words fell, the eyes of Adam Menlo and Katar, who'd been following Florida's lead, flashed with wild ambition. The two silently glanced at each other for a few seconds before agreeing readily, seemingly unaware of Florida's desperate eye signals.

The small forces, who'd cooperated with Laureton, hesitated for a moment before nodding their heads in consent. Trunks also readily agreed upon seeing the majority of the forces nod with agreement. Everyone's eyes then fell on Florida. Originally, Florida would likely have grasped this power as long as Adam Menlo and Katar supported him. He secretly cursed these two former allies and their families in his heart. Although Florida was extremely bitter inside, he could only nod and give his approval.

The big decision had been made. Even Florida couldn't go against it!

"Very good. Then we can discuss the details for a bit and even draft an agreement. All of the forces in the Valley of Sunshine will be the supervisors in case someone refuses to admit to this later!" Laureton grinned blandly as he made a serious proposal.

This agreement was as ridiculous as a prostitute claiming to be a virgin, however, sometimes this was necessary. Although everyone knew full well that the agreement would be instantly torn apart if one side became powerful enough, there was still a need for rituals. This could offer a bit of psychological comfort, especially when everyone felt that a “secret enemy” existed in the shadows.

Therefore, even the great powers, with nefarious intentions, had to agree to these terms. The forces were temporarily agreeing to a truce as they put forth all of their effort to track down the the hand in the shadows!

When Han Shuo learned all of this from Trunks, he only chuckled blandly without offering any comments. He didn't explain anything to Trunks either and quietly left the Valley of Sunshine, a place where everyone was sucked into a huge whirlpool of conspiracies and suspicions.

Trunks' hairs stood on end as he was creeped out by Han Shuo's smile. He saw in Han Shuo's eyes a trace of pride that was deliberately revealed, yet hard to see. Trunks suddenly realized something.

However, Trunks didn't ask any questions. Upon Han Shuo's leave, he immediately led the Soul Destroyers to raise a great hue and cry in the form of a large manhunt for the perpetrator. They looked even more hardworking than Laureton's mercenary band.

In the process of this open and righteous search for the perpetrator, Trunks took the opportunity to conveniently carry out recruitment activities. The fame of the Soul Destroyer mercenary band gradually began to spread, attracting many fine experts to join them.

Han Shuo returned to the Ossen City seven days after he'd left the Valley of Sunshine. He gave some instructions to the steward in the mansion before secretly leaving through the transportation matrix in the Dark Mantle.

Brettel City wasn't a firm, stable city. As the former city lords had been habitually weak against the invasions of the seven grand duchies, the guards here had become a motley array of individuals. Whether it was the city lord or the soldiers, they'd save their strength to run and flee even faster than the civilians when faced with a real attack.

Since Brettel City was often assaulted, the Lancelot Empire hadn't wasted a great amount of money to build a transportation matrix here. After all, if a transportation matrix leading everywhere just so conveniently existed when the other grand duchies occupied Brettel City, no one could guarantee that the blatant invaders wouldn't just invade other cities of the Empire through the transportation matrices. While Brettel City was barren, the Lancelot Empire had many flourishing and rich cities. Theoretically, if the invaders really entered the Empire's other cities by using the transportation matrices, it'd bring about a danger no one would dare to imagine.

Therefore, building a transportation matrix in a place like this, that seemed to be an abandoned city, was a double-edged sword. This resulted in a never-ending situation of suspension.

"Spring is truly here. It's a pity that the scenery isn't very pleasing!" Sitting inside a carriage, Han Shuo lifted the curtain to look at the scenery along the way and muttered to himself.

Ever since arriving at the transportation matrix in Seamist City, neighbor to Brettel City, Han Shuo had been sitting in the carriage in a slow approach towards his destination. On the way, beggars wrapped in coarse clothes wandered all around. Flies flew back and forth over dead bodies on the two sides of the road. A thick stinking smell was always drifting about the place.

Seamist City was a rich city with strict defenses in the eastern part of the Lancelot Empire. However, when traveling to Brettel City from there, these desolate scenes were like heaven and earth compared to Seamist City. Han Shuo already discovered a dozen groups of bandits running rampant through the yin demons just three days into the trip.

These bandits were just regular robbers from the Lancelot Empire, and not the official armies of the seven grand duchies that disguised themselves as bandits. Even the steel-nerved Han Shuo was a little stunned at such a miserable situation. He personally killed no less than fifty of these beasts in human skin along the way.

“Bryan, I didn’t think your territory would be this kind of place. The tragic sights along the way are challenging enough for people’s nerves already. I think Brettel City will be almost unbearable for you.” Chester had disregarded life and death when he had begged to follow Han Shuo. He’d given up a good mission led by Emily and was even willing to be the coachman, so Han Shuo didn’t have to go to such a notoriously dirty, chaotic city by himself.

Han Shuo chuckled heartily as he thought about Chester’s somewhat insane courage, asking, “Chester, why did you follow me, even after I rejected you?”

Having focused wholeheartedly on being a coachman, Chester’s nerves had been toughened along the way. He suddenly whipped the handsome, uncommon warhorse to prevent its curiosity from being drawn towards a corpse in the bushes. He answered Han Shuo like a philosopher, “If you wish to gain more, not only does the will need perseverance, but the vision has to be far and wide.”

“Interesting thought.” Han Shuo smiled slightly at Chester’s answer. His elegant voice resounded softly and indifferently as he calmly watched the civilians struggle intensely for a loaf of bread.

The situation in Brettel City was incredibly bad. Except for a few who were reluctant to leave their ancestral homes, plus the nobles and soldiers who couldn’t leave due to their duties, the rest of the civilians tried to use every method to shake off the evil shackles here, desperately wanting to enter the rich and peaceful Seamist City.

However, the road to Seamist City wasn’t peaceful at all . Even if one risked their life to reach the gate, they’d be heartlessly refused without a huge entry fee. They would be left to fend for themselves even though they were also civilians of the Lancelot Empire. After all, the poor civilians coming to Seamist City could only be the lowest of unstable, petty beggars. Seamist City couldn’t accommodate too many of these beggars to prevent an adverse impact on the image of the city.

Therefore, noble merchants, who could enter the city, were those who could prove their worth to live in Seamist City. Civilians from Brettel City were also allowed entry if they paid quite a hefty sum. Otherwise, the city guards would watch with cold eyes if anyone even died outside the city gates.

“My territory, I’ve finally arrived!” Han Shuo looked at the wide open Brettel City and murmured emotionally in front of the broken gates.

Chapter 300: Broken city, broken soldiers

A humble looking carriage passed through the broken city gate that was riddled with holes. The streets were deserted, with an occasional sighting of one or two people. The eyes of those on the streets were filled with despair and resentment, a silent protest against their current tragic life.

Brettel City was as dirty as Han Shuo had expected, looking only a tad bit better than the sights he'd seen on the road. A few lazy soldiers indifferently watched the carriage enter the city without asking about his background or for an entry fee. It seemed that Brettel City was on the verge of death.

"Hey, can you please tell me where the city lord's mansion is?" Chester pulled on the reins and smiled at a civilian who looked like a beggar.

This person was lying lazily in the sunlight, focused on picking out the fleas from his body. He seemed not to have heard Chester's question. He didn't even lift his head.

"I'll give you one silver coin, where is the city lord's mansion?" Chester had been born poor so he knew quite well about the poor's temper. A smile on his face, he patiently asked again.

The mention of silver coin immediately showed its effectiveness. Sniffing the seductive aroma of money, the seemingly deaf beggar suddenly stared at Chester. He pointed in the direction of the street to the east, "Go straight for three hundred meters. The tallest, most broken down mansion is the city lord's mansion."

A silver coin shining in the sunlight spun through the air, rolling to a stop on the ground in front of the beggar. Chester whipped the horse and left without saying thanks, following the directions to the city lord's mansion.

The beggar hastily picked up the silver coin, clutching it tightly in his hand. He then looked towards the direction where the two left and murmured, "Some more people have come to Brettel City again. If it isn't some risk-taking merchant who'd come for profit, then it must be that legendary unlucky count. Poor fellow.”

Whenever Brettel City was invaded, the city lord would be the loving focus of their attention. As such, the walls of the big tall building weren't too sturdy, and there were still several holes decorating the ground nearby, remnants of a previous bombing, that hadn't yet been repaired. When Han Shuo's carriage arrived, only a smattering of five maids and less than a dozen soldiers were present.

These maids and soldiers' attitude towards Han Shuo's arrival was quite indifferent. They weren't enthusiastic nor welcoming in the manner of a subordinate. Of course, a welcome banquet that would be normal in other areas was even more impossible.

The city lord's mansion was at least five times bigger than Han Shuo's mansion in Ossen City. However, it really had no other uses aside from being big. As the city lord was the first to flee upon every invasion, no soldiers had been stationed here. Therefore, the city lord's mansion was always the first place to be pillaged.

Even some things that were hard to take away were all gone after successive attacks. What was incredibly ludicrous was that Han Shuo actually saw a large, rectangular hole in the ground – the remnants of a white jade table that had been peeled away. This was enough for Han Shuo to imagine the real situation in Brettel City.

“Describe the current situation of Brettel City to me.” Han Shuo asked Dick whilst sitting in the tattered lobby of the city lord's mansion hall. Dick was the Dark Mantle liaison in this city, and had arrived after hearing of Han Shuo's posting.

Dick was a man who was roughly forty years old. He looked ordinary, with his nose placed high on his face. It was a feature unique to the mountain people of Brettel City. Dick paid his respects to Han Shuo and answered in a somewhat awkward version of imperial tongue, “The former city lord of Brettel took a total of five hundred family members with him upon his leave. The entire city currently only has over three thousand soldiers. The population in the city is less than fifty thousand. The three thousand soldiers aren't enough to guard the city gates, not to mention they usually flee even faster than the civilians. The city's defenses have never been fixed after every attack due to the lack of funds, and now it's almost lost all defensive ability."

"The mountain folk are native to Brettel City, and the majority of them reside on several steep mountains in the area. These mountains produce valuable ores. The natives are very familiar with the terrain of the big mountains, and it's difficult to launch an attack at the mountains. This is why the mountain people can resist the invasions of the seven grand duchies."

"In fact, Brettel City has actually been relatively safe up until now. After dozens of large and small invasions, the seven grand duchies all know that there's nothing left to loot in this city anymore. Even if they spent the time and resources towards a raid, there's not enough to raid in the city to ensure a profit. That's why no further aggression has occurred in the past few months."

"It was rather the mines in the big mountains surrounding us that the natives protect and harvest from that have become the target for bandits and private armies. However, the mountain people there aren't as incompetent as the imperial soldiers. So far they've been able to barely resist the onslaught of attacks..."

Han Shuo gradually grew to understand the situation in Brettel City thanks to Dick's overview. When Dick finished speaking, Han Shuo looked at a soldier in the city lord's mansion and ordered, "Assemble all of the city's soldiers in front of the city lord's mansion. I want to see what they currently look like."

"Yes, Sir Count!" This soldier responded lazily and climbed unhurriedly onto a skinny horse before slowly moving out of the castle.

"My Lord, you will be disappointed." Dick shook his head with a long sigh as he spoke to Han Shuo.

"I know. But I think I won't be disappointed again in the future!" Han Shuo smiled blandly before sinking into silence with a frown.

The city's scattered soldiers finally assembled unhurriedly after almost two hours. They gathered at the front of the castle with no order or discipline. Their bodies didn't look very strong, and their complexions were sickly, probably due to issues with food. No one had any trace of the kind of attitude and spirit that a soldier should have. It was clear that they wouldn't be able to withstand even one blow with their current combat strength.

The swords, bows and spears in their hands were of inferior quality, with rust stains all over them. Han Shuo felt that just about any weapon forged by the dwarves could break apart all of their weapons. Only one-third of the soldiers were middle-aged men and strong youngsters. The rest were much older old men who moved much more slowly. Who could expect to rely on these folks' fighting capabilities?

Han Shuo stood on the high platform in front of the mansion, observing these soldiers for a while. He silently pondered before saying with a grin, "From today on, your happy days are over. Soldiers over fifty years old will be removed. For these people, I will guarantee you a normal life."

"As for the rest, not only will you have enough food to fill your stomachs, you'll also get new weapons and armor, plus strong warhorses. Of course, you'll also be trained in a cruel, torturous manner to wait for the next chance to wash away our previous shame with the blood of the invaders. With me here, Brettel City has to change, completely."

The elderly soldiers below broke out into an uproar. They were indifferent to Han Shuo's retirement order, but were doubtful of his guarantee for a life with enough food and clothing. The young people turned to look at each other as they processed his words, not knowing what he actually wanted to do.

"Sir Count, do you mean that?" Dick was standing next to Han Shuo and asked Han Shuo with shock.

"Your Lordship, even if the thousand of us gets new weapons and warhorses, do you think we'd be able to stand firmly against ten or twenty thousand bandits or tens of thousands of soldiers from the official armies of the seven grand duchies with this broken city wall?" A crude looking, bearded soldier lifted his head and shouted towards Han Shuo.

"You don't need to worry about this. As a soldier, if you have no way to stop the enemy from invading, you should offer up your own head to wash off your failure and shame. I will personally cut off the heads of those who dares to escape in order to prolong their lives." Han Shuo looked coldly at this brawny guy and snapped.

"Your Lordship, I think you'd better leave while it's early. This place has been abandoned by the Empire. Do you think you alone can change the situation of Brettel City? Without a hundred thousand imperial elite soldiers to guard this city, it'll forever be unable to escape its fate of being invaded. If you want to seek death, can you please not drag us with you?" This stubborn soldier was extremely arrogant as he ignored Han Shuo's cold eyes and rebutted in a rebellious manner.

Whoosh!

A dark brown ray of light flashed. No one knew what had been launched as something shot towards that rebellious soldier. The next second, a head rolled off a pair of shoulders, fresh blood spraying out from the neck like a brush sketching a beautiful painting.

"From now on, what you need to do was listen and execute commands. You have no need for doubts, and even if you do, you must keep them to yourself!" Han Shuo looked murderous as he shouted, his face cruel and ruthless like a butcher. The soldiers below clamped their mouths shut one by one.

At this moment, a shining troop of over a hundred warhorses, their riders holding shiny weapons in their hands, slowly entered the castle. A man in a full-body, silver armor with a silver spear in his hand bent his body slightly on the warhorse to pay respects to Han Shuo, "Sir Count, earth rider Faulke will dedicate my all to serve you and heed your every command."

Han Shuo didn't need to think much at all to know that Faulke had been sent by Lawrence. Han Shuo felt an atmosphere of slaughter from this man that only existed on true warriors who'd been through hundreds of battles. He immediately swept a glance filled with ill intent at Brettel City's soldiers and said with a sinister laugh, "Faulke, from today on, these ones are under your care. Use the most cruel method you have to train them. I won't blame you if someone dies during training."

Chapter 301: Army of Undead

Brettel City had undergone a slight change. The civilians that dressed like beggars within the city often saw a different scene from what they usually saw. The soldiers of Brettel City that lived like cowardly borners had recently become energized. It was like they had been possessed by something. They would actually form a tidy troop and run while carrying weights; or practice their swordsmanship within the city lord's mansion that was undergoing steady repair.

The originally cowardly and useless soldiers who'd worn fearful expressions on their faces gradually toughened up beneath the harsh training from the knights in silver armor. Their previously wax colored, thin looks also hardened and had unknowingly become more defined.

It wasn't just the soldiers in Brettel City, but some other areas also underwent significant changes. An example would include the pitted city wall that was now repaired by some old and retired soldiers. The changes were especially apparent at the city lord's mansion. It had suddenly become filled with life. The large numbers of people visiting and leaving it had even caused it to become a bit disorderly.

For the civilians of Brettel City, who'd already given up hope, they weren't too affected by these changes. They were used to the city lord being the first to escape and didn't think that these changes would have any effect. Instead, some of them even maliciously speculated about the harm these actions might bring to them.

They didn't know if the changes in the city would cause the bandits and soldiers of the seven duchies, who hadn't visited in several months, to think that there was loot worth pillaging in the city once again. It would be another terrible experience if they became interested and came back to rob the city once again.

Han Shuo slowly walked out of the secret chamber within the city lord's mansion very early in the morning, to find Faulke and Dick Chester already waiting in the living room. When he saw the three of them, the three people saw Han Shuo move his storage ring, dumping weapons as well of bags full of provisions onto the floor. Han Shuo looked towards Faulke and said, "Use these weapons and chariots properly. You also have to control the provisions properly. Furthermore, start recruiting today. Civilians can enter the troops as long as they are young and strong. For now, promise them one gold coin aside from their meals."

As an earth knight sent over by Lawrence, Faulke naturally possessed uncommon strength. Several soldiers had already died from the intense training under Faulke. However, the death of these soldiers had actually served as examples, causing all of the soldiers to truly realize the harshness of their training, meaning that none of them dared to be there just to make up the numbers.

Faulke would maniacally train these soldiers in the morning and then discuss military tactics with the high-ranking soldiers at night in the city lord's mansion. Han Shuo also felt that he learnt a lot after listening in on the side for a few days, and felt that Faulke was indeed an officer that he could place his trust in.

"Understood," Faulke wasn't a man of many words. He normally had on a stern face and exuded the righteousness and bloodlust of a soldier.

"Dick, have there been any unusual events in the surroundings recently?" Han Shuo smiled at Dick, who was in charge of the Dark Mantle operations in the area, "Sir Count, apart from some of the civilians not understanding your actions, nothing special has occurred recently around Brettel City. However, according to Dark Mantle reports, I believe a wave of bandits will pay a visit in a few days. Of course, their targets should only be the mountain people in Mount Tali near Brettel City," Dick replied respectfully. Although the soldiers in Brettel City were cowardly and useless, the local Dark Mantle branch still operated normally with Dark Star spies concealed in the surrounding mountains.

Han Shuo nodded and then said with interest, "Very good. Keep your eye on this, figure out when the bandits will strike, along with their numbers and path. Faulke, perhaps it's time we test these soldiers. If we don't stir them up a bit, I think it would be hard for them to truly grow."

“My Lord, you are very right about this. I will make them look more lively,” Faulke replied.

Three days later, a battle that often occurred happened intensely yet again on Mount Tali, the mountain southwest of Brettel City. Redbeard Troda led four thousand savage bandits and rushed up Mount Tali, disregarding his losses. On the other side, the mountain people hid in large bushes and behind large boulders beside the meandering paths of the mountain, using bows to stop the bandits from climbing the mountain.

The mountain people had already become used to these sort of attacks. They naturally had their own way of handling it. Large rolling boulders and arrows caused quite a bit of damage to the bandit horde. The mountain people that hid behind the boulders on the mountain were much braver than the soldiers within Brettel City. They were not afraid of the bandits' attack at all, using a variety of tactics to harass and repel the invaders.

“Faulke, do you think those bandits can emerge victorious?” Han Shuo, a bit of distance away from the bandits, turned his head towards Faulke at the foot of the mountain.

Faulke shook his head and answered bluntly, “It's impossible, although Redbeard Troda's bandits number plenty, the mountain people of Mount Tali have the geographical advantage. Furthermore, they are already used to the mountain battles. It's impossible for war horses to walk the meandering mountain paths, yet Troda does not have the determination to fight to the death, so he's destined to not gain any loot from these attacks.”

“Only a hundred something bandits are dead from four thousand savage bandits. Hehe, Faulke, do you think that we have a chance of doing them in?” Han Shuo asked once again.

“That's also impossible. The road at the foot of Mount Tali is flat, so we have no geographical advantage to make use of. What's more, these soldiers haven't been trained for that long, I don't think that their courage can immediately face the savagery of the Redbeard bandits. What's more, we merely have a thousand three hundred people. Sire, this is not a good idea," Faulke was shocked after hearing Han Shuo's words, causing him to immediately advise otherwise to Han Shuo.

Sadly, Han Shuo didn't listen to Faulke's suggestion. He chuckled and said, "Faulke, you forget that I'm a necromancer. Necromancers specialize in this sort of large-scale battles. What's more, these bandits don't have any outstanding light archmages. I think we can give it a try."

Before Faulke could speak again, Han Shuo had already walked towards the Redbeard bandits with a smile, while saying, "Attack with me. I think you should know what to do."

Han Shuo took out the skeletal wand from his spatial ring. With a low chant, dark beings began to appear one by one. Due to the existence of the skeletal wand, the power of the summoning magic was doubled. Fifty warriors, two hundred something zombies, seven hundred something skeletal warriors and three hundred gargoyles led by ten evil knights were summoned by Han Shuo as he used the skeletal wand and poured in a huge amount of mental power.

A thousand two hundred something dark beings, including powerful evil knights and hatred warriors, along with soaring gargoyles, stood in an organized fashion and marched towards the bandits under the direction of Han Shuo's skeletal wand.

After seeing so many dark creatures appear with Han Shuo's chant, Faulke felt his life suddenly turn bit surreal. Only when Han Shuo's figure had nearly disappeared from sight did he finally react and quickly roar towards the soldiers behind him, those ones that were terrified of him, "Today is the day to test your training! You have already seen the city lord's prowess. I don't doubt that he has the strength to kill all of you just by himself. The results of being a coward will definitely be quite pitiful, that's why your only choice is to listen to my orders and attack!"

The soldiers who were already frightened felt a chill grip their hearts after hearing Faulke's roar. They glanced at Han Shuo waving the skeletal wand with a sinister expression. As courage and cowardliness warred against each other, all of them surprisingly found the courage to fight. They grasped their weapons with a determined gaze, and made the preparation to die in an effort to avoid falling at the city lord's hands.

The little skeleton with glittering white bones rode a special undead creature full of spikes that was five meters long and three meters tall. This creature seemed to be a hedgehog that had been magnified a thousand times. It carried a tail full of spikes and had only a single grey eye that was suffused with the aura of death.

The earth elite zombie and the wood elite zombie each rode on a fire-breathing black armored warhorse. These were usually only owned by an evil knight. They stayed at the little skeleton's sides. These three little things were actually more cocky than the ten evil knights and showed up at the very front of the troops. What was weird was that the ten evil knights wasn't dissatisfied by this apparent assertion of the pecking order and followed docilely behind them.

"What-What was that?" A cowardly bandit at the rear screamed shrilly after turning around to see what the dull roar behind him was. He was completely flabbergasted at the sight that greeted him.

Focused on the battle in front of him, Redbeard Troda was annoyed and had a sullen expression on his face as he roared on top of a boulder. When he heard the clamor from his subordinates, he immediately cursed, "Stupid pigs, charge!"

"Boss, behind. Look behind!" The bandit was terrified as he anxiously pointed behind him and continued to shriek.

When Troda raised his head, he was met with a dark aura of death. He found that a horde of undead creatures emanating an icy air not of this world was marching inexorably towards them.

Chapter 302: Charge

“Why are there dark creatures here?” Redbeard Troda was shocked. He couldn’t help but stop barking orders to his subordinates to charge up Mount Tali as he gazed, baffled, at the dense army of undead creatures that were advancing on him.

“Boss, I think-I think that the target of those damned dark creatures is us!” When the shimmering purple eye of the little skeleton focused into a glare at the cowardly bandit, the bandit suddenly felt that the warm spring air had plummeted into the depths of mid-winter. A bone-deep chill crept into his body.

“Light mages, kill those filthy dark creatures!” Troda noticed the disadvantageous situation by now as well, so he hurriedly roared at the mages ahead on Mount Tali.

There weren’t as many mages as there were swordsmen and knights in the Profound Continent. The fact that this bandit group could field a few mages was a clear demonstration of their strength. The journeyman mage as well as the light adept mage clearly realized that it would be up to them handle these dark creatures, so the two of them had already started their incantations the moment Troda finished speaking.

Rays of light-shaped swords and balls of light shimmered in the air as they slowly barrelled towards the undead creatures. Seeing the light magic descend, the earth elite zombie, who had been standing on the front lines, scratched his head ingenuously and suddenly sank into the earth from the body of the fire-breathing warhorse. Right after that, a barrier formed from dust suddenly appeared, blocking most of the light swords and balls of light.

Although several light swords and balls of light managed to land on the dark creatures and purify a few skeletal warriors, they barely made a dent in the horde of dark creatures.

These two light mages were not light archmages like Ferguson, who was able to cast a damaging area of effect spell such as “Radiant Glory”. Mere sparkles of light were snuffed out like candles in the wake of the inexorable advance of more than a thousand undead creatures, especially since the undead army also boasted the little skeleton and elite zombie warriors who were not afraid of light magic in their ranks.

Of course, the black armor of the high ranked evil knights also gave them very good resistance to light magic. Thus, the army composed of dark creatures did not waver at all under the attacks from light swords and balls of light. They continued to rush vigorously towards the bandits led by Redbeard Troda.

“Foolish pigs, feeding you guys was truly useless!” Troda swore loudly and pulled out a bright dual edged broadsword from his storage ring. He then roared towards the subordinate behind him, “Come, smash these dirty bones!”

Troda immediately charged out in the lead, three thousand bandits by his side. The bandits, who didn’t understand things like battle formations at all, only followed behind Troda like a crowd and charged towards the dark creatures with savage expressions.

Faulke led the group of terrified soldiers in another direction, different from the dark creatures’ path. The soldiers from Brettel City looked fearfully at their city lord, not daring to retreat in the face of Han Shuo’s ruthlessness. “Prepare the crossbows and bows, shoot until you see them fall. You gutless idiots, focus!” Faulke couldn’t help but swear when he saw the soldiers actually daring to crane their necks around on the battlefield.

The soldiers who were used to being scolded all raised the bows and crossbows in their hands and shot wildly at the Redbeard bandits running down the hill. Although these soldiers were far from accurate, the bandits were too densely packed together. Every arrow drew blood in the crowd as long as enough strength had been applied behind the shot.

On one side stood soldiers that hadn’t been trained for long and had worked up their courage for the first time to resist the bandits. On the other side were fiery bandits who didn’t understand battle techniques and used brute force. As defenders, the bows and crossbows in the soldiers' hands were quite vicious. Three hundred something bandits were killed and five to six hundred others were injured in the blink of an eye as a dense rain of arrows hurtled down.

After the bandits had paid the price in three hundred lives, they finally reached the foot of the mountain. They had two options now. They could either charge towards the Brettel City soldiers on their flank, or charge forward to meet the slowly advancing undead army.

Troda was furious. He'd finally recognized the ones who'd dared to attack him were the cowardly soldiers of Brettel City. The same soldiers who would run away like cowardly dogs every single battle, and were a laughingstock for the seven dukedoms and the bandits.

Yet at this moment, these soldiers had actually dared to pick up their weapons and attack his men, inflicting quite a bit of damage. This was an unforgivable insult for Redbeard Troda. Thus, Troda roared maniacally when he'd reached the foot of the mountains, "Brothers, destroy these pieces of crap!"

Troda once again lead the charge as he rushed the soldiers led by Faulke with a roar. He didn't bother attacking the undead creatures in front as per his previous plan. However, even though he didn't attack the undead creatures, these creatures of darkness controlled by Han Shuo and the little skeleton would not let them go peacefully.

When the dark green from the Canopy of Necromancy crept over the ruby hue of dusk, a dense aura of death slowly spread out under the cover of the Canopy. All of the bones of the undead creatures shimmered with evil light as they bathed in the undead atmosphere. Their slow marching immediately suddenly tripled in speed, and even the hate warriors that moved slowly became as fast as flying gargoyles.

With a series of deep and archaic chants, rays of rippling grey liquid poured down from the sky. As the grey liquid poured down, patches of acidic swamps with azure smoke appeared in the middle of the path that bandits were taking towards Faulke and the soldiers.

The bandits that carelessly set foot in the acidic swamps all suddenly howled in pain. Due the corrosion of the acidic swamp, their skin and muscles quickly separated from their bones. Fifty to sixty living skeletons suddenly appeared in the acidic swamps in the blink of an eye.

“Damnit, avoid those pools emitting azure smoke!” Troda yelled then furiously glared at Han Shuo, who was elegantly releasing necromantic spells. Troda roared. “Evil necromancer, why are you opposing us? I shouldn’t have wronged you before!”

Han Shuo temporarily stopped chanting and looked at Troda with interest. He said softly with a charming smile, “Brettel City is my territory, wouldn’t killing and robbing in my territory count as offending me?”

“Haha, so you are that unlucky new city lord. Do you think that Brettel City is Seamist City? Do you think that you, a necromancer, can change the situation of such an abandoned place?” Troda mocked Han Shuo after the latter revealed his identity.

“How would I know if I don’t try!” Han Shuo chuckled lightly in response. He then pointed the skeleton staff towards Troda’s direction and ordered, “Children, tear them apart!”

The purple eye of the little skeleton riding on top of a giant undead creature shone with a ferocious light. He looked towards the undead creatures that were rushing towards Troda, and suddenly patted the undead creature underneath him. This undead creature, that looked like a supersized hedgehog, extended three pairs of five meter long wings that seemed to be made of azure colored rotted meat. With a flap of its azure wings, the giant undead creature brought the little skeleton into the sky towards Troda.

This seemed to be the signal for a charge. The moment the little skeleton and the undead creature took off, the gargoyles that had been circling above quickly flapped their bat-like wings and followed closely behind the enormous undead creature and attacked Redbeard Troda’s bandits.

Han Shuo floated in the air and observed the spiky undead creature through a yin demon. He didn’t know why, but the dense white bones sticking out of its body actually seemed rather familiar. After a period of detailed observation through the yin demon, Han Shuo suddenly remembered that the little skeleton and earth elite zombie had collected a lot of super ranked magical beasts' bones spikes. Those bone spikes had shimmered with a strange energy that was actually surprisingly similar to the energy coursing through the spikes on the undead creature.

“Can it be that this undead creature that I’ve never been seen before was actually refined by the little skeleton?” This thought randomly popped up in Han Shuo’s mind, but he quickly dismissed it as too fanciful. A little skeleton that he’d personally refined shouldn’t have this kind of special ability.

“Don’t kill him, I want that leader alive!” Han Shuo suddenly yelled when he saw the little skeleton and the undead creature dive down at Troda.

Han Shuo had found out from Dick that the bandit named Troda often robbed Brettel City in recent years. He was a bandit leader who’d amassed an unknown amount of wealth. Han Shuo was going to make him spit out all of the riches that his group had looted. Brettel City currently needed a large amount of gold coins and the two hundred thousand gold coins Han Shuo had brought with him was not enough to continue supporting everything.

Chapter 303: Must confess even unto death

The undead creature that had been rushing at Troda suddenly changed direction to attack the bandits in Troda's group in accordance with Han Shuo's shout and the little skeleton follow up pat.

Troda roared as he shot out a series of arrows at the undead creature. A random few connected, but unfortunately didn't hinder it at all. This hedgehog-shaped undead creature rammed right into the middle of the dense group of bandits under the little skeleton's guidance.

Pfft pfft...

The enormous body of this undead creature barged into the center of the bandits. Its sharp spikes pierced through five bandits, three of which were torn apart while two of them flew through the air, impaled on the spikes.

Three hundred gargoyles roared as they flew over, flapping their bat-like wings as they shot forward. Roughly a dozen bandits didn't even have time to resist before iron hook-like claws mangled their flesh and blood. The dark creatures that couldn't fly united with the ten evil knights charging down Troda's bandits under the leadership of the earth and wood elite zombie.

Over a thousand undead creatures of various kinds crashed directly into the middle of the bandits. These creatures didn't fear death or felt any pain. They used either sharp weapons or claws to crazily assault the bandits.

The skeletal warriors were the weakest among the troop. Their bones often shattered upon impact of a strong collision, except for those whose bodies were at a higher level of defense. The power from the iron bars in their hands was very ferocious, able to create great trouble for the bandits.

The huge hate warriors were even more difficult to deal with. It would take four or five bandits to barely handle one hate warrior. Only fire and lightning magic, in addition to light magic, could deal major damage to these powerful undead creatures. Even though normal physical attacks could cut off the hate warriors' limbs, they still couldn't stop the latter from attacking.

The ten evil knights were the fiercest as together they raised huge, sharp white bone spikes with great lethality. A swing of a huge bone spike would sweep five or six bandits to death. The black armor formed from the exotic ore native to the abyss of death was even more resistant to magic, compared to normal armor, while the undead creatures themselves weren't easily injured by physical attacks. Therefore, the ten evil knights were a nightmare for the bandits. The bandits seemed unable to find a suitable, timely method to deal with them.

Han Shuo stood in the air, activating the bone staff and chanting some obscure magic incantation. Under the thick veil of the Canopy of Necromancy's green-black fog, water ripples descended from the sky to create puddles of acid bog. The acid bog was harmless towards the undead creatures. But when living people without the the aura of death around them entered, they would be dissolved to the bone.

"Damned stupid pigs you, do you only know to stand there and watch?" Faulke let out a loud curse. He clutched his silver spear and turned to the bandits, shouting, "Aim at them!"

The brutal bandit group of four thousand members really couldn't be underestimated. Han Shuo had only summoned over a thousand undead creatures, the majority of which were the lowest level of zombie warriors. The power of these zombie warriors was too weak to pose a true threat to the bandits.

Therefore, the amount of undead creatures were too few compared to the bandits. It was simply impossible to exterminate a large amount of these four thousand bandits by relying on few hate warriors and evil knights. Amidst Faulke's screams and shouts, series of arrows landed amongst the bandits and even the undead creatures. The arrows were basically harmless to the high level hate warriors and evil knights, so most of these arrow attacks didn't even cause any damage to them.

Seeing the hate warriors have no problem attacking the bandits even when stuck with arrows, the greenhorn archers heaved a visible sigh of relief and unleashed their skills even more fiercely. Now that they had nothing to worry about, the archers became better at deploying the shooting skills learned from their training. The attacks were becoming increasingly accurate. More and more bandits were hit and died from the arrows.

Observing the situation with cold eyes, Han Shuo was startled and suddenly paused the Acid Bog magic. A narrow, twisting path that led to Faulke's group had appeared next to Troda. The narrow path was enough for only three or four people to enter, but it gave rise to an opportunity to attack Faulke's group.

"Attack! Kill those damned cowardly soldiers of Brettel City!" Troda pointed towards Faulke. The layers bandits around him rushed straight at Faulke with Troda beneath the rain of arrows.

The soldiers were becoming used to the fight. They mercilessly shot even more arrows at Troda's group as they faced the latter's incoming attack. The charging bandits fell one by one and rolled onto the ground like porcupines with arrows, spears and lances extending out of their bodies, their dying poses varied and exotic.

Halfway up Mount Tali, the leader of the mountain people, tall Fulkin with a high nose bridge was wearing not quite precious armor and at a loss as he watched the chaotic battle at the mountain foot, saying, "What's going on?"

Fulkin was the leader of the mountain people on Mount Tali. They lived on Mount Tali by mining to trade for living necessities. The group of roughly a thousand mountain people had dropped continuously to less than six hundred throughout endless conflicts. They would have already long been destroyed by the bandits if it hadn't been for the terrain of Mount Tali.

"I don't know who that necromancer is, but those soldiers should belong to Brettel City. Hmm, those Brettel bugs actually dare to wield weapons in their hands, I must be seeing things!” Veteran miner Turiaf was tiptoeing on a tall stone, speaking with suspicion as he looked down below.

“I heard that Brettel City got a new city lord. Could it be this is the new city lord really wants to change the whole city?” Fulkin exclaimed involuntarily, a hint of shock appearing in his eyes.

“It’s said that the new city lord is Bryan. He seems to be a necromancer who killed the great swordmaster of the Brut Merchant Alliance. He’s an evil man who’s challenged many powerhouses of the Empire. No one could escape his palm of his hands. He’s never spared a single life in any fight.” Turiaf had recently heard some information from Brettel City thanks to the fairweather merchants. He couldn’t help but speak up now.

Fulkin, the chief of the mountain people on Mount Tali, pondered silently for a bit before opening his mouth to say, “That damnable bandit Troda has killed many of our people. Even my little brother died to his hands. Whatever it might be, Troda’s situation doesn’t look very good now. It seems we won’t have to stay and defend ourselves on the mountain anymore.”

“Fulkin, do you mean to descend down the mountain and fight to the death with Troda?” Turiaf asked, startled.

Nodding his head, Fulkin harrumphed coldly and shouted loudly, “Perhaps today is the time for our revenge. These damnable Troda bandits have killed too many of our people. We must not let him leave Mount Tali alive!”

As his words sounded, Fulkin stepped out from a mountain rock and sprinted downwards at the battle at the mountain foot. The mountain people who’d been hiding behinds rocks and shrubs, all followed Fulkin to charge the area where Faulke’s group was stationed, all of their long accumulated hatred abruptly exploding.

For the Fulkin’s people, the undead creatures were strange existences from another world. It was best not to come in contact with them. These creatures didn’t belong to this world after all, so it’d be a shame if the creatures turned to attack them.

Moreover, there were acid puddles of various sizes on the ground beneath those undead creatures. There were dozens of stark white skeletons freshly denuded of their flesh that were still lying in the acid puddles. The creepy scene was too shocking for them. They naturally wouldn't be willing to enter such a dangerous place.

Whoosh whoosh!

Two bone spears shot out from an unknown position. Troda suddenly felt pain on his two legs. Dozens of gargoyles abruptly swamped over him. Without waiting for him to react, they grabbed him with their claws, spiraling up with him into the sky.

"My name is Bryan, I'm the new city lord of Brettel City. Very pleased to meet you, Troda!" Han Shuo's voice rang out elegantly. When Troda finally reacted, he saw Han Shuo's smiling face looking down at him, while the claws from four gargoyles pierced through his back. These four creatures flapped their wings, not letting him fall to his death.

"What do you want?" Troda was indeed a leader in the bandit world. His face was still vicious and furious as he roared at Han Shuo despite the agony on his bloody back.

"I don't want anything, only all of your wealth. Spit back everything you've pillaged from Brettel City in the past several years!" Han Shuo was in a good mood as he spoke with a soft, happy laugh.

"Kill me! I won't give you anything even if I die! Haha, you won't get your hands on this wealth!" Troda let out a crazy laugh, seemingly not knowing how to spell the word "death".

Pfft! Three bone spears nailed Troda's chest and lower abdomen. Han Shuo said smilingly,

"You seem to have forgotten that I'm a necromancer. In addition to the power ability to control dark creatures, necromancers are very familiar with the soul. Even if you die, I can still extract everything from your soul."

Chapter 304: Memory search

“The boss, the boss is dead!” A bandit screamed when he saw the three bone spears penetrate through Troda.

When they saw Troda killed in addition from the undead creatures and Brettel soldiers, the bandits lost their fighting spirit. They were no longer fearless of death, and instead, suddenly felt an ardent desire to live. No one thought of getting revenge for Troda, they all fled in panic.

Using the bone staff to cast a necromancy magic spell that wrapped around the hazy green of the souls, Han Shuo solemnly chanted obscure incantations to collect the memories of these souls. He flourished the bone staff awhile later. The souls turned into green smoke and drifted away.

The gargoyles dragged Troda’s body over to Han Shuo. He relieved Troda’s corpse of his space ring before promptly throwing the corpse away. Han Shuo let out a light breath of satisfaction after collecting Troda’s wealth and memory. He looked to the distance to see that the chaotic battle still going on.

A portion of the heavily injured Redbeard bandits rushed towards Faulke. The soldiers who’d been shooting arrows from a safe distance were shocked and frightened as they switched gingerly from bows to broadswords and spears under Faulke’s orders. Faulke arranged for the hundred plus experienced knights to be out in front and started attacking the incoming bandits along with the soldiers.

Fulkin and the mountain people of Mount Tali had also sprinted down from the mountain. They cooperated with Brettel soldiers to surround and exterminate the Red Beard bandits, who’d were all dejected due to the death of their leader.

Han Shuo firmly grasped the situation through the three yin demons. He knew for sure that the bandits were doomed for defeat this time. The undead creatures were still slaughtering the bandits as per his orders. Having reached the separate demon realm, Han Shuo no longer needed the power from these souls. However, the Demonslayer Edge on his chest still silently absorbed this energy that was difficult to observe by the naked eyes.

Standing on a high altitude, Han Shuo discovered the little skeleton riding a huge, bizarre roaring porcupine and running all the escaped bandits down. The earth elite zombie, wood elite zombie, and ten evil knights were fighting together as they scurried around, hunting down bandits.

Han Shuo issued an order, and the little skeleton and zombie warriors in this area squatted down to collect the spoils of war from the bandits' bodies. The undead creatures diligently searched out every weapon, leather jacket, and even some fine clothes before piling them up according to Han Shuo's instructions.

Han Shuo stopped supplying mental strength for the Canopy of Necromancy after the bandits had fled, letting it gradually scatter to the wind. The earth gradually absorbed the Acid Bog puddles under the sunlight. The skeletons in various weird postures suddenly let out cracking sounds and collapsed.

There were no surprises now that the big picture had been set in stone. In this battle, more than twenty seven hundred out of four thousand bandits had died, the rest had fled in a bedraggled fashion. All spoils of war had been collected from the corpses, which Han Shuo ultimately handed over to Faulke's management.

Nearly two hundred of Brettel City's new soldiers died from the bandits' savage attacks in this battle, while Fulkin had only lost only fifty of his people who'd rushed down from the mountain. This showed the weak power and incompetent abilities of the soldiers in the battlefield.

"Noble Sir Count, thank you for your help." When the battle was settled, Fulkin went over to Han Shuo and bowed to pay his respects and gratitude.

"No need to stand on ceremony. Mount Tali is part of Brettel City territory. It's my responsibility as the city lord to ensure the safety of your lives.” Han Shuo responded with a smile before adding, “I hope this is a good start. Brettel City is also your hometown, I don’t think you must continue staying on Mount Tali if you don’t want to.”

“Perhaps one day we’ll return to Brettel City, but it’s not yet the best time. Sir Count should understand our concerns.” One battle wasn’t enough to assure Fulkin. He wouldn’t dare to take the risk before Brettel City could display powerful military strength.

Nodding his head, Han Shuo said smilingly, “You will see Brettel City change. Alright, we can stop here today. I still have other things to handle.”

Paying no more attention to Fulkin, Han Shuo went over to Faulke and told him to clean up the battlefield. He then left for direction of the Helon Duchy by himself. Han Shuo had received the information about Redbeard Troda’s hidden location from the latter’s mouth. In addition to some miscellaneous crystal cards inside the space ring, the jewelry and ores that Troda had pillaged over years hadn’t been sold, but hidden within a mountain with a bald top instead.

Troda had originally been a criminal in the Helon duchy. He was released thanks to general amnesty when Helen Tina succeeded the position. Troda left the prison and returned to his long lost freedom, becoming a bandit. Even though he’d been making a mess everywhere over the past several years, he was still obsessed with his hometown. He’d hidden the wealth at a mountain not far from his hometown.

The current grand duke of Helon Duchy was Helen Tina, rumored to be an extremely charming woman. This woman had obtained with finesse the grand duke position that her uncles had coveted, becoming the true power holder of Helon Duchy. None of the uncles who fought for the throne had escaped from her hands. She’d killed them all when she’d succeeded the seat.

“Helon Duchy, humph!” Han Shuo snorted coldly. He traversed the dim sky while secretly thinking about when to make a move on this duchy.

Even though Helen Tina was a woman, the army there had no hearts for mercy in her hands. Her Helon Duchy was the most frequent invader out of the seven grand duchies that invaded Brettel City.

Helon Duchy was seven hundred li to the northeast of Brettel City. It'd take a day to travel by a fast galloping horse, but Han Shuo only needed an hour using the Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens.

Upon his arrival at that bald-headed mountain, Han Shuo saw a large scale battle campaign that involved four grand duchies in full swing on that precise mountain. The person who Han Shuo had been secretly cursing, Helen Tina, was valiantly sitting on a fiery red phoenix, calm and at ease as she commanded the troops in an attack.

Chapter 305: Hiding

The seven grand duchies included the Helon Duchy of Helen Tina, Bavenden Duchy of Alec Ambridge, Boulet Duchy of Burt Zili, Bonton Duchy of Randy Allard, Narsen Duchy of Benedict Sackville, Etman Duchy of Argi Gilles, and Bisli Duchy of Nehem Beige.

The combined size of the seven grand duchies wasn't much smaller than the Lancelot Empire, but the seven grand duchies fought all year round and never seemed to stop. This battle was being conducted right outside of the Helon Duchy, the current participants being the Helon, the Narsen, the Etman and the Bonton duchies.

Grand duke Benedict of Narsen Duchy was in the prime of his life. He coveted Helen Tina's beauty, hence his cooperation with Helon Duchy against the invasion of Etman and Bonton duchies to win the beauty's heart.

Benedict desired Helen for her beauty as well as her duchy. However, Helen had always maintained a tepid attitude towards his aggressive pursuit. This tickled his heart, making him even more eager to please her. Benedict often accepted Helen's invitation to personally led the army of Narsen Duchy in skirmishes.

Helen wore a bright red magic robe, a mysterious magic pattern on her high, protruding chest, and her long red hair elegantly flying in the wind above the mountain. Helen looked like a dazzling goddess of fire as she rode the red-feathered fire phoenix.

On the cliff beneath her was grand duke Benedict of Narsen Duchy in clean, exquisite formal attire. He stood next to a luxurious carriage, a calm and confident smile on his face. His eyes were watching the soldiers of Etman and Bonton duchies advance deep into the mountain.

Han Shuo arrived in the sky above the mountain valley. Glancing down on the raging battle, he recalled Troda's wealth being buried hidden here and momentarily zoned out.

This place was completely different from the mountain valley with the mithril mine. The mountain was formed purely from the deposits of type of very durable rock. The darling of the earth—the earth elite zombie, could move unimpeded within the soft soil, but he couldn't do so at will with this rock solid mountain.

If the metal elite zombie could be refined in the place of extreme metal, its ability to destroy stones and drill through mountains would enable it to enter easily. Unfortunately, the metal elite zombie was currently unobtainable, since the location of the place of extreme metal was still unknown. Han Shuo could only helplessly watch the grand battle occur on the mountain while thinking of another way.

Han Shuo stood on the sky, his vision scanning the entire mountain valley. He frowned, wondering if he should make use of this chance to enter. Troda's wealth was hidden at the spot beneath the carriage where Benedict was standing next to. Troda hadn't placed all of his wealth into the space ring, likely because he was scared that someone would assassinate him to seize his ring.

Troda had also been quite a player. He'd had three lovers and two sons in the Helon Duchy. He'd already made the appropriate arrangements for his most trusted mistress. Once she learned of his death, the wealth in his mountain would become the pillar of support for this mistress and his sons.

Therefore, Han Shuo needed to quickly clean out the four hundred thousand gold coins worth of treasures when the news had yet to reach her ears.

As Han Shuo raptly watched the scene below and tried to think of a way, Helen Tina below suddenly discovered his gaze. She frowned, a magic staff embedded with an enormous flame stone abruptly appearing in her hand.

This magic staff had the ability to increase the effectiveness of fire magic. Helen raised it and pointed at Han Shuo. A blazing fire coalesced into five human-sized fireballs, flying straight towards him on the sky.

"Hateful woman!" Han Shuo softly cursed. The fingers on his left hand danced adroitly, shooting out rays of faint purple flame. The rays wove into a glacial net, tightly enveloping the five huge fireballs.

Sizzling sounds and faint smoke instantly appeared when the magic net, woven from the purple spellfire of the Mystical Glacial Spellfire, wrapped around the five fireballs. The cold air instantly snuffed out the fire elements within the fireballs. The fire remnants shimmered as they slowly scattered down, forcing Helen to pull on the hood of her magic robe.

“Who is it?” Helen Tina looked up only to see a small black spot under the sunlight. She withdrew her contemptuous attitude and asked cautiously upon seeing her fireballs easily destroyed.

Han Shuo paid no heed to Helen Tina and snorted before flying off towards the back of the mountain. He intended to temporarily depart this troublesome area and think of other methods later. At the back of the mountain, he saw Helon soldiers hauling enormous war equipment to the top. Han Shuo intended to kill a soldier and changed outfits in order to enter the main battlefield.

Helen Tina started panicking upon seeing Han Shuo fly to the back without any words but a snort. She looked down and shouted to Benedict, “You take care of matters here. The magic cannons are being delivered to the back of the mountain, but a dangerous character has appeared. I need to immediately go and take a look.”

Helen Tina patted the fire phoenix without waiting for Benedict Sackville to reply. The super rank magic creature had brilliant, fiery red feathers that swayed and sashayed as the phoenix flapped its wings and flew up, bringing the bright red robed woman to the back like a gout of blazing flame.

The magic cannons contained a strange kind of magic element. This element seemed to repulse the space rings. The cannons couldn't be placed directly into space rings and could only be pushed up slowly via human power.

Helen Tina had crafted the strategy for this grand battle for a long time, the killing blow being precisely the bombardment of magic cannons from the high attitude of this mountain. She had been planning this for far too long, using enormous effort to lure two grand duchies to the same place. She absolutely would not let anyone destroy her plan. Therefore, she expended full force in stopping Han Shuo when she saw him fly to the back.

Han Shuo had yet to apply his plan when a red silhouette quickly flew over. In the sky, five huge but slender, vivid fire snakes twisted their roughly seven meter long bodies before shooting at Han Shuo from five different directions.

The fire magic “Mad Dance of Fire Snakes” could only be casted when a fire mage advanced to the rank of archmage. The ring that Helen Tina wore on her left hand enhanced mental strength. Add to that the magic staff embedded with the flame stone, she was able to release five fire snakes instead of three that an ordinary archmage could summon.

The five fire snakes meandered in the sky, the extremely high temperature creating sizzling sounds in the air. The fire was so violent that it seemed that it would only need a short while to burn Han Shuo to ashes.

Han Shuo was stunned. He had originally looked down on Helen Tina, thinking she was only a woman with wild ambitions who only knew to use schemes and beauty to gain power. He hadn’t expected her to have real strength. This terrifying strength coupled with her extraordinary beauty surprised Han Shuo greatly.

Snow white bones shot out like flowers in full bloom, becoming as soft as silk threads. They were woven into a massive white bone shield under Han Shuo’s manipulations. Endless darkness blotted out the dazzling sunlight. The dark fog completely shrouded this space while the white bone shield materialized in front of Helen Tina.

The fiery red halo of the five fire snakes wasn’t enough to light up the surroundings. As the sunlight was blotted out, the snakes lost their targets and turned to entangle the white bone shield instead, burning it to crisp. Helen Tina suddenly couldn’t feel a hint of Han Shuo’s presence anymore.

The dark fog disappeared as quickly as it came, dispersing upon just a breeze. When the sunlight returned to scatter upon the hill, Han Shuo had already vanished from the air without a trace, leaving behind only the burned bone shield that was cut off from its supply of magical energy. The shield shattered into small, inky black pieces and scattered down.

Taking out a pair of snow white gloves with silver embroidery, Helen Tina promptly caught a falling piece of bone. She was shocked upon looking at the pitch black piece in her hand, her eyes vigilant as she swept a glance around and murmured, "Turns out he's a damnable necromancer. Just who is this person?"

Mumbling to herself for a bit, Helen Tina still had no clues. She naturally thought that Han Shuo had taken advantage of the dark fog to escape. Turning to look at the soldiers busily pushing the cannons, she ordered, "Hurry up, move all of these cannons to the top of the mountain."

The bare chested soldiers were hard at work and all shouted "Yes!" upon hearing the order. Everyone snuck a glance at the goddess of their heart and felt themselves full of an inexplicable energy, their strength suddenly spiking up.

On a huge rock, a soldier lightly rested his hands on the carriage containing the cannons. A trace of ridicule flashing in his eyes, he glanced at Helen Tina in the sky like a vicious beast lurking in the dark looking at its prey. He whispered with a chuckle, "Helen Duchy, Helen Tina. You pillaged Brettel City to fatten yourselves, now it's time for you people to spill some blood."

Chapter 306: Magic crystal cannons

As soon as the grand duchess of Helon Duchy had departed, the previously dispersing fog slowly gathered once again. The sunny sky was shrouded by an inky cloak so black that one couldn't see their own fingers. The Helon soldiers who'd been rigorously pushing the cannons, were so scared that they couldn't help but shriek.

A shadow dashed erratically back and forth within the pitch black darkness. Terrifying, desolate screams echoed from the places where the shadow had glided past. These shrill screams would start up briefly before being abruptly cut off. The soldiers had been fought on the edge of death many times in their lives, so they quickly understood what it meant for the sounds to come to an abrupt end.

The screams of those not reconciled to their fate were isolated by the darkness. The thick dark fog hid the brutal slaughter that was happening. When it completely dispersed, more than forty bodies lay on the ground. Each had died with their neck pierced through by a sharp weapon.

Six crystal cannons, each five meters tall and six meters long, displayed vivid colors after the fog had cleared. The crystal cannons were refined from magic silver and a variety of other exotic metals. Their barrels were engraved with obscure, microscopic magical arrays. The silver-gray crystal cannons were so heavy that they couldn't be moved easily.

Black glossy spots sparkled like stars that were appearing together with the sunlight. Along with the glossy ephemeral sheen, stiff and heavy bodies appeared one by one out of thin air next to the crystal cannons. Sixty some zombie warriors took careful control of the crystal cannons. Divided into six teams, they began to push the cannons down the bald mountain.

The magic crystal cannons had been created in an ancient style, making them sturdy and heavy. Hauling them up the mountain was quite difficult, so it naturally didn't take much effort to push them down. The six magic crystal cannons were now pushed back down to the mountain's foot using less than a tenth of the time through the combined efforts of sixty zombie warriors.

Of course, these extremely large and expensive magic crystal cannons weren't protected only by those dozens of toiling soldiers. The guards who protected them from a further distance were still trapped within the dark fog. When the thousand plus Helon soldiers at the mountain's foot saw the magic crystal cannons that they'd just pushed up with much effort quickly roll downwards with the help of their adversaries, they immediately knew that there was a problem.

Not waiting for the thousand plus soldiers to react, the ground at the mountain's foot suddenly split open, forming a gully with a large rumbling sound. The six expensive magic crystal cannons rolled downwards one by one. The gully was very deep and narrow. Even after waiting some time, no sounds of the heavy cannons hitting the bottom could be heard from the gully.

Mission accomplished, the sixty zombie warriors vanished one by one amidst a black shimmer under the dumbfounded gazes of the soldiers at the mountain's foot. Only the deep tracks left by the rolling of the magic crystal cannons proved that they had indeed existed.

"Sir lieutenant, what... what do we do?" A captain looked helplessly at his lieutenant, asking helplessly as he glanced at the gully that was quickly closing up.

"Inform Her Lordship the Duke! The six magic crystal cannons are worth six hundred thousand gold coins. Our lives are finished if we can't find it!" The lieutenant looked terrified. He had initially planned on ignoring everything to run away. However, thinking of the cruelty that the grand duke was capable of as well as his parents in Helon City, he secretly prepared for his death instead.

As the two talked, the gully on the ground miraculously closed up after swallowing the six hundred thousand gold coins worth of magic crystal cannon. This incredible scene happening right before their eyes, as if everything was returning to normal, was both shocking and slightly calming, actually dissolving some of their inner fear.

In the sky above the mountain, Helen Tina returned to Benedict Sackville's side with empty hands. The feathers of the Fire Phoenix danced, offsetting Helen's dazzling beauty even more as she rode in on the phoenix.

"What happened? Nothing out of your expectations, right?" Benedict asked indulgently as he gazed at perhaps the most difficult prey he'd encountered in his life. Even though Benedict was already middle aged, his elegant and noble intellectual temperament, coupled with the charisma of a mature man, were a fatal attraction for countless normal women.

"He ran away. It was an evil necromancer." Helen Tina relaxed her face into a subtle smile. She didn't hold back her smiling countenance, her tone slow and gentle.

"So it was just a cowardly necromancer. Hehe, a minor character unrelated to the big picture, he shouldn't have any impact to our plan." Benedict secretly weighed the information and didn't comment much on the matter. He casually asked, "When will the magic crystal cannons arrive? I really want to see these despicable invaders blown to bits under their bombardment."

"They are halfway up the mountain and will soon appear. I've spent a lot of money to buy these six magic crystal cannons from the Brut Merchant Alliance thousands of miles away. Their power has been tested, you'll definitely see blood blooming like roses." Having destroyed an entire small forest in one test shot, Helen Tina could imagine the scene of her enemies' flesh and blood spewing messily in her head. She was so full of expectations after having gone through all this fire and blood to reach this point.

"Lord, Lord Duke, it's bad, things are very bad!" The captain from the mountain's foot hurriedly scrambled over and shouted his report loudly with a terrified face.

"What happened?" Helen Tina frowned, extremely displeased in her heart. She shouted at the lesser captain who'd disturbed her good mood.

“The six magic crystal cannons have all disappeared!” The captain was extremely horrified but had resigned himself to articulating the truth in fear.

“Wha... what?” Helen Tina was momentarily stunned as her spirits tumbled from the peak of satisfaction to the bottom of a deep abyss. She couldn’t adapt to this kind of sudden reversal in fortune. As a result, she didn’t realize that her usual graceful voice had become shrill.

“Some zombies pushed the six cannons down from the hillside, then a crack appeared on the ground and swallowed them all. The crack then closed up and the ground returned to normal. This is the truth!” The captain hung his head as he quickly described the sequence of events. He didn’t even dare lift his head to look at Helen Tina’s eyes right now.

An enormous fireball shot out, violently consuming the captain. Helen Tina’s face was covered in a layer of frost as she screamed tragically. She rode the fire phoenix to the back of the mountain, her fury billowing to the skies. The phoenix flew quickly, surrounded by dancing embers. Benedict was certain that the soldiers responsible for transportation would face great suffering.

“Lord Duke, what should we do now? Do we still need to defend this small mountain?” After Helen Tina left the bald mountain, a soldier standing tall next to Benedict with a straight posture and darkened face asked in a low voice.

Shaking his head, the elegant and relaxed expression on Benedict Sackville’s face vanished. His face turned stern as he barked, “This battle is purely a waste of troops without the magic crystal cannons. With no rewards to speak of, we naturally won’t be engaging in this confrontation anymore. Let’s go, we will immediately withdraw from this mountain. You only need to inform Kabbah of Helon Duchy, I think he’ll know what to do.”

Nodding, the soldier took his leave without another word and issued orders to retreat to high ranked officers.

While Benedict Sackville was certainly pursuing Helen Tina, he was also scheming to swallow the Helon Duchy at the same time. By nature, Benedict Sackville was a duke interested in nothing but profit. He wouldn't expend his own power solely in the pursuit of romance.

With the withdrawal of Narsen Duchyl in addition to Helen Tina's departure, the Helon soldiers also seemed to realize that the situation wasn't looking good. After some parlaying, the commander of the Helon army decisively issued a retreat order. The soldiers from the two duchies defending the mountain valley withdrew as quickly as they could under a rain of arrows.

The blazing fight had fizzled out as quickly as it'd been ignited. Three thousand corpses had remained behind on the bald mountain after the battle stopped. The two enemy duchies who had painstakingly waited for the Helon army to emerge from their city, now saw their chance as the soldiers cleanly withdrew. Their leaders instantly commanded the troops to go around the mountain and chase down the armies of the Narsen and Helon duchies.

There were only three hundred soldiers from the Edmond and Bonton duchies left to clean up and scavenge the remnants of the battlefield on the mountain.

The majority of troops had withdrawn after half an hour. The three hundred soldiers cleaning the battlefield suddenly felt day turn into night as the sky was gradually covered by a thick layer of black clouds. As they gathered items off the corpses, the soldiers looked up at the green-black cloud layer in the sky with a head full of befuddlement.

The three hundred soldiers had only just completed the cleanup and collected all of the weapons and armor into five big piles when, much to their terror, the previously dead soldiers started to slowly writhe and stand up in grotesque postures.

Three thousand corpses all over the place stood up and immediately surrounded the three hundred soldiers cleaning up the battlefield. Under the Canopy of Necromancy, the three thousand corpses didn't spend too much time to turn the three hundred soldiers into more of their own.

With now over three thousand stiff, resurrected corpses properly lined up in formation under Han Shuo's evil manipulations, the undead army advanced towards Helon Duchy. Han Shuo arrived at the exact place where Benedict Sackville had been standing. According to Troda's memories, Han Shuo successfully dug his way underground and found the wealth that Troda had prepared for his children and mistress.

Chapter 307: Divine power

Han Shuo conveniently shoved all five piles of collected items from the mountain into his space ring. Suddenly, he saw an enormous halo of holy light shining upon the earth in a distance. He instinctively felt a disgust towards that sacred, pure light. Strand of faint smoke drifted up in the light and dispersed into heaven and earth.

Having collected all of the valuables in the bald mountain, Han Shuo looked up to see the three thousand plus zombies that had been walking towards the Helon Duchy turned to ashes upon being bathed in the holy light. None was left after a short span of a few minutes.

Through the yin demons, Han Shuo saw a group of four gracefully drifting over on the back of warhorses. Three of them wore silver-gray armor with the Church of Light's cross engraved on the chest. The fourth was a light mage in white robe, a thick book of scriptures in his hand. A vast holy force overflowed with each page of the book being flipped.

Helen Tina was advancing by their side on the back of the fire phoenix. Her beautiful face full of fury and cold killing intent, she quickly approached the bald-peaked mountain.

A yin demon was surveilling and about to close in on these people for close detail when the white robed mage with the scriptures in hand seemed to discover it. His bright and wise eyes staring right at in the yin demon's direction, he paged through the scriptures in his hand. A bundle of white light abruptly shot out from a page and hit the invisible yin demon in a second.

The yin demon that Han Shuo had spent a great deal of resources to refine was enveloped in a strange force upon being hit by the white beam. It turned instantly to ashes. Even Han Shuo's soul brand on it had vanished.

A pair of thin eyes opened in the skies above Han Shuo. The white robed light mage abruptly closed the scriptures, his eyes as if piercing through layers and layers of obstacles to nail down Han Shuo's body. The mage's peaceful voice resounded quietly, "He's on the bald mountain."

The three silver armored Temple Knights urged their warhorses forward at the same time. The warhorses moved like whirlwinds, galloping swiftly towards the mountain. The white clad mage leisurely abandoned his warhorse and floated up, his speed even faster than that of the three Temple Knights riding warhorses.

Helen Tina, gliding on the fire phoenix at a low altitude, cried out softly in anger after hearing the mage's words. The fire phoenix instantly shot in the air, tearing a blazing red across the sky and reaching the mountain in the span of a few breaths.

Han Shuo's anger had been ignited when the yin demon was turned to ashes. He also became aware of the Church of Light's terrifying power at the same time. That light mage holding the scriptures in particular could easily kill a yin demon with a simple gesture. Han Shuo was instantly on his guard against this mysterious person and his scriptures.

With the high speed of Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens in addition to the earth elite zombie becoming invisible within the earth, Han Shuo wasn't worried about escaping. Therefore, he didn't choose to retreat upon seeing the Sky's Eyes above his head. He'd wanted to at least face the light mage who'd destroyed his yin demon and suss out the situation before deciding whether or not to temporarily retreat.

The Sky's Eye formed over his head needed a constant supply of mental strength from the caster. When the light mage realized that Han Shuo was remaining in the same place, he no longer provided supplied the Sky's Eye with mental strength and immediately withdrew it.

Helen Tina landed in front of Han Shuo like a flame under the brilliant sunlight in her fiery-red magic robes. She was approximately twenty-eight years old. Her soft expression covered in a layer of frost, she stared coldly at him from the super rank magic creature and shouted, "The six magic crystal cannons, hand them back over to me now!"

Han Shuo looked up at her with a calm and natural expression. He pouted before saying with a bland smile, "This is but some interest from your Helon Duchy. Remember this well, these six magic crystal cannons is only the beginning. I will make you spit back out everything you people have robbed of us these past several years.”

“Who are you?” Helen Tina burned with rage upon hearing his words. However, she seemed to remember something and inquired him about his identity.

“Heh heh, you will know.” Han Shuo replied casually. He then stopped caring about her and focused all of his attention on the light mage who’d arrived by now.

“Please come with us to the Church of Light for a visit. As long as you confess your sins, the God of Light will forgive your reckless arrogance.” The Red Archbishop Kosse looked peaceful, as if he was the host inviting his guest.

Kosse and Ferguson were both grand magi. However Kosse was also a wind mage in addition to being a light mage. Moreover, he held the divine artifact “Revelation” of the Church of Light. He could borrow divine power from it, so his strength was much higher than the light grand magus Ferguson.

Kosse was only forty-five years old, but had the honor of serving as the acclaimed Red Archbishop. This indicated that he was no simple character. The only person above the rank of Red Archbishop was the God of Light’s messenger, the Pope. As the youngest Red Archbishop ever, he was the most promising candidate for the seat of the next Pope.

“Sorry, I have no time.” Han Shuo looked remotely at Kosse, refusing outright.

The three galloping Temple Knights had finally caught up. They’d come on the back of their warhorses since the road on the bald mountain wasn’t too windy. Standing on the mountain, Han Shuo looked into the far distance and discovered that a team of a dozen silver armored knights was gradually materializing. They seemed to be left behind by the four in Kosse’s group.

“My Lord, we don’t have to waste words on this heretic. He brutally killed Lord Ferguson. He should be burned for this sin.” A Temple Knight glanced coldly at Han Shuo and suggested to Kosse.

The Temple Knights were a group of dedicated fanatics completely faithful to the God of Light. They themselves possessed extraordinary strength. Only when the God of Light recognized their existence and bestowed a blessing upon them, could they be qualified as Temple Knights. The favor each Temple Knight earned was different in accordance to their strength of their faith as well as their own efforts.

The strength of the Temple Knights could be distinguished based on the amount of the God’s favor bestowed upon them. The Temple Knights who only received a hint of favor would have the insignia of the Holy Grail on the armor’s chest. Those who received a lesser amount would have the olive branch insignia, those with a lot of favor had the cross insignia.

The Temple Knights who earned the blessing of a miracle could display their power to the highest possible extent. This type of Temple Knights was extremely rare and few, their insignia on the armor’s chest being an angel statue, their strength comparable to a sacred knight. If a Temple Knight of this kind was a sacred knight himself, then his strength would be even more terrifying.

However, these Temple Knights were simply too rare in the Church of Light. They wouldn’t randomly leave the Temple of Light under normal circumstances, so those with the cross insignia on their chests were already the most powerful outside. Currently, three of these Temple Knights with the cross insignia was staring raptly at Han Shuo with fervent, frenzied eyes. Han Shuo became cautious upon seeing this kind of stubborn madness that belonged only to stubborn religious followers.

“Bryan, please come to the Church of Light with us to give a clear explanation. I guarantee that the God of Light will forgive your recklessness no matter how grave your sins are. At most you’ll only be imprisoned within the Church, we won’t take your life.” The Red Archbishop secretly recalled the warning of the Lancelot Empire and tried his best to sound polite.

“Bryan? So you are indeed that unlucky new city lord of Brettel City. I finally know the meaning in your words just now. Hmph, daring to grab my magic crystal cannons, you simply don’t care about the lives of your people!” Helen Tina had completely understood by nail. Her pretty eyes drilled into Han Shuo’s body as she snorted.

“You can try. Any duchy that dares try to pillage Brettel City will have to pay the price.” Han Shuo remained unmoved, only throwing Helen Tina a glance along with a cold warning. He then slowly took out the Demonslayer Edge and nodded towards the Temple Knight who’d first spoken, “Come on, brave Temple Knight. As long as you win against me, I’ll consider following you guys to the Church of Light. I think your Church of Light won’t gang up on me, will you?”

“But a despicable necromancer, it simply won’t need a second person from us to make a move.” The Temple Knight swung his silver spear to point at Han Shuo and spoke in a righteous, awe-inspiring manner.

The silver spear shone with a brilliant silver light. Han Shuo was long since been familiar with this kind of silver fighting aura. However, the silver spear also contained a pure divine power in addition to the energy of the silver fighting aura. When the strange divine power merged with the fighting aura, the combination was much more powerful than the simple silver fighting aura.

The Temple Knights had exchanged their faithful, steadfast beliefs for blessings from the God of Light, earning a strange power in addition to the fighting aura they bitterly cultivated. Not only did strange power protect them from the erosion of evil force, it also gave them the ability to purify the evil in this world.

Normally, the damage caused by dark and necromancy spells to Temple Knights was extremely limited. The Temple Knights possessed a very strong defense even against high rank dark and necromancy spells with terrifying lethality. On the other hand, the Temple Knights’ weapons, combined with the power bestowed by their God, was terribly fatal to mages of the two aforementioned majors. Any undead creature touched by the silver spear would be unable to withstand it and be immediately turned to ashes.

Chapter 308: Divine weapon versus divine weapon

Han Shuo's mind was calm, his expression ruthless as he watched the high ranked Temple Knight of the Church of Light slowly approaching on the warhorse. He held the Demonslayer Edge in his right hand. As the space ring flashed, a tri-colored bone staff appeared in his previously empty left hand.

Han Shuo was about to chant a high level undead summoning spell when he saw "Revelation" on the hand of Red Archbishop Kosse burst out with a vast, brilliant holy light. This divine artifact flipped through its pages quickly without any wind, shocking even its owner.

The tri-colored bone staff of unknown material suddenly shone out brilliant yellow, blue and purple lights at the same time, the dark, evil power crazily circulating. The lights of the three colors converged before shooting towards "Revelation" on Kosse's hand.

Continuous flapping sounds traveled out as "Revelation" flipped rapidly. A beam of light drifted out with every page flipped, each light forming a miraculous word and joining a river of words flowing in front of Kosse. As soon as the marvelous words came into contact with the light from the tri-colored bone staff, holy power along with evil power exploded at the same time. Violent air surged and rushed in all directions between Han Shuo and Kosse.

The incoming Temple Knight who was challenging Han Shuo was pushed back by that terrifying power, along with the other two Knights. Helen Tina was also overwhelmed by the pressure on the back of the phoenix. She immediately struggled up to higher skies, horrified as she looked down at the happenings below.

The previously refined and commanding posture of Red Archbishop Kosse had disappeared without a trace. He stood there trembling slightly, cold sweat flowing down his body as he looked at Han Shuo, dumbfounded. He could feel the power all over his body pour crazily into the “Revelation” in his hand. This situation had never happened before.

“Revelation” was a book of scriptures in the Church of Light that had been left behind after Kosse’s master had passed away. His luck had been excellent, he’d received this divine artifact after receiving the God of Light’s recognition in a baptism in the Temple of Light. The artifact had been in his hands for merely three years, but everything had gone smoothly for Kosse with his identity as a light and wind grand magus. The situation had always gone favorably every time he’d used “Revelation” against evil powers. He had never encountered this situation at hand.

Han Shuo held the bone staff, the mental strength in his entire being also madly attracted to it. The bone staff was rapidly absorbing his mental strength like a big sponge. When the mental strength poured into the staff, it seemed to resonate with the magic force of the bone staff itself, ultimately forming a strange tri-colored light that all converged towards the “Revelation”.

Although he was at the rank of grand magus, Han Shuo still felt slightly woozy when his mental strength was crazily sucked by the bone staff. However, his mind was much more resolute than ordinary people’s, in addition to his astoundingly strong body. This was why he wasn’t trembling like Kosse with cold sweat flowing down his body.

As the evil and holy powers intertwined, the terrifying impact swept away all of the obstacles between Han Shuo and Kosse. Rocks shattered wherever this force passed through, the bald mountain shuddering violently exploding where this impact spread through. Huge rumbling sounds echoed nonstop in the area between the two people.

“This evil force is so enormous that I’m sure that only the artifact of the Calamity Church’s Evil God can possess such power. Kill this ignorant heretic!” The Temple Knight had been swept head over heels by the forces ricocheting between Han Shuo and Kosse. After standing up with much effort, he was inwardly terrified of Han Shuo’s power upon seeing Kosse’s body trembling. He immediately suggested taking advantage of this opportunity to kill Han Shuo.

How would the Temple Knights not know how powerful Red Archbishop Kosse was? The divine artifact of “Revelation” in his hands had always been a nightmare for evil forces for many years. He hadn’t expected that today, a weak petty heretic such as the one they were facing would be able measure up to the Red Archbishop Kosse. He was afraid of Han Shuo’s immense power, so he proposed the idea of killing the latter.

The remaining two Temple Knights were watching the scene develop in front of them as they stood on the sides. As soon as they heard their brethren’s proposal, they immediately turned their warhorses towards Han Shuo without another word.

The three Temple Knights carefully avoided the center part of the still rumbling explosion, approaching Han Shuo from the rear and two sides. In the holy light flashing out from “Revelation”, they started singing praises about the glory of the God of Light. Streams of fighting aura filled with divine power flared out from their spears and attacked Han Shuo.

Seeing the Church of Light’s despicable act, Helen Tina, overhead, curled up her lips with a trace of contempt. However, Han Shuo was her enemy, while the Church of Light wasn’t an entity a small duchess could offend. She just there silently and observed happily.

Han Shuo’s mental strength infused the bone staff at a high speed. Coldly facing Kosse in a difficult struggle, he also had to guard against the three Temple Knights quickly drawing close. He could neither move his body nor make use of his mental strength. However, his demonic magic was still available. A stream of magical yuan flowed into the Demonslayer Edge in his right hand under the control of his mind.

After having absorbed a massive amount of the souls recently, the Demonslayer Edge now had a faint trace of terrifying killing intent that belonged to an unparalleled weapon. Upon being infused with magical yuan, it was akin to a murderous magic beast who’d caught the delicious smell of blood after being trapped for tens of thousand years. The Demonslayer Edge suddenly moved of its own accord and left Han Shuo’s hand with a loud howl.

A dense mass of star-like spots gathered into blood clouds. An endless resentment from the Demonslayer Edge, along with tyrannical murderous intent, had formed a massive layer of blood red clouds. The blood clouds blotted out over half of the sky above the bald mountain.

The thick blood smell seemed to contain an attack on the soul. The three Temple Knights weren't the only ones to feel that the situation had taken a bad turn. Even Helen Tina, who'd soon flown up high, was also surrounded by the vicious, terrifying air of endless fear. Her head dizzy and her chest heavy with the urge to vomit, a crazy obsession gradually surged within her heart.

Helen Tina knew that things were very bad. She hurriedly chanted an incantation to form a fiery red magic cage, enveloping both herself and the phoenix. The phoenix's wings were like a colorful ribbon, fire sparkles flashing each time they flapped. Fiery light shot out in all directions from the fire magic cage.

She finally managed to suppress the nauseous feeling of wanting to vomit. She urged the phoenix away from Han Shuo, angry and somewhat scared as she watched the battle of the two weapons above the mountain valley.

The murderous intent reaching the sky from the Demonslayer Edge had even formed an attack on the soul. Its target wasn't Helen Tina in the sky, which was why she could defend herself, albeit with some difficulties by resorting to the fire magic cage and the purifying fire of the phoenix. On the other hand, the Church of Light's three Temple Knights weren't so comfortable like her.

The Demonslayer Edge danced wildly above Han Shuo's head. The murderous intent of this peerless weapon wasn't weak at all against the other divine artifact. With the Demonslayer Edge as the center, layers and layers of thick clouds dyed the entire sky a blood red above the mountain. The three Temple Knights, who'd tried to take the opportunity to attack Han Shuo, was violently shaken by the soul attack. Their warhorses let out a scream and fell down down. The three Knights jumped down with stumbling steps, their bodies shaking. Blood flowed from their nostrils, streaming down their necks and chests like two wiggling worms.

The three Temple Knights temporarily didn't know what to do in the face of this unfamiliar evil force. This evil force wasn't like the quiet, mysterious darkness of the Calamity Church. It was a mad, furious bloodlust with the cruelty and arrogant desire for the destruction of everything.

The three Temple Knights had to raise their spears and sing loud praises in order to obtain even more holy force whilst suffering through soul piercing agony. Brilliant halos flashed on their bodies, constantly resisting against the force that was invading their flesh.

The Demonslayer Edge had mobilized every ounce of its stored deathly soul force after having absorbed ninety percent of Han Shuo's magical yuan. It formed an evil magnetic field that also possessed the ability of attacking the soul and started eroding the essence of every living being that were enveloped within.

"Revelation" was already struggling against the invasion of the tri-colored bone staff. Kosse couldn't help but almost groan audibly when he saw Han Shuo's Demonslayer Edge display an unfamiliar terrifying force.

The Demonslayer Edge spun in a circle around Han Shuo's head and slowly gathered a beam of bloody light to shoot at Kosse. Kosse desperately controlled his mental force to chant an incantation after biting the tip of his tongue. A flower of blood bloomed on one of the pages on "Revelation". The divine artifact immediately stopped turning its pages and was quickly put away by Kosse.

The bone staff that seemed to be struggling with its rival also immediately dulled and stopped absorbing Han Shuo's mental strength when Kosse speedily withdrew "Revelation". Only the Demonslayer Edge's beam of bloody light still shot insistently towards Kosse.

Chapter 309: The mighty

Kosse himself had suffered internal injuries, he instantly panicked upon facing this murderous intent from the Demonslayer Edge's attack. He hastily took out a magic scroll from the space ring and released the magic within. A silver halo wrapped around his entire body, as he also hurriedly chanted a magic incantation at the same time.

Cold winds whistled as sharply as knives, forming an enormous tornado that roiled up to block the Demonslayer Edge's swift attack. The descending Demonslayer Edge fell into the big tornado, its speed slowed by the cold winds. In addition, the raging murderous intent was also somewhat scattered.

The Demonslayer Edge destroyed the obstacles posed by the whirlwind and immediately shot towards the silver halo released from Kosse's magic scroll. It was once again blocked by the strange energy in this silver halo. The Demonslayer Edge was now at the end of its strength. It could only make Kosse spit out a mouthful of blood, but couldn't threaten his life.

"Protect the lord!" The three Temple Knights couldn't help but cry out in panic upon seeing Kosse's misery as well as Han Shuo's ferocity. Blood dripping out of their mouths, they staggered in a charge towards Han Shuo and Kosse.

Han Shuo's body was also currently in a very bad state. The bone staff had suddenly gone out of control and absorbed nine out of ten parts of his mental force. The three Temple Knights had then come attack him. Then, the Demonslayer Edge had absorbed more than half of his magical yuan. His current strength was now far less than normal.

Han Shuo was now unable to release another equally powerful attack after the Demonslayer Edge returned after injuring Kosse. He immediately chanted an incantation upon seeing the three Temple Knights approach. The little skeleton, earth elite zombie, and wood elite zombie suddenly appeared afterwards.

The little skeleton was still riding the undead creature that looked like a giant, undead porcupine. The earth elite zombie and wood elite zombie each rode a fire-spitting warhorse. The three fellows immediately caught the smell of something disgusting as soon as they appeared in this dimension. They were instinctively irritated at the smell of the three Temple Knights who were loudly singing praises for the God of Light.

The three strange dark creatures charged out without needing for Han Shuo's instructions. They flew straight at the three Temple Knights, seemingly wanting to destroy these hateful Knights immediately.

"Humph! Lowly dark creatures, suffer the anger of the God of Light!" The Temple Knights raised their voice, waving their silver spears with the intention to send off these reckless dark creatures back to the dust.

Unfortunately, these three undead creatures had been refined using the secret method of demonic magic. They were fearless towards the purification ability of the God of Light. The silver spears didn't disperse their souls, turning them to ashes upon contact like the Temple Knights had expected. Among these three undead creatures, the little skeleton was first to attack. The bone knife in his hand swayed unhesitatingly to block the silver spear.

During this process, the bone knife that the little skeleton was holding abruptly went through a some weird changes. The solid bone knife suddenly wriggled madly like a living creature. The bone knife that originally possessed the length of only a dagger, grew at a very fast pace and turned into a three meters long glade in just a second.

The long knife had yet to stop its peristalsis, a million of insects now seemed to be wiggling on its blade. It gave one a scalp tingling feeling just by looking at it. Sharp little spikes slowly appeared on the knife's blade, covering it in sharp little spikes and making it look eerily ferocious.

This process had taken a long time to describe, but had actually happened in just the blink of an eye. It'd finished transforming to a three meter long sword in the instant that the little skeleton swung it up at the silver spear. The little skeleton himself was only one meter thirty centimeters tall, looking comical as he held the long blade.

However, deathly aura filled the sky with a swing of the long sword in the little skeleton's hand. The dense sinister air encompassed tens of thousand years accumulation of desolation. This despairing atmosphere revealed a taste of endless death in which the godly power within the Temple Knights' silver spears was simply unable to purify.

Riding the massive porcupine-like undead creature, the little skeleton dove down from high above with an enormous rumbling sound. The long sword brought with it a deathly air that filled the skies, hammering straight down on a Temple Knight and forcing him to his knees.

This Temple Knight had previously suffered serious internal injuries from the corrosion of the Demonslayer Edge. Now that he took a violent blow from the little skeleton, his knees couldn't withstand the pressure and shattered with cracking sounds. Not waiting for the Knight to react, the little skeleton's long sword pierced through his silver armor. The little skeleton lifted up the Temple Knight on the tip of the blade and flew over to Han Shuo in a triumphant manner.

Han Shuo didn't need to take a look to know that this Temple Knight was already done for. Otherwise, the latter wouldn't be lying still without any resistance. When the little skeleton neared, the hideous three meter long sword flicked. The Temple Knight spun and flew with the wind before crashing down right at Han Shuo's feet, his body completely devoid of life.

Temple Knights who could release silver fighting aura were naturally sky riders. It was a pity that Temple Knight had already been heavy injured and had somewhat underestimated the little skeleton. Therefore, the terrifying powerful little skeleton had easily slain him. As for the remaining two knights, they had stood quite a distance from Han Shuo, so they wasn't much affected by the Demonslayer Edge's corrosion. Moreover, the earth elite zombie and wood elite zombie weren't as horrifying as the little skeleton. The two Temple Knights didn't fall in defeat as fast even though they had difficulties defending against the two zombie's endless skillsets.

Helen Tina was still hovering on the phoenix, shocked as she looked at the happenings below. She originally intended to take advantage of the situation whilst the two sides battled, but now could only stared dumbly at the situation of the Red Archbishop Kosse and the three Temple Knights. Not only were they unable to kill Han Shuo, one of them was dead while the other three suffered serious injuries. Her heart fell into disarray with panic.

Han Shuo stood arrogantly below, his eyes coldly watching the surroundings. Helen Tina constantly weighed up the gains and losses. On one hand, she was scared of Han Shuo's astonishing strength. On the other, she was heartbroken over the six magic crystal cannons.

After a while of hesitation, the magic crystal cannons worth six hundred thousand gold coins washed away some of her fear for Han Shuo. Helen Tina saw Kosse fleeing in a panic towards the foot of the mountain, the little skeleton astride the skeletal undead creature in hot pursuit with a three meter long blade in his hand. Helen Tina had no time to debate any longer.

She released a mass of flames that burned the clouds along with the phoenix. Her staff embedded with a fire stone and her ring that enhanced mental strength further spread out the flames to cover half the sky. The sea of fire churned and spread to envelop Red Archbishop Kosse.

Kosse, who was escaping in panic, soon sensed the strangeness over his head. He didn't forget to release a wind magic despite his trepidation. The wind magic blew the blazing flames towards the little skeleton and earth elite zombie, forcing them to suspend their chase.

Undead creatures were born and lived in a gloomy and humid strange world – an endless realm of desolation that was forever unable to witness the sunlight. Therefore, they felt an instinctive disgust towards the light and high temperatures. When the raging flames shrouded over Kosse, the three undead creatures little skeleton, earth elite zombie, and wood elite zombie didn't immediately charge at him.

"Lord Kosse, Lord Kosse!" The distant group of Temple Knights had finally caught up with a great deal of road dust. These Temple Knights mostly had olive branches or holy grail insignias on their chests, which corresponded with the power of senior knight and earth rider. They were obviously weaker than the previous three experts, whose insignia was the cross.

However, their numbers were numerous. Moreover, they all had the ability of purification towards undead creatures thanks to the God of Light's blessing. It was indeed unrealistic for Han Shuo to attempt to drown them in a grand army of undead creatures, particularly when considering the presence of the light grand magus Kosse.

Kosse was now seriously injured and had expended a great deal of spirit power. He immediately shouted upon seeing the Temple Knights finally arrive, "Kill this heretic, his dark heart should not exist in this world of light!"

Kosse previously had wanted to persuade Han Shuo with kind words, but he'd had experienced the latter's power and even taken serious damage. Therefore, Kosse no longer had benevolence or mercy heart. Absolutely frightened of Han Shuo's evil power, Kosse immediately ordered everyone to kill him.

The Temple Knights who'd just arrived saw Kosse's group in their miserable state. They instantly followed Kosse's order to charge at Han Shuo, standing on the mountain in a terrain full of holes and pockmarks. The two Temple Knights, who were out of breath in a struggle under the attacks of the earth elite zombie and wood elite zombie, tried to shout a warning=, "Be careful of his dark creatures! They don't fear the holy power, they even have mysterious skills. Be very careful!"

As the Temple Knights chatted, a team of the Calamity Church's Death Guards in pitch black armor appeared in another corner of the mountain. A necromancer in black magic robes was amongst the Death Guards troop. All them ran desperately in the mountain. The necromancer spoke in a lowered, worried voice, "Hurry! Bryan cannot die no matter what! Ehh, even though he accidentally hurt some of our people, you absolutely shouldn't harbor any dissatisfaction."

Many people among the Death Guards had bleeding noses and mouths.

It seemed the Demonslayer Edge's murderous intent had also hurt them.

The eyes of the black robed necromancer shone with excitement. He murmured, "Why is the divine artifact of the bone staff blessed by the Evil God in his hands?"

Chapter 310: Captured alive

Han Shuo stood tall on the bald mountain, looking without fear or anxiety at the incoming Temple Knights. His mental force and magical yuan had been restored somewhat. Although he'd be hard pressed to win against the Temple Knights, it wouldn't be difficult if he wanted to leave leisurely.

Han Shuo hadn't released the other two yin demons since "Revelation" had destroyed one of them. Thus, he didn't know that aid from the Calamity Church had appeared near bald mountain. He was about to leave when his consciousness sensed another presence.

When Han Shuo's soul had formed a consciousness at the separate demon realm, his senses had become much more sensitive. When he'd sensed that sinister presence, a thought struck him. Last time in the Valley of Sunshine, Edwin had once said that the Calamity Church would appear when Han Shuo needed them the most. It seemed Edwin hadn't lied.

Han Shuo had been standing on the mountain but immediately soared high with a thought. He saw a necromancer leading a group of Death Guards and Death Knights rushing over. The mountain had become riddled with potholes under the bombardment of the divine artifacts. However, these Death Guards and Death Knights were sprinting over as if they were on flat ground.

Within the Temple Knights' thick layer of protection, Red Archbishop Kosse was thinking to himself on a warhorse. He looked up at Han Shuo, not knowing what to do.

These Temple Knights had extraordinary power and were high in number, but it was a pity that they didn't have flying magic beasts. They had no other way but to look helplessly at facing Han Shuo high in the sky. Red Archbishop Kosse could use magic to fly, but didn't dare to pursue due to his grave injuries.

Helen Tina looked indecisively at Han Shuo from the back of her phoenix, her pretty face darkened calculatingly. She hesitated, not knowing if she should take this opportunity to chase after Han Shuo.

If Helen Tina hadn't seen the great battle between Han Shuo and the Church of Light, she certainly wouldn't have hesitated to charge at him right now and wrest back the six magic crystal cannons that he'd taken. Unfortunately, the battle right before her eyes just now had given her a clear understanding about Han Shuo's terrifying power.

Pointing at Helen Tina, Han Shuo said with a jeering smile, "You still want the magic crystal cannons?"

Upon Han Shuo's disdainful glance, the originally hesitant Helen Tina couldn't suppress the anger that instantly ignited throughout her body. It pushed aside the fear of Han Shuo from her heart. She patted the phoenix and dived towards him.

The Temple Knights were standing on one side of the mountain valley, and Han Shuo could clearly see the reinforcements from the Calamity Church also arrive in the mountain valley. A malicious idea suddenly struck Han Shuo. He immediately chanted an incantation to send the little skeleton, the earth elite zombie, and the wood elite zombie back to the strange dimension, before flying out of the mountain valley with a long string of laughter.

"Damn it. He's leaving just like that!" The leading necromancer of the Calamity Church started to pause when he saw Han Shuo fly away from the mountain.

"It's the Calamity Church, they must be with that heretic!" The Temple Knights had discovered the Calamity Church's people climbing up from the foot of the mountain at this moment. The feud between the two had lasted for hundreds of years. The accumulated hatred between the two sides was definitely bigger than the one building for Han Shuo.

Therefore, the Church of Light's Temple Knights had almost no hesitation at all when they heard this shout. They started attacking the Calamity Church's forces as soon as they appeared. The moment the battle broke out, both sides slaughtered each other until their eyes were shot with blood. Everyone prayed to their respective god as the battle grew into full swing.

The necromancer leading the Calamity Church's group intended to rescue Han Shuo from the Church of Light and grow closer to him that way. Unfortunately, his calculations had gone down the drain. Han Shuo had quickly left this chaotic land with the fast speed of the Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens, leaving a bunch of sworn enemies to fight each other.

"This despicable fellow is even more despicable than us!" The necromancer grumbled. It was unknown whether he was praising Han Shuo or cursing him. Either way, after he finished voicing those words, he immediately focused on directing the Death Guards to battle the Temple Knights.

"Shameless necromancer, return my magic crystal cannons!" Helen Tina rode the wind on the back of her phoenix and chased after Han Shuo, her soft lips crying out nonstop.

Han Shuo used the speedy Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens to quickly leave the area and landed on a lush mountain valley. Now that he was out of the reach of Kosse's "Revelation" artifact, Han Shuo immediately released the remaining two yin demons. Although the yin demons seemed to be flying disorderly, they could actually observe Helen Tina's every movement.

Upon arriving at the mountain valley, Helen Tina finally saw Han Shuo slow to a stop, with the little skeleton on the strange undead creature appearing next to him. Rage having overwhelmed her rational thought, Helen Tina urged the phoenix to shoot straight towards Han Shuo. The phoenix emitted a melodic sound before spraying out a blazing hot flame.

Helen Tina waved her fire stone embedded magic staff. Bowl-sized fireballs one by one appeared, blasting towards Han Shuo and the little skeleton in a dense rain.

The little skeleton grasped the three meters long knife and tapped on the undead creature he was riding with the handle. The undead creature opened a huge mouth full of sharp fangs and howled at the sky. Green glowing wraiths floated out from its mouth, their green sheen glimmering as they brought with them the thick presence of death from the other dimension. The wraiths started to madly absorb the deathly air floating around mountain valley as soon as they appeared in this world.

The wraiths' bodies had originally appeared with barely a glimmer of light. Their bodies slowly expanded and condensed into the appearance of green liquid under the pressure blowing from the undead creature's mouth. They rammed violently towards the densely packed fireballs.

The wraiths had absorbed energy from dead souls and rapidly swelled up to the point they couldn't hold their shapes anymore. They exploded in mid-air, deathly air covered the sky in gray-green mist. Ice cold breaths beat at the pack of fireballs, slowly dissipating the brilliant light of the fireballs.

Upon seeing the light from the fireballs dissipate, the little skeleton urged his huge undead mount to dash towards Helen Tina.

Undead creatures bore a natural hatred for the light of fire. However, the glossy bones of the little skeleton were highly resistant to fire magic despite his hatred. He wasn't truly afraid of fire. As soon as the deathly air destroyed the dense fireballs, the little skeleton held his long blade and charged ferociously to face Helen Tina as per Han Shuo's command.

When the little skeleton neared, the Helen Tina's phoenix emitted a massive flame, the high temperature causing every green plant around the mountain valley to wilt and die. Only several towering big old trees held up thanks to their firm roots.

At this time, the Demonslayer Edge howled as it drew across the sky with the speed of a meteor crossing the horizon, dragging a long purple tail behind it. It instantly arrived by the side of Helen Tina and the Fire Phoenix before circling upwards. Purple, dancing spellfire suddenly appeared like a star and sprinkled down on the flaming body of the Fire Phoenix.

The Fire Phoenix suddenly issued a sharp cry. The super rank magic creature then opened its beak to speak in human language, its girly, sweet voice resounding, "What is this? It's so cold."

A bone-chilling cold spread as the purple spellfire descended. Sizzling sounds crackled all over the fire phoenix's body, it suddenly felt its steely bones stiffen up, the flapping of its wings becoming increasingly heavy. The phoenix lost altitude and began to slowly fall down to the depths of the mountain valley with Helen Tina on it.

"Big sister Fire Phoenix, what's wrong?" Helen Tina hastily called out in panic.

"I don't know, my body feels really uncomfortable!" The phoenix also cried out, not knowing what to do or how to stop the descent. She was also very afraid of this unknown cold invading her body.

The two female creatures fell down, about to hit the ground when the branches of the nearby towering old trees suddenly twisted tightly like an octopus' tentacles around them, not letting them move one bit.

"Damnable necromancer, how are you able to use the natural ability of the druids!?" The phoenix's crisp and clear voice constantly complained after she was tied up by the branches.

Helen Tina struggled with the fire stone embedded magic staff in her hand. She tried to chanted a fire magic incantation. At this moment, a vicious, long, and sharp knife kissed her white, slender neck at this moment.

Helen Tina lifted her head to see the odd little skeleton. The seven wing bones behind his back were fluttering gently. The lengths of his body and the long knife in his hand were completely at disproportionate odds with each other. An eyeball sparkling with a purple light was staring straight at Helen Tina, making all the hairs on her body stand on end.

"What do you want?" Helen Tina looked coldly down at Han Shuo below and asked vengefully. Someone like her who'd been through the baptism of blood and fire to reach her current position actually restored her calm bearing at a time like this.

Chapter 311: Rejuvenation

“What do you think, hehe!” Han Shuo intentionally laughed lewdly, his face sporting a lecherous look. When he looked at Helen Tina, he deliberately stared at her busty curves.

Branches had entwined tightly around Helen Tina, who was wearing a fiery red robe, alongside the phoenix. The wood elite zombie had commanded the huge branches to become as soft as snakes, but no matter how soft the branches were, there would be some sharp edges. Helen Tona’s magic robe had been sliced through in several places the branches wrapped around her, revealing her snow white skin at several places.

When Helen Tina was restrained hand and foot, she immediately had the wrong idea. The moment she saw Han Shuo reveal such a lecherous gaze, her heart was immediately plunged into chaos. She glared angrily and anxiously at Han Shuo before attempting to commit suicide.

“Helen, no!” The phoenix was able to sense Helen Tina’s thoughts, so she quickly called out to stop the woman. Unfortunately, the phoenix was wrapped so tight that it couldn’t move at all, so she was unable to reach Helen Tina.

Helen Tina, who was trying to commit suicide by biting her own tongue, suddenly felt her entire body drain of strength. She didn’t even have the strength to hurt herself. Right after that, she saw Han Shuo walk over, reaching out with his large hands and touching her white and long neck. When that happened, a wave of strange power flowed into her body from Han Shuo’s coarse hands, causing her to gradually lose strength completely.

“Hmph, I have no interest in your body for now, you don’t need to be so anxious to commit suicide!” Han Shuo snorted coldly, then slapped Helen Tina unconscious with one hand before grabbing her and flying into the sky.

Han Shuo’s voice rang out from afar when the branches restraining the phoenix slowly fell onto the ground, “Tell the Helon Dukedom to prepare a million gold coins. I'll return her only after that. Otherwise, prepare to receive her corpse."

The phoenix felt the branches around her slowly loosen. She watched Han Shuo as he flew further and further away while carrying Helen Tina. She spoke in a wry, crisp tone. "A million gold coins? If her people knew that she was captured, they would only think about how to revolt! What should I do!?"

Han Shuo was already far in the distance and didn't hear the phoenix's words. After capturing Helen Tina alive, he rested a bit at the depths of the valley in order to replenish his mental energy and magical yuan.

When Han Shuo returned to the mountain with the bald top once again after half a day, he could tell from the shattered rocks on the mountain that another intense battle had occurred after he'd left. Han Shuo naturally was unaware of the final result of the battle between the Calamity Church and the Church of Light. When he arrived at the foot of the mountain, Han Shuo used the earth elite zombie to use the strength of the earth to summon the six magic crystal cannons once again.

Han Shuo summoned several zombie warriors to push the six magic crystal cannons forward, then used two yin demons to survey the surroundings before slowly started walking in the direction of Brettel City.

If Han Shuo flew, he naturally could return to Brettel City in a matter of minutes. However, he was transporting six magic crystal cannons right now, so he had to avoid the soldiers of other dukedoms during the journey as well and couldn't fly at full speed.

On the night of the second day, Han Shuo commanded the zombie warriors to take the magical crystal cannons to a hidden forest. As he slowly advanced with the zombie warriors, Han Shuo placed the two yin demons at his side to cover his flanks.

Suddenly, Han Shuo summoned the earth elite zombie and hid the six magical crystal cannons into the earth. He then gazed at the depths of the darkness of the hidden woods with a cold expression, and said with a sinister voice, "Come out."

The strand of a silhouette slowly appeared from the depths of the darkness. It was the necromancer that Han Shuo had met the previous day. As his figure slowly materialized, the necromancer gradually revealed his originally appearance like a lich that had crawled out of a tomb. This necromancer exuded a dense aura of rotten corpses. His grey and white pupils were like a zombie and had no focus, causing people to instinctively fear him under the creepy darkness of the light.

Han Shuo was a necromancer himself and naturally wouldn't fear the newcomer's terrifying image. Han Shuo had his left arm around Helen Tina and frowned as he looked at the necromancer who'd appeared. Han Shuo remarked, "It seems like your physical body is no longer here. You're held together from souls and undead creatures now. Just how many years have you existed for?"

Others called necromancers the observers of the soul. Aside from the gods that were rumored to exist, necromancers were the people who understood the soul the most in this dimension. Powerful necromancers were able to cause their soul to live permanently through their understanding of the basic fundamentals of the soul.

Of course, necromancers with an immortal soul could not likewise make their physical bodies immortal. Normal necromancers that had survived for a long time in the form of a soul would have to use the physical bodies of various powerful undead creatures and mix it with their own body. This was how their physical bodies would be filled with the chilly aura of death and not rot.

The body of this necromancer who had appeared before Han Shuo was clearly combined with a lich, a dark creature ranked even higher than evil knights. His pale face was filled with the sickly aura of death, while the hard to conceal smell of rotten flesh proved that his body was no longer pure.

"I'm called Wolf. I'm a hundred and seventy years old this year, and am a grand magus necromancer in the Calamity Church. Hehe, since we both practice necromancy, of course you would know that it isn't a very difficult thing to prolong our life using our knowledge of souls, as long as we aren't killed,” Wolf looked at Han Shuo with a smile and calmly talked about immortality.

Han Shuo nodded and said with a smile, “Of course. You only want to talk about immortality with me after following me for so long?”

“Bryan, you’re a special talent. Your existence is a rare miracle for the Calamity Church. Previously, we thought of lots of ways to recruit you for the Calamity Church, but it seems like we were all wrong. You were always one of ours. Hehe!” Grand magus Wolf said to Han Shuo with a sinister smile.

The moment he said this, Han Shuo was shocked, and gazed towards Wolf with a gaze full of confusion. He frowned and said, “I never joined the Calamity Church, when did I become of your Calamity Church?”

“Hehe, it seems that you don’t even realize what you own,” Wolf shook his head and exclaimed, then spoke with a smile. “You will know sooner or later. My reason for coming over here is to tell you that although the Church of Light lost quite a lot of Templars, Red Archbishop Kosse was still able to bring a group of Templars and walk out of the mountain alive.”

“From now on, I think that the Church of Light is already viewing you as someone part of our Church. It will be hard to avoid the endless threats of death coming from the Church of Light since you reside so openly in Brettel City. Regardless of whether you are willing or not, we will protect you from the shadows, but I hope that you will also be more vigilant.”

Han Shuo was initially still very confused when he heard Wolf’s words, but he was suddenly struck with brilliance after thinking for a moment. He took the tri-colored bone staff out and looked meaningfully at the hundred and seventy years old Wolf, asking,, “Is this bone staff a divine artifact belonging to your Calamity Church?”

The dark smile on Wolf’s face vanished as he immediately knelt before the staff, trembling as he chanted a series of names. His unfocused eyes suddenly released a pale green light as he bowed deeply. Meanwhile, he also raised his hands high to form some odd gestures, as if he was prostrating himself before an evil god.

The tri-colored skeletal staff suddenly shot out three rays of faint yellow, blue and purple light. The three rays of light instantly landed on this ancient necromancer, causing Wolf to continuously kowtow shakingly as he writhed like a worm, bathed in the three faint rays of light.

When the light of the tri-colored skeletal staff shone down on Wolf, Han Shuo's completely drained mental energy actually miraculously recovered. On the other hand, the necromancer that was writhing on the ground had slowly begun to weaken. Han Shuo could clearly feel the bone staff soak up the mental energy of the necromancer like a sponge.

This process continued for a short while until the bone staff stopped shimmering. When the shimmer died, Han Shuo's mental energy had actually been fully replenished. However, the body of the necromancer continued to writhe underneath the black robe at Han Shuo's feet, like a huge living tumor that kept on moving.

Wolf's body shook uncontrollably as he continued the ancient chant. After draining quite a bit of his mental energy, the writhing of his body actually become more and more intense. After a final terrible howl, Wolf suddenly stood up from his prostrate position.

The formerly ancient and pale appearance of Wolf had suddenly transformed to become an elegant young man full of a soft noble aura with sword-like brows and star-like eyes. The dense aura of rotten corpses that surrounded him had completely disappeared, his skin filled with a soft light similar to white jade. Wolf's originally sinister voice also became soft and tender as he exclaimed, "The feeling of youth is so wonderful!"

As Han Shuo watched this transformation of Wolf in front of him, his surprise only grew. He looked at the rejuvenated Wolf in disbelief, then at the bone staff in his hands with bright eyes and murmured, "Miraculous, too miraculous!"

Chapter 312: Conditions

“Isn’t it unbelievable? Only the bone staff’s divinity can allow us to obtain immortality while enjoying the wonders of youth!” Grand magus Wolf, alive for a hundred and seventy years now, said proudly to Han Shuo after taking a deep breath of fresh air.

Han Shuo’s eyes sparkled with light as he looked greedily at the bonestaff in his hands. His heart was filled with surprise and joy as he muttered, “No wonder, no wonder I kept on feeling that the bone staff would have other fantastic uses, I never would have thought that it would actually have such a miraculous effect!”

Wolf seemed to be very satisfied with Han Shuo’s surprise. Wolf looked only twenty something years old now and was filled with the elegance of a noble. He started carefully trimming his knife-like nails with a sharp knife that had suddenly appeared in his right hand.

As Han Shuo was still caught in the depths of his shock, Wolf had already finished trimming his nails and was joyously examining his white hands beneath the moonlight. He exclaimed, “How many years has it been? Even since I merged with the lich, my long and beautiful hands had disappeared. What replaced it were a pair of blade-like claws. Mhmm, my wonderful hands have finally appeared once again! I no longer need to hide in endless darkness and use a black robe to cover a body that can’t be seen!”

After his body had merged with the old lich, not only had it became full of the smell of rotten corpses, it also caused his body to resemble a cross between a human and a monster. Although Wolf had gained eternal life, he no longer dared to openly walk under public gaze. Otherwise, even if the Church of Light doesn’t do anything, some adventurers who didn’t know the truth would attack him after thinking him an undead creature.

Han Shuo was just as happy as Wolf. He studied the bone staff in his hands with interest, but was unable to find the source of the mysterious power of rejuvenation. He didn’t know how to cast it either. After hesitating for a while, Han Shuo looked at Wolf with a smile, "Perhaps you can tell me the secret of rejuvenation from this staff?"

Wolf smirked with his youthful face, shaking his head at Han Shuo, "If you admit that you belong to our Calamity Church, and come back to the sacred grounds with me. I will help you obtain the true secrets of the divine bone staff."

Han Shuo snorted derisively, then placed the bone staff back into his space ring and said coldly, "I'm so young, so I don't need this sort of mysterious power for now. If you have nothing else, then don't continue to disturb my journey."

"Then alright, please take care of yourself. I need to immediately return to the sacred grounds and report about what has happened over these few days," Wolf smiled with a nod, then looked at Han Shuo a final time. He made a slight bow that was befitting standard ancient nobility etiquette and expressed his thanks, "Thank you, Bryan. You are an unbelievable person, I think that you must have received the favor of our god. We will have a lots of chance to meet in the future."

Wolf tarried no longer after saying that. He slowly walked into the darkness with a joyous mood. After a while, when Han Shuo couldn't even detect a sliver of Wolf's aura, did he summon the earth elite zombie, and had it spit out the six magic crystal cannons. Han Shuo continued to travel towards Brettel City while using the yin demons to survey his surroundings.

On midday of the second day, Han Shuo and a group of zombie warriors was walking on a shady and meandering path under the scorching sun. When he passed by a clear river, Han Shuo couldn't help but temporarily stop as he gazed at the small river that blocked his way.

There wasn't this sort of clean and clear river in the wet and dark other dimensions. Although undead creatures like the zombie warriors were not afraid of the corrosion of running water, this river didn't seem shallow. It wouldn't be an easy task for the zombie warriors to cross the river while pushing six magic crystal cannons.

Magic crystal cannons were built using many valuable magical materials, and there were a few that would react very easily with water. Although Han Shuo did not know the theory behind the magic crystal cannon operations, he did have some common sense. He couldn't be sure that whether some bad reactions would happen when these six magic crystal cannons were placed into water.

The sunlight over his head was a bit bright, and since the shade was blocking some of it, long weird shadows were drawn on the ground. Han Shuo hesitated as he gazed at the river that had appeared in front of him, then finally woke the Helen Tina who'd been sleeping for quite some while.

It had been nearly two days from the time when Han Shuo had knocked Helen Tina unconscious. In order to avoid the trouble that would arise after Helen Tina woke up, Han Shuo had just ignored her. Her stomach reacted before she was even conscious, after the restrictive magical yuan had been withdrawn from her body.

Gurgle...

Helen Tina's flat stomach suddenly let out a hungry moan. At the start, the sound was still very small, but as Helen Tina's bodily functions gradually recovered, the objection from her stomach became louder and louder.

It was at that moment that Helen Tina slowly awoke. When she raised her head and saw Han Shuo smiling terribly, Helen Tina instinctively protected her body. She calmed herself a bit and stared at Han Shuo coldly, "What else do you want to do?"

"I'm already done everything that can be done, what's the use of guarding yourself right now? I already tasted the miraculousness of your body when you were unconscious. My my, it really made me mesmerized!" Han Shuo smiled lecherously with an evil intent as he thought about Helen Tina's neverending fierceness earlier, then about the harm the Helon Dukedom had caused for the people of Brettel City.

As he expected, the moment Han Shuo's lecherous laughter sounded out, Helen Tina reacted like she'd been struck by lightning. She completely blanked out there with a pitiful look. However, her pitiful and despairing look only lasted for a moment before she focused her hateful gaze onto Han Shuo.

After being stared at by Helen Tina's cold eyes full of endless hatred, even someone with as strong of a will as Han Shuo couldn't help but feel a chill down his spine. It was as if a poisonous snake had silently neared the back of his neck, and was planning to give him the fatal strike at any moment.

After that, Helen Tina remained silent no matter what Han Shuo said. She ignored the objections of her stomach and continued to gaze at Han Shuo using such a cold, vengeful stare that made Han Shuo feel extremely uncomfortable.

Han Shuo was finally defeated after a while. He waved his head while feeling his scalp prickle with numbness, "Damn it, I have no interest in a woman like you. I need you to exchange for a ransom of million gold coins, I won't easily do anything to you. Okay now, I admit that I was just lying to you just now. Look, your six magic crystal cannons are right there. Now, tell me, are the magic crystal cannons afraid of water?"

Helen Tina's expression of endless hatred softened slightly when Han Shuo finished speaking, but she still glared at him with suspicion. She finally let out a sigh and asked, "You really did nothing to me?"

"No shit, you have hands and feet now, I'm not tying you up, don't you know how to check yourself!" Han Shuo swore, then said quietly, "However, with your slutty name out there, you probably aren't a virgin anymore. You really might not be able to find anything."

Whap!

Helen Tina casually grabbed a handful of shattered rocks and threw it on Han Shuo. She glared at Han Shuo in anger and roared, "All you shitty men are the same!"

The moment she said that, Helen Tina squeezed her legs with a bit of embarrassment. After checking with an unknown method, she actually displayed a bit of happiness. When she saw Han Shuo turn around remotely, a thought struck her and she quickly took out her magical staff to chant a high ranked fire spell “Flame Catastrophe”.

Unfortunately for Helen Tina, she didn’t find any mental energy that she could use when she chanted the incantation and waved the magical staff. She immediately looked at Han Shuo in shock, while her inner self was filled with terror. She yelled in frantic panic, “Evil filthy necromancer, what did you do to me?! Why don’t I have a hint of mental strength left?!”

Han Shuo saw all of Helen Tina’s actions behind his back through a yin demon. He turned around as if nothing happened and smiled brilliantly], “Don’t waste your strength. Don’t think about chanting a single spell before I release you. Hehe, but you don’t need to worry. As long as your phoenix sister brings a million gold coins over, I will let you go completely unharmed, and you will also be able to use your mental strength again.”

Helen Tina was shocked the moment he said that. She was surprised about Han Shuo’s all-encompassing ability. Helen Tina was a fire mage who wasn’t weak at all. According to what she knew, restraining mental strength wasn’t something that normal people could do. Even mages at the level of grand magus would need the aid of some magical scrolls or formations in order to constrain a archmage’s mental strength.

She found it unbelievable that Han Shuo could have the amazing power to constrain mental strength at such a young age.

However, after her surprise, Helen Tina very quickly thought of some of the people who had ulterior motives in her Helon Empire. She understood that once those people find out that she was captured alive, they would just take the chance to control the Helon Duchy. They absolutely would not take out a million gold coins to get her back. Even Duke Benedict from the Benson Dukedom, that seemed to be madly pursuing her, would probably only consider sending his army out to the Helon Empire and use this chance to make it his own.

“Just kill me, no one will come for me. Not a single person!” Helen Tina shook her head pitifully and replied while looking at Han Shuo with despair.

Chapter 313: Returning to the city

“Humph, don’t try that on me. I won’t let you go unless I receive a million gold coins!” Helen Tina was notorious throughout the seven grand duchies for her insidious schemes. Han Shuo’s naturally wouldn’t believe the words randomly spewing from her mouth. He looked coldly at Helen Tina and said, “The magic crystal cannons are made of many rare magic materials. I want to know if they are afraid of water.”

The first thing Helen Tina did upon waking up was look around, her eyes had taking notes of the group of zombie warriors surrounding the six magic crystal cannons at the river’s bank. She was only distracted because Han Shuo had postured he’d tainted her body. It angered her now that Han Shuo mentioned the magic crystal cannons again. She looked at him and shouted in fury, “Don’t expect to get any useful information from my mouth, you damnable bandit!”

“Bandit? Haha, your Helon Duchy is the true bandit. You’ve pillaged the Brettel City day and night for years. From a big city with hundreds of thousand people, it’s now a deserted city with dozens of thousand people. The people in the city have long since lost their hopes and dreams in life. It’s all thanks to you people. Yet you still have the face to say that I’m the bandit, haha!” Han Shuo recalled the miserable sight of people who lacked the clothes to cover their bodies and the food to fill their stomachs on his way to the Brettel City. His heart ached with grievances.

Helen Tina laughed heartily upon hearing his words. She coldly said, “Such is war. When your Lancelot Empire invaded us seven grand duchies in the past, didn’t you also burn and pillage us? If we hadn’t allied to resist and drive you back, I’m afraid that all of our people would have become slaves already.”

Helen Tina’s words also made sense. Han Shuo pondered for a bit and figured that he shouldn’t sink in further in this matter. Seeing Helen Tina unwilling to say anymore, he said in a cold voice, “It’s not like I can’t do anything just because you don’t say anything, just that I will waste a little more time. To a necromancer, costly manpower is never a problem.”

Han Shuo no longer cared about Helen Tina after speaking. He started to chant the incantation to summon the wood elite zombie.

Han Shuo issued a command when the wood elite zombie appeared. The latter uprooted the big trees one by one like he was the lord of this forest. The Demonslayer Edge then cut them into sections, with the wood elite zombie tying them together by soft branches. Han Shuo and the wood elite zombie had built six huge rafts after half an hour.

During this process, Helen Tina watched Han Shuo and the wood elite zombie closely while sneaking bread from her space ring. Perhaps she'd been hungry for too long as she swallowed the bread very quickly.

Upon completion, the zombie warriors pushed the rafts towards the river. Helen Tina finally couldn't help but lamented, "No wonder the Church of Light wants to kill you. You can actually summon such miraculous undead creatures!"

Helen Tina didn't know that the wood elite zombie had in fact been refined from the most ordinary of zombie warrior. As the zombie warrior pushed the six rafts onto the river and placed the six magic crystal cannons on the rafts, Han Shuo breathed a soft sigh of relief. He sent the wood elite zombie and the zombie warriors return to the strange dimension.

Four zombie warriors paddled one raft. When the zombie warriors mobilized their force, the six loaded rafts began to slowly move to the other side of the banks.

Han Shuo once again went over behind Helen Tina at this moment and gently tapped the back of her neck. He said softly and lowly, "You should rest."

Han Shuo easily lifted Helen Tina up after knocking her unconscious. He then slowly flew over onto a raft and commanded the zombie warriors to cross the river.

Han Shuo avoided some scattered bandit groups along the way, as well as some mercenary bands who'd made a living in the near vicinity. After a trip without any surprise, he finally arrived at Brettel City.

In the spring night, the temperature was just right. The bright moonlight shone gently upon the earth. This could have been a truly warm, peaceful night if it weren't for the zombie warriors pushing the magic crystal cannons, exuding the sense of death.

When they approached the Brettel City's gates, the soldiers on the city wall were startled by the moonlight reflecting from the magic crystal cannons. Seeing six huge cannons pointing towards the city's fortress with some stiff moving figures behind, the soldiers immediately paled in horror.

"Who is it?" The soldiers manning the cannons at the city's gates shouted to the distance before Han Shuo drew near.

Compared to previously, the various potholes and pockmarks that had dotted Brettel City had all been perfectly patched up, the gates changed to enormous ones of dark steel. Having experienced the last crusade against the bandits, the initially cowardly soldiers now possessed somewhat strong and calm bearings.

The armor of the soldiers reflected the moon's radiance in a strange manner on the city walls. The soldiers were stirring to action, hurriedly applying the arrows and raising their bows to aim at the zombie warriors. Warning calls echoed and more soldiers gathered on the fortress, all of them aiming their bows below.

After his last experience when he'd entered the city without meeting any defenses, Han Shuo understood that the Brettel City was no longer the same in the face of these soldiers' vigilance. The soldiers couldn't see Han Shuo's face clearly because of the long distance, but he could clearly see their figures above the fortress.

"Open the gates for me, you bastards! You don't recognize even me!" Han Shuo's voice suddenly rang out and spread throughout the city.

The city lord, it's the city lord! The city lord has returned!" The soldiers on the fortress couldn't see Han Shuo clearly but could still recognize his voice. Everyone cheered with pleasant surprise, opening the city's gates slowly.

After the gates opened wide, the zombie warriors finally transported the heavy magic crystal cannons into the Brettel City. Even though it was evening, Faulke immediately rushed to meet Han Shuo upon receiving the news.

“Ahh, this is, this is...” Faulke bowed to pay respects to Han Shuo upon arriving. When he swept a glance to see the zombie warriors pushing the six magic crystal cannons, Faulke couldn’t help exclaim with surprise and excitement.

“These are magic crystal cannons, also called the powerful Lightning God. The cheapest one costs at least a hundred thousand gold coins for this type of magic crystal cannons. They can release terrifying offensive power through magic crystal ores. These magic crystal cannons are simply great, invincible weapons in the battlefield. Your Lordship, where did you get these from?” Faulke was indeed worthy of being a veteran who’d been through the baptism of years in the battlefield. He actually recognized the six magic crystal cannons and even knew of their name, “Lightning God”.

Han Shuo only knew that they were magic crystal cannons. As for what type and what size, he was clueless. Hearing Faulke so knowledgeable about magic crystal cannons, Han Shuo responded delightedly, “Is that so? Then you must know how to use these magic crystal cannons?”

“Of course. This type of magic crystal cannon is extremely easy to use as long as we have enough magic crystal ores. Each shot of this “Lightning God” is equivalent to an extremely powerful attack of an archmage if there is enough power. These magic crystal cannons can maintain continuous discharges without running out if given enough power.” Faulke said with a confident smile, as he walked towards a magic crystal cannon. It was unclear what he did when the cannon suddenly shook a little and a small box cracked out from its bottom.

“Mm, the magic crystal ores available here are enough for five, six shots. Heh heh, a bandit group has been wandering around the vicinity of Brettel City recently. It seems they intended to make a move again. I was worried about how to deal with them. Now with the six magic crystal cannons here, I’ll make them regret their foolish thoughts.” Faulke had a cold smile on his face as he looked at the six magic crystal cannons and gritted his teeth. It looked like he intended to use these six magic crystal cannons to carry out a grand deed.

“Alright then, these six magic crystal cannons are under your care.” Han Shuo instantly issued this order before walking straight towards the city lord’s mansion.

Faulke and the soldiers had noticed the stunning, unconscious Helen Tina under Han Shuo’s arm from the start. Of course, they wouldn’t ask about the city lord’s private affairs. When they saw Han Shuo walked to the direction of the city lord’s mansion, these people’s thieving eyes ran over Helen Tina’s charming body several times over while chuckling wickedly in their hearts.

Therefore, after Han Shui had returned with Helen Tina back to the Brettel City that night, some rumors and gossip spread throughout the city. The people didn’t know of Helen Tina’s identity, but her beauty had made a deep impression on the soldiers. They were either admiring or jealous of Han Shuo, and so various rumors and evil speculations appeared.

Upon bringing Helen Tina to the city lord’s mansion, Han Shuo impatiently went straight to the secret chamber. He had sensed a distant call just a short while after he’d returned to the Brettel City. This call was weak and fragile as if it was a thousand mountains and seas away. However, Han Shuo’s consciousness at the separate demon realm could naturally perceive it.

It seemed that the fire elite zombie had finally emerged!

Chapter 314: A strong emergence

The call from the depths of his soul grew five times more urgent once Han Shuo entered the cemetery of death. It seemed that the fire elite zombie had also felt his presence because of the shortened distance.

Without delaying for a second, Han Shuo utilized the Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens to fly straight to the depths of the Dark Forest. Since he was familiar with the way, it didn't take long to reach the place of extreme fire.

Han Shuo's currently strength had far exceeded the time he'd last been here. He immediately felt the enormous presence of the Lord of the Flames once he arrived at the area. The fire elite zombie was currently within its blazing kingdom. Han Shuo would face a headache of a problem if he wanted to enter the place of extreme fire and sneakily lift the magic matrix binding the fire elite zombie.

The elite zombies of five elements could only be formed through the interconnecting matrices through a secret method, using the matrices to gather the elements of heavens and earth in an entire region. However, when an elite zombie took shape, it could only officially emerge when the matrix shackling it was lifted. Otherwise, the fire elite zombie wouldn't have had to call out to Han Shuo so urgently.

The rocks in this mountain valley had been scarred a brown-red after the great battle last time. There were even some bubbling hot springs in the vast, warm mountain valley now.

Han Shuo stood blankly in the mountain valley, frowning as he thought of a way to enter the place of extreme fire and lift the matrix binding the fire elite zombie. It was simply impossible to advance safely and soundly with the Lord of the Flames in the area.

Therefore, Han Shuo just remained there frowning and thinking, but couldn't think of a good way. The call from the fire elite zombie was becoming increasingly stronger since he'd felt Han Shuo's presence. The zombie was anxiously conveying his urgent desire to break free of his restraints.

Han Shuo's heart was on fire with anxiety as well. He finally decided to take a risk and ventured into the place of extreme fire after some hesitation. Han Shuo slowly dove down into one of the numerous hot springs. The warm water enveloped his body, dispelling all of the exhaustion from his trip. However, the pressure from the Lord of the Flames wasn't something so easily dissolved.

Han Shuo tapped around with the Demonslayer Edge at the bottom of the spring, trying to find a crack to enter the place of extreme fire. It took some time before Han Shuo finally pried open two huge rocks and found a way in.

A green-black veil shrouded his body as soon as he entered the crack. He slowly made his way down the crack into the place of extreme fire. The deeper he went, the higher the temperature spiked. Firelight danced around him as brilliant as beautiful flame flowers.

Han Shuo had wrapped himself in a protective shield and could clearly observe all of the events around him. The two cliffs on either side were burning red as he passed by them. Some flexible creatures that looked like fire snakes hid themselves in the cracks of the cliff, surrounded by several scorching demons lying dormant. It seemed that they didn't notice Han Shuo's existence and let him proceed all the way into the underground.

A scorching demon general within another crack discovered him when he was almost at his destination. The scorching demon general rose and waved his arm once, sending a flame shooting straight at Han Shuo.

Han Shuo raised his hand slightly and sent out a cloud of purple light. The flame shot by the scorching demon general had yet to draw close when it disappeared into faint smoke in mid-air. As the cold breath from the light touched the flame, the two turned into a bright array of flame stars that slowly scattered down onto the place of extreme fire.

The inside of the place of extreme fire was an enormous area of magma. The flame stars which had fallen caused the calmly bubbling lava to boil, as if it'd felt the presence of the scorching demon general. The air bubbles floated up and became as big as a cup, the already blazing temperature getting even hotter.

A huge skull slowly emerged from the middle of the melting hot lava. The more than ten meter long body of the Lord of the Flames was next to arrive, spraying the flames in the place of extreme fire in all directions. He was instantly furious upon sensing the presence of a human.

“Haowuu!!”

A terrifying howl pierced the sky, the entire place of extreme fire seemingly trembling in terror. The burning red lava rocks on two sides shuddered as they broke loose. Amidst the falling rocks, the enormous head of the Lord of the Flames scanned its surroundings.

The ear-splitting sounds of the crumbling cliffs rang out, accompanied by the billowing flames that instantly spread throughout the place of extreme fire. Within the flames, Han Shuo’s azure shield became a particularly conspicuous existence. His misery couldn’t be described by words in the face of the anger from this super rank magic creature – the Lord of the Flames. Han Shuo continuously increased his output of magical yuan to firmly protect the area where he was standing.

Han Shuo’s power had indeed soared after reaching the separate demon realm. Otherwise, his shield would have long since shattered from the violent attacks of the flames from all sides.

Han Shuo’s face flushed blood red, his shield crackling and popping. However, he could still resist the surging temperature, albeit with a few drops of sweat slowly dripping from his forehead.

The Lord of the Flames’ body emerged from the middle of the melting hot magma with his terrifying roar, surrounded by raging, churning flames. Some of the flames were more than ten meters in length, like soaring fire dragons. The power of Helen Tina’s “Dance of the Fire Snakes” couldn’t even compare to this awe-inspiring spectacle.

Seeing that his omnidirectional attack wasn’t working, the Lord of the Flames screamed his fury to the sky. Three fire dragons of over ten meters in length drew a twisted path towards Han Shuo. They greedily absorbed the sky high flames along their way, leaving the place of extreme fire almost barren by the time they'd reached Han Shuo.

The length of the three fire dragons had remained unchanged, but their width had quintupled. They'd turned into three enormous dragons, their bodies emitting raging, fiery flames destructive enough to burn the entire mountain valley to ashes.

Han Shuo could keep his cool in the face of the omnidirectional attack from the Lord of the Flames. But when the attacks were concentrated on him, the pressure of the flames seemed to increase ten times over. Han Shuo was constantly communicating with the fire elite zombie deep in the magma while trying to craft a defense with all of his energy.

The Demonslayer Edge had swallowed a great deal of souls. Now that it was filled with a massive reservoir of magical yuan, the weapon instantly releasing a terrifyingly evil air upon being activated. The purple flame of the Mystical Glacial Spellfire had ultimately transformed into Purple Spellfire of Extreme Cold. Purple flowers of spellfire blossomed from the Demonslayer Edge. They floated elegantly around Han Shuo and the blade, as if the two were delicate flower stamens.

Extreme Cold Purple Flame was the culmination of the Mystical Glacial Spellfire. Catalyzed from an enormous amount of magical yuan, it was so terrifyingly cold that it could freeze everything in the world. When the flakes of purple spellfire drifted gracefully out of the blade, the surroundings actually started to snow. Each petal of the snow flowers blended with the purple flames, forming a large block of solid purple ice that tightly enveloped Han Shuo and the Demonslayer Edge.

Han Shuo seemed to have turned into a translucent crystal block of ice. The flames in the place of extreme fire now shone with a brilliant purple-red luster. The beautiful solid block of ice became increasingly larger as Han Shuo poured more magical yuan into it, until it finally covered a width of more than ten meters. Han Shuo continued to circulate magical yuan from within, making even more cold smoke rise from the ice.

The three massive fire dragons had yet to reach the solid block of ice when thick mist blew up from the high temperature coming in contact with the icy cold. The entire place of extreme fire was shrouded quickly in mist. The three fire dragons assaulted the square, ten meters wide solid ice block in accordance with the roar from the Lord of the Flames.

Crack... Rumble...

As the terrifying sounds of battle echoed, radiant purple and red lights constantly flashing in the smoke, a testament to the ferocity of the fire dragons' assault. Large chunks of ice fell into the place of extreme fire, sending gigantic spouts of lava splashing upwards. The Lord of the Flames growled as it imposed its will over the place of extreme fire, causing more burning lava to spew out towards the center of the smoke.

Han Shuo pushed his magical yuan to the extreme, but was still unable to stop the flames' encroachment. Under the multi-layered assault, the ten meters wide solid ice block melted rapidly, and was reduced to a quarter of its size after just a moment.

Flames covered the sky as fiery magma surged and boiled. Han Shuo's magical yuan wasn't endless, and he was slowly exhausted.

Han Shuo urgently contacted the fire elite zombie while starting to chant a long magic incantation. Suddenly, a thick layer of black clouds appeared on the ice block that was three meters long. Amidst the thick clouds, glossy white bones entangled with each other to form a huge bone cage, enclosing the solid ice block.

"Pth! Break!"

Han Shuo abruptly shouted out two words that echoed in the place of extreme fire. The bone cage suddenly transformed from translucent to pitch black, emitting dark smoke.

Suddenly, the walls around the matrix Han Shuo had arranged several months ago burst open with a series of cracks. At this moment, the fire element that'd been pouring towards the center of the place of extreme fire suddenly halted.

As the walls crumbled into pieces, a gorgeous lotus slowly rose up from the bubbling magma!

Chapter 315: Imprint

The fire lotus rotated as it sprouted, accompanied by bright red, scathing bubbles. When the rhizomes emerged from the magma. The petals quickly unfolded, revealing the fire elite zombie at the center.

The fire elite zombie had a big head and ruddy skin that was the color of blood. Everything below its waist was still wrapped in the flower. The armor on its body seemed to have been formed from deep red flowers, covering its entire body except for its face.

The exposed body of the fire elite zombie twisted quickly within the flower. The petals on its waist slowly peeled backwards. The pretty, dazzling, red petals of the fire lotus contracted, condensing into an armor on the lower body and legs of the fire elite zombie.

The enormous amount of fire element force in the surroundings gathered agitatedly towards the fire elite zombie during this process after the crazy explosion around the formation. The fire element force condensed into fire stars that filled the sky and flowed towards the fire elite zombie like a flaming Milky Way.

The blazing temperature emitted from the fire elite zombie's body and slowly formed a lotus pattern in the spot between its eyebrows. The pattern was blurred at first, gradually becoming clearer and clearer. Ultimately, it shrank into a small fire lotus that was a hundred times smaller than the one that had nurtured it and engraved itself on the fire elite zombie's glabella.

The huge fire lotus, that enveloped the fire elite zombie, slowly shrank and disappeared. When the lotus imprint on his glabella appeared, the fire lotus beneath its feet had also vanished without a trace.

The body of the fire elite zombie was thoroughly red. When its deep red eyes turned to look at Han Shuo's body, its big head shook slightly. It opened his mouth wide to take in a deep breath.

The flames were still surging around Han Shuo's body and frantically eroding his shield. As the fire elite zombie inhaled deeply, beams of red light flew into his mouth, entering his belly through his throat.

The surging flames vanished, but the ice block wrapped around Han Shuo was still standing strong. When he saw the fire elite zombie emerge, Han Shuo stopped circulating his magical yuan and slowly walked towards the crack.

The Lord of the Flames, who'd been constantly howling, immediately stopped his ruckus upon seeing the fire elite zombie appear from within the lotus. It focused all of his attention on the latter.

When the lotus imprint formed between its eyebrows, the fire elite zombie directed its gaze at the Lord of the Flames, as if exchanging some conversation with him. The furious Lord of the Flames gradually calmed down.

As Han Shuo slowly floated up towards the crack, he felt a deep maternal love permeating throughout the extreme place of fire. The Lord of the Flames had completely relaxed. Its huge palm lifted the fire elite zombie up as they used a mysterious method to communicate.

Since the fire elite zombie had emerged, Han Shuo knew that the former would find him through the connection established by his blood essence due to the constraints of the demonic magic. Not to mention that the little skeleton had been the one to bring the fire elite zombie over from the other dimension. Even though the fire elite zombie possessed consciousness and high intelligence after being refined by the demonic method, the soul brand in the depths of his soul hadn't changed much. Han Shuo wasn't worried that he wouldn't be able to recognize his master.

Han Shuo departed easily as the Lord of the Flames had stopped trying to kill him. Shooting back up to the surface, he didn't encounter any obstacles before finally arriving at the center of the mountain valley.

When he returned to the mountain valley, Han Shuo immediately ordered the fire elite zombie to collect various strange ores from the extreme place of fire. Then, he stayed in the mountain valley to wait for the fire elite zombie's task to be completed.

The fire elite zombie and the Lord of the Flames had spent several months together in the extreme place of fire for months. During this time, the latter had considered the fire elite zombie to be his own child. Since both of them had absorbed the fire element force in the surroundings, they naturally had the same presence that made them feel even more intimate towards each other. Therefore, Han Shuo understood that these two, originally different beings, had certainly developed deep feelings towards each other.

When the fire elite zombie left the fire lotus, it meant that he'd no longer continue to stay in the extreme place of fire. Since he had to leave, the two different beings would obviously have to part ways, so Han Shuo didn't disturb them.

As Han Shuo was comfortably lying around and enjoying a hot spring in the mountain valley, a string of raging flames appeared from an unknown position and instantly drowned Han Shuo in heat. The hot spring boiled and bubbled. Han Shuo immediately jumped out, hot mist emitting from his body.

"Who dares?!" Han Shuo leapt into the air and let out a loud shout. He released purple spellfire from his two hands and extinguished all the flames on his body, then coldly observed his surroundings.

The two yin demons drifted around the mountain valley after being released, paying attention to every change. Han Shuo also sent out his consciousness to survey the area. He harbored a strong killing intent towards the ambushers.

Seven or eight red magic bullets shot towards Han Shuo from the fiery red cliffs around the outskirts of the mountain valley. He wasn't an easy target now that his guard was up. A purple light quickly and cleanly knocked the magic bullets out of the air.

As soon as the magic bullets were flung back, fireballs, fire walls, and fire snakes continuously appeared from all directions and hurtled towards Han Shuo. The two yin demons couldn't find any traces of the attackers after searching for a short time period. Only when Han Shuo destroyed two fire snakes did his consciousness felt a faint magic fluctuation. The two yin demons immediately drew close to see a fiery globe high on a rock wall.

That fiery globe was a magic shield cast by fire mages. A blurry shadow inside was waving a magic staff to fire out attack after attack. The incantations were blocked out since the mage was within the cover of magic, so Han Shuo couldn't hear any sounds.

"Humph! No need to hide, fire grand magus Marceau!" Han Shuo snorted derisively and quickly drifted over, a series of popping and banging sounds ringing on his way there. He deflected all of the fire magic attacks fired at him.

The original still fire shield suddenly shot into the sky, the blurry shadow slowly becoming clearer amidst the random sparks. It was indeed fire grand magus Marceau of the Brut Merchant Alliance who'd appeared last time at the battle in the mountain valley. Han Shuo and her had been allies. However, they had parted ways on not so pleasant terms after the unhappy predicament in the place of extreme fire.

It was unexpected that Marceau was still probing the place of extreme fire and had run into Han Shuo by coincidence. Marceau had been inwardly suspicious of Han Shuo about the sudden disappearance of the fire lotus. Now that she saw Han Shuo appear here again, she was certain in her heart that he'd tricked her last time.

Moreover, she had already harbored resentment towards Han Shuo in her heart, but couldn't make a move as her mental strength had been exhausted. Meeting him here this time, in addition to the temptation of the fire attribute treasure, had given her the courage to take a risk and attack Han Shuo.

Seeing that she'd been identified and that Han Shuo could calmly deal with her various fire magic attacks, Marceau immediately realized that Han Shuo's strength had made terrifying progress. Therefore, she needed to leave as quickly as possible.

"Heh heh. Running so soon? Where do you think you're going?" Han Shuo coldly mocked as he rapidly shot towards Marceau. The Demonlayer Edge had appeared in his hand at an unknown time.

The scenery of the mountain valley quickly fell behind in their speed. Marceau still had the spare power to release fire walls to obstruct Han Shuo as she ran. However, the latter just simply ignored the blockades and rampaged forward. Han Shuo's body became charred in large patches as he did so, the burned skin scattering with the wind, and new skin appeared underneath, still as clean and glossy as before.

Even though his eyebrows had been burned to a crisp, they regrew after just a moment. Han Shuo had gone from looking extremely bedraggled to restoring his carefree and dashing manner during the pursuit.

Not far behind Han Shuo, a fiery red shadow bolted madly like a raging flame. Dried plants immediately erupted into flames in every place it passed through in the mountain valley. All things that could burn went up in intense flames.

Fire grand magus Marceau used the levitation skill to flee in a hurry, her heart filled with horror. She hadn't expected Han Shuo's strength to be so terrifying that her deliberate ambush couldn't even injure him. Han Shuo's flight speed was too fast too, as the distance between them became increasingly smaller. Marceau was greatly anxious upon seeing that Han Shuo would catch up with her very soon.

"Ah! If it isn't grand magus Marceau?" A surprised cry suddenly rang out from the depths of the forest as Marceau was flying by. A beautifully dressed group of adventurers looked up at Marceau inside the fire globe.

The escaping Marceau looked down to see the team of adventurers and heaved a sigh of relief. She landed beside them and hastily said to them, "There's a killer from an enemy empire chasing me. Everyone get ready for a fight."

Marceau and this team of adventurers must have been acquaintances. They immediately looked furious upon hearing her words, each readying their weapons and arrows. They aimed directly at Han Shuo in the air, only waiting for him to draw nearer to instantly make a move.

Chapter 316: Teamwork

Aside from fire grand magus Marceau, the group included one thief, one priest, two mages and three swordsmen. The strength of these adventurers weren't weak. Their average age was around forty and they were all experienced fighters.

Marceau seemed to be the leader among these adventurers. Therefore, they immediately readied their weapons to attack Han Shuo as soon as her words sounded.

The two mages below were a lightning adept mage and a water archmage. They were the first to make a move. The opening salvo was several sizzling lightning and thunder balls, their electric sparks bursting out to smash into Han Shuo. The water archmage waved his magic staff around to release some sharp, cold shiny icicles that hurtled fiercely at Han Shuo from below.

The priest chanted a magic restoration spell, after which a silver halo enveloped Marceau's body. Her mental strength had previously been overspent, but the effect of the silver halo restored it from depletion. Shimmering light circles sparkled on her old, wrinkled face.

One of the two senior swordsmen instantly stepped over to protect Marceau. Two huge iron shields were erected at the front. The shifty eyed thief slipped through the thick forest like a racoon, setting up traps and readying them.

Han Shuo was still advancing straight towards Marceau. He had already taken note of this group's appearances and various strength thanks to the two yin demons. As he flew, he took out the bone staff, spreading out a thick mass of black fog around himself. Han Shuo vanished in the midst of the thick smoke.

The lightning balls and icicles all collided into the thick black fog. However, as Han Shuo's body had suddenly disappeared, these attacks could no longer find their target. They turned to crash into each other instead, creating huge explosions.

When the lightning balls and icicles dissipated into nothingness, the thick black fog also gradually spread out as well. The team of adventurers led by Marceau had also finished their preparations and were staring at the center of the fog. The three swordsmen had temporarily switched to being three archers as they raised their bows, waiting only for Han Shuo to show himself.

However, there was no trace of Han Shuo in the clear blue sky when the thick black fog dissipated. He had vanished without a sound or a shadow. The adventurers who were ready to attack him head-on could only look at the sky in puzzlement.

Rumble...

Dirt mounds suddenly emerged from the ground without a warning. The adventurers had been paying attention to the sky were caught off guards by the movements underneath. Grand magus Marceau and the water archmage were the first to fly up.

The three swordsmen reacted swiftly. They grabbed the iron shields to block the earth from attacking the lightning mage and the priest. The attacks threw the swordsmen up into the air, but most of the impact was lessened by the shields. The swordsmen were meant to be meat shields in battles, so they weren't injured much.

The thief had extraordinary sensitivities. Leaping with the tips of his feet like a monkey swinging on the trees, he used prearranged silver silk threads to swing to a towering tree and avoided all of the attacks from the mounds.

He landed on a big tree before using a dagger to cut off some rope. A tree trunk whittle sharp suddenly flew out straight towards Han Shuo, who was hiding behind a tree.

Upon seeing the thief's action, the rest of the adventurers immediately aimed their attacks at that tree. In a blink of an eye, dozens of attacks rained down in all directions. Han Shuo, who'd originally thought that they wouldn't be able to find him, could only awkwardly jump out from behind the tree.

As he defended against the various attacks, an ice arrow nailed his thigh, a lightning ball exploded and hit him with its flying sparks. Han Shuo's whole body became numb, his hair that'd just grown out all stood erectly upright.

"Kill him, he's been hit!" The thief shouted loudly.

The priest chanted a long incantation, and three dizzying beams of radiance shone upon the three swordsmen. Now that the spells of "Strengthen Armor," "God's Blessing," and "Brute Strength" had been cast, the light churned in gorgeous fashions in their chest as they ferociously rushed Han Shuo.

What a horrifying combination of adventurers! Han Shuo's heart jumped with fright for a moment before he rapidly retreated into the woods. His speed was very fast as he quickly left the three reinforced swordsmen in the dust and waited for an opportunity to make a move.

This adventurer team obviously had practical battle experience. Otherwise, it couldn't have been possible for them to coordinate so tacitly. They had great trust for each other, and when the priest, the mages, the swordsmen and the thief united, they created enormous offensive power. Han Shuo had initially thought he could easily deal with them, but his head now ached with the conundrum of dealing with them.

The power of the three swordsmen had been increased a level thanks to the priest's magic, but Han Shuo was confident he could neatly kill them in a few minutes even if he faced all three of them at the same time. However, the mages who were staring at him as if looking at prey certainly wouldn't let him succeed. The priest was hard at work casting magic at the three swordsmen, constantly supplying them with energy. This wasn't something Han Shuo could hold up against.

Han Shuo pondered as he remained concealed before finally realizing that this team didn't have a light mage. He immediately took this opportunity to summon a great deal of dark creatures in secret, while casting the Canopy of Necromancy at the same time. When the wood elite zombie appeared, he hid at a big tree the thief was standing on, and utilized his control over plants to order the tree to wrap around the thief as per Han Shuo's command. The soft tree branches turned into deadly weapons, instantly drilling through the thief's body.

"Cadi!"

The adventurer team was forming a firm, defensive formation. When the tree branches penetrated the thief, the priest let out a big, shrill scream in agony. The thirty-odd years old woman seemed to be the wife of the thief. His death dealt her a great blow.

"There's a druid here, be careful everyone!" Marceau hastily shouted out a reminder.

The three swordsmen on the ground immediately waved their broadswords to clear away all of the plants around them. As for the priest, she still looked around in caution despite the fury in her heart. Not finding her target, she stepped into Marceau's shield. She started cursing crazily with grief, releasing spell after spell to probe where the enemy was.

"So, so many people!" Probing with her magic, the priest sensed the sudden presence of many people in all directions. This awoke her from the blindness of her fury, she mumbled as she looked around.

"How many? How many people?" Marceau asked urgently with great anxiety.

"A lot, too many!" The priest answered. She glanced at the thief's body and pleaded to Marceau, "Get his body first, hurry!"

"Take Cadi's body, leave this place! Damn it, now that I think about it, he's also a necromancer!" Marceau shouted out loudly. The three swordsmen risked their lives to rush towards the thief's body.

It was too late. Accompanied by rustling sounds from the thick forest, a great horde of undead creatures slowly appeared. There were amongst them an evil knight on a fire-spitting skeletal warhorse with his two meter long bone lance raised high, his ice cold, emotionless eyes nailing the three swordsmen.

Ten enormous hate warriors with rotting bodies were behind the hate knights, each holding either a big mace or a long spiked pole. Under the deathly aura's manipulation, they slowly flocked towards the adventurer team standing in the middle of the scene.

The hearts of Marceau's group became increasingly heavier upon the appearance of the undead creatures. When a swordsman brought back the thief's body, Marceau immediately ordered, "I'll open up a path. You guys leave this place now."

Six fire snakes flew up, their raging flames bringing about a burning high temperature. This was something extremely horrifying that also upset the undead creatures. The high temperature would burn their cold bodies uncontrollably, with the fiery red flames sweeping away the thick smell of death. Their souls would then fall into an endless abyss.

Therefore, the undead creatures instinctively retreated when the five fire snakes flew out to hinder the two hate warriors, not wanting to suffer any agony from the flames. The two hate warriors only drew near after Han Shuo gave them orders again. As for the evil knight of a higher rank, he moved firmly towards the flames to attack the adventurers.

Undead creatures were born afraid of fire. However, the higher their level, the less their fear of flames. The hate warriors could just manage to hold on, while the evil knight wasn't afraid at all. He charged forward in accordance to Han Shuo's commands.

A gout of flame came crashing in from not too far away. The few low rank creatures such as skeletal and zombie warriors were immediately charred to cinders. Even the hate warriors constantly retreated backward, not daring to be near to those flames.

The big headed fire elite zombie was within the light of the flames. He'd yet to be able to exercise control over the flames on his body, so he'd actually accidentally burned his own kind. Still, he heeded Han Shuo's order like it was an imperial edict and opened his mouth wide to swallow the fire snakes released by Marceau, not letting her take advantage of the flames to flee from the undead creatures.

Chapter 317: Complete Annihilation

“What-What is it?!” Fire grand magus Marceau exclaimed when she was shocked by the sudden appearance of the fire elite zombie.

After the big-headed fire elite zombie swallowed the flames, he grinned at Marceau, then opened his mouth and spat them all back out. The fire snakes were now no longer under Marceau’s control, and actually churned back over to attack the adventurers.

The low level undead creatures in the surroundings all instinctively retreated in the face of the intense heat. Jumping flames in the shape of lotus flower petals seem to burn continuously on the fire elite zombie’s frame. His deep red armor shot out red light everywhere. When skeletal warriors were hit by even a little spark from it, they were immediately destroyed and turned into dust.

The fire snakes that the fire elite zombie spat out was even more powerful. Not only did it force the adventurers to continuously duck and weave, even the undead creatures needed to retreat. Out of them, the evil knights and hatred knights also sensed a threat, causing them to quickly leave retreat from the incineration of the flames.

“Idiot, you can’t even tell our people apart from enemies!” Han Shuo scolded quietly, then gave another order to the earth elite zombie and wood elite zombie.

The earth trembled and rumbled beneath three swordsmen, with sharp earthen spikes shooting out again. The large tree branches danced crazily in the distance, while the branches became life-reaping arrows that shot towards the team of adventurers.

The fire elite zombie charged towards the three swordsmen like an enormous fire brand, creating waves of intense flames in front of them. The swordsmen’s bodies quickly started burning when even a spark stuck to their bodies.

The evil knight held a large bone spike in its hand and flung it towards the sky. The priest and mages were busy with dealing with the attacks from the branches and thus were unable to avoid the path of the evil knight's huge bone spike. Han Shuo also released the Demonslayer Edge as arrows filled the sky.

Pitiful howls suddenly sounded through the sky, then instantly stopped. The lives of all of the adventurers, except Marceau's, had been ended in a few breaths.

Marceau glared at Han Shuo with hatred as she panted. When she noticed that all of her companions had died, she took out a magic scroll and started to chant a long spell.

Intense magical pulses traveled out from the scroll. The space in front of Marceau started to distort until a long and sharp blade formed in the sky. The terrifying spatial movement gathered up a dense amount of magical element, causing rays of blinding light to shoot everywhere.

"Not good, this is the 'Spatial Edge!'" A thought flashed across Han Shuo's mind, causing him to suddenly remember the terrifying and forbidden spatial spell "Spatial Edge". He was astounded, and immediately chanted out spells in order to send the undead creatures back to the other dimension as he tried to escape the area of effect of the spell.

"Spatial Edge" was a forbidden spell within the area of space. Legend said that it could cut through anything, no matter how durable. Han Shuo never would have thought that Marceau would own a valuable scroll of such a forbidden spell. The moment he felt a long giant blade twist out of space, he immediately retreated at all costs.

A flash of white light around twenty meters long chopped down from the sky. All hard boulders that it passed through, including the black armor of the evil knights that were comparable to metal ores, were cut neatly into two like a piece of tofu. Even towering trees over ten meters tall were snapped after the white light blazed past. A bottomless abyss also opened up in the ground.

Almost a hundred undead creatures were sliced and diced by the light, and completely shattered whenever the light passed over them.

Marceau still held the magic scroll in her hands and was continuing to chant the long incantation. She once again released three rays of white light that were more than ten meters long using the extremely valuable forbidden scroll. More undead creatures were destroyed wherever the white light passed through.

Out of them, one of the flashes of white light instantly sliced towards Han Shuo when it locked onto him from the air. This spatial edge was as fast as lightning, and was on top of Han Shuo in an instant. Marceau was determined to eliminate Han Shuo, so she focused all her attention onto that spatial edge. Due to this, this spatial edge was not only fast, but also accurate, as if it wasn't going to give Han Shuo a chance to escape.

Using the speed of the Art of the Demonic Ninth Heaven, Han Shuo retreated towards the dense forest behind. During so, he continuously changed directions in an attempt to avoid the spatial edge. However, this spatial edge was actually following him like a shadow beneath Marceau's commands, and chased Han Shuo no matter how he moved. It seemed like she wouldn't stop if she didn't slice Han Shuo apart.

Han Shuo swore silently in his heart, then headed into a swamp. He flew back out as a muddy man with a waver of his body, venturing even further into the depths.

Pfft!

The spatial edge sliced downwards, slicing the muddy Han Shuo in half, then entered deeper into the ground without any decrease in power. It once again create an enormous, bottomless trench.

"Mhmm, he finally died!" Marceau let out a sigh as she panted heavily, then looked at the magic scroll that had expended all of its magic. She murmured with heartbreak, "Ai, he truly is someone hard to deal with, making me waste such a valuable magic scroll!"

Just as Marceau moved her attention to the magic scroll in her hands, a figure covered in mud in the deep trench of sludge and water, moved.

A cold light suddenly flashed past and pierced through Marceau's body. The huge pain caused Marceau to be a bit confused, but she then saw a figure within the mud move in front of her, revealing Han Shuo as the mud was shook off.

“I wasted another yin demon. This spatial edge is so powerful. It even ripped apart the invisible and formless yin demon!” Han Shuo also said heartbrokenly, then flew towards Marceau. He looted her and the adventurers of all equipment and rings, placing them in his own space ring.

When he arrived in front of Marceau, Han Shuo put away her staff and took away her space ring without hesitation. The fact that Marceau had a forbidden magic scroll meant that she must have been a filthy rich person. A fire grand magus could easily gain prestige and wealth, alongside a noble rank in any country. Marceau was naturally not an exception in the Brut Merchant Alliance.

The entire ground was filled with shattered bones and flesh. A large majority of the undead creatures that Han Shuo summoned had been sliced apart by the spatial edges. On the other hand, the fire, earth, and wood elite zombie had been the first sent to the other dimension, protecting them all timing from the spatial edge's attacks.

The undead creatures knew no fear. Those that were still alive still stood there, awaiting Han Shuo's next order. Han Shuo gazed at the scene beneath him as he held Marceau's space ring. He then took out his skeletal staff to send the undead creatures back to the other dimension.

After doing all that, Han Shuo raised his head and gazed around. He discovered that thanks to the forbidden spell spatial edge, there were enormous trenches in a radius of one thousand and five hundred meters. Towering trees and boulders had all been hacked to pieces. It really was a complete mess.

It was unknown whether it was due to the lack of Marceau's mental power or the lack of stored magic within the magic scroll, that spatial edge spell had only released thirty percent of its true power. If the complete power had been released, there would have been at least more than twenty flashes of light, and the number might even increase according to the caster's mental power strength.

If it was casted by a powerful sacred space magus, pretty much all of the living creatures and plants in a small city would be torn to shreds by the spell, as it had a terrifyingly wide area of effect.

As Han Shuo held the space ring that Marceau left behind after her death, he wondered about the method of opening it as he flew casually towards the Cemetery of Death.

During this process, Han Shuo used his remaining yin demon to find that a team of roughly five thousand was stationed outside the Dark Forest. Han Shuo surveyed this team of five thousand and realized out that they were actually a proper troop of knights that had come from the Brut Merchant Alliance. Some of the tents were blocked by magical boundaries as they faintly radiated a powerful aura.

Han Shuo frowned slightly. After surveying them for a while, he thought of Marceau and those adventurers that died in his hand, and suddenly felt that they were with these people.

Marceau was someone of the Brut Merchant Alliance. The three swordsman within the adventures had the same sword and shield pattern on their left shoulder as these knights who were resting. It meant that they must have come from this troop.

The Brut Merchant Alliance was a distance from the Dark Forest. After passing through the Dark Forest, they would arrive directly at Zajoski City on the southwest of the Lancelot Empire. The knights had good equipment, fine warhorses, and some even more powerful experts. It was an unknown why they appeared in the Dark Forest.

After looking around for a bit, Han Shuo was silently shocked by this troop. He noticed that their power was even a bit stronger than how they'd first appeared. The magical pulses from the central tent were intense, with some strange sounds ringing out faintly from it. After Han Shuo released his consciousness, he kept on feeling that there was something amiss inside. After thinking about it, he decided to have a look at what these people planned to do.

Chapter 318: Saving the beauty

Cough...

A shrill, miserable scream rang out from the tent. This extremely tragic scream, which wasn't completely suppressed by the boundary on the tent, came to an abrupt end. Han Shuo caught a faint reverberation with his great sensitivities.

The only remaining yin demon slowly drifted over to that direction in a probe. However, Han Shuo had already felt magic fluctuation ripple out in all directions before the yin demon even came close. With his extraordinary knowledge, he immediately knew that this was a soul inspection magic. Han Shui hurriedly withdrew the yin demon.

After the soul inspection magic was released, a dazzling rift suddenly cracked open in the sky. It patrolled the surrounding area like a bright eye.

Han Shuo immediately held his breath and entered the realm in which nothing affected him, his body hidden in the lush foliage of a big tree.

The fluctuation of the soul inspection magic drifted out gently like water ripples. When it passed through Han Shuo, he felt a bit of surprise. However, he easily avoided the inspection with a tight lock down on his consciousness.

"There's someone there!" A soft cry suddenly rang out from the tent.

A figure shot out from the tent like a streak of lightning. A team of knights followed closely behind that silhouette, quickly chasing towards the east.

Rustling sounds travelled quickly in from that area, Han Shuo clearly heard that a person was swiftly running away from where the knights stationed. It seemed that there were also others who were paying attention to this troop of the Brut Merchant Alliance. However, they must've not concealed themselves very well since their tracks were discovered.

Han Shuo remained where he was without moving. His eyes swept again through the tents in the distance, stopping at the few in the center of the group. The withdrawn yin demon was once again released. It flew towards the direction of where the sound had travelled.

What had the knights of the Brut Merchant Alliance come to the Dark Forest for? Han Shuo was full of doubts, his bright eyes looking at the tent in the center as he silently pondered.

Rumble...

A huge explosion echoed from the direction in which that figure had rushed toward. Afterwards, a strange cooing laughter resounded sinisterly, "Heh heh, I didn't expect two beautiful women. Don't think of getting away."

"Cecilia, you go first. I'll stop him!" A familiar female voice rang out from the distance.

Han Shuo had been calmly watching the tent, and suddenly paled upon hearing this voice. His heart had been as still as clear water, yet was instantly disrupted. He shot out like a sharp arrow, flying across the sky, drawing a silver arc through the air.

It was Emily's voice. It had been someone who Han Shuo didn't know, he naturally wouldn't have poked his nose in their business. However, since it was Emily in that area, he definitely wouldn't let anything happen to her.

"Want to run? Keke, you can't escape!" The nasty cooing of an owl rang out again, accompanied by the sounds of spells and weapons colliding.

Han Shuo's heart was on fire with anxiety as he utilized the Art of the Demonic Ninth Heavens to its extreme. He reached that area in the span of three breaths, much faster than the yin demon.

Broken, uprooted trees filled the area. Emily and Cecilia wore pure green magic robes, their delicate faces painted with green plant sap. Their entire bodies seemed to blend into one with the Dark Forest as they leaned on a big tree trunk and ceaselessly casted magic spells.

Several members of the Dark Mantle with their strength, agility, and endurance enhanced by Cecilia's magic were fiercely throwing themselves in front of the attacks from the Brut knights.

There was a thin middle-aged man with short, red hair and a cruel smile hanging on his face. He stood behind the knights with his hands behind his back, watching Emily and Cecilia struggle while cackling nonstop.

“Who is it?!” The thin, middle-aged man suddenly discovered Han Shuo dashing over. Surprise flashing through his eyes, he raised his left hand to form a complicated magic formation. An enormous force then surged out from his palm and quickly assaulted Han Shuo.

Bang!

It was as if being hit by an iron mountain. Han Shuo immediately felt dizzy. He glared furiously at the middle-aged man, unable to move forward.

“Eh!” The middle-aged man exclaimed, his eyes switched from Emily and Cecilia to Han Shuo. The lines in the center of his palm twisted up like a snake, faintly revealing a trace of blood.

Whistle...

Han Shuo finally mobilized the Demonslayer Edge, its murderous intent billowing to the skies and filling the area. The middle-aged man suddenly roared to the heavens. His originally one meter seventy-five centimeters body began to grow with unimaginable changes.

The man’s smooth glossy skin was instantly covered in a thick, hairy coat. His slender, long arms became very strong and sturdy. His body expanded to ten meters before transforming into a huge black bear. The bear growled and slammed down his paw, ferociously smashing down Han Shuo.

Han Shuo had intended to fly up but suddenly staggered. He’d discovered that the gravity in the surrounding had increased tenfold. Han Shuo couldn’t react in time in his surprise, and the feeling was extremely unsettling.

“Bryan!” Emily had been about to cast a dark magic when she finally discovered Han Shuo’s appearance. She didn’t had the time to feel happy when the palm of the black bear slapped down like a small mountain. Emily screamed in panic.

As his movement had been affected, Han Shuo's mind churned rapidly in the face of this crisis. Seeing the huge paw slam down, he immediately infused magical yuan into the Demonslayer Edge. Blood red light exploded and shot to the skies from the weapon that had absorbed an enormous amount of killing intent from resentful souls. Clouds of blood drifted out continuously, transforming into thin, blood-red threads that wrapped around the Demonslayer Edge.

A glaring red light abruptly beamed out from the tip of the Demonslayer Edge. The endless, vicious, resentful intent shot straight at the bear's paw.

The bear's gray pupils wavered slightly, the thick fur on his arm standing erect like needles. This paw emitted light waves that ripped forth like the surface of a water disturbed by a thrown rock.

Rumble rumble...

Loud rumbling sounds echoed from the collision of the Demonslayer Edge and the black bear's palm. Blood red light radiated in all directions, accompanied by the agonized cry of the black bear.

A force that could topple the mountains and overturn the seas surged violently into Han Shuo's arm. The force was purely brute power without any skill, even Han Shuo's rock solid body couldn't withstand it. The vessels of his right hand holding the Demonslayer Edge burst open.

"The hell! What kind of person is this!" Han Shuo could help but curse. After his strength had spiked up a great margin after entering the separate demon realm, he'd thought that there wouldn't be many people that could exceed him in strength. He had unexpectedly been injured by Kosse last time, and now he was even wounded after one strike.

"Who are you!?" After one blow, the big black bear shrank back into the thin, middle-aged man. However, his palm was now dripping with blood. He looked at Han Shuo, terrified disbelief on his face.

Not paying attention to his opponent, Han Shuo rushed over to Emily as soon as the terrifying gravity was lifted, shouting, "Hurry and get away from here! There are more experts coming."

Cecilia, one of the three Dark Mantle heavyweights, had observed the fight from beginning to end. A strange look filled her eyes as she looked at Han Shuo. Upon hearing his shout, she suddenly turned to the front and softly yelled, "Retreat!"

As her words fell, Cecilia took out a magic scroll. Her long, slender arm held the scroll and shook it fiercely, a space door appeared amidst a dazzling white light in front of her. The Dark Mantle members struggling with the knights seemed to know beforehand that Cecilia would do that, as they immediately disengaged from their opponents and entered the space door.

Not waiting for Han Shuo to react, Emily grabbed his hand and dragged him through the space door without any reservations. Cecilia then also leapt into it.

It was as if they had taken a transportation matrix. A white light flashed as everyone appeared in the middle of a river. Heads poked up from the water's surface, the entire group resembling drowned rats, gulping in fresh air in big mouthfuls.

"Bryan, shouldn't you be at Brettel City? How are you here?" Emily had let go of Han Shuo's hand and asked after sticking her head out of the river's surface.

"Eh, it's very easy for me to come here. You know." Han Shuo winked several times at Emily, his voice quiet.

Emily was stumped for a bit before recalling the Cemetery of Death within the Dark Forest. With the transportation matrix there, Han Shuo could easily run back and forth no matter where he was.

"Damn it! Why did we end up here? Hurry up, they are chasing us!" Cecilia's voice rang out in the distance. Her body was dripping wet as she shouted suddenly.

Emily sent a signal to Han Shuo with a glance upon Cecilia's shout. The two immediately followed the Dark Mantle members in leaving the river, moving along a path leading to the Dark Forest.

Chapter 319: The art of shapeshifting

“Who was that just now?” Han Shuo didn’t forget to ask Emily about the identity of the middle-aged man as they hastily fled.

Emily arrowed out of the small river, her dripping wet body enveloped in a deep black mist. She revealed only her flawless face as she quickly caught up to the group behind Cecilia. Cecilia was walking quickly in the front, Emily and Han Shuo were side by side in the back, and low rank Dark Mantle members brought up the rear.

Emily turned to glance at Han Shuo and explained, “That was Kassel, a great druid who betrayed the Druidic Order and a terrifying powerhouse in his own right. Even though he’s betrayed the Druidic Order and can no longer utilize the force of nature, he can still skillfully use the shapeshifting art of the great druids. That transformation back then was him turning into an earth bear that can utilize the art of gravity. Taking him head on like that, your strength is becoming more and more impressive.”

Upon hearing that his counterpart was a great druid, Han Shuo suddenly remembered great druid Caspian. He subconsciously compared them and felt that Caspian was much weaker in strength.

“Caspian is also a great druid. Why isn’t he as powerful as Kassel?” Han Shuo frowned and inquired, inwardly doubtful.

Emily casually arranged her messy hair. She glanced at Cecilia in the front before continuing to explain, “The great druids can train in the various magical arts of the Druidic Order. The majority of them master the method to manipulate plants. According to the legends, this is the ability that the Goddess of Nature has bestowed upon them.”

“However, the art of shapeshifting isn’t as easily mastered. Only a few great druids with extraordinary talent can successfully grasp it. It looks like Caspian hasn’t fully mastered it yet. Otherwise, he couldn’t have been so easily captured last time in Valen City.”

Han Shuo had to muse on Emily’s words for a moment before he could understand them. He thought it to be quite an irony that Caspian, who'd always served the Goddess of Nature, couldn't learn the art of shapeshifting, while the traitor of the Druidic Order could learn it.

"Right, what mission brought you guys to the Dark Forest this time?" Han Shuo leisurely followed Emily along the way into the lush forest. He continued to ask her about their purpose.

Cecilia was leading the way at the front. She suddenly tossed her long, beautiful hair and sent pearls of crystal clear water rolling down. She turned her head to direct her bright eyes at Emily and let out a faint snort, "We still could have left safely even without your help. This mission is under my charge, and even big sis Emily has to listen to me. Your name isn't listed in this mission, so you don't need to know."

Emily had been about to answer, and couldn't help but feel apologetic towards Han Shuo for Cecilia's words. She said to him with a wry smile, "Since Mistress Cecilia has spoken, I'd better not say anything."

"Big sis Emily!" Cecilia stared at Emily with rebuke in her eyes, saying softly, "We have to be clear about work and personal matters."

"I know, I know!" Emily cried out before smiling at Han Shuo, "Alright, you shouldn't ask too much. We're fine. If you have matters to handle, go quickly. No need to worry about us."

Cecilia had obviously created the space door through the magic scroll. However, since she possessed the scroll, it meant that even without Han Shuo's appearance, Cecilia could still have brought Emily and the group to safety with the scroll. Therefore, it didn't quite count as Han Shuo having saved Cecilia.

Even though Han Shuo was still worried about Emily, it was obvious that Cecilia didn't want him to be involved, so he didn't say anymore after hearing her words.

Han Shuo was planning to say a few words to Emily when he suddenly realized that he'd arrived at the forest trolls' territory while following Cecilia's group. At first sight, a dozen blue-green troll warriors hurled their axes straight at Cecilia without a word.

“Hateful forest trolls, why are their weapons getting more and more sophisticated lately?!” An arc drew across Cecilia’s chest and triggered a magic formation, spilling liquid into the air before coalescing into a magnificent, blue ice crystal shield.

The axes thrown by the troll warriors created clanking sounds upon hitting the ice shield. They only left some faint marks on the surface and simply couldn’t penetrate the defense of the ice shield.

“This is the territory of the forest trolls. Let’s first hide in here. Once the Redbud Knights enter this area, these greedy, idiotic forest trolls will definitely risk their lives to attack them. Even though the Redbud Knights are one of the top ten knights of the continent, their power will be greatly restricted in this forest. The forest trolls’ tribe isn’t small either, so they will definitely cause some trouble for those knights. Even if the Redbud Knights do destroy all of the trolls, it can be considered eliminating a harmful element of the Dark Forest.”

Cecilia coldly narrated as she watched the forest trolls run away after throwing their weapons. She then turned to the masked Dark Mantle members and ordered, “Destroy the forest troll scouts in front. Once they’re provoked, they’ll definitely attack with all they have when the Redbud Knights arrive. Not only can we take this opportunity to escape, we might even come out on top.”

Several Dark Mantle members had already rushed out as soon as Cecilia’s words sounded. These folks had at least the strength of senior swordsmen. A few mere forest troll scouts absolutely had no way to resist them.

At this moment, Han Shuo suddenly blocked their way with a darkened face and commanded in a low tone, “Find another way. You guys cannot touch these forest trolls.”

The forest troll race could be considered a force in Han Shuo’s hand. They treated the little skeleton as their god Datara. This force was completely under Han Shuo’s control and heeded his orders without hesitation. He’d be using them a great deal from now on, so he certainly couldn't let Cecilia borrow the Redbud Knights' power to exterminate the tribe.

Any of the top ten knights in the continent would be veterans who'd been through numerous battles. Since the Redbud Knights were on this list, they would only need a hundred of their fellows to slaughter over five hundred forest trolls.

Han Shuo had precisely heard of their reputation, which was why he was absolutely against Cecilia doing so. Otherwise, the only thing awaited the forest trolls would be genocide. This was something completely unacceptable to Han Shuo.

"They're only some greedy forest trolls. Why are you protecting them? You're crazy aren't you!?" Cecilia wrinkled her delicate brows, looking unhappy as she coldly rebuked Han Shuo.

"Hurry up and take a detour. I can feel the Redbud Knights close behind. These forest trolls are of use to me, and no one can touch them. Otherwise, don't blame me for offending you as your subordinate!" Han Shuo said frostily, looking at Cecilia in a manner that brooked no room for discussion.

"You are obstructing our mission. As a member of the Dark Mantle, do you realize that I have the right to punish you?!" Cecilia was also angered by Han Shuo. She glared at him, her voice rising in anger.

"Detour! Otherwise, don't blame me for not being polite!" Han Shuo wasn't scared at all, instead stressing his words.

"Little sis Cecilia, how about taking a detour? Consider giving me some face!" Seeing the two locked in an argument, Emily hastily tugged on Cecilia's clothes and asked in a pleading tone.

Cecilia had just witnessed Han Shuo fight fearlessly against the transformed big earth bear, so she knew full well that his power was absolutely unfathomable. The knights chasing after them could arrive any moment now. It was pointless to be locked in an impasse with Han Shuo now.

Cecilia was caught between a rock and a hard place. Upon hearing Emily's pleas, she swept a cold glance at Han Shuo, "I will demand an explanation from that old fox Candide about this. We go, let's take a detour!"

After her words finished, Cecilia turned around and led the way. Emily threw a glance at Han Shuo before hurriedly chasing after the angry Cecilia. The Dark Mantle members participating in Cecilia's mission also glared at Han Shuo in an ill manner as they left one by one.

"Datara, Datara!" After Cecilia's group had left, the forest trolls suddenly surrounded Han Shuo when they saw him.

Han Shuo was taken aback until he heard the sounds of footsteps fast approaching. He hurriedly led the forest trolls away from this place.

The traitor of the Druidic Order, great druid Kassel, burst onto the scene with roughly sixty Redbud Knights shortly after Han Shuo had left. Even though he'd betrayed the Druidic Order, his experience in forests yet remained.

Looking at the two paths of footprints in front while sniffing the scents in the air, Kassel pointed at the direction where Cecilia's group had left, "Chase after them for me, they have indeed run in this direction. Humph! No one can evade the pursuit of me, Kassel, in the forest."

Chapter 320: Treasure trove

Han Shuo didn't stop to chat with the forest trolls after dragging them far away, nor did he enter the forest troll village to meet the old priest who could understand the common tongue. He backtracked on his original path and snuck into the camp of the Redbud Knights.

With the space door scroll, Cecilia's group should have no trouble escaping, even though their power couldn't measure up to Kassel's group. However, Han Shuo felt that something wasn't quite right for the Redbud Knights of the Brut Merchant Alliance to appear in the Dark Forest. Since Emily couldn't tell him the truth because of Cecilia, Han Shuo decided to check things out for himself.

Using his only remaining yin demon to scout ahead, Han Shuo sent out his consciousness at the same to sense any presence within a certain range. Noon's sunlight pierced through layers of foliage, stubbornly shining down on the ground of the Dark Forest. At a glance, these rays of sunlight looked like a bunch of sharp arrows.

Han Shuo's sensitivities were razor sharp, moving between the trees as swiftly as a veteran hunter. His figure dashed swiftly through and over several growths and rocks without making a sound. Relying on his pervertedly strong sensitivity and the yin demon's vision, Han Shuo arrived at the staging area of the Redbud Knights after a few minutes.

The knights were scattered in the area as they rested lazily. They squinted beneath the sunlight, chatting about stuff that shouldn't be heard by children. From time to time, perverted laughs rang out from within the clusters of knights. Sitting apart from them, there were also several knights who were persevering in training their fighting aura alone.

The magic enchantment on the tent in the center had yet to be lifted. One to two miserable screams faintly echoed out, seemingly the sounds of criminals being tortured.

Han Shuo hid patiently within the foliage of a big old tree to observe the Redbud Knights. He spread his powerful consciousness to enclose a small area, preventing anyone from getting close. A yin demon soundlessly drifted around to spy and constantly eavesdropped on the knights' conversations.

The majority of the knights talked about boring, trivial matters. However, there were some stern faced knights who were in the middle of a serious meeting. The yin demon cautiously eavesdropped on their meeting. Picking up on their brief descriptions Han Shuo gradually gleaned the purpose of their trip to the Dark Forest this time.

A faint wave of magical fluctuation emitted from the tents among the knights, followed by three soul searching magic spells. Han Shuo had been on guard, so he hurriedly withdrew the yin demon back into his body before using magical cultivation to hide his presence.

When the fluctuation of the three soul searching spells passed through, a huge eye appeared above Han Shuo's head. It was the Sky's Eye again. The eye in the sky looked down below for a moment before gradually dispersing.

Wuuu...

The battle signal sound of a buffalo horn trumpet suddenly resounded. A shout echoed from the tent in the middle, "Assemble. Prepare to march!"

The lazily resting soldiers instantly sprang up, organizing their armor and weapons at the horn's call. They walked energetically towards the fierce warhorses grazing and drinking at the river's bank. A surge of domineering air suddenly spread out.

They were indeed worthy of belonging to one of the top ten knight troops in the continent. It didn't show when they rested, but when they organized themselves, they naturally emitted this fierce atmosphere. Han Shuo was secretly surprised as he watched the Redbud Knights gather from his hiding place within the lush foliage. He began to worry for the races in the underground world of the Dark Forest.

The Redbud Knights had traveled the lengthy distance of a thousand miles to the Dark Forest this time to deal with the underground world beneath the Dark Forest. The underground world produced various types of exotic ores, as well as crystals and beautiful jade used to refine magic weapons and protective gear. However, the path connecting the underground world and the world above was extremely secretive. People above ground were generally hard pressed to find it.

As a great druid of the Druidic Order in the Dark Forest, Kassel had naturally known of the entrance to the underground world beneath the Dark Forest. One time when he'd ventured into the underground world to explore, he'd stumbled upon the sight of the lizardmen mining a small magic crystal mine. Since magic crystal ores were extremely valuable, Kassel had been taken over by greed and violated the order's doctrine, wanting to monopolize the magic crystal mine. However, an unknown, powerful super rank creature had appeared to expel him when he was killing the lizardmen in the underground world.

Furiously returning to the Druidic Order, Kassel had tried to use the Order's power to destroy the lizardmen along with that powerful super rank creature. It was a pity that the elder druid, who worshipped the Goddess of Nature, had rejected Kassel's proposal out of his love for peace. He'd even angrily reprimanded Kassel. Kassel, blinded by greed, injured the elder druid out of rage, which put him on the wanted list by the Druidic Order. He had to flee the Dark Forest, and now, for reasons unknown, he'd somehow partnered up with the Brut Merchant Alliance.

The wealth of the underground world as well as the small magic crystal mine had successfully tempted Celt, the commander of the Redbud Knights of the Brut Merchant Alliance. He'd led the elite of the Redbud Knights to cross a long distance, spending a month to travel into the Dark Forest with the intention of coming back with an enormous haul from the underground world.

Celt's hair was graying at the temples, his weathered face engraved with the traces of time. His figure was tall, and his eyes exuded a calm, peaceful atmosphere. If Han Shuo hadn't known about the purpose of his trip here, he wouldn't have thought of Celt as a greedy bandit from his appearance.

After emerging from the tent, Celt took out a clean white handkerchief and carefully wiped off the blood on his hands. When he was cleaning himself, he looked at the assembled Redbud Knights and casually asked the young mage beside him, “How come Teacher Marceau hasn’t returned yet?”

“My apologies, I don’t know why teacher hasn’t come back even when it’s already so late.” The young mage answered hurriedly and was obviously quite polite when facing Celt.

Promptly throwing away the bloodstained handkerchief, Celt looked at his two clean slender hands with satisfaction. He said in a calm voice, “Forget it. Teacher Marceau knows what we need to do this time anyway. She can fly, so she can catch up with us once she finishes her matter. Let us leave first.”

Celt then suddenly let out a loud, clear whistle, so shrill that it seemed to tear through the sky. A huge shadow flew over shortly afterwards. As it drew near, Han Shuo saw that it was a green dragon over twenty meters long.

This green dragon was much bigger than Gilbert. The strength of every dragon race wasn’t necessarily measured based on volume. However, for the green dragon race, it was indeed that the bigger the volume, the higher their power. This twenty meter green dragon must be a super rank magic creature at its second evolution. Otherwise, it couldn’t have achieved such a length.

Celt leapt up seven or eight meters into the air and landed nimbly on the green dragon. His one meter eighty centimeters tall figure only occupied a small space on the green dragon’s back, but the faint presence that emanated from his body couldn’t be covered up by the dragon’s huge body.

Celt sat firmly on the back of the green dragon and let out another long, high whistle. The green dragon flew rapidly through the sky like a huge dark cloud blotting a large patch of the air. Their direction seemed to be where Kassel was chasing Cecilia’s group.

The Redbud Knights on the ground below packed up their tents and slowly headed towards another direction under the leadership of several majors. Their chosen direction seemed to be towards the entrance to the underground world that Han Shuo had once entered.

With such a powerful lineup, no one dared provoke them even in the extremely chaotic Dark Forest. The magic creatures in this region were all intelligent, they certainly wouldn't come to seek their own death. Therefore, the Redbud Knights advanced leisurely and unhurriedly to their target destinations without encountering any obstructions.

Some tragic screams echoed from the tent after they left. Marceau's students had suddenly cast fire magic. Waiting until these people completely left, Han Shuo flew over to examine the burned bodies. They seemed to be all lizardmen. It seemed the knights were looking for some information from these lizardmen.

Celt had likely gone off in pursuit of Kassel. With Celt's strength, Han Shuo would be very worried if he joined the group chasing after Emily. Cecilia would be hard pressed to escape even with the space door. After some hesitation, Han Shuo decided to follow Celt and see what would happen.

At this moment however, a huge, dazzling golden figure shot in Celt's direction like a strip of golden lightning. Han Shuo even heard a familiar voice from its furious roaring.

"It's the golden dragon who was trapped in the forbidden land last time. Oh! He seems to be attacking Celt. This is getting more and more interesting!" Exclaiming in surprise, Han Shuo snoopied through the yin demon to observe the situation on that side. He decided to get closer and took flight, keeping himself hidden.

"Damnable bandit, you dared take advantage and rob my treasure while I wasn't present. Quickly hand it back over!" The golden dragon roared at Celt on the green dragon, its huge body thrashing in the sky. Lightning sparks crackled towards the green dragon.

Chapter 321: Dragonlance and Dragon Net

The golden dragon, that lived deep within the Dark Forest, was a super rank magical creature that had evolved three times. Han Shuo had clearly understood his strength from the previous time. The golden dragons were hailed the race with the strongest physical bodies out of the dragons. The aura of a rank three golden dragon was steady, and as it moved its enormous body, rays of lightning struck the green dragon and Celt.

The commander of the Redbud Knights, Celt, showed a hint of surprise on the back of the green dragon when he saw the golden dragon rush over fiercely.

As bolts of lightning struck, the green dragon beneath him raised its head and breathed out, redirecting the scorching lightning to one side, not actually taking any sort of actual damage.

The golden dragons were hailed the dragon race with the strongest physical bodies. Perhaps it was due to the strength of their physical bodies that resulted in magic not being an area that they specialized in. Even the thunder attacks shot out by this thrice evolved golden dragon was merely equivalent to the attack of a thunder adept mage.

It wasn't hard for the green dragon, also a super rank magical creature, to defend against this level of attack. A mere exhale was able to stop the bouncing thunder attack. The green dragon had a large physique and was a twice evolved super rank magical creature. In contrast to the golden dragon, the green dragon specialized more in magic. Although it didn't have a dragon body that was as hard as iron like the golden dragon, its magic was able to supplement some of its physical disadvantages.

Celt slowly took out a thin, silver dragon lance from the back of the green dragon. He smiled and pointed at the golden dragon from afar, "Honored golden dragon, I have already taken your treasures. If you want to take them back, then you'll have to see if you have the ability to."

"Pitiful human, you have offended me! I will make you regret having those greedy thoughts!" The golden dragon was closing in on them and roared loudly, directly pressing down its huge body on Celt.

The golden dragon clearly recognized that with the existence of the green dragon, he couldn't think about killing Celt with only magic attacks. Thus, he decided to use the golden dragons' powerful body to teach them a painful lesson.

"Hehe, foolish golden dragon, you are just asking to suffer!" Celt raised his dragonlance with a laugh as silver fighting aura condensed at the tip of the gun. Then, Celt charged towards the golden dragon using the momentum of the green dragon.

Halfway through, Celt suddenly put down the dragonlance and flung something towards the sky. All of a sudden, a black dragon net of sharp blades suddenly came down over the golden dragon.

The golden dragon who'd charged over had his attention completely focused on the dragonlance in Celt's hands. He didn't think that Celt would suddenly throw out a dragon net. Due to the lack of appropriate defense, he was unable to avoid it and was immediately firmly entangled. Sharp little blades hung all over the black dragon net and quick tightened the moment the golden dragon was caught. The more the golden dragon moved, the tighter the black dragon net became. Meanwhile, little blades stabbed merrily into the muscles of the golden dragon in between the golden dragon's scales with ringing sounds.

Suddenly, a powerful magic pulse passed through the black dragon net and rays of silver light exploded from the black strings. This proved to be of marvelous effect against the dragon shapeshifting in order to escape. The moment the golden dragon was hit by the magic pulses, he immediately felt that his entire body grow numb, causing him to be unable to use his natural talents.

"I already told you not to make things hard on yourself. This dragon net was refined for me by three alchemists. Don't think about escaping from it, even if you are a golden dragon!" Celt slowly approached the golden dragon with a peaceful smile. He aimed the dragonlance in his hand at the large eye of the golden dragon within the black net.

Although the golden dragon had a powerful physical body, their eyes were as fragile as any others'. The golden dragon roared tragically, "Despicable human, fight me fair and square if you have guts to!"

"Hehe, us humans rely on our brain," Celt said with a smile. He sized up the golden dragon with interest and teased in a manner as if he was talking to himself. "Hmm, the entire body of a rank three golden dragon is a treasure. How should I deal with you? Should I kill you and take your dragon tendons, bones, eyes, and core? Or should I make you one of my magical pets? Hehe. I already have a green dragon, this is really troubling!"

"Despicable human, if you cannot defeat me justly, then even if you kill me, the proud golden dragon will not bow in defeat!" Even at this moment, the golden dragon still spoke loudly without any fear of death.

Celt had been smiling but his expression immediately turned cold upon hearing this. He waved the dragonlance in his hand in front of the dragon's eye, an eye as large as a fist, and said, "I don't have too much patience, and don't want trouble. I'll give you a final chance, form a slave contract with me immediately. Otherwise, die."

"I will not form a contract with a human as despicable and sinister as you. Just give up!" The golden dragon struggled fiercely in the giant black net, causing the small blades hanging off the threads to cut deeply into his flesh through the gaps between his scales, resulting in a small drizzle of blood.

Han Shuo had already seen that the golden dragon was very powerful last time in the territory of the Lord of the Flames. However, the black dragon net was something created by three alchemists specifically to use against dragons. Something that had been brought out by the commander of one of the ten largest knight troops on the continent was naturally not going to be something ordinary. Even though the golden dragon struggled with his life on the line, it wasn't enough to improve his situation and merely worsened the wounds on his body.

"Alright, then die!" Celt yelled softly, then thrust the dragonlance into the gap between the golden dragon's scales.

Since the golden dragon continuously moved its body, the black dragon net tightened around him even more, worsening his injuries. Even so, Celt was unable to easily pierce his eyes. That's why, he chose to attack the dragon's body instead, and stabbed into the golden dragon's body over and over again.

No matter how strong the golden dragon's physical body was, it was unable to endure attacks like this without the ability to fight back. A mist of blood seeped out from his body as howls of pain rang out.

"Despicable and cowardly human, you will definitely pay the price!" The golden dragon continued to curse even as he howled in pain.

"I can't see how you're going to make me pay the price. Pitiful lizard, your long life has finally reached its end today!" Celt chuckled softly without stopping the dragonlance in his hand. After pulling it out of the dragon's body with spray of blood, he stabbed down once more. As he watched the bloodied golden dragon, his eyes were filled with an excitement that he found difficult to hide. He subconsciously licked his lips, as if he was enjoying this sort of moment very much.

Suddenly, a light pierced through the sky and slipped into the black dragon net agilely like a fish. The huge dragon net was slowly ripped to shreds with whooshing sounds by the movement of the light.

"Who is it, actually daring to stick your nose in my business!" Celt frowned. The excitement disappeared from his body like the receding tide as he snorted coldly while glancing around with sparkling eyes.

"ROAR..."

Under the help of the black ray of light, the black dragon net was ripped apart, no longer able to entrap the golden dragon. With a ghastly roar that was furious to the extreme, the golden dragon lumbered towards the green dragon, while bits of ripped dragon netting hung off of him. The golden dragon used his sharp claws and fangs to rip and bite at the green dragon as well as Celt, without any fear of death.

Due to needing use the dragonlance to pierce the golden dragon, Celt was actually very close to the golden dragon. The freed golden dragon immediately entangled with the green dragon. His immensely wounded body actually invoked the golden dragon's savageness. The golden dragon howled desolately during its maniacal attacks.

Celt was the enemy that the golden dragon nursed a bone deep hatred against. Unfortunately, Celt was also extremely agile. He kept on changing positions on the green dragon's large body so the golden dragon's swipes with his claws were unable to find their mark at all. He merely caused the green dragon to continuously scream out with pain.

Han Shuo had been hiding on the top of an ancient tree. He gazed at the intense battle of dragons above with a cold gaze. Surging dragon auras caused unending, rumbling explosions to sound in the surrounding ancient trees and hill. A ray of black light circled around the golden dragon before swiftly entering Han Shuo's body.

The yin demon slowly drifted out again and focused on another ambusher – the giant silver ape that had appeared at the territory of the Ruler of the Flames.

The giant silver ape had appeared when the golden dragon had been trapped by the dragon net. The four meter tall giant silver ape was incomparable in size to the enormous dragons in the sky. As it laid in the bushes, it hid its presence most excellently. At this moment, the giant silver ape was drooling with the liquid of greed as it fixed its blood red eyes on the battle in the skies, as if it was preparing to join in at any moment.

Super rank magical creatures were able to consume each other's bodies in order to digest the other's magical core to strengthen the devourer directly or even evolve. Super rank magical creatures of the same level normally wouldn't fight to the death, but if they had the chance to kill each other, these savage magical creatures definitely would not hesitate.

To the giant silver ape, the two dragons in an intense battle in the sky represented a potential chance for it to quickly evolve, particularly since both of the dragons that were fighting to the death were a bit crazed. He knew that sooner or later, one of them would be unable to stand the assault from the other anymore and fall from the sky. That was when his chance would arrive.

Chapter 322: The green dragon's crystal core

“ROAR...”

The green dragon madly twisted its body, a long mournful cry resounding from its mouth. The golden dragon had desperately wrapped his body around the green dragon. Well known for their bodily strength, the latter was obviously not an opponent for a golden dragon. Not to mention that the golden dragon had already evolved three times. He wasn't afraid of death at all as his ferocity burst out upon being wounded.

The golden dragon and green dragon were locked in close quarter combat. The former took advantage of his steely body, hook-like claws, and enormous maw full of stark white teeth to leave grievous wounds on the green dragon that reached the bone. The scales on the green dragon's body were effective against human arrows, but could not withstand the force of the madly clawing and tearing of the golden dragon that was a rank above it.

Due to the distance between the two super rank creatures, the green dragon was unable to find an opening to retreat and utilize its powerful magic attacks. Because the two dragons were tearing each other so intensely, Celt couldn't even stand firmly on the green dragon's back, let alone release any attacks.

“Despicable human! I've warned you already. You will pay the price!” The golden dragon let out a roar of insanity. With a swing of his shining golden tail, the miserable green dragon was thrown back.

The green dragon was already woozy and flew straight downwards onto a distant hill. The huge body looked like a green ribbon, rapidly falling amidst its howling.

The giant silver ape remained in his hiding place, its blood red pupils stared fixedly at the descending green dragon. Waiting until the green dragon had almost hit the ground, the fur on its body suddenly stood erect as it made a beeline towards the hill like a bolt of silver lightning.

Rumble...

The green dragon's massive body smashed into the hill, flattening the ten meter tall hill and making a rumbling sound that shook the ground.

The golden dragon was dripping with blood and created a rain of red liquid. He stretched out a bit in the skies, bringing his iron hook-like claws down upon the caterwauling green dragon below.

The injured green dragon spat out several green puffs of dragon's breath with a strange sour stench. The golden dragon hadn't completely dived down and suddenly staggered like a drunkard, changing directions upon coming into contact with the dragon's breath. He now landed on a small hill ten meters away from the green dragon.

A silver bolt of lightning abruptly shot out from the shrubbery. The giant silver ape used his sharp, knife-like claws to assault the green dragon in the golden dragon's stead. His two claws proved to be incredibly sharp as nearly half of his arms penetrated the green dragon's body.

"Aowuuu... Aowuuu..."

This strike was obviously very painful for the green dragon to deal with. Its huge body thrashed violently, destroying all the trees in the surrounding radius of dozens meters. The giant silver ape also rolled together with the green dragon, since his two claws were still within the latter's body.

However, the toughness of the giant silver ape's body was astonishing. He immediately pulled out his claws when he reacted. His entire body transforming into a silver bolt, he aimed right at the green dragon's eyes, trying to blind it before slowly torturing it to death.

Whoosh!

A silver dragonlance suddenly stabbed forwards, nailing the giant silver ape in the chest with an audible sound. The madly charging ape was hindered by the dragonlance's blow. He let out a shrill, raging howl, and swung his claws fiercely, slicing the lance into two pieces. Only the tip of the spear was still stuck in his chest.

“Damnable beast! Even you want to seek undue advantages!” Celt casually threw away the broken pieces of the lance and slowly pulled out a strange looking sword.

A cold presence suddenly started spreading along the blade as soon as the sword was drawn. Ripples of starlight orbited the sword before spreading outwards. Celt pointed the sword point at the silver ape. His silver fighting aura instantly fused with the starlight, shooting straight towards the giant silver ape with raging momentum.

Han Shuo was still hiding surreptitiously nearby. Upon seeing Celt raise the sword, Han Shuo’s consciousness immediately sensed an infinite, starry presence that shook his very being. He instantly knew that the sword was absolutely extraordinary. Otherwise, it wouldn’t have possessed such an enormous, exotic hidden atmosphere.

The naturally ferocious giant silver ape also felt the same boundless presence, especially when the starlight merged with the silver fighting aura. A mysterious, horrifyingly dangerous feeling of the unknown descended, along with a small galaxy that had been created from the fusion of the two forces.

However, the giant silver ape was so close to getting the magical core of the green dragon, as the latter was slowly dying after being heavily injured. The green dragon only needed a single strike to finish it off. Upon seeing the silver fighting aura twinkling with countless starlights drawing near, the giant silver ape blinked his blood red eyes, as if hesitating whether or not he should take the risk.

Suddenly, the giant silver ape’s savage eyes shone brightly. The giant silver ape moved as quick as lightning, attempting to dodge the starry silver fighting aura, while killing Celt and excavating the green dragon’s magic beast core in one swift move.

“It won’t be that easy to escape!” Celt sneered. He twisted the sword in his hand slightly, suddenly changing the direction of the starry fighting aura in mid-air. It continued to shoot at the giant silver ape’s back at an extremely fast pace.

A tragic roar emitted from the giant silver ape's mouth. The starry fighting aura bore more than a dozen bloody holes into his back, each hole overflowing with blood.

"Greedy beast, how does the divine weapon 'Starry Sky' taste? You want some more?" Celt stood upright on the back of the green dragon as he laughed heartily at the giant silver ape.

Divine weapon "Starry Sky"! Han Shuo was shocked. He'd initially intended to take this opportunity to make his move, but once again had to restrain himself. Han Shuo looked at the "Starry Sky" in the sky rider's grasp. He understood that Celt being able to injure that tyrannical giant silver ape was all thanks to the strength of the divine weapon.

The giant silver ape's bloodshot eyes stared fixedly at the divine artifact in Celt's hand. He could feel waves of vast cosmic power pulsing from the weapon.

Fear gradually crept into the giant silver ape. He let out two low growls and slowly retreated. His speed had been extremely fast just now, yet the divine weapon "Starry Sky" had still been able to hit him. The giant silver ape possessed extremely high intelligence. He didn't dare to run with his injured back facing Celt, even if his heart was now filled with the desire to avoid the latter.

"Despicable human, I shall tear you to pieces!"

At this moment, the golden dragon approached with a roar. He'd transformed into a middle-aged man with a twisted expression as he rushed towards Celt.

Evidently, the golden dragon knew that having too large of a body would hold no advantage over Celt and would instead make him an easier target for the latter. Therefore, he switched over to his human form to continue his attacks. As his roar rang out, a golden light shot towards Celt. The giant silver ape, who'd been about to dodge, quickly darted towards the green dragon like a flash of lightning upon seeing the golden dragon furiously engage in battle with Celt.

However, he'd yet to reach the green dragon when the latter suddenly let out a tragic scream. The giant silver ape landed in front of the green dragon, only to find that a big hole had been drilled out of the latter's head.

A person shrouded in a black magic shield had harvested the green dragon's core, eyes, and horn.

"Heh heh, my bad. Everything from the green dragon will belong to me. I advise you to best mind your own business." Han Shuo laughed heartily as he collected the trophies while wielding the Demonslayer Edge wreathed in a dense blood light.

The giant silver ape was about to disregard everything and draw closer, when he suddenly felt the endless murderous intent emitting from the Demonslayer Edge. There seemed to be tens of thousands of innocent souls crying and screaming from it, instantly ready to drown anyone who dared to come close.

Since the divine artifact "Starry Sky" had left a dozen bloody holes in the giant silver ape's back, the latter had developed an instinctive fear for strange weapons. Not to mention that the surge of murderous intent that exuded from the Demonslayer Edge wasn't as natural and peaceful like the "Starry Sky", but an infinite, brutal atmosphere of death and killing.

To the giant silver ape, the threat from this kind of atmosphere was even greater than that of "Starry Sky".

Therefore, the giant silver ape could only watched dumbly as Han Shuo harvested all of the treasures one by one, not daring to take a step forward in his hesitation.

"Uraka!"

Celt was still entangled with the golden dragon when he heard the shrill, ghastly screams full of grievances. It seemed that he had very deep feelings for the green dragon. The latter's tragic death was a huge blow to him.

Distraction was an enormous taboo in a fight. Celt's distraction gave the golden dragon an opening as the latter flattened Celt's sturdy armor. Celt retreated hurriedly as he had been injured, two streaks of blood flowing from the corners of his mouth. He coldly looked at Han Shuo, who stood above the green dragon's head, and let out a low shout, "Whoever you are, I will make your life worse than death!"

As his words sounded out, Celt screamed out with all of his resentment and grief before turning to escape. He knew that he couldn't hold any advantage against three enemies from all sides, even with the "Starry Sky" in his hand. Particularly for Han Shuo, whose appearance was hidden, Celt couldn't predict this new enemy's strength at all. Therefore, he had to flee despite the unwillingness that filled his heart.

"If the weeds aren't pulled out from their roots, they'll grow back at spring's breeze. Since it's like that, don't blame me for being ruthless!" Having finished excavating all of the treasures from the green dragon's body, Han Shuo spontaneously mumbled before turning to the salivating giant silver ape, "The rest is for you!"

A beam of black light abruptly shot up into the sky. The beam chased Celt together with the golden dragon, intending to take advantage of Celt's injuries to finish him off, as to not leave behind endless trouble.

After Han Shuo left, the giant silver ape let out a low growl and instantly jumped on the green dragon's corpse. He started eating the dragon's meat and brain. Even though these things weren't as nutritious as the core, they would still increase the giant silver ape's strength by a little bit.

Celt fled in Kassel's direction. He would never have expected that so many experts were lurking deep within the Dark Forest. He and the green dragon should have been unimpeded. In the end, the green dragon was miserably dead, whilst Celt was heavily wounded.

To him, the lofty commander of the Redbud Knights, this was simply an unacceptable fact. He'd dominated the Continent for many years and had rarely experienced the taste of failure. He was truly angered right now. Etching the figure enveloped in that black halo into his mind as he escaped, Celt was already planning about how to use the power of the Redbud Knights to catch the person who killed Uraka and slice him into a million pieces.

“Despicable human, let’s fight to the death!” The golden dragon’s loud roar carried along the path. He was determined to kill Celt, but it was a pity that his body was no longer able to bear the injuries that he had taken. Not only were his roars becoming much weaker, but his speed gradually slowed and his mind grew dizzy due to the profound loss of blood.

If he hadn’t been the strongest member of the golden dragon tribe, he would’ve collapsed long ago. For him to be able to hold on until now made him truly worthy of the title of strongest amongst the dragon race.

“Since you wish to die reptile, then I shall fulfill your wish!” Celt had run a distance. Upon seeing that the golden dragon was becoming increasingly weaker but still chased him, Celt couldn’t help but screech to a stop due to his extremely bad mood.

“Starry Sky” burst out again with its orbiting brilliant constellations. The starry light spots created a beautiful luster amidst the silver fighting aura. The vast celestial presence once again spread out slowly to encompass the incoming golden dragon.

Last time, the golden dragon had assaulted Celt so suddenly that he simply hadn’t given the latter any time to use his divine weapon. The golden dragon had taken advantage of Celt’s distraction to strike him. Now that the divine artifact had displayed its full power, the golden dragon suddenly became somber upon seeing the galaxy spread out.

However, it was too late to dodge. The golden dragon was flying forward at a speed so fast that it was difficult to stop. He could only utilize all of his power to barely change direction, attempting to clear the area that was shrouded in the starry fighting aura.

A sharp, shrill whistle suddenly rang out at this moment. A streak of black light zigzagged like a snake to suddenly appear a dozen meters away in front of Celt.

Celt had been looking coldly at the heavily injured golden dragon when he suddenly saw the sharp tip of the black light rapidly closing in on him. Frightened out of his wits, Celt hastily withdrew the starry fighting aura. The fighting aura that'd been shooting at the golden dragon once again made a miraculous 180 degree turn to shoot straight at the black light instead.

Chapter 323: Leaving behind an ear

Crackle... pop...

The starry nebulae, which dotted the fighting aura, transformed into a dark ray, fusing with the Demonslayer Edge. The formerly black and matte Demonslayer Edge suddenly exploded with a pillar of bloody light, the fearsome killing intent condensing into clouds of bloody mist, with thin, red lightning crackling within.

The divine weapon in Celt's hand, "Starry Sky", suddenly flew out from his hand, abruptly landing in the glow of clustered nebulae within the blood cloud. With little spots of cold light flaring from its body, it continuously clashed with the bloodthirsty Demonslayer Edge.

The two battling weapons gave off an aura of violence. Within the multicolored light, increasingly loud explosions echoed, causing nearby plants and animals to be knocked over by the sounds before the undulations spreading towards other areas.

Han Shuo remained hidden in the dark, feeling all of his magical yuan surging towards the wild Demonslayer Edge. The greatly worried Han Shuo immediately sat down cross-legged, circulating his magical yuan as he tried to provide more power for the Demonslayer Edge to utilize.

Celt moaned painfully, his veins popping out of his forehead. The fighting aura in his body ravaged his wounds as it continually circulated, causing Celt to spit out another mouthful of blood.

The golden dragon had originally thought that it would be impossible to escape. He was unable to react for a moment when he saw the starry fighting aura engage in combat with a blood-red weapon. The dragon sat, staring distractedly at the light strewn skies, slowly starting to feel that the blood-red weapon looked a bit familiar.

"It's that man, that lunatic!" After staring for a while, the golden dragon finally remembered and cried out in surprise.

"Rumble..."

The sky rumbled as if there were thunder, with the sound of a large explosion ripping past. Rays of light crisscrossed through the magnificent sky, and the divine weapon "Starry Sky" turned tail and retreated back towards Celt.

Celt was actually kneeling on the ground at this very moment. It looked like he'd expended too much fighting aura in too short an amount of time. He was quivering like a leaf seeming to be suffering from an epileptic fit. The blood flowing from the corners of his mouth became white foam; he looked like he could collapse at any moment.

"I will kill you!" The golden dragon finally found his opportunity. Not thinking carefully about why Han Shuo had appeared, he madly charged towards Celt.

Celt could barely stand. He had been weakened to a critical point. Seeing the blood-covered golden dragon charging towards him, Celt used his trembling hands to throw out a magical scroll. The lifesaving scroll transformed into a mass of silver light, wrapping around Celt, and releasing strong magical pulses.

"Crap. It's another priceless spatial magic scroll!" Han Shuo cursed under his breath, his attention calmly focused as he manipulated the Demonslayer Edge that was flying straight towards Celt's neck.

Consumed by the flash of dazzling light, Celt let out a mournful screech. Large undulations rippled through the area, as if it had been ripped in half. By the time it calmed down, Celt's body had vanished without a trace, only leaving left ear on the ground.

When the golden dragon arrived, the only thing he found was Celt's left ear. He didn't find anything else apart from this. Even Han Shuo's Demonslayer Edge had been recalled into his body after that single strike.

"Kill me! I just hope that after you kill me, you'll also kill off that despicable human!" Standing at the place where Celt once stood, the golden dragon reached out and picked up Celt's ear, shouting at his surroundings while stuffing it into his mouth.

In the Dark Forest, strength determined everything. In the cruel Dark Forest, the strongest gained everything, while the weakest didn't even have the right to live. Such were the rules tacitly agreed upon between the super-ranked magical beasts and the humans.

The golden dragon had reached its weakest point now. Without a space magic scroll to save its life, and having already witnessed Han Shuo's unfeeling ferocity, it correctly predicted that Han Shuo would treat him as another animal of prey and kill him. This was why he had said these words.

"Celt's loss of an ear won't affect his strength at all. This time, he only exhausted his fighting aura and sustained a few injuries. When I was fighting with him, not only did he recognize my weapon, but he also managed to perceive my presence. I've already detected that Celt's has met up with the Redbud Knights. We now have a common enemy, so I think killing you wouldn't be the wisest idea."

Han Shuo slowly walked out of the shade and spoke calmly to the golden dragon. Seeing that the golden dragon had become quiet, Han Shuo continued to speak: "Besides, I feel like you're a dragon whom I should befriend. I highly admire your bravery and dedication. As such, I feel that making a friend like you is far more valuable than your magical beast core."

"Thank you. You have won the respect and friendship of me, the golden dragon Sidrick!" As per the etiquette of the dragon race, golden dragon Sidrick expressed the highest level of respect towards Han Shuo.

"Sidrick, I feel that your best course of action right now is to properly tend to your wounds. That despicable knight called Celt will definitely not let us off after regrouping with the Redbud Knights. However, the Dark Forest is very large, so it shouldn't be a problem for the two of us to disappear. On the contrary, their group is large and easy to discover. When your wounds have healed, we can work together to deal with them."

This golden dragon trembled every time he tried to speak. Han Shuo could see that he would collapse at a moment's notice. Since that was the case, Han Shuo had offered this thought to Sidrick after mulling the situation over.

“I shall return to my race. After I recover a bit, I’ll bring my fellow dragon warriors and kill every one of those despicable ambushers who dared to offend me.” The golden dragon vowed solemnly. He then respectfully spoke to Han Shuo once more, “There is a Dragon Valley located in the deepest parts of the Dark Forest. In the future, be it you or your sons and descendants, if you ever need me, Sidrick, you can always come to the Dragon Valley to find me.”

“I apologize, I really can’t endure it any longer. I’ll be taking my leave now.”

As if he were afraid of Han Shuo reneging on his promise, Sidrick managed to force out a friendly smile after saying these words. He transformed back into his draconic form, flying towards the deepest recesses of the Dark Forest. It seemed like his injuries really weren’t light; he probably wouldn’t be able to recover any time soon.

Mature dragons of the dragon race would usually leave the Dragon Valley and occupy a mountain or a river, gradually building their wealth over the long course of their evolution. Some dragons preferred to live alone, while others preferred to live in groups. Han Shuo had learned a little about the Dragon Valley from some of the Dark Mantle’s intelligence reports, but had never gone there to explore himself.

The golden dragon Sidrick had actually come from the Dragon Valley! It seems like his influence wasn’t something to sneeze at. The reason why Han Shuo had let Sidrick go was because he wanted to use the dragon’s power against Celt, though he would never have thought that he had come from the Dragon Valley. Han Shuo thought that since Sidrick had been able to leave alive, if Celt didn’t quickly leave the Dark Forest and a group of dragons from the Dragon Valley found him, then one of the continent’s ten great troop of knights, the Redbud Knights, would vanish forever.

With the commander of the Redbud Knights lying injured, along with the disappearance of fire grand magus Marceau, this time’s plan of looting of the underground world would likely be seriously delayed.

After following the trail of and discovering the Redbud Knights, Han Shuo discovered that the Redbud Knights had been prevented from making good time. Everyone was frantically converging on the central tent, tending to Celt's injuries. The central tent was surrounded by rows of knights, with a few powerful mages setting up magic boundaries in the vicinity. Han Shuo hid in the shadows, observing them, realizing that it was impossible to assassinate Celt at this time.

Even the ground beneath Celt had become as hard as steel due to the effects of the boundaries. When the earth elite zombie returned after failing to penetrate the enchantment, Han Shuo immediately gave up on this idea. Seeing the Redbud Knights set up camp, seemingly wanting to bring Celt's injuries under control first, Han Shuo understood that their planned raid on the underworld would be suspended until further notice.

After observing for a bit longer, Han Shuo spotted the traitor druid Kassel returning without any accomplishments, both his hands were empty and his face held an expression full of ire. It was obvious that he had failed to catch Cecilia and Emily. Only after seeing this did Han Shuo truly relax. He didn't stick around, flying straight towards the Cemetery of Death.

Han Shuo spent a night resting at the Cemetery of Death, then used the transportation matrix the next day to return to the city lord's residence in Brettel City.

Walking out from the secret chamber in the city lord's residence, Han Shuo was deeply moved by the profoundness of magic. Yesterday, he'd been thousands of kilometers away in the Dark Forest, struggling for his life. He'd appeared here after using the transportation matrix, skipping a long journey and arriving with a thought. Even the technologically unparalleled Earth couldn't accomplish this, but this magic and martial skill wielding Profound Continent could.

After leaving Brettel City for a couple of days, Han Shuo suddenly remembered his prisoner, Helen Tina. He happened to recall that Helen Tina hadn't eaten anything for two days. The secret prison in the city lord's residence had never really been used to lock people up. After Han Shuo tied up Helen Tina and threw her in there, he hadn't even told anyone about her. As such, he believed that nobody had brought her any food.

Han Shuo rushed towards the prison to take a look when he remembered. He found Helen Tina, with a pale complexion and sallow cheeks, belly deflating and rumbling continuously, as if there was a bird constantly calling. Sure enough, Helen Tina had been starved pretty badly over these two days. Had Han Shuo returned any later, it was likely that this enchanting beauty would have starved to death.

Chapter 324: Blackmail

“De...demon, just kill me! No need to humiliate me like this!” The weakly starving beauty spoke in a weak voice upon seeing Han Shuo approach. She wanted to put on a fierce front, but didn’t have the slightest bit of energy to do so, even just talking alone had exhausted all of her strength.

“Eh... I’m very sorry. These past two days I had to go out for something, but forgot to instruct my people to bring you food.” This time Han Shuo was genuinely embarrassed this time. He explained with all sincerity as he looked at Helen Tina.

Helen Tina had been barely able to mouth a few words. When she heard Han Shuo explain, she pointed her finger at him, her pale lips trembling as if wanting to say something. However, whether she was too hungry or angry, she actually fainted without another word.

“Aii, mages are truly fragile, unable to hold up after two days of hunger.” Seeing Helen Tina fall unconscious, Han Shuo spoke with a sigh and involuntarily shook his head.

He’d forgotten that last time along the way he’d brought Helen Tina back, he’d only let her eat one meal during those two days. She’d been locked up in Brettel City for two more days, meaning it’d been four days in total since Han Shuo had captured her. For Helen Tina, who’d eaten only one meal on the way here, for her to still be alive, her body was already much better than that of an ordinary mage’s.

Han Shuo hauled Helen Tina up and carried her out of the cell. He handed her over to the two maids in the city lord’s mansion with the following instructions, “Prepare some food for her. Wait until she recovers before putting her back into the cell.”

The two maids looked at Helen Tina’s pale face in shock, then turned to Han Shuo with a strange gaze before withdrawing with the unconscious Helen Tina in trepidation.

When they’d completely cleared the room, the two foolish maids started chattering in a low voice as they thought that Han Shuo couldn’t hear them talk.

“Two days! The city lord disappeared for two days! I can’t believe that he ravaged a beautiful woman until she’s this weak. The city lord is really a brutal, perverted evil demon!!

“Mm... two days in a row! How could the city lord hold up? No wonder he could kill all of those hateful bandits. His endurance is terrifying!”

“Aii. Poor woman, she must have been so devastated, being ravaged for two days!”

“Yeah, you see how she haggard she is. I can’t believe she’s become like this in just two days!”

The two maids whispered as they went. Han Shuo’s sensitive hearing having involuntarily caught all of their conversation. He was torn between laughter and tears, his eyelashes constantly trembling. Han Shuo wanted to explain but didn’t know where to start.

After roughly half an hour, Faulke arrived along with Dick and Chester after hearing the news. The three stood before Han Shuo, looking at him somewhat strangely. Faulke was a true knight so he didn’t say anything. The one in charge of the Dark Mantle here, Dick, was a subordinate so he kept silent all the same.

However, Chester had long been familiar with Han Shuo, so he had no reservations between the two. He complimented with a slight smile upon arriving, “My lord is really intense alright! I only knew about your powerful martial skills before. Only now do I know that not only your martial art is superb, your other aspect is even more terrifying. Two days, my gosh, two days in a row. This little one has no words to describe my admiration for you!”

Faulke and Dick seemed to share the same thought as they nodded solemnly at Chester’s words. The good-for-nothing Dick even exclaimed with a deep sigh, “Comparisons really will be the death of people, ai! I utterly concede!”

Han Shuo’s brows jumped constantly at their words. He suppressed his anger, before opening his mouth to explain to his so-called three subordinates, “The truth isn’t like what you’ve imagined. Don’t listen to the drivel of those servants. I only left that prisoner hungry for two days. You guys shouldn’t think nonsense.”

The three dirty minded fellows didn’t believe a word. However, as subordinates, they naturally understood the need to maintain some dignity in the surface. Therefore, they earnestly nodded, admitting that they had misunderstood, saying that the lord wasn’t that kind of person. But their eyes was filled with envy and admiration. They obviously didn’t believe Han Shuo’s explanation.

“This woman is Grand Duke Helen Tina of the Helon Duchy. Has anyone come to negotiate with you guys for her release over the past two days?” Seeing the three refused to believe him, Han Shuo had to reveal Helen Tina’s identity, inwardly wondering if they would believe him now.

“What? My lord, you actually dared to eat even Grand Duke Helen of the Helon Duchy!” Chester blurted out without thought.

Faulke and Dick’s expression abruptly changed. Dick was especially solemn as he said loudly, “My lord, we’re in big trouble this time! I think Brettel City will face crazy retaliation from two other grand duchies. Once people know that this poisonous beauty is in your hands, many from the seven grand duchies will become interested in Brettel City again.”

“There’ll naturally be a solution for any troubles that come. What are you afraid of? If the seven grand duchies dare to come, they will be just in time to taste our magic crystal cannons. All six magic crystal cannons have been installed at the city’s wall. Any duchy that wants to invade the Brettel City will have to pay with their blood.” Faulke was indeed obsessed with battle. He coldly snorted with an air of arrogance.

Stopping for a bit, Faulke suddenly thought of something as his expression somewhat changed. He turned to speak to Han Shuo, “But if the seven grand duchies attack repeatedly, our supply of magic crystal ores will be far from enough. Once it’s not enough for our operations, it’s simply impossible to resist the attacks from the seven grand duchies with the Brettel City's current defenses."

Magic crystal ores were formed by nature. They could be used for refining various magic equipment, and were needed in some transportation matrices as well as magic weapons. Magic crystal ores were different from creatures cores. The energy within the former couldn't be directly absorbed by human or beasts, and could only be used via tools. As for the creatures cores, the majority of them could be directly absorbed by magic creatures, while a few could be absorbed by human who had the same kind of element. Therefore, creatures cores were more valuable than magic crystal ores.

Even though creature cores were more precious, most of them couldn't be used as a source to operate transportation matrices or magic crystal cannons. Magic crystal ores were needed to run magic crystal cannons.

"It looks like we need to pay attention to the harvest of magic crystal ores in the underground world!" Han Shuo's mind spun quickly with the information about the different uses of creature cores and magic crystal ores as he whispered to himself.

"My lord is truly a man of courage. You knew full well that she was Helen Tina yet still dared to lock and ravage her for two whole days! I'm in awe of your spirit that is fearless of any pressure or threat!" Dick exclaimed sincerely.

It looked like these three perverts had determined that Han Shuo had nailed Helen Tina no matter what he said. Han Shuo was too lazy to say anything else in the end. He turned to give orders to Faulke, "Use all of the gold coins I brought back defending of Brettel City. I will make the people of Helon Duchy ransom a million gold coins for Helen Tina. If they come, report to me."

Han Shuo no longer pay any heed to the flattery of these three perverts after he gave his orders. He returned to his room in the mansion, waiting for the two maids to bring Helen Tina back. The two maids slowly brought the weak looking Helen Tina to Han Shuo's room after half an hour.

Helen Tina's mental strength had been confined, while she herself had been left hungry for quite a long time. She probably wouldn't even be able to beat a maid in her current state. It was simply impossible for her to escape from the city lord's mansion. Helen Tina put all thoughts of escape to rest and meekly let the two maids lead her.

Helen Tina's face now had some color to it after eating some food and drinking some water. She didn't need to lean on the two maids anymore. Her bright eyes full of hatred as she glared at Han Shuo, her gentle voice instantly ringing out curses, "You crude, despicable necromancer, I can't believe you dared to treat me like that! Even if you are an insidious, evil necromancer, you should know that abusing prisoners deserves everyone's spittle!"

"My lord, if you have no other orders, we will be taking our leave now." The two maids turned their eyes away and lifted their heads to look at Han Shuo with fear. One of them pleaded in a low voice.

The two maids were already regarding Han Shuo as an abusive pervert in their hearts. Their voices trembled, eyes looking at him full of fear, like lambs facing a wolf.

"Go. Speak no more nonsense from now on!" Han Shuo swept a cold glance at the two maids as he spoke frostily.

The two maids were so scared that they went soft at the knees, trembling as they nodded in agreement. Neither of them dared to lift their heads. After a while, seeing as Han Shuo had no intention to punish them, the two maids left the room in shock and fear.

This time they left without daring to say a word. It seems Han Shuo's deterrence had begun to take effect.

Waiting until the two maids left, Han Shuo opened his mouth to speak to the furious Helen Tina, "My apologies that you were starved for two days because of my negligence. But I really didn't do it on purpose, I truly only forgot."

Han Shuo took out her space ring and handed it back before carrying on, "Alright, I've returned your space ring to you. I think this kind of situation won't happen again next time."

Helen Tina's pretty eyes glared bitterly at Han Shuo, uncontrollable hatred still remaining on her face after she recovered her space ring. However, she obviously understood that she had no capital to make a fuss since she was a prisoner. After rolling her eyes at Han Shuo for a while, Helen Tina finally let out a light sigh and said in a soft tone, "If you think you can use me to threaten the Helon Duchy, I think your wish won't be fulfilled. Four days have passed already. The Helon Duchy likely hasn't sent anyone with a million gold coins for my release. How about this, my space ring still has four hundred thousand gold coins. If you release me, I'll give you these gold coins, alright?"

Han Shuo sat there on the chair, stroking his chin as he stared fixedly at Helen Tina. He opened his mouth after a bit of pondering. "Don't worry. I'll wait for some more time and see how it goes. If it's really as you've said, I can discuss conditions with you again."

"No. If I don't return to the Helon Duchy in a short period of time, it will definitely fall into civil strife. As time drags on, it'll be useless for me to return to the Helon Duchy anymore." Helen Tina's tone became urgent as she immediately responded.

"That has nothing to do with me. You are the grand duke of Helon Duchy, you're absolutely worth a million gold coins. Heh heh, four hundred thousand gold coins is really a bit too little. I'll be taking a huge loss if I just simply let you go like that! I don't care if your duchy has civil unrest. Will corpses pile up everywhere just because of civil strife? Don't expect to leave my place without handing over a million gold coins." Crossing his legs and leisurely looking at Helen Tina's urgent posture, Han Shuo slowly replied with a smile.

"You, you demon from hell! The six magic crystal cannons is worth a million gold coins! Is your greed truly that bottomless?" Helen Tina's face flushed red in fury. Her body staggered as if she wanted to fall down in a faint.

"The longer the time is dragged out, the more it'll be detrimental for you. I see you obviously don't have enough gold coins on you. I'm not an unreasonable person either. Mm, how about this, write me a note. Bring the remaining six hundred thousand gold coins to me within three months after you return to your duchy.” Han Shuo squinted at Helen Tina, waiting until she vented all of her rage before opening his mouth to speak one more.

“You greedy pig, you’ll get what’s coming to you!!” Helen Tina screamed in fury.

“Alright then, you can just keep screaming here and wait for your Helon Duchy fall into chaos. Heh heh, I have something to attend to and won’t keep you company!” Han Shuo stood up calmly, seemingly not taking Helen Tina’s screaming in his eyes as he leisurely walked to the door.

“You evil demon, greedy evil demon. I’ll agree, I’ll agree!” The noisy Helen Tina finally yielded and screamed hysterically when Han Shuo had almost walked out the door.

“Isn’t it good to agree early? Your body is so weak, screaming loudly is not good for your health!” Han Shuo laughed heartily. He promptly took out a contract, making Helen Tina finger print and sign it, finally placing down a magical brand.

Chapter 325: Lack of manpower

The clouds were a fiery red in the sunset, refreshing gentle breezes blowing happily through people's hearts. All of the potholes and scars in Brettel City had been fixed during this period of reparation.

The main city gates had two huge magic crystal cannons stationed at them. They shone a faint red halo under the sunset, seemingly ready to spit out enormous flames at any moment.

Helen Tina was currently standing in front of the city gates after having been forced to sign the contract. She looked up at the two magic crystal cannons that'd originally belonged to her, unsure what to feel. Han Shuo stood on the city's walls, smiling merrily as he held the contract aloft and waved goodbye, "Dear honorable Duke Helen Tina, we won't be seeing you off."

Helen Tina inwardly gave eighteen generations of Han Shuo's ancestors a good cursing. However, she was worried that rebellion that could break out any time in her Helon Duchy. Having recovered her mental strength, she slowly floated up using levitation skills. Her shining eyes glared fiercely at Han Shuo as she gritted her teeth and lowered her voice, "Greedy evil demon, I'll definitely be back for revenge!"

"Have a safe journey. Remember that you have to pay back the gold coins you owe me in three months!" Han Shuo beamed radiantly, waving the contract in his hand as if telling Helen Tina not to try to weasel her way out of her debt.

"Hmph!" Helen Tina turned her head angrily. She transformed into a fiery shadow, slowly flying towards the direction of Helon Duchy. The fiery shadow looked like a rainbow across the horizon beneath the sunset.

"My Lord is truly too evil. Not only did he take this poisonous beauty, he even exorted a huge amount of gold coins. Truly eating people down to the bones!" Chester shook his head emotionally, his eyes looking at Han Shuo full of worship.

"I didn't think Helen Tina was this beautiful, no wonder Benedict of the Narsen Duchy is so obsessed with her. A pity, ah, a pity. He definitely wouldn't expect that our lord was one step ahead to pluck this flower!" Dick chuckled at the pain of others, making malicious speculations about how ugly the situation would be after Benedict learned of this.

"Your Lordship, I think that with her malevolence, Helen Tina definitely won't be willing to let this go after she leaves. Hmph, if she spreads the news about our Brettel City extorting four hundred thousand gold coins from her, I think it will give rise the greed of the seven grand duchies." Faulke approached Han Shuo, saying worriedly as he watched Helen Tina depart.

Han Shuo looked at the red clouds spread throughout the sky, silently frowning for a bit. He then casted his eyes at the blurry outlines of the mountain ranges around Brettel City. He told Dick, "Dick, send people to the surrounding mountains, ask the leaders of the mountain people to pay a visit to Brettel City. Just tell them that I invite them for a meal."

"My lord, because the former city lords were all incompetent and mediocre leaders, they couldn't help the mountain people resist the bandits. So the mountain people have never harbored any good impression, let alone respect, for the city lord. I can pass the news to them, but I'm afraid that they won't come out of contempt." Dick revealed a difficult expression and explained to Han Shuo after some hesitation.

"Now is different from the past. Fulkin of Mount Tali will come for certain. If he informs the others beforehand, the other leaders will know of our strength. I think they'll be willing to come, heh heh. The past is the past, the present is the present. The entire Brettel City is my territory, they are all my people. If these people really can't tell good from bad, then I will make them know how to respect a city lord." Han Shuo said to Dick in a neither fast nor slow manner.

Nodding his head, Dick promised, "Alright then, I will definitely notify them."

Dick was also a mountain man. He had already had contact and even secretly maintained a good relationship with the people in the surrounding mountains before Han Shuo had arrived in Brettel City. He'd had no hope in Han Shuo originally. Now that he'd witnessed the knowledge, power, as well as the schemes of the latter, Dick understood that his stubborn people would definitely eat a bitter loss if they provoked Han Shuo.

Therefore, Dick was determined to persuade those stubborn fellows to come as soon as he heard Han Shuo's words. He didn't want any of those people to die at the hands of Han Shuo's undead army.

After Dick left, Han Shuo said to Faulke, "Use the gold coins we have to arm and power up the entire city with everything we've got. War chariots, catapults, oil, goblin missiles, etc. As for equipment, I have entrusted some merchant guilds to transport them here. What you have to do is tell the masons to reinforce any fragile areas of the city's walls. Make it taller in areas where it isn't tall enough."

"Your lordship, the craftsmen have already increased their overtime to do these things. What we lack the most now are soldiers with sufficient combat effectiveness. Brettel City has suffered through many battles with devastating effects from fire. The total population in our city is only fifty thousand or so, this is really miserably few compared to some big cities of millions. The number of young people is even fewer. We have been conscripting men through providing enormous temptation in recent periods, but have only recruited two hundred or so. The number of our people is far from enough!"

"Brettel City is so big that it's simply impossible to protect all four gates with only roughly three thousand soldiers in the city. Even if we have strong firepower, we still need people to operate it! If the problem of the population can't be resolved, I think Brettel City will still remain in this half dead atmosphere." Faulke was indeed a knight who'd been tempered by the fires of war. He only took one glance to point out what the city lacked the most, which was also its current biggest weakness.

This was truly a difficult problem. Han Shuo also knew that what Brettel City lacked the most was people, but he didn't have a proper method to solve it. Brettel City had always been in the midst of war and had become a hell on earth due to the number of departing citizens throughout so many years. Even ordinary citizens of other cities might not be willing to migrate to the Brettel City, not to mention the natives who had left

The first thing Han Shuo could do now was secure the safety of the city before gradually turning to expansion of other aspects. He then could slowly attract people from other cities to inhabit Brettel City through good security conditions that are beneficial to their development.

However, this wouldn't be an overnight process, it required quite a long transition period. At least, the pillaging and threats from the seven grand duchies had to be halted before the Brettel City could slowly prove to outsiders that it was safe. Only then would fear and panic be dispelled.

"Mhm, I know this is indeed our biggest problem. We temporarily have no way to attract new residents. However, as long as we can stop the pillaging of the seven grand duchies and spread the news that the Brettel City is safe, some original inhabitants missing their hometown might be willing to come back. We will tackle this problem from multiple angles. I think Brettel City will be much more bustling sooner or later."

"First, about the lack of staff and soldiers, we can start from the mountain people in the surrounding mountains. This is why I've invited them to the city. I heard from Dick that there are thirty, forty thousand of them, of which around ten thousand have the ability to fight. If we can firmly grasp and use this force, in addition to being equipped with six advanced magic crystal cannons and a sturdy city wall, our odds of successfully blocking the invasions of the seven grand duchies will be much higher." Han Shuo had considered this issue early on. He explained himself leisurely regarding why he'd invited the mountain people.

"If my lord has made careful considerations already, then I will say no more. On the other hand, young master Lawrence will soon send over several talents who are knowledgeable in city and financial management. The military of Brettel City is also getting on track." Faulke said respectfully.

Nodding his head, Han Shuo said noncommittally, "Mm, for the time being these things are under your arrangements.”

At the present, there were hundreds of things are waiting to be done in Brettel City. All kinds of talents were greatly lacking. Lawrence's arrangements of talented military and political personnel would indeed play an important role. However, since they were arranged by Lawrence, it would be difficult to remove them once these military and political talents officially took control.

If this situation was left to develop as it would, if Han Shuo still continued to use Lawrence's people, then this subconscious infiltration would slowly turn Brettel City into Lawrence's territory. Han Shuo was now much more mature than in the past and understood clearly this drawback clearly. Unfortunately, he didn't have any of his own people to use at the moment. He also temporarily couldn't identify if Lawrence's help was out of good intentions or other purposes. What Han Shuo currently lacked the most was manpower, so he could only leave things as they were.

However, Han Shuo had started thinking for the future and was seriously considering using his own trusted people. Be it developing or discovering these people, neither were simple matter. He slowly walked to his room with this idea in mind.

Staying in the city lord's mansion for two days, Han Shuo monitored the progress of enhancing the city's defense facilities during the day, and tirelessly practicing demonic cultivation and necromancy magic at night. However, breakthroughs in cultivation became harder the more he progressed, and there weren't many gains to be had in his boring regular day to day practices. On the other hand, since his mental strength was at the grand magus rank, his grasp over necromancy magic actually made rapid progress.

Therefore, Han Shuo put more effort into studying necromancy magic. Using the secret chamber in the city lord's mansion, he could easily transport to the Cemetery of Death – the most perfect training grounds for necromancers. Not only the scent of death here dense, this place even had plenty of magic tools and laboratory. Han Shuo stayed here alone every night and captured some live magic beasts to practice the spell “Soul Tremor”.

For a demonic practitioner at the separate demon realm like Han Shuo, their soul had become the even more mysterious consciousness which possessed some truly wondrous uses. Based on his study of the soul, in addition to his memory of demonic magic, Han Shuo gradually felt that there was a link between the understanding of the soul in necromancy and the changes in the consciousness in his demonic cultivation.

Especially at this realm, the consciousness had miraculous abilities to sense the presence of all creatures in the surroundings, to create illusions and implant magical brands on the soul, and seemed to be able to communicate with the magic elements that existed everywhere in this world. Han Shuo suddenly had a whim to consider if it was also possible to integrate demonic cultivation and magical training so they could complement each other.

However, this wonderful idea was still extremely difficult to implement with Han Shuo’s current situation because his knowledge had yet to reach true proficiency in any field. There would be a long process of exploration if he wanted to master the two aspects. It seemed this wouldn’t be able to be applied for a short while.

This spell “Soul Tremor” used the consciousness to attack the opponent’s soul. Han Shuo had experimented it on living magic creatures over the past two days. Moreover, he had certain reflections in some areas of using the mind to attack, gradually grasping some key parts of this spell in two days.

Han Shuo walked out from the Cemetery of Death on the third day. Bathing under the warm sunshine, he felt a very leisurely pleasure. While he was checking on the progress of the city, Dick ran out from an unknown location to Han Shuo’s side and said respectfully, “My Lord, I have sent out the invitations according to your orders. The five mountain leaders on the surrounding mountains all agreed to come to Brettel City seven days later.”

Smiling lightly, Han Shuo looked at Dick deeply before finally saying, “Dick, you are also a mountain man. I know that you wouldn’t let me down if I placed this in your charge.”

“But of course. Otherwise, with your methods, all the leaders who didn’t come with definitely meet with some accidents. I didn’t want to become the villain of my people.” Dick thought inwardly, his expression still respectful as he said smilingly, “My Lord has gained the mountain people’s trust after you exterminated the Red Beard bandits. I think they’ll be coming here with hearts full of hope.”

“Perhaps with more fear than not, haha!” Han Shuo laughed heartily with Dick. How could he not know what these people wanted to do? Dick had said all that needed to be said, and so they naturally knew what to do.

“Eh... They actually are a bit afraid. Heh heh!” Dick answered with a laugh. He looked into Han Shuo’s eyes and felt as if the latter knew the thoughts in his mind. Dick involuntarily felt scared in his heart.

Chapter 326: Somewhat tricky

Frantic hoofsteps resounded, approaching swiftly from the distance. Han Shuo was atop the city wall to oversee the construction progress when he saw Commander Knight Faulke anxiously charge over on the back of a warhorse.

Flying off of his horse, Faulke ran all the way to the foot of the city wall where Han Shuo was standing. Panting heavily, he looked up at the latter, “Your Lordship, the caravan transporting the war chariots and other equipment from Seamist City has been robbed by several bandit groups. They say they will only release the merchants and goods if we pay them fifty thousand gold coins.”

The bandit groups along the road from Seamist City to Brettel City weren’t large in scale. Han Shuo had ordered this equipment from some of Phebe’s merchant guild contacts. Not only had he reminded them to be careful of the bandits on the way, he even had Faulke send people along to escort the convoy. These small bandit groups certainly shouldn’t have had the guts to make a move. Han Shuo’s face darkened when he heard the news from Faulke, “You say that several bandit groups allied up to make a move?”

Faulke’s expression was quite ugly as he answered with a nod, “That’s right. One bandit group alone definitely wouldn’t dare to do something like this. However, five bandit groups banded together this time. The guards of the caravan simply couldn’t hold up against them. Your Lordship, these damnable bandits are seeking death. I’ll immediately lead the knights in the city to exterminate them all!”

“Wait!” Han Shuo shouted to stop Faulke’s impulsive action. He thought for a bit before asking, “Our purchase of war chariots and equipment this time, how many people knew about this?”

“The soldiers who were to escort the goods all knew. Why, My Lord?” Faulke was confused, not knowing why Han Shuo had suddenly mentioned this.

Han Shuo asked with a cold snort, "How could it be a coincidence that these bandits knew which day the caravan would arrive? How come they suddenly banded together and even dared demand a ransom after robbing the caravan? Can't you see how abnormal this is?"

Faulke was in shock after these words rang out. He shouted, "My Lord, you are saying that there may be spies among our people?!"

"Not maybe, but for certain!" Han Shuo suddenly shouted loudly, "I will not pursue your negligence of duty for now. You have half a day to find the spies and execute them! On the other hand, don't just accept anyone in the next recruitment drive. Kick out all of those whose backgrounds aren't clean!"

"Yes, My Lord!" Faulke replied loudly. His face was icy as he leapt on a horse and quickly rode off.

Since this matter had been his duty, he wouldn't absolve himself of responsibility from such a big incident no matter what. Lawrence had made it clear that his life and death would be up to Han Shuo when he stepped foot in Brettel City. Having witnessed Han Shuo's powerful strength, Faulke knew full well that this city lord was definitely not the benevolent, lenient sort. Faulke cursed that traitor while quickly thinking of a way to catch him.

An hour later, three hundred bulky knights in shining armor were neatly lined up in a wide marble square in front of the city lord's mansion, in accordance with Faulke's commands. If one overlooked his negligence of duty at the moment, judging from their posture and presence, Faulker's training had indeed produced knights with the demeanor of a knight regiment. This indeed showed the capabilities of Faulke as a superior knight officer.

Han Shuo sat in the city lord's mansion, not caring what methods Faulke would use to find the spies. He was pondering how to eradicate these bandits and clear the path from Seamist City to Brettel City as soon as possible.

Han Shuo had placed all of his attention on the possibility that the seven grand duchies would muster up a raiding force at any moment. However, he'd forgotten about the large and small bandit groups along this trip. There were more than a dozen forces, either small-scaled bandit groups with over a hundred members, or bands with only a dozen members who didn't even warrant a mention. These groups scurried messily around Brettel City and the seven grand duchies all the time. They weren't on the same level as the large groups with thousands of bandits.

After killing Troda last time, Han Shuo had thought that these petty bandits wouldn't dare act rashly, so he hadn't paid them any heed. He hadn't expected them to stab a knife into his back at such a crucial moment, robbing a hundred thousand gold coins worth of battle equipment. This birthed a killing intent so fierce in Han Shuo, he wanted to exterminate them from the world.

The road between Brettel City and Seamist City was the most important channel that connected Brettel City to the Lancelot Empire. If Brettel City wanted to develop, then there were no words that could describe the importance of this road. If immigrants were robbed before they could even reach Brettel City, no one would dare to settle down there no matter how eloquent Han Shuo was.

"They're asking for it. It's not that I didn't want to give them a chance to live!" Han Shuo had cleared up his thinking, and his fingers subconsciously tapped on the chair armrest as he spoke resolutely.

Faulke didn't failed to live up to Han Shuo's trust. He only took two hours to find the spies. Han Shuo didn't actually see who they were, but he could hear mournful, hair-raising wail after wail echoing from outside the city lord's mansion.

The scalp-tingling, tragic screams only lasted for a bit before petering out. Five minutes later, Faulke walked in, filled with trepidation. He humbly paid his respects to Han Shuo and said in a low voice, "Sir Count, I have neglected my duties."

Straightening his somewhat lazy posture, Han Shuo indifferently swept a sharp glance at Faulke and asked, "Got something out of the interrogation?”

Nodding his head, Faulke answered, “A total of three new recruits. All of them are infiltrators from the surrounding bandit groups. Because their bodies were strong and we were lacking people, I didn’t investigate them carefully and let them join our knight regiment. It was all my negligence! I ask Your Lordship for your punishment!”

It was as Faulke said, Brettel City was utilizing every person to the extreme. Talents like Faulke who could train soldiers were truly too scarce. Faulke’s temporary carelessness could be considered negligence of duty, but Han Shuo had no candidate for his replacement.

Han Shuo was silent for a bit before saying with a cold harrumph, “I will take note of this for now. If you can contribute achievements to redeem your mistake when we exterminate the bandits, I will overlook your negligence this time.”

Faulke nodded heavily. He solemnly struck a ceremonial posture and said in a loud voice, “Rest assured Sir Count! This kind of thing shall never happen again. None of the bandits involved in this robbery will escape! I give you my word as a knight.”

“Very well. Assemble a hundred knights. We are going to visit their lair and see if they have the qualifications to take fifty thousand gold coins from my hands.” Han Shuo narrowed his eyes and stood up. Faulke could clearly sense the thick killing intent radiating from his body. He understood that the bandits who had acted in such a wanton manner would be paying a painful price soon enough.

Night fell. A moonless night, the pitch black sky was like a canvas smeared with a dense, thick layer of ink, reducing line of sight to a bare minimum. Torches burned brightly as they headed in a direction where the air was humid and wild weeds grew.

A dozen huge rafts were lining up on a long river shaped like a willow leaf. Many strong sturdy men stood on these rafts, their hands also holding torches. The noisy sound of an argument echoed out from these people.

Faulke rode a warhorse, a torch in his hand. He frowned at the bandits on the rafts on the distant small river and scolded in a low voice, "Cunning bandits, they unexpectedly chose this place for the transaction. This makes things a bit difficult."

This place was very far from Brettel City and simply wasn't anywhere between Seamist City and Brettel City. Instead, it was in the area connecting Brettel City to the seven grand duchies.

Last time Han Shuo had caught Helen Tina, it had been precisely at this river where he'd transported the six magic crystal cannons back to Brettel City. However, because the six cannons were so heavy, it had taken him two days to return from this place. This time, Han Shuo's group that solely consisted of knights, took only half a day to arrive here at night to meet the deadline.

It was undeniable that these bandits had picked a good place this time. Once they took the fifty thousand gold coins, they would be able to quickly get away using the rafts. Han Shuo's group were all knights, simply unable to pursue them on this small river. When they notified Han Shuo of the place the transaction was to take place, it was already too late for the latter to make preparations. They had involuntarily fallen into a passive state.

"This group of bandits really isn't simple. They've arranged everything properly and even took the advantage from us. They can easily escape on the rafts after taking the gold coins. The knights can't pursue them. It seems we have encountered some difficult to handle bandits." Han Shuo looked at the flashing lights of the bandits before him and spoke to Faulke.

"Sir Count, how should we handle this? Even if you're a necromancer, the dark creatures can't make a move in the water." Faulke spoke worriedly to Han Shuo. He was ready to redeem his mistake with all of his enthusiasm, intending to make a big move this time.

"There are some light mages on their side. It seems these bandits have been planning this for a long time. These light mages must have been arranged specially for me. Could it be that this matter isn't so simple? That there are people secretly plotting against us?" Han Shuo's voice was soft, but surprised. The yin demon he'd secretly released had caught sight of two low ranked light mages.

There was a light journeyman mage and a light adept mage. These ranks of light mages had limited influence against high rank creatures like evil knights. However, even a middle level holy light spell could cause considerable damage to the gargoyles.

Therefore, Han Shuo immediately became cautious upon seeing the two light mages. He waved his arm at Faulke, "Halt for now. Let's me ascertain the situation first. If this is a trap, we'll immediately retreat."

Han Shuo was left with only one yin demon now. His observation was no longer as speedy as before, and he had no way of covering everything at the scene. He'd started to consider whether he should spend a while in closed door training to refine the higher rank mystical demon.

Circling around the rafts on the river, the yin demon indeed discovered the war equipment that Han Shuo had procured, and even Fabian and Jack of Boozt Merchant Guild among them. The bandits had tied them up tightly and placed two glinting steel knives against their necks. Their faces looked wan and forlorn, obviously having been immensely frightened.

There were a dozen merchants as well as thirty or so guards from other merchant guilds tightly tied up beside Fabian and Jack. The bandits surrounded and watched them closely.

After winning the gamble against Cameron, the Boozt Merchant Guild had naturally become the richest merchant guild in the empire. Cameron had fallen into a slump and lost the trust of his merchant guild. The Boozt Merchant Guild had taken advantage of the situation to develop, gradually becoming the most active amongst the major merchant guilds.

The war equipment Han Shuo had purchased was being transported by Boozt along with several other merchant guilds. If they didn't have a good first experience, it would negatively affect their impressions of Brettel City. Cooperation would be difficult to continue from then on.

Therefore, it was not just Fabian and Jack, the safety of these merchants and guards were equally important. If their safety wasn't guaranteed, the subsequent fall out would be hard to make up for, even if the bandits were all killed. Han Shuo had a major headache just looking at the strict security of the bandits.

"Dorcus, what should we do next?" A crude looking burly man over two meters tall, obviously the leader of these bandits, was currently asking a young man sitting on the raft. This young man had a resolute face, his eyes burning with wild ambition.

This young man was dressed in the clothes of a minor bandit lackey, with a height of nearly one meter ninety centimeters. He stood tall, like a straight pole that never bend nor break, and the vividly colored bandit outfit couldn't hide the wild light of ambition in his eyes. This young man was named Dorcus. He glanced at the bandit leader and said confidently, "Rest assured. I've made careful preparations beforehand. That I didn't let you kill these captives will make them apprehensive, not to mention we also hold the advantage with the rafts on this small river. We even used a large amount of money to recruit two light mages who can stop the assault of gargoyles. This plan is absolutely safe, they have no other choice but to bring the money."

"Dorcus, the civilian genius of the Imperial Academy of Strategy. So it's him. No wonder!" Han Shuo murmured upon hearing the two's conversation through the yin demon, who was circling around the young man.

Chapter 327: A talented person

The nature of the Lancelot Imperial Academy was different from that of the Babylon Academy. Lancelot Imperial Academy was an academy that groomed talented strategists, with magicians, swordsmen, and knights not within its scope. Similar to all other schools on the Profound Continent, it was always nobles who held the important positions within the Imperial Academy.

There were several reasons for why so many talented nobles came to be. The first reason being that the astronomical costs associated with attending such an Academy caused ordinary civilians to back down. The other reason was that, even if a civilian managed to enroll in the Imperial Academy, they would find it extremely difficult to find a good teacher who could teach them systemically about military affairs

However, nothing was ever set in stone. The Imperial Academy would still occasionally see one or two civilian students. These civilians would still manage to reveal their talents, even under such unfavorable conditions; they were so brilliant that they managed to steal the limelight from the other students of noble descent.

In such an academy, unparalleled geniuses would receive a multitude of offers from the greatest of teachers, guaranteeing their success. As long as these talented civilian teenagers appeared docile and clever, there would always be talent-seeking nobles and generals who would attempt to recruit them.

Of course, there were also a few wild and unruly civilian teenagers who didn't know to conceal their brilliance, which angered their fellow noble students. In the worst case scenario, they would be killed by their fellow students out of jealousy, or if their luck permitted, their careers would be obstructed, losing their chance to join the military.

Dorcas was exactly this kind of unlucky genius. The young Dorcas had once been unsurpassed in the Imperial Academy, but he'd become too haughty and didn't conceal his talent, falling in love with an earl's daughter. This made the girl's father and her fiancé's family very angry indeed.

The end result was that Dorcas had been groundlessly accused of crimes. Not only was he expelled from the Imperial Academy, but he was also hunted down by the two families, and almost lost his life. He had been forced to become a fugitive.

This had happened about a year ago. The Dark Mantle's records had details of this incident, and Han Shuo had also read through this intelligence when he'd exercised his rights in the Dark Mantle headquarters. It had left a deep impression on him, and he hadn't thought that he'd be able to meet this civilian military genius here.

Dorcas was standing on a wooden raft. His once haughty face was now a bit more melancholy due to the bitter experiences he had faced. He stood straight and looked off into the distance. He turned his head and said to that bandit leader, "Captain, the people holding torches should be those from Brettel City. After we acquire the 50,000 gold coins, we should refrain from appearing in the vicinity of that city. The city lord named Bryan isn't an easy person to deal with! If we don't leave quickly enough, not only will we have to give up the gold coins, but even our lives will be forfeit!"

"Don't worry. I'm not stupid enough to stay behind and let the people who killed Redbeard Troda surround me. Heh heh, let Laxi and the rest experience the rage of these people. Ten thousand gold coins is enough for us to live comfortably for quite a while." This bandit leader wasn't a fool. He cackled, and expressed his satisfaction that, after a lifetime of small jobs, he was able to split ten thousand gold coins for their efforts.

Han Shuo had seen everything through the eyes of the yin demon. He took a careful look at the raft that Jack and the others were on, before turning to Faulke and saying, "Hand the carts with the gold coins over to them, we cannot lose a single merchant."

"Sir count, are we really just going to submit to them just like this? We've already prepared many ways to counter them!" Faulke said anxiously upon hearing that Han Shuo intended to hand over the money without a fight, trying and failing to suppress his doubts.

“The Imperial Academy genius, Dorcas, is out there. If we are to go through with original plan we created, then we would be at a complete disadvantage. Water lies in the distance, we won’t have an opportunity to act without them harming the merchants. We should give them the gold coins first as ransom for the merchants and war equipment. We can discuss the matter of annihilating the bandits after they arrive safely back in our hands.”

Before they’d arrived, Han Shuo had planned to have the earth elite zombie strike out in an ambush. Had they been in the forest, then the wood elite zombie would be able to quickly ensure the safety of the merchants. Unfortunately, the cunning Dorcas had chosen the middle of a river as their place of transaction. Han Shuo had no other option since the water elite zombie had yet to finish developing.

“Alright, I’ll go now!” Faulk nodded his head. He didn’t have a better idea either. He mounted his horse and rode forward, opening his mouth and shouting, “Carry the boxes with the gold coins next to the river, we’re going to make the trade with the bandits.”

Han Shuo had purposely filled one box with gold coins and not crystal cards. The original plan had been to dump the box filled with gold coins amongst the bandits. The suspicions of the allied bandits would surely explode and result in a fight over the gold coins. As such, the earth elite zombie and wood elite zombie would be able to ambush them.

Now that Han Shuo and the others were in a passive position, they naturally could not force this scenario. When the clinking of gold coins sounded out, the bandits drew near on their wooden rafts, with those behind them raising their bows, taking aim at the knights on the shore. The bandits in the front slowly pushed the merchants and equipment to a more shallow location along the riverbanks.

Dorcas was indeed cautious enough, never allowing the rafts to wash ashore. The merchants and the battle wagons all waded to the banks a close distance away, not providing Han Shuo's side with a single chance to act.

After a case of gold coins were hauled aboard a raft by two bandits, a loud cheer arose from amongst the ranks of the bandits. The arrogant bandits laughed excitedly, with many leaders praising that the Imperial Academy's Dorcas, saying that he was very able indeed.

Ducas, responsible for the scheme, did not smile. His expression from start to finish was one of gloomy remoteness. Under the cheering of the bandits, his eyes held a hint of hesitation, as if this arguably perfect plan was a disgrace.

Amongst the excited clamor, the bandits were taking advantage of the fact that the raft was slowly floating away to suddenly extinguish all the torches in their hands when they were 50 meters away from Han Shuo and the others. The bandits ceased their mad laughter under the berating of their leaders. The moonless night was pitch black. Having lost their light and sound, no one could clearly see what path they were taking when they were 50 meters out, the only exception being Han Shuo.

These bandits didn't cross the river and disembark, but instead paddled along with the river, making use of the current. Dorcas shook his head at the bandits, who were silent but were squirming around with all sorts of weird postures to convey their excitement. He sighed inwardly, not knowing if it was right to use these bandits to exact his revenge, but now that he was considered a fugitive, unless he carried out the disgraceful actions of becoming a traitor to the Empire and seeking asylum in another country, who else could help him sate his desire for revenge?

Ai. He was someone who'd been born and raised in the Lancelot Empire in the end. No matter what, he couldn't become a lifelong traitor with unforgivable crimes. Being a bandit was vastly preferable to being a traitor hated by everyone in the Lancelot Empire, right?

"Faulke, escort them back. We're still some distance away from the city, so don't have any mishaps." Han Shuo's vision was likewise affected in the inky night. He'd had nearly lost sight of the wooden rafts that were slowly floating away. When the merchants and war weapons had all clambered ashore, Han Shuo hurriedly turned to Faulke and gave his orders.

“Sir Count, are we not going to hunt and slaughter those rotten bandits?” Faulke asked, looking at him confusedly.

“If you safely escort this equipment and the merchants back to the city, I’ll forget about your previous negligence. Remember, the area outside of Brettel City still isn’t safe. Make sure you don’t overlook anything again!” Han Shuo was thinking of the constant threat from the seven grand duchies, as well as the larger bandit groups wandering between the duchies and Brettel City. He gravely warned Faulke to be careful.

Faulke’s goal this time was to redeem himself through meritorious acts. It was because he was constantly thinking about this that he’d lost his usual cool-headedness during this extraction mission. He immediately came to his senses after hearing Han Shuo’s warnings and realized that he had become too obsessed. He calmly said, “Rest assured Sir Count, I will definitely ensure their safety and bring them back to the city.”

Seeing that Faulke’s eyes had regained their calm, Han Shuo relaxed. He knew that Faulke had recovered from his urgent desire of redeeming himself. He patted Faulke on the shoulder, and said in a gratified manner, “Be careful!”

He left nimbly like a light wind after speaking. Han Shuo’s figure quickly flashed out of sight in the pitch black night. Faulke and the others didn’t know what Han Shuo was planning to do.

“You lot, use your warhorses to pull the carts. You over there, dismount and give the merchants your horses. Hurry up, we need to take advantage of this darkness to return to the city. Stay sharp. We’re all going to be in for it if something happens...” Faulke began loudly giving orders after Han Shuo disappeared. The knights that Faulke brought quickly executed his orders, organizing the merchants and tying up the battle wagons and other materials, slowly making their way back to Brettel City.

Dorcas was standing on a wooden raft, his gloomy face flickering between red and white with the lights of the torches. He looked at some of the bandits busily splitting a chest full of gold coins in the next raft over. He asked with awful timing, “That matter that you promised me... when are you going to do it?”

“Relax, Dorcas! As long as you help us with a few more of these ‘business transactions’, and we earn enough gold coins to grow strong from recruits, even hiring soldiers and wiping the dukedom off the map won’t even be a problem then!”

A bandit leader amongst them casually fobbed off Dorcas’s inquiry. He turned to another leader beside him, smiling lecherously, “Tuca, we’ll soon bring our brothers to the Full Spring Garden brothel to play. These gold coins are enough for us to play for a while! Heh heh, our brothers have always wanted to go and try it out. Unfortunately, those refugees from Brettel City didn’t have much on them... we didn’t really earn much in all these years. Now that we finally have money, we should thoroughly enjoy it!”

“I like your suggestion, Laxi. Haha, let’s go together!” Bandit leader Tuca laughed and rubbed his chin. He chatted knowingly about the smaller bandit groups with them, the smaller ones comprised of 70-80 bandits, and the larger ones around 200. They specialized in robbing refuges between Brettel City and Seamist City. They had no ambition or great accomplishments to their name at all. Otherwise they would have gone and raided Brettel City long ago. These people didn’t plan on upgrading their subordinates’ weapons and armor after earning these gold coins, but instead harbored thoughts of enjoying their lives to the fullest. They didn’t appear to give a damn about the promise they’d made to Dorcas.

Dorcas, a student of the Imperial Academy, wasn’t an outstanding swordsman or knight. He’d spent all his time studying military strategy and tactical skills. Even though he was 1.9 meters tall, his strength wasn’t strong at all. To these crude and uncivilized bandits, this kind of weak strategist, who didn’t pose a threat to them and was able to scheme and create plans for them, was very handy indeed. They weren’t in a hurry to help him exact revenge at all.

“You guys promised me that you would help me take revenge after we got the gold coins!” Dorcas stared at the bandit leaders, who were unrestrainedly talking about which girl’s breasts were the largest, and which girl’s asses were the plumpest. Dorcas’ muffled voice carrying over the water.

“The most important thing is to let the brothers rest and have a hell of a time after working so hard for so long. Dorcas, let’s talk about this matter later. I’ll help you find a girl to thoroughly enjoy. She’ll definitely be a lot more worth it than that little noble girl you like, haha!” Even the leader that Dorcas was following was also laughing heartily without any cares, completely setting aside his promises to Dorcas.

“Aha, we’re here!” Once we get ashore and walk for a bit, we’ll arrive at the Narsen Duchy’s Tulian Town! The girls in the Full Spring Garden are awaiting us!” Laxi excitedly laughed, instructing his subordinates, “Hurry up! Stop the rafts, your boss will take you to have some fun!”

Dorcas wore an unsightly expression. He resented these untrustworthy bandits, but he knew that his own strength was limited. He was angry to the point of erupting, but he didn’t have any other choice. He could only stare at the bandits who were disembarking the rafts one by one, walking happily towards the Full Spring Garden in Tulian Town.

“My friends who have so graciously taken my fifty thousand gold coins, I’ve been waiting a long time for you!” Suddenly, the silence of the night was broken by the sound of a young man laughing. The silhouette of an extremely large person gradually appeared beneath the flickering light of the bandits’ torches, blocking their way.

Chapter 328: I will be your hunting hound!

The extremely tall figure was gradually revealed beneath the illumination of the torches as the mocking laughter rang out. It was a handsome, young man with a strange and evil smile. The young man was around a meter and ninety something centimeters tall. When he stood there, he was like an unsheathed sword, giving people an intense visual impact.

An azure warrior uniform emphasized his refined physique. His mouth showed a faint smile that gave off an aura of playfulness, like an eagle in the sky planning to toy with a rabbit that was frantically running away on the ground. He seemed both confident and at ease.

The frightened bandits hurriedly looked around when the young man revealed himself, as if they thought that there were more people behind the young man, which caused their nervousness and wariness to peak.

“Stop looking around. There’s only me!” Han Shuo explained with a faint smile, then stopped looking at the bandit leader that clearly let out a sigh of relief. He merely set his gaze on Dorcas, who was standing stiffly amongst the crowd, and asked, “Do you think these bandits, who only know how to enjoy themselves and are unable to achieve anything, will be able to help you to exact revenge?”

Dorcas revealed an indifferent expression. Then after a moment of silence, he looked at Han Shuo, “That is none of your business. You came for the fifty thousand gold coins, right?”

Han Shuo shook his head with a smile, then continued to fix his gaze on Dorcas, while saying dashingly, “No, fifty thousand gold coins might be a huge amount of money in the eyes of these bandits, but not in mine. The reason I followed you guys was not for the fifty thousand gold coins, but for you, Dorcas!”

Dorcas had a sudden change in expression and stared hatefully at Han Shuo, as if wishing to firmly commit Han Shuo’s appearance to memory. Then he smiled sadly, “I hadn’t that the two families would still have the desire to come after me after so much time had passed. I never would have thought that I would be worth so much. Ha!”

“Stop the bullshit. You’re just a single man and you dare to block our path. You’re just seeking death!” Laxie, the bandit leader, wanted to hurry along to the Full Spring Garden. He suddenly roared loudly after confirming that Han Shuo was indeed alone, unable to suppress the urgency in his heart.

The other bandit leaders all agreed after hearing Laxie’s roar. It seems like their lust had caused them to be unable to withstand the situation any longer. Under the orders of the bandit leaders, their underlings, equally urgent, quickly surrounded Han Shuo while wielding worthless weapons.

Han Shuo had a smile on his face from the start. He was completely indifferent towards the actions of these bandits, who only thirsted for the smooth skin of women. He continued to gaze at Dorcas and shook his head slightly. He finally decided to explain upon seeing Dorcas’ confused expression, “You might be both worthless and a hot potato to others, but you are worth far more than fifty thousand gold coins to me. I will explain to you in detail later, after I clean up these bandits. Then, I’ll take my time to discuss with you your true value.

“Prideful fellow, you are asking for death!” Laxie gazed at Han Shuo with rage. He waved his hands and shouted, “Kill him! He’s definitely that evil necromancer. Close in on him and don’t give him the chance to chant any spells.”

“Aha, he is the new city lord of Brettel City! Just look at that space ring on his hand. He’s definitely a fat target!. Brothers, take the space ring for me, I can already imagine the wealth within the space ring!” Bandit leader Tuca cawed weirdly in excitement. He raised the broad, double-edged battle axe in his hands and stared greedily at the space ring on Han Shuo’s finger.

“Dong... Dong dong...”

Just as the bandit underlings were about to tear Han Shuo to shreds, the sound of dull footsteps suddenly rang out.

“What’s that?!” Laxie’s messy eyebrows tensed, becoming two irregular triangles as he looked around and asked loudly.

The underlings had been about to make a move, but looked around in confusion when they heard Laxie’s shout.

“Dong... Dong dong... Dong dong dong...”

As the dull footsteps neared, several branches with sparse leaves began to shake, notifying these third rate bandits that even the ground was slightly shaking. However, even if they had a torch, the distance that the torch could illuminate was still very limited on this pitch dark night. This was why the bandits could only hear increasingly loud footsteps drawing closer to them, but they were unable to see what it was no matter how hard they looked around.

“That, my friends, is the sound that the metal hooves of the fire-spurting steeds of the evil knights make. Everyone, no need to look around, you’re all doomed!” Han Shuo suddenly explained with a smile in the midst of being surrounded by the bandits.

“Damn it, he already summoned his undead creatures! Kill him immediately! As long as he dies, the undead creatures won’t be too much of a threat without his orders!” The light adept mage, who had been hired by the bandits with a lot of gold, quickly exclaimed as he lost his calm.

The bandit leaders were frightened and unsure of what to do. They all yelled at their underling loudly when they heard the light adept mage’s shout, “You idiots, kill him quickly!”

The underlings swung back into action when they heard their leaders give them the same order to kill. They brandished the weapons in their hands and charged Han Shuo, trying to kill him before the undead creatures arrived.

Whoosh whoosh whoosh!

Under the flickering red light of the torches, long, thin, black bone spears shot out from Han Shuo. These bone spears flew out with extreme speed and were like rays of life-reaping black light. The unending bone spears actually seemed to be connected to each together, causing Han Shuo to look like a strange, black peacock with its tail fully opened.

“Ah.. Ahhhh....”

The bandits, who'd charged over, let out a dense series of terrible howls, sounding like firecrackers. When Han Shuo opened his “tail”, the bone spears either easily pierced their armor, which was only worth several silver coins anyways, or penetrated deep into the gaps between their bones or guts, sending blood flying everywhere.

The bone spears didn't diminish in power as they pierced the bandits' bodies. They had enough momentum to even string up the bandit behind the first one, making this sort of tremendous impact truly terrifying.

In the blink of an eye, the roughly thirty bandits that had charged forward had all been fatally pierced by the bone spears amidst their terrible wails. The blood covering the ground became strangely beautiful under the illumination of the torches that had fallen to the ground. The dense smell of blood instantly spread into the noses and mouths of the bandit leaders.

“Not-Not good!” Laxie's lust was gradually extinguished by the bone-piercing cold as he saw Han Shuo slowly rise from the mounds of corpses and blood. An intense flame of fear incinerated everything in his mind.

“Dong dong...”

The dull footsteps pounded on the hearts of every single bandit like beating drums. The “things” that they had only heard but couldn't see, now appeared behind them one by one. These “things” did not have eyes. Instead, their sockets were filled with flickering flames. Under the illumination of their burning eyes, enormous figures gradually appeared from the darkness.

Tuca's lips suddenly became strangely dry. He couldn't even speak smoothly as he muttered softly, “Everyone. T-those are Evil Knights, run!”

The hands of the two light mages trembled as they held their staffs. They had been hired with a lot of gold. However, purifying light magic at their current level of strength was truly limited. What's more, there were actually more than ten evil knights in front of them. Thanks to the blurry light, their sharp eyesight could see many more shadows behind the evil knights.

These bandits had indeed heard of the rumors that Han Shuo had obliterated the bandit Troda and others at the foot of Mount Tali. However, they'd thought that it had been done by the many soldiers of Brettel City, as well as Fulkin's mountain people.

There was no way that they would have factored the appearance of an archmage necromancer with mental strength on par with a grand magus, as well as a bone staff that doubled the number of summoned undead creatures. Just how many could Han Shuo summon?

"Sorry, we don't want the wages anymore!" The light adept mage turned around and looked towards Dorcas, then said to the other light journeyman mage, "Give them back the gold coins!"

The two light mages poured out roughly a thousand gold coins from their money bags. The adept mage bowed slightly towards Han Shuo in the distance and said in fearful yet respectful tone, "This doesn't have much to do with us. Please allow us to leave."

"You two despicable mages! How dare you actually run away first! I'll kill you myself!" Dorcas' bandit leader roared and then charged at the two light mages who wanted to retreat.

"I don't know why, but I'm starting to dislike light mages more and more. Also, I really hate your actions of defecting at the last minute, I think it's better if you stayed," Han Shuo gazed coldly at the two mages, who only knew how to save their own skin very well, and responded plainly.

Due to the wave of dense bone spears, none of the bandits dared to draw near to Han Shuo. All of them stayed as far away from Han Shuo as they could. However, there was still a large number of undead creatures behind them, so they were still dead no matter how they looked at it.

"Pierce!"

A bandit right next to an evil knight was pierced through by the evil knight's enormous bone spear and hoisted up high. The slaughter began the moment this bandit's corpse hit the floor. The ten evil knights slowly drowned the bandits with endless death along with the roughly thousand different undead creatures.

The night was as dark as ink. The torches began to extinguish as the bandits were killed one by one, and the darkness of the night gradually affected the bandits' vision. However, the undead creatures were like fish in water during the night. They silently slaughtered everything in front of them, not knowing what mercy was.

Dorcas had also revealed a terrified expression when all sorts of terrible howls started ringing out, standing out for his peculiarities as he held the torch amongst the crowd of people. Evil knights and zombies walked past him, as if they didn't know that there was a delicious human body standing beside them. He didn't seem to exist to them as they only slaughtered the living around him.

When the stark straight Dorcas noticed that none of the undead creatures attacked him, the fear in his heart gradually resided. Due to the treachery of the bandit leaders earlier, even though Dorcas had originally been their comrade, he felt a hint of joy as he watched them die.

"Good riddance, good riddance, that scum should have been dealt with ages ago." Dorcas muttered to himself as he looked at the bloody slaughter with indifference.

The two light mages were the first to receive the brunt of the bandits' attack after Han Shuo's merciless refusal. The two light mages, who'd originally been able to threaten the undead creatures a bit, nearly drowned in the furious attacks of the bandits. After the bandits had done away with the light mages, they were then consumed by a wave of undead creatures. As time passed in the pitch dark night, the terrible, unending screams gradually came to a halt.

After a while, only Dorcas, holding a torch with an indifferent expression, was left. There was also a ground covered in corpses apart from him, as well as a few ghouls munching on the corpses.

“That was a bit gory, but I hope you don’t mind.” Han Shuo floated towards Dorcas with a smile. He didn’t seem gentle at all as he smiled amidst a ground full of corpses. Instead, there was another sort of terror and sinister atmosphere about him. The fact that the ghouls feeding on the ground all left Dorcas’ side when Han Shuo neared only emphasized that all of this horror had resulted from this young man with a strange and evil smile.

Dorcas took in a deep breath and forcefully stopped himself from vomiting. He placed his focus on Han Shuo in an attempt to soften the hideous scene painted around him. “What do you want?”

“Hehe, I know some things about you, and I can also understanding the endless anger in your heart. I want to give you a chance. A chance to release your vengeance,” Han Shuo offered this extremely alluring suggestion with a smile.

This wasn’t something that anyone could bestow on him!

Before Han Shuo displayed the savageness of slaughtering all of the bandits, Dorcas wouldn’t have thought that the lord of Brettel City, someone who’d found it hard to keep himself safe, could give him any sort of chance.

However, Dorcas now had reason to believe that, as long as Han Shuo was willing, the revenge that had seemed impossible to take was nothing difficult in front of this man as savage as a demon.

Due to this, Dorcas only hesitated for a moment before nodding, “As long as you can take revenge for me, I can do anything for you.”

Han Shuo shook his head and said slowly with a smile, “It’s not that I will take revenge for you, it’s you who will take revenge for yourself!”

When Dorcas frowned, Han Shuo explained with a smile, “I will give you the chance to take revenge with your own hands. With your talent, the two families will be dancing in the palm of your hand sooner or later. Hehe, isn’t torturing them to death bit by bit with your own hands much better than letting someone else kill them?”

The girl that had fallen in love with Dorcas had now become his enemy's plaything. Due to the girl's relationship with Dorcas, her fiancé treated her savagely. The pitiful girl was completely helpless as she washed her face with tears everyday.

Although the girl's family was unhappy about this, there was nothing they could do about it as their daughter was already married. What's more, her husband's family was of a higher position, so her father could only blame all of it on Dorcas. He did not hold back in his pursuit of Dorcas. It could only be said that Dorcas possessed great luck to be able to survive the chase for so long.

The Dark Mantle knew about all this, but in the world where nobles ruled, even though the commoner born Dorcas was shockingly talented in militaristic affairs, it was not enough to change these unwritten rules that had existed for several thousand years.

The Dark Mantle would only kill the nobles that had betrayed the empire. However, nobles occasionally bullying a few peasants wasn't a huge matter. It was even more negligible if the bullied peasant didn't have any backing. The Dark Mantle had countless other things to do. They naturally would not waste their effort on minute matters like these. The fact that they had a note of this in their records was already due to Dorcas' strategic talent. Otherwise, there probably wouldn't even be a record of his name.

“I am a fugitive, how could I possibly use my power to kill my own enemies!” Dorcas was clearly moved by Han Shuo's suggestion. However, since Dorcas had shone with brilliance in the Imperial Academy, he was naturally not a fool. He looked at Han Shuo and asked after pondering for a while.

“Whether you are a fugitive in Brettel City or not is decided by me, the city lord! I know about your identity and hatred. The fact that I dare to accept you means that I am not afraid of your identity as a fugitive,” After saying this with a slight smile, Han Shuo raised a finger and pointed in the direction of the seven duchies, then said enticingly, "Aside from intense hatred, I can also see arrogant ambition that cannot be concealed in your eyes. Brettel City is a hunting ground for the seven duchies. However, they are also a hunting ground for me. Are you willing to become a hunter like me?"

Dorcas gazed deeply at Han Shuo. After a while, he prostrated himself towards Han Shuo without any regards to the blood on the ground and said solemnly, "Sir Count, I am not a hunter, but I will be your hunting hound!"

Chapter 329: Friends

The day had yet to brighten completely. In the soft purple and grey glow of dawn, the morning light slowly chased away the darkness in the sky as cool winds gently blew over. The golden sun slowly burst out with a thousand rays of splendor after a while.

Upon their return to Brettel City, Han Shuo and Dorcas were surprised to find that Faulke and the knights had also just arrived. Han Shuo could see traces of battle from their bodies and even see that some had disappeared eternally.

Dorcas rode on a thin, weak horse that had been taken from the bandits as he slowly followed Han Shuo back to Brettel City. Upon entering the city, the first things to greet his eyes were two mighty magic crystal cannons mounted on the city walls. Not only were the previously old broken down walls now shining brightly, their height had also increased. Looking at the city from a distance, Dorcas even felt that Brettel City had recovered a bit of its former prestige and magnificence.

Nodding to himself, Dorcas turned back to look at Han Shuo, who was quickly entering the city with a slightly darkened expression on his face. Dorcas understood that for Brettel City to have changed like this, the credit entirely belonged to this new city lord.

“What happened? Did something happen again? Where are the merchants and the battle equipment?” Han Shuo was like a ghost drifting by. His cold shout, along with the cool winds of early morning, made the still fearful Faulke jump out of his skin.

Hurriedly turning around to see that it was Han Shuo, Faulke heaved a sigh of relief. He hastily straightened his body and explained, “Your Lordship, some small incidents occurred on our way back. Our torches attracted the attention of many bandit groups, but luckily that area was near Mount Tali. Before the bandits could rush over, the mountain leader Fulkin came down to assist us. The merchants and battle equipment are still safe and sound, and only three knights died.”

Han Shuo's heart slowly returned to its proper place upon hearing that the merchants and equipment were all safe. He looked at Faulke with a faint nod and said in a softened tone, "Arrange proper funerals for the knights who've died. Our top mission is to exterminate all of the bandits in the surroundings before the seven grand duchies arrive."

"Rest assured, Your Lordship. I, Faulke, swear to take revenge for our brothers!" Faulke's tone was determined as he took out his sword to point it towards the sky and solemnly make a vow.

Dorcas rode the weak horse over to this side with clapping sounds. He'd taken meticulous looks at the city's defensive measures, contemplation filled his eyes. When he arrived in front of Han Shuo, Dorcas looked at the latter with a measuring look before opening his mouth to propose, "There were seventeen bandit groups between Brettel City and Seamist City. Taking away the five that you annihilated last night, there are still twelve left. The scales of these bandit groups aren't much, but they are as annoying as hateful flies. I think you should exterminate them first. Otherwise the safety of the merchants won't be guaranteed later."

"Your Lordship, are all of those greedy bandits dead?" Faulke queried upon hearing Dorcas' words.

Nodding his head, Han Shuo answered, "That's right. All five bandit groups are finished. Mhm, let me introduce someone to you. This is Dorcas from the Imperial Academy of Strategy. Perhaps you've heard about some of his past deeds. He will be your comrade from now on. No one is allowed to mention his identity as a fugitive in the future."

"Yes, Your Lordship!" Faulke immediately replied, his eyes looking at Dorcas with a hint of admiration. He also didn't ask Han Shuo why Dorcas was joining Brettel City. It had been this person who'd single-handedly planned the robbery and transaction. Dorcas had held the advantage from beginning to end and played with their group in the palm of his hand. Even Han Shuo ultimately had to surrender the fifty thousand gold coins. The intellect of this person was indeed the real deal.

"Take out a thousand knights for Dorcas from the three thousand you're training. Dorcas will be the captain of that team!" Han Shuo gave Faulke an order before looking over to Dorcas, "Dorcas, wipe out the remaining twelve bandit groups between Brettel City and Seamist City for me!"

Dorcas dismounted from the weak warhorse and saluted Han Shuo with a standard military posture. He said crisply and neatly, "Yes, Your Lordship!"

Nodding his head, Han Shuo once again turned towards Faulke and said, "The equipment for the city's defenses that have just arrived are for you to assemble in the appropriate positions.

Do this well for me during this time, as well as keep an eye on other matters within the city. Prepare to deal with the attacks of the bandits and seven grand duchies at any moment."

"Rest assured, Your Lordship. With this defensive equipment, I will make sure that anyone who dares to come and pillage Brettel City pay with their blood." Faulke promise.

"Mm. Right, what arrangements did you make for the merchants?" Han Shuo asked Faulke, suddenly remembering that he hadn't seen little fatty Jack in a long time, and also Fabian as well.

"I've arranged places for them in the city lord's mansion. Your Lordship's mansion is quite large and is currently the safest place in Brettel City, so I have arranged for the honored merchants to be located there." Faulke answered.

"Well done. I won't pursue your negligence any longer. Dorcas is a new addition to Brettel City, so help him familiarize himself with the city. Also, place a thousand soldiers under his command." Han Shuo gave his orders. He nodded towards Dorcas before leaving the city gates.

Han Shuo appeared in the city lord's mansion after a short while. More than ten merchants had been settled in. These merchants had fallen into a deep sleep, like dead pigs after the big fright. One or two of them occasionally whimpered in their nightmares, their bodies drenching in cold sweat.

Little Jack of the Boozt Merchant Guild was tightly hugging a pillow, the corner of his mouth dripping with saliva in his sleep. Han Shuo soundlessly walked in front of him. He revealed a knowing smile upon seeing Jack's ugly sleeping posture.

Back in the necromancy department at the Babylon Academy, Han Shuo recalled how he and little fatty Jack had swept the ground quickly with brooms. He also remembered when his body had still been weak and his magical cultivation still hadn't taken shape, this little fatty had stolen black bread to feed him. Han Shuo even recalled the time that he fought with other necromancy students...

Separated for more than two years, little fatty Jack actually hadn't changed too much, he was still ever so simple and honest. However, his body was becoming increasingly fatter. It was Han Shuo himself who'd changed the most. During these past two years, Han Shuo had grown from an errand boy to the point where no one dared to look down on him, be it his intelligence or his strength.

Having experienced one dangerous battle after another, Han Shuo's body, mental strength, and magical yuan had developed rapidly. He'd made breakthroughs again and again, many times with his life on the line. And now, he held the titles of count and city lord. As for this little fatty who lusted after food and wealth all day, he was still an accountant for the Boozt Merchant Guild.

"This brat will keep eating and drinking well in the Boozt Merchant Guild and won't have to meet with any danger. Phoebe gives me face and takes special care of him. Although his days aren't as interesting, they're very peaceful!" Han Shuo smiled and murmured as he looked at the drooling, sleeping fatty.

Not waking up little fatty Jack from his deep sleep, Han Shuo stood outside the window to look at him for a while. He then turned to leave, intending to chat later after he woke up.

Han Shuo had just taken a few steps when he heard a sudden, loud cry from inside Fabian's room. He hastily walked into Fabian's room and found the latter sitting up on the bed, drenched with sweat and a look of fear still lingering on his face. It turned out that he'd had a terrifying nightmare.

Seeing Han Shuo suddenly come in, the newly jolted awake Fabian cried out once again. Only when he discovered that the person who'd come was Han Shuo, did Fabian shut his mouth. He turned to give Han Shuo an ugly smile before saying with a somewhat embarrassed expression, "These past several years with the young miss have been all too peaceful. After encountering such a dangerous incident once again, I've discovered that I'm becoming more and more afraid of death. Maybe I've gotten too old now. I can no longer tolerate dangerous adventures like I used to. I just want to continue my life with quiet, peaceful days!"

Hearing Fabian say so, Han Shuo recalled the first time they met and revealed a relaxed smile. He found himself a chair and sat down, before saying to Fabian, "Such is life. If you want more wealth and a more prominent position, you have to put in more effort and handle greater danger. Heh, it was my carelessness that caused you guys to encounter this kind of incident this time. Fortunately everyone came out unscathed, otherwise I really wouldn't be able to forgive myself!"

Among these people, the merchants had all come here because of the benefits that Han Shuo promised them, apart from Fabian and Jack. If these people died, Han Shuo would only feel pity and immediately find a way to make it up for their guilds, lest their guilds lose their confidence in him.

But for Fabian and Jack, Han Shuo truly cared for them, especially Jack. Jack had been Han Shuo's best friend since when he was still a nobody with nothing. If Jack died because of his carelessness, Han Shuo would never forgive himself. He'd might even blame himself to the point of breaking down in the short run.

Fabian looked at the young man who was over one meter ninety centimeters tall standing before him. He inwardly tried to overlap this person with that thin, weak figure that he'd met for the first time in the Dark Forest. Fabian discovered that he couldn't do so no matter how hard he tried just based on the change in body size alone.

Time could change everything, so Fabian couldn't help but feel emotional. The older he became, the more timid he grew. However, Han Shuo was the opposite. He'd developed from a youngster to a young man whom no one dared to underestimate.

Han Shuo's power had become increasingly stronger as he slowly revealed himself to be a striking figure in the upper echelons of society. For His Majesty the King to allow Han Shuo to take up the mess that was Brettel City, it absolutely wasn't a poor posting that those unaware were gossiping about. It was actually the tempering for an invincible sword. Fabian looked at the young man in front of him, the look in his eyes deepening as he was unable to understand the latter's inner thoughts. A flash of inspiration suddenly struck him.

"This is the letter that young Miss Phoebe asked me to personally hand to you." Fabian took out an envelope emitting a faint fragrance with a rose printed on it. He respectfully placed it in Han Shuo's hand.

"Alright, old Fabian. You continue to rest. I still need to console the frightened merchants after they wake up! Many industries in Brettel City are awaiting investment. Cooperation with other major merchant guilds will certainly be more intimate from now on. Apart from the current, urgent shortage of weapons and equipment, I also need a steady stream of food and pharmaceuticals. I will be depending on you for all of this." Han Shuo put away the fragrant letter before saying to Fabian with a smile.

"Hehe, with the relationship between you and young Miss Phoebe, the Boozt Merchant Guild will definitely give you our full support." Fabian also understood the two's relationship. He winked at Han Shuo and spoke humorously with a meaningful smile.

"Of course, I won't treat the Boozt Merchant Guild badly either. Eh, your leader Phoebe included!" Han Shuo said smilingly, his face delighted as he left Fabian's room. The open door closed slowly by a wave of force after he left.

"He is getting more and more powerful. Young Miss Phoebe is indeed a true businesswoman. She knew to invest in him before he even accomplished his great deeds. It seems the Boozt Merchant Guild will definitely bloom and usher in a new era of glory in the hands of young miss!" Fabian whispered thoughtfully to himself as he watched the door close automatically without wind.

"Phoebe, ah Phoebe, I've received your love!" In his room, Han Shuo murmured to himself with a cute smile after reading the fragrant letter.

Brettle City had been bathing in a happy, joyous atmosphere three days later. The center of the city lord's mansion was filled with the sounds of chatter and laughter.

The Food Festival wasn't considered a big festival in the Lancelot Empire. However, Han Shuo was placing great importance on this festival because the merchants had arrived safely. Moreover, he wanted to use them to send some messages.

Rows of tables, that were over ten meters long, were set up in front of the city lord's mansion. Various fine snacks and deliciously aromatic, steaming hot meals came out in turns from the wide open gates of the city lord's mansion. Any civilian in Brettel City was free to enjoy this food to their heart's content.

The civilians coming because of the news took only ten seconds to get past their initial doubts, becoming deliriously happy instead. Knights in shining armor maintained order with a polite, refined manner and smiles on their faces.

Exquisite food had been arranged on a luxurious, round sandalwood table inside the city lord's mansion. Dick had prepared for the merchants who'd escaped death. Fabian, on the other hand, seemed to become a co-host as he helped Han Shuo entertain the guests who came from distant areas. He placed gold coins directly in their hands for the war chariots and equipment that they'd transported.

The merchants' grins grew even wider after they'd received their payment, ceaselessly showering praises upon Han Shuo, who was sporting a refined smile. They declared that this business was just the beginning of a great partnership, and that whatever Han Shuo needed would be delivered in an endless stream.

“Ladies and gentlemen, everyone...” Han Shuo picked up his glass of fine red wine, his voice resounding loudly throughout the entire audience. The profit seeking merchants were currently overjoyed as they received their payment. Everyone immediately stopped their noisy chattering and smiled as they looked up to see Han Shuo’s dashing figure, waiting for him to continue his speech.

When the hubbub had quieted down, Han Shuo said with a slight smile, “Ladies and gentlemen, this transaction is just the beginning. Brettel City needs a steady stream of goods and resources. The harvest from the mines of the surrounding mountains is also priceless. From now on you will definitely be able to obtain more wealth in this city.”

Pausing for a bit, Han Shuo’s smile disappeared as he raised his voice to speak gravely, “As a city that had been trampled on by bandits and foreign countries for too many years, Brettel City has been through too much hardship and pain. No other city has been through so much agony and humiliation like this city in the Lancelot Empire.”

“His Majesty bestowed upon me Brettel City. I accepted it with a heavy heart and the mission to bring back its prosperity. However, my power alone is limited, but I will create good conditions that are favorable for you, so that you can obtain what you need in Brettel City.”

The merchants weren’t stingy with applause that didn’t cost the anything. After the rain of applause, the not-too-luxurious banquet continued.

Little fatty Jack and Fabian walked over to Han Shuo. Jack looked up at the tall, imposing Han Shuo and said, “Bryan, I don’t want to stay at Ossen City anymore. It’s so boring. Let me stay in Brettel City, I can help you.”

Han Shuo was surprised. He subconsciously raised his glass to clink with Jack’s for a toast. After finishing the glass of fine wine, he spoke unhurriedly after some hesitation, “Jack, only the two of us know how deep our relationship goes. It’s not that I don’t want you to stay here, but this is a very dangerous place. You will be in constant, life threatening danger. As a friend, I advise you to remain at the Boozt Merchant Guild. That way, at least you will always be safe.”

Jack shook his head, the layers of fat on his face also shaking. He turned to look at the shocked Fabian by his side and said, “The Boozt Merchant Guild is too peaceful. I’m still too young. I’m very grateful to young Miss Phoebe and you for always taking care of me, but Jessica has said that the one she likes must be an experienced knight or a noble. I feel that no matter how much I try, young Miss Phoebe can’t make me a knight or a noble, but maybe you can, Bryan.”

Han Shuo was speechless. He hadn’t expected that because of a lady, the always timid, cowardly little fatty Jack could also grow to possess this dangerous item called “ambition”.

Chapter 330: Preparing for war

“Jack, are you truly prepared to face the dangers that are to come?” Fabian asked Jack after he let out a long sigh. He could see the same prideful and fearless spirit that he used to have emanating from Jack

Nodding heavily, Jack said stubbornly, “Yes, I’ve made up my mind.”

Seeing that Jack was insistent, Fabian shook his head and didn’t say anything more. He understood in his heart that Jack had finally grown up. Maybe some tempering at Jack’s age wasn’t a bad thing. Not to mention that Fabian knew that Han Shuo would definitely take good care of Jack and never allow his friend to get hurt.

Fabian’s silence meant that he was no longer opposed to the idea. Jack then turned towards Han Shuo, eyes full of expectation. Han Shuo, half a head taller than Jack, stood in front of him and patted him on the shoulder. He said sincerely, “Don’t rush such a decision for now. Stay in Brettel City for a few days. Let me know after you’ve thought things through clearly.”

Brettel City wouldn’t be quite so peaceful over the next few days. Maybe when Jack saw the cruel realities of war for himself, he’d automatically drop this idea, Han Shuo thought to himself.

Han Shuo didn’t continue to talk with Jack about this topic anymore. However, he was rather interested in Jack’s favored girl, Jessica, and he asked all sorts of things about her.

According to Jack’s stammering answers, Han Shuo gained an understanding that the girl named Jessica was the daughter of a small noble. Her father had done some business with the Boozt Merchant Guild and had gotten to know Jack as he’d often visited Boozt. At the moment, Jack’s love was one-sided. He was a mere accountant of the merchant guild, so he naturally couldn’t attract the attention of the noble’s daughter. Not to mention Jack’s chubby body garnered no advantages in his favor.

Jack had also found out about Jessica’s ideal man by use of sly methods to extract this information. In the Profound Continent, where aristocracy dominated, even Phoebe, the owner of the Boozt Merchant Guild, wasn't accepted by the upper class. How could Jack, a small accountant, be accepted then?

Therefore, Jack now hoped that Han Shuo would help him due to his fanatical love for Jessica and possibly his truly motivated mindset.

The joyous atmosphere lasted throughout the banquet, the guests feeling very much at home. Outside of the city lord's mansion, the civilians, who'd heard the news, were reluctant to disperse and kept on coming. The temptation of free food had exceeded Han Shuo's imagination. The hired servants were busy all day, but still couldn't manage to keep up. This situation dragged on until the sun set behind the mountains and the veil of night was about to shroud the earth. Only upon the knights' friendly persuasion did the crowd of civilians finally disperse.

The previous night had been without a moon. It was conspicuously bright tonight, as if the moon were making up for yesterday's day off. Standing in the highest bell tower of the city lord's mansion, Han Shuo looked over Brettel City, bathed in moonlight. Brettel City was vast as it covered an enormous area. Houses occupied every stretch of land all the way to the city gates in four directions, absolutely able to accommodate millions of inhabitants.

Brettel City had originally been built as a military base from which to attack the seven great duchies. Brettel City was still standing proud even after much vicissitudes and humiliation. Had it not suffered the severe retaliation of the seven great duchies after many failed attempts at conquering them, Brettel City would likely be one of the strongest cities in the Lancelot Empire

A great deal of gold coins had been poured into the renovation of Brettel City. Han Shuo hadn't held back on the heightening and enhancement of the city walls. In addition to the six terrifyingly powerful magic crystal cannons, many war chariots and stone-throwing catapults now filled the originally empty posts along the wall. Various equipment of great firepower had been assembled.

Brettel City had just begun to reveal its fangs starting at an unknown time, like the ferocious, giant war machine it was. After investing millions of gold coins, it was ready to crush all of those arrogant, ambitious invaders that dared to come at a moment's notice.

A brigade of a thousand people gradually made their way back from the direction of Seamist City. This soldier brigade belonged to Dorcas. Their shining weapons and sturdy armor were completely on a different level compared to those of last night. Each sword was worth at least three gold coins, and each set of armor and helmet was worth at least five gold coins as they were forged from the finest of steel.

Moreover, each soldier was equipped with other sharp, dexterous weapons, such as daggers, worth over ten gold coins in value. However, there were soldiers who should have been knights but had temporarily been assigned to the infantry units due to a lack of warhorses. Warhorses were a scarce resource even in the Lancelot Empire. In fact, the seven great duchies were experts in rearing horses. It was a pity that Han Shuo hadn't found a way to purchase from them.

A thousand soldiers riding warhorses advanced orderly towards Brettel City under Dorcas' leadership. These people must have been through many battles, each looked remote with a subtle glint of madness in their eyes. Their armor and weapons had been polished clean, but the bloodstains on their clothes underneath were very obvious.

From the highest point of the city lord's mansion, Han Shuo looked down from above at Dorcas for a while before whispering to himself in satisfaction, "Three days, twelve bandit groups. Out of the thousand soldiers who'd departed, nine hundred and sixty have returned safely. Only forty deaths. Quite a talent indeed!"

Half an hour later, Dorcas had changed into a clean outfit and walked under the moonlight towards the city lord's mansion. Han Shuo received him in the living room.

"Dorcas, very well done. Have all twelve bandit groups been completely destroyed?" Han Shuo looked at the kneeling Dorcas and asked smilingly.

Shaking his head, Dorcas looked up at Han Shuo and said, "Sir Count, there are still over seven hundred that are still alive."

Han Shuo frowned, not yet allowing Dorcas to rise. His finger subconsciously tapped the armrest of his chair. He squinted at Dorcas, asking, "Dorcas. You led a thousand soldiers out. With your methods, you wouldn't have allowed seven hundred bandits to escape, would you?"

Dorcas looked up at Han Shuo, his expression unchanged as he replied, "Sir Count, twelve bandit groups were completely destroyed, all of the obstacles between Seamist and Brettel City have been cleared. Only, your humble servant doesn't think that blind killing is a good way. The crimes of those seven hundred bandits aren't enough to condemn them to death. They were only helpless and forced to commit crimes to survive."

"This servant feels that if your Lordship wants Brettel City to develop as fast as possible, appropriately soft policies are needed, apart from the weapon of wholesale slaughter. The bandits are easy to tame. Once they experience some tempering, they will sincerely submit to you, my Lord. They will also become your fierce and loyal warriors."

Han Shuo was silent for a while after hearing Dorcas' words. He then looked at Dorcas, slowly nodding as he said, "Dorcas, your words aren't wrong. I indeed hadn't considered it carefully. Mhm. If so, then you must have recruited all seven hundred of those bandits, but why don't I see them?"

Nodding his head, Dorcas was still kneeling on one knee as he hadn't received an order to rise. He said respectfully, "That is right. Seven hundred forty two bandits have all submitted and are cleaning up the battlefield as per my order. My Lord, the rotting corpses of refugees are everywhere along the road from Seamist City to Brettel City. This kind of situation is very detrimental to the development of Brettel City, so I've ordered the bandits to clean all of the eyesores from the roadside."

"Very good, Dorcas, that's very thoughtful of you. Mm, right, all of your people have come back. Aren't you afraid that those bandits will run away?" Han Shuo first praised the other before asking skeptically.

“My Lord, you may not know that the life of those bandits isn’t any better than that of the refugees’. I only promised to give them the same treatment as ordinary soldiers in Brettel City, and they agreed without hesitation.” Dorcas replied before pausing for a moment. He took out a big bundle, handing it over to Han Shuo with both hands as he said, “A total of thirty-seven thousand gold coins were found after raiding the twelve bandit groups. There were also, silver, jade, and ores of about several thousands gold coins worth, which the soldiers are now transporting to the warehouse. As for some worthless weapons, I left them in the lair of a bandit group for now as they were too heavy while their value wasn’t very high. I felt that there was no need to bring them back, so left them.”

“Good. Well done. You’ve thought it out very well. Rise. I will record your accomplishment of great merit. As long as you keep this up, you’ll get what you want sooner or later !” Han Shuo looked deeply at Dorcas, saying, “Brettel City is your stage. It seems that you are slowly adapting to your new position. Our Empire has sent the great armies to the seven duchies in the east, but couldn’t dominate them. However, since we’re already standing here, we must seize this chance at all costs to soar to new heights. We shall show those mediocre talents of the Empire, who couldn’t do it, how we do it.”

“Your servant swears to follow you to the end, my Lord!” Dorcas let out a loud shout. He stood up straight before Han Shuo, like another invincible Demonslayer Edge.

“Alright then, you are dismissed. The gold coins are temporarily in your care, consider them the capital for the armor and weapons of the seven hundred new recruits.” Han Shuo signaled Dorcas’ dismissal. After the latter left, Han Shuo fell into silence, musing over Dorcas’ words about tempting the bandits. He felt that there was indeed some truth to his words.

Two days later, early in the morning.

Dick hurriedly came to see Han Shuo with a report, “My Lord, several large bandit groups of the same size as Troda’s group are gathering in a forest over six miles away from Brettel City. I have received this information from a Dark Mantle member conducting a mission in one of the duchies. I heard that these bandit groups have a total of fifteen thousand people, all are prepared to rush over and furiously pillage our city.”

“It’s about time they came!” Han Shuo coldly snorted then said, “Send some people to keep tabs on their whereabouts. Fifteen thousand bandits? This will be the first real challenge for Brettel City to face!”

“My Lord, do you want to notify the chiefs of the mountain people? It’s too dangerous this time with just the three thousand soldiers guarding Brettel City. The mountain people might be able to help us!” Dick proposed.

Shaking his head, Han Shuo said, “Not for now. This is a test for us. The results of this battle will determine if I can make them dance to my tune in the future. Humph! Even though we only have a little over three thousand soldiers, the walls of Brettel City are no longer tattered like they were before. I’ve spent so many gold coins on Brettel City! Do they think it’s that easy to break?”

Han Shuo dared to say so because he was quite confident. The soldiers could hide on the high city walls and wait at ease for the enemies to exhaust themselves, while using their new equipment such as the great war chariots, fire and stone-throwing catapults to attack downwards. The six magic crystal cannons were no decorations either. In the worst case, Han Shuo could also summon the great undead army to join the fray. He believed that it absolutely wouldn’t be that easy for fifteen thousand bandits to break into the current Brettel City.

The entire Brettel City had unknowingly gone on high alert. Groups of soldiers dragged massive rocks through the streets. However, the war chariots and huge magic crystal cannons that the citizens had grown used to seeing everyday became tightly covered under gray cloth for an unknown reason, as if afraid of being discovered.

The originally indifferent civilians gradually became more interested in this new city lord. In addition to the bandits being annihilated at Mount Tali, there was also news of the obliteration of a dozen bandit groups between Seamist City and Brettel City that'd been deliberately spread throughout the city.

Moreover, an endless stream food had been distributed to them from the city lord's mansion on the Food Festival yesterday. For once, the civilians had been treated to a fine filling meal. Their confidence towards the city gradually increased.

However, they were used to the city lords betraying them at critical moments. As the real crisis had yet to arrive, it was still unknown whether this new city lord was worthy of their trust. Therefore, the civilians had yet to sympathize with the new city lord. They only quietly observed the changes in Brettel City with eyes withholding.

After one more day, the four gates of Brettel City were all shut tightly. Merchants or civilians, all were forbidden from leaving. From time to time, soldiers would appear at the four gates to swept their vigilant eyes across the scene outside. Several small teams of knights on warhorses rode tirelessly around the city.

Even though the knights didn't say anything, the citizens of Brettel City had been through too many painful wars. They smelled a familiar scent in the air.

War was coming!

Chapter 331: So what if I tricked you!

Bandits from the four large bandit groups had gathered on the plains six miles away from Brettel City, and were slowly making their way towards the city.

These bandit groups were vastly different from the small bandit groups that hid between Brettel City and Seamist City. Among these groups, the smallest, the Bloodtooth Bandits, had more than two thousand people. The largest Greenfire Bandits had more than six thousand people, and was double the size of the city guard of Brettel City by itself.

These large bandit groups were the same as the Redbeard Bandits, a harbinger of disaster that frequently visited and looted the seven duchies, spelling doom for every city they descended upon. Wherever they went within the seven duchies, the cities that were robbed were swept clean. As the seven duchies were constantly warring with each other and there were many mountains and hills to hide in around the seven duchies, these bandits were like fish in water, becoming parasites that were thoroughly hated by the seven duchies.

In contrast to the typical bandit groups, these bandits were well-equipped. Some former military officers from the seven duchies were actually amongst them. They decided to bring their men out to the plains when they'd run afoul of the nobility in their own duchy or had committed some dire crime.

These people had military backgrounds. Although they had become bandits, their discipline and combat knowledge had not decreased one bit. After becoming bandits, they used the wealth and equipment that they plundered for soldiers and warhorses. This resulted in their equipment and combat strength being on par with the official armies of the seven duchies.

This time around, the four bandit groups heading towards Brettel City were the Greenfire Bandits, the Battleaxe Bandits, the Flying Dragon Bandits, and the Bloodtooth Bandits. The Battleaxe Bandits and the Flying Dragon Bandits had four thousand and three thousand men respectively. They had excellent equipment and were experienced and bloodthirsty people.

Currently, the leaders of the four bandit groups was walking in the center of his troops, still discussing the plans for their attack on Brettel City.

“Does Brettel City really have the wealth that you mentioned? I visited the city just half a year ago. Apart from stones, there weren’t any other valuables. The brothers who made the trip with me didn’t gain anything!” Bloodtooth’s leader Lance asked skeptically.

Lance had only joined this time because the other three had personally invited him. He had planned on pillaging a small town in the Helon Duchy. If he hadn’t understood that the other three were even greedier than him, Lance definitely wouldn’t have agreed to join them on this raid of Brettel City.

“Brettel City is different from before. The new city lord is said to be extremely wealthy. The magic cannons owned by the Helon Duchy sissies were seized. There are rumors that Helen Tina was even raped by the city lord. Damn it, that wench Helen Tina is one of the well known beauties in the seven duchies and is also grand duke. Who would have thought that she would actually be sullied by the new city lord!” Leader Bynam of the Battleaxe Bandits was a brute that stood over two meters tall. He had an enormous battle axe strapped on his back that was a meter and fifty centimeters long. What exposed skin could be seen showed that he was as hairy as an orc.

“Lance, I’ve received definitive information that Brettel City is definitely different from before. Just the six magic cannons alone are already worth six hundred thousand gold. There’s also the wealth of the governor and merchants. Brettel City currently has at least one million gold.” Greenfire’s leader Faust explained to Lance.

Faust had once been a high ranking officer of the Narsen Duchy, and had a decent reputation in the ever raging conflict between the seven duchies. However, he had been dismissed for wantonly slaughtering captives in battle. When Faust received this news, he led his men and transitioned to being bandit mercenaries. By transitioning from a high ranking officer to a bandit, Faust was even more in his element, expanding the Greenfire Bandits to their current size of six thousand men, no longer restricted by anyone.

Of the four bandit groups, Faust's Greenfire Bandits were not only the largest in number, but they were also the strongest in combat. After all, Faust had a military background and was extremely skilled in leading and training his men.

Hearing Faust's explanation, the eyes of other bandit leaders, including the silent, malicious looking Flying Dragon Bandits' leader Afie, shone with greed. One million gold was a large amount in anyone's eyes. If even the dukes of the seven duchies knew of this, they would've possibly come on the raid as well, not to mention these bandits!

"Faust is indeed formidable, haha! One million gold! They want to defend that only relying on Brettel City's defensive measures? We've really struck it rich this time." Battleaxe's Bynum laughed loudly, as if imagining limitless gold coins raining down on him.

Flying Dragon Bandit's Afie looked at Bynum in disdain. What an idiot. If Brettel City was so easy to conquer, why hasn't the equally brutal and greedy Faust already taken all the gold for himself? He'd even kindly invited them to share the spoils.

Of the four bandit leaders, although Faust was brutal, greedy, and had outstanding military strategy, he wasn't a ruthless or scheming person. On the other hand, Flying Dragon's Afie had the nickname of "Vicious Dragon", referring to his vicious personality and his tendency to use despicable, insidious tricks.

When Faust mentioned the one million gold, Graves thought for a moment and secretly decided that he definitely shouldn't be the main offense after reaching Brettel City, at least not until after analyzing the situation. If not, he could easily lose all of his hard earned capital.

With the temptation and desire for gold, the four bandit groups marched slowly towards Brettel City's city walls dressed in their respective colors.

Tall and broad city walls stood before them, not a single hole could be seen on the repaired city walls. From the outside, Brettel City seemed to have a tight, sturdy defense.

"Wow. Brettel City has changed a lot, I remember when i was here previously, the city gate was riddled with holes. The walls weren't as high as they are now either. We could easily break into the city at that time. We definitely didn't encounter such a strong resistance. Looks like Brettel City is definitely different now." Lance couldn't help but exclaim as he raised his head and gazed at Brettel City.

"Eh? Faust, where are the magic cannons you mentioned?" Battleaxe's leader Bynum firmly remembered the cannons were worth six hundred thousand gold. He wasn't fazed by the destructive power of the cannons. Instead, he was pondering how to exchange the magic cannons for glittering gold coins after obtaining them. Bynum felt a delightful sense of satisfaction every time he imagined being drowned in gold.

Faus was riding on a tall warhorse and didn't immediately respond to Bynum's question. Instead, he started ordering the Greenfire bandits to line up in formation, preparing to engage in battle at any moment. Only when the Greenfire bandits were in formation did Faust gaze at the city walls, realizing that there really seemed to be no magic cannons on top of the city walls.

Frowning as he thought for a moment, Faust replied, "The magic cannons are definitely in Brettel City. Just keep focusing on that. Brettel City has four city walls, our four groups will each take one city gate. Follow our previous arrangement. Once you see my signal, we will all attack Brettel City together."

"Brettel City's city guard only has three thousand soldiers. A city gate will at most have a thousand soldiers defending it. You have all heard of their combat strength. As long as you spread your troops out when attacking, the magic cannons would not be able to deal a heavy blow. Also, the magic cannons need to be reloaded with magic ores. There is also a delay after every cannon blast. They could possibly be lacking in magic ores as well, therefore, there is no need to fear them.”

“Our four sides only need to break through one of the walls. Brettel City will be ours based on our strength. There might be a few casualties this time around. However, think about the one million gold, the glittering gold that is piled up in the governor’s mansion. It’s impossible to obtain that without any sacrifice.”

Bynum rubbed his hands and said excitedly, “I’m itching to begin!”

“That’s good. Leave the main gate to us. The three of you decide amongst yourselves who to attack which gate. I’ll send the signal to begin the attack in two hours. Whoever first breaks into the city will get 40% of the gold.” Faust said with a low voice.

This was the plan that was previously agreed on, everyone had no objections. Hence, the other three bandit groups left in their respective directions after a short discussion. On the way to their selected city gate, “Vicious Dragon” Afie ordered his men, “Take note of the other three city gates. You are to immediately send a signal to me when any of them has broken through.”

“Relax boss, we all know what needs to be done.” One of the bandits nodded, leaving stealthily with the rest of them. They had already known of their leader’s sinister personality and were already used to such situations.

Afie didn’t want his Flying Dragon Bandits to actually test out how strong the Brettel City defenses were. Furthermore, Afie was afraid Faust had deliberately invited them to be cannon fodder. He was taking careful precautions against Faust in case Brettel City had any powerful artillery. In this way, Graves would still consider whether or not he needed to follow Faust’s plans.

The temptation of a million gold was indeed huge. However, Graves naturally would retreat without hesitation if he wouldn’t be able to survive to enjoy it. He didn’t care about Faust’s arrangements. Only by preserving his own strength would there be more opportunities to gain wealth. If he recklessly squandered his capital, it definitely wouldn't be worth it.

Han Shuo, Dorcas, Faulke, Dick, and the rest had just exited the city lord's mansion after a discussion in Brettel City. Han Shuo, Dorcas, and Faulke headed towards one of the city gates, while Dick, Chester and Fabian headed towards another city gate.

The remaining yin demon floated around, eavesdropping on every conversation that the four bandit groups had. The weapons with heavy firepower on the high city walls were all temporarily hidden. The sparse soldiers on top of the city wall were only equipped with bows and crossbows, attentively watching the bandit groups that were a distance away.

Of the four city gates, the main gate that Han Shuo went to had the fewest soldiers and weapons. There were only three hundred soldiers and not a single magic cannon located here. However, he had to face the Greenfire Bandits' six thousand members. The Greenfire Bandits were the strongest and were also the main force behind this attack.

"Bryan, do you feel confident?" Little Fatty Jack's voice trembled, a bit hesitant compared to normal as he looked at the dense mass of bandits in the distance.

End of Part 1 of the chapter

Jack had come over at Han Shuo's request. He had already told Jack before that, "Join me in seeing this battle through. If you are willing to stay after the battle ends, I'll agree to appoint you as Brettel City's finance minister."

When Jack heard Han Shuo's words, he agreed without hesitation. However, as he currently stood on the tall, broad city walls, seeing the well-equipped, vicious-looking bandits, his heart quailed.

"Why, are you afraid?" Han Shuo chuckled as he poked fun at Jack.

Valiantly puffing out his chest, Jack shouted as if reassuring himself more rather than answering the question, "What's there to be afraid of?!"

I'm just a little nervous since this is my first time. Not to mention, even if I stay in Brettel City, I will only be a finance minister. It's not like I need to go to battle. What should I be afraid of?"

"Very good, if you are able to continue watching to the end of the battle, still have just as strong a resolve then, I guarantee you will be able to win over that noble girl Jessica." Han Shuo laughed as he spoke.

Once he heard Han Shuo mention Jessica, Little Fatty Jack's eyes became a little downcast, but was immediately replaced by a look of determination. Nodding his head gravely, Jack clenched his fist while looking at Han Shuo, "Bryan, although I can't become a knight, I can definitely still become a noble!"

Smiling slightly without reply, Han Shuo observed the Greenfire Bandits in the distance. They were currently using simple wooden frames to form a tall wooden tower, ten mages of various aptitudes were slowly climbing up the tower with the aid of the other bandits.

The strongest of the mages was a lightning archmage. The rest were all minor mages from other majors. The rarity of mages made them highly valued in any country throughout the continent. Their value differed accordingly based on the difference in strength. It was said that the Greenfire Bandits kidnapped the lightning archmage's family and was threatening him with his family's lives. If not, no archmage would be willing to be a lowly bandit's accomplice.

The equipment of the mages on the wooden tower were rather uncommon though. Not only were their magic robes exceptionally beautiful, they each held a valuable magic staffs. It looked like Faust had really invested quite a bit into them. That made sense, considering the impact mages had on a battle. If a bandit group boasted of a mage, their strength would naturally greatly increase. Furthermore, it was also a sign of status to a bandit leader for his troop to have a mage.

The wooden tower was six hundred meters from Han Shuo, with some wheels at the bottom of the tower that could be pushed. A few bandits equipped with shields also climbed onto the tower, protecting the valuable magicians from all directions so that they could unleash their magic without distraction. Once the battle truly started, the tower could be pushed nearer to the city wall by using the wheels. This would allow the magicians to better rain their spells down onto Brettel City.

Six hundred meters wasn't an unsurpassable distance to the Demonslayer Edge wielding Han Shuo. Once the Demonslayer Edge flew out, the magicians that were six hundred meters away would definitely be caught off guard, either dying or suffering severe injuries. However, the battle had yet to begin. It wasn't wise for Han Shuo to unleash the Demonslayer Edge at this moment. Hence, he only watched as they completed the construction of the wooden tower, not acting rashly.

Once the wooden tower was finished, the bandits also pushed out four repeater ballistae. These ballistae had a shooting range of around five hundred meters and could amazingly shoot six penetrative crossbow bolts in a single load. Han Shuo had also purchased twenty of these from the Boozt Merchant Guild this time, with six of them hidden on the city walls right at this very moment. Han Shuo was naturally familiar with the piercing abilities of these carts.

"Jack, when the battle begins, don't leave my side no matter what happens, and always stay within ten meters of me. I can guarantee your safety, but if you happen to be ten meters away, immediately lie down and climb within the city walls." Han Shuo immediately turned towards little Fatty Jack when he realized that the bandits actually had crossbow carts, giving prudent instructions.

Jack became nervous again when he heard Han Shuo's words and drew even closer. He was almost glued to Han Shuo's side, saying with a cracked voice, "Don't worry, I'll follow you wherever you go."

When the wooden tower and chariots were displayed, Faust haughtily steered his enormous warhorse forward, shouting loudly towards Han Shuo, "Brettel City Lord Bryan, you know the reason why us brothers have come. My brothers have survived under poor living conditions and have recently run out of food. We will leave you and your Brettel City alone if you give us a million gold coins."

“Pitiful Mr. Faust, I deeply sympathise with your group’s misfortune. However, Brettel City’s poverty is also well known. The people in my city are lacking in food as well. I am really unable to bring out a million gold.” Han Shuo miserably lamented with a twisted expression.

His voice was neither loud nor soft, but both the faraway bandits, as well as the soldiers on the city wall, heard him clearly. Even the citizens within the city, who were closer to this location could hear him. Some of the braver citizens even exited their homes to see what was going on. There were even those who wanted to head to the city gate to investigate the happenings outside.

“How much can you cough up then?” Discerning from Han Shuo’s reply that there was still room to negotiate, Faust paused for a moment before replying loudly.

The current Brettel City walls didn’t have any holes. Although there were only a few soldiers on the imposing city walls, they were equipped with shiny new equipment. There were also rumours that Brettel City’s city lord, Bryan was a necromancer archmage himself. If they insisted on attacking, the Greenfire Bandits would definitely suffer losses. If they could gain a generous amount of gold without losing a single soldier, only a fool would choose the latter. Therefore, when Faust heard Han Shuo’s tone, he pondered for a moment before inquiring about Han Shuo’s bottom line.

“Uh, Mr Faust. How does one gold coin sound?” Han Shuo seriously thought for a moment before responding earnestly.

“Wahaha.....”

The city guards had been a bit nervous. They couldn’t resist laughing out loud after hearing Han Shuo’s reply. Even the citizens who heard the reply had an interesting look on their faces, thinking that this new city lord certainly had a nice sense of humor.

“You conniving bastard!” Faust exploded, he hadn’t been this angry in a long time. His subordinates also had unsightly expressions, wishing that they could rush over and tear Han Shuo and his men into pieces.

“Haha, so what if I tricked you! You won’t be getting a single gold coin today. Hehe. Who knows? You might even be leaving behind gold for my personal use! How dare you pathetic scum dare to steal from me? You obviously want to die. I’ll tell honestly you that I seized all of Redbeard Troda’s wealth. Along with the four hundred thousand gold coins from Helen Tina and the gold I own, Brettel City currently has more than one million gold coins. However, let’s see if you have the ability to obtain even a single coin. Stupid swine. Come at me!” Han Shuo laughed savagely, ridiculing Faust as if he was an idiot.

Faust was truly indignant. He had never been this dismissed by others in all the years since he had left Narsen Duchy. Staring at the extremely arrogant young governor on the city wall, Faust had the urge to eat him alive. His men had similar feelings, their expressions steely as they started charging towards the city gates.

“Attack! Massacre everyone in the city!” Faust furiously gave the order as he charged towards Brettel City.

“Mass.... Massacre everyone?!” Jack became weak in the knees, almost paralyzed on the cold, marble floor.

The citizens had previously relaxed due to Han Shuo’s humor, but now sank into a bottomless abyss when they heard the words “Massacre everyone!”. Everyone’s eyes dimmed, at a loss of how to respond.

All along, although Brettel City had experienced the cruelty of war, they had never faced a bloody massacre. Otherwise, Brettel City would have long since become a ghost city. Although their valuables would be snatched, the citizens were still able to retain their lives.

Unless the attacker was a bloodthirsty devil or possesses endless hatred, the order to massacre everyone in the city was not easily given regardless of bandits looting or war between two countries. This was because it would mean effectively destroying everything in a city. That was the true meaning of creating rivers of blood and leaving nothing alive.

A person like this would usually be condemned by every country. One who dared to massacre a city would even be denounced and despised by even their own country, while the side who had a city massacred would spare no expense in getting their revenge. Although the seven duchies were entrenched in war, the act of razing a city was also extremely rare. It wasn't something a normal person would dare to do.

The unaffiliated Faust could no longer stopper the anger raging in his heart in the face of Han Shuo's arrogant provocation and utterly humiliating insults. This was why he'd given such a crazed order. He felt that only by sending everyone in Brettel City to their graves would he be able to cleanse the shame brought about by Han Shuo.

"Humph. Do you think you'll be able to do so?" Han Shuo snorted. Turning towards the soldiers by his side, he said, "Bring out the catapults, let's see how they die!"

Once the order to massacre the city was given, the green flame on the flags of the Greenfire Bandits were painted in blood red, forming blood red flames. The mages on the wooden tower were also slowly taxied towards Brettel City. The four crossbow carts were also loaded with bolts and pushed forward. Two thousand furious bandits, carrying the ladder hooks of climbing ladders started charging towards Han Shuo.

Chariots, crossbow carts, catapults, as well as fire oil, giant stones, and other city defense tools were rapidly hauled out from their hiding places by the hundreds of soldiers, and distributed to various locations along the vast city walls. However, the number of soldiers, as well as the number of chariots and crossbow cars were still limited. The wall, which could hold seven to eight thousand men, was only being defended by several hundred soldiers. It indeed seemed shamefully few.

"Kill!" The bandits had already charged over. The bandits who had been insulted hardened their hearts to kill everyone they saw in Brettel City. Faust was green in the face and hysterically bellowed, "The first brother who scales the city wall will be rewarded with a thousand gold!"

A large cloud of magical flames shot from Faust's hand towards the sky. This was the prearranged signal between the four bandit groups. When the signal shone magnificently in the sky, that marked the official beginning of the battle.

The bandits had been deluded by gold and blinded by anger. They charged forward with reckless abandon. Han Shuo didn't say a word as he calmly observed the situation, waiting for the bandits to enter their range. Only then did he give the order to the soldiers, who were so afraid that their palms were already sweaty, "Attack!"

Rumble...

The rumbling of chariots resounded through the entire city, spraying a tongue of flames towards the skies. The crossbow carts rapidly fired crossbow bolts, crashing into a crowd of bandits along with giant rocks from the catapults, instantly creating a grisly scene. The areas that were sprayed by the chariots experienced huge explosions. Limbs and heads streaming with blood rolled and bounced out from the monstrous dust clouds.

Giant rocks continued raining down, transforming all the bandits they touched into paste. The crossbow bolts whizzed past, strong penetrative power piercing through several bandits before stopping. The area in front of Brettel City had transformed instantly into a river of blood with countless corpses everywhere.

Chapter 332: Corpses scattered across the ground

The change of nearly a hundred bandits had been forever halted in just a blink of an eye, thanks to the bombardment of two war chariots, five ballistae, and three stone-throwing catapults.

As the smoke from the explosives billowed above the battlefield, Fass' insane roaring rang loud and clear, "Mages! Push the mages' tower forward! Launch the ballistae! Be quick about it!"

As Fass hollered orders left and right, the bandits beneath the tower pushed with all their might. The ballistae that the bandits had transported were quickly brought up from the rear. There were several bandits with iron shields in hand, standing in front of each ballista to force open a path.

The war chariots continued to enthusiastically spout flames as stone-throwing catapults drew beautiful arcs across the sky before smashing the ground with terrifying, earth-shattering rumbles. Each impact created its own unique pattern, a painting of blood and severed body parts. Six bolts darted through the air with each shot to reap cheap lives like cold, fatal blades.

Five hundred meters of the path that lead to Brettel City's gates had turned into a literal hell on earth. The bandits who had charged forward was met with overwhelming firepower. Anyone in range of the barrage had no chance of making it out alive.

"Spread out, spread out already! You damned stupid fools! How many time have I told you?!" Fass' shouts were verging on hysterical, but it was of no use. The rumbling of the war chariots overrode his words to the point where only the row of bandits behind him could hear his words.

The Greenfire Bandits had a total of six thousand members, and Fass had certainly not planned on committing his entire force at once. Thus, the bandits who'd come to attack Brettel City were definitely not the true elites of the Greenfire Bandits.

Fass only had roughly a thousand trusted followers when he left the Narsen Duchy. The band had swollen to their current numbers by recruiting during raids as they traveled. As such, those currently charging towards Brettel City were the newest recruits, the ones whose strength Fass wasn't quite satisfied with. Their combat ability was the weakest in Greenfire.

This was the case in every attempted siege, the cannon fodder was always the first to be sent out. In Fass' heart, these two thousand underlings were completely expendable. As long as there were enough gold coins, he never had to worry about not being able to recruit more lackeys amidst the never-ending chaos surrounding the seven grand duchies. According to Fass' initial plan, these two thousand underlings were more than enough to bring down Brettel City.

What quite surprised Fass was Brettel City's defensive ability. He'd originally thought he'd face the bombardment of the magic crystal cannons, yet unexpectedly, he'd seen no sign of them and had instead discovered other defensive emplacements. Further, this array of defensive artillery were all time-tested instruments of war. Once they started their lethal spray from the tall city walls, they reaped life like a scythe through corn.

Two thousand bandits were approaching Brettel City step by step beneath the massive artillery shelling and missiles. After paying the price in four hundred more deaths, a portion of the bandits reached the city wall. They'd brought wooden ladders, and quickly set them up against the city wall, doing their best to dodge the heavy bombardment.

"Faster! Fill the bolts and load the goblin explosives into the war chariots!" Han Shuo's expression was indifferent, but the speed of his speech was extremely fast as he yelled orders to the soldiers around him.

These soldiers had only recently become familiar with war chariots and ballistae. Faulke had intensely drilled them over several days and nights and barely pounded the basics of using war chariots, ballistae, and catapults into them. As such, they weren't too skilled, especially under the pressure of a chaotic battlefield. The lingering scent of death and blooded steel affected the speed at which these soldiers operated the equipment.

Kaka... kaka...

A strange noise suddenly came to Han Shuo's attention. He looked around, puzzled, until his eyes came to land on little Fatty Jack. The latter's lips were trembling, and his teeth were chattering at an astonishing rate to create that noise.

Little Fatty Jack stood beside Han Shuo as he looked into the battlefield where flesh and blood flew. He saw boulders smash bodies into a blurry meat paste. He witnessed limbs flying from the explosions created by the war chariots. He was transfixed as the frenzied storm of bolts literally flung the bandits into the air as they tore through them. He couldn't restrain his trembling.

"Wuu wuu, this is too terrible!" The little fatty's voice was a bit muffled, his small eyes bloodshot. He cried out involuntarily with trembling lips, his entire being caught in a strange, dull state of helplessness.

"Ready! Pour down the oil!" Han Shuo flicked his eyes away from Jack. He didn't say a word upon seeing the latter was still next to him. Instead, he loudly shouted to the soldiers around him.

Han Shuo had already known before the battle began that little Fatty Jack, having never experienced such a scene, would definitely be frightened by the cruelty of war. Jack's expression of terror was well within Han Shuo's expectations, so he wasn't the least bit surprised.

The Demonslayer Edge could no longer resist the temptation, and shot out from the back of Han Shuo's neck to hover high above the battlefield. Unseen from the battlefield, it started to forcefully absorb souls from the cacophony of agonized and despairing screams below.

Whoosh whoosh whoosh!

The bandits finally fired their ballistae. A rain of bolts began to furiously assault the defenders atop Brettel City's wall. Surprised by the sudden hail of death, several archers aiming at maelstrom below were immediately killed. The actions of the soldiers controlling war chariots and stone-throwing catapults also grew a bit frantic.

A low whistling sound accompanied one of the bolts, aiming straight for little Fatty Jack, who was leaning against the wall and watching the tragic scene below. When he heard the screeching whistle, Jack was scared witless as he screamed raspily, "Bryan, save me!"

Han Shuo reached out with his left hand. Bloody lights shot out from his five fingers like he'd suddenly grown sharp claws. When that bolt was only roughly ten meters away from Jack, the bloody light from Han Shuo's five fingers clenched around it, grinding the bolt into splinters.

"Step back, don't stand too close to the edge of the city wall!" Han Shuo shouted lightly, waving his right hand and sending the shield of a fallen soldier abruptly crashing down in front of Jack, covering most of his plump body.

Creaking sounds suddenly fell into Han Shuo's ears. He wheeled around to feel surges of magic ripples gradually converge in the distance, the sound of the magic incantations growing more audible. Several mages on the slowly approaching tower had begun to chant the magic spells of their respective elements, guarded zealously by the shield wielding bandits.

"I've been waiting for you to arrive!" Han Shuo said derisively. He reached out with his mind, and a bloody halo dropped from the heavens.

The Demonslayer Edge was executing "Bloody Radiance of Ten Thousand Cuts" under Han Shuo's guidance. The Demonslayer Edge, looking only a little longer than a dagger, spun a breakneck pace as it dove straight down. Each rotation of the Demonslayer Edge caused a dagger-like bloody light to shoot out.

The Demonslayer Edge's high-speed rotation caused it to gradually blur into a ball of crimson light as it descended. Scarlet slivers, rapidly increasing in number by the second, coalesced around it as they formed thousands of blades. The countless blades swirled into a huge orb, swirling around the Demonslayer Edge in wide arcs as they crisscrossed without interfering with each. The light they gave off was a deep rich ruby, an awe-inspiring sight spilling down onto the mages on the tower below.

From afar, it looked like a small, disc-sized sun had come into existence, except that this sun was brimming with sharp, rotating barbs of bloody light. As the vermillion sphere continued its descent, its rotation grew even more ferocious. A palpable surge of slaughter emanated from it even before it landed, causing terror to sprout in the heart of onlookers.

The dazzling orb of slashing light landed in the midst of the mages on the tower. Despite being protected by iron shields and magical barriers of various strengths, the tower was instantly macerated. The wood it was made of became splinters, then dust amidst the agonized screams of the bandits and mages. Mangled flesh, blood and steel painted a scarlet portrait as the fragile mages and the heavily armored bandits were torn apart, the rotating blades of light resplendent as they dealt death with equal parts beauty and ruthlessness.

No one on the tower had the strength to do anything in the face of Han Shuo's "Bloody Radiance of Ten Thousand Cuts".

The ten thousand sanguine rays of the Demonslayer Edge had vaporized everything it had touched, whether it be the humans, the wooden tower, or the iron shields. Fass had spent a great deal of money to form this team of bandit mages, and now, they lay scattered across the battlefield, too mangled even to be recognizable as human remains anymore.

Having been injected with thirty percent of his magical yuan, one strike of the "Bloody Radiance of Ten Thousand Cuts" through all those people and the tower was far from enough to consume its power. The orb transformed into an enormous scarlet spinning cactus, hurling blades of crimson light at the bandits around the tower. Like a hurricane, the Demonslayer Edge's "Bloody Radiance of Ten Thousand Cuts" raged unchallenged across the battlefield. A storm of blood in every sense of the word, everything it encountered was obliterated, be it human, ballistae, or sturdy shields.

An unnaturally beautiful red drizzle of blood began to pour down on the field. None out of a hundred bandit corpses were whole after the Demonslayer Edge made a circle, no piece of meat larger than an ear . Since even iron shields couldn't defend against the Demonslayer Edge, it was no surprise to find even bones minced finely as well.

"Damn it! Where's the tower? Where are the mages?" Fass had been paying attention to the Brettel City wall, and had missed the events around the tower. Only when the crimson orb of light had made its way over to him did he discover that the tower was gone.

"Dead, all dead! It was that thing! It was all because of that thing!!" A bandit by Fass' side had witnessed the entire thing. He pointed at the blood orb that was responsible, his voice shrill with terror.

The horror of the blood orb wasn't quite over yet. Ear-piercing screams once again echoed across the battlefield. They belonged to the bandits who'd been approached by the drifting blood orb. To no avail, all of them desperately attempted to dodge by rolling and jumping. However, every bandit that was touched by the blood orb instantly turned into a shower of mangled flesh, blood, and bones. No one was lucky enough to escape.

"Attack that thing, attack it!!" Fass' heart was beating violently, panic barely kept at bay. He hastily roared commands to the bandits around him.

Dozens of sharp axes were fiercely hurled at the quickly approaching, whirling Demonslayer Edge. However, just when they almost neared the Demonslayer Edge, the magical yuan powering the "Bloody Radiance of Ten Thousand Cuts" was exhausted, and it vanished into thin air. Like a star of death returning to the universe after completing its mission, its disappearance sent the bandits reeling with relief.

"What is that thing?! Curse that necromancer! He must've used some sort of necromancy magic to create that damned monster. Don't be afraid, keep attacking! I think they're almost done for!"

Humans were always fearful of the unknown, and Fass was no exception.

When he had spotted the death dealing orb disappear from the sky, Fass' heart unclenched slightly. He then roared madly at the frightened bandits, as if to comfort himself.

It was as Fass said. Even though the Demonslayer Edge had thrown the battlefield into disarray by wiping out the magic users, the bandits still held the advantage in numbers. Moreover, they had begun to use their iron hooks and wooden ladders to gradually scale the city walls.

There were only three hundred soldiers manning Brettel City's walls in total. Of those, twenty had died up until now, mostly due to the ballistae attacks. The remaining two hundred odd soldiers were frantically hauling boulders to load the stone-throwing catapults and reloading bolts for the ballistae. As a result, those soldiers who had been assigned the task of transporting boulders were now deprived of energy, sprawled flat on the ground.

Several soldiers could barely manage to bring themselves to pour oil down the city walls, but they were also heavily panting, with little strength left. However, there were still roughly twelve hundred of the original two thousand bandits left, of which five hundred had already reached the foot of the city wall, trying to climb up the walls.

"My Lord, our men are really not enough!" Seeing the ferocious bandits about to climb up, a captain almost burst into tears, "What do we do? What do we do?"

"Light the fires. We won't be losing as long I'm alive today. What are you all so worried about?" Han Shuo harrumphed coldly.

"Light the fires, light the fires! Burn those bastards to death!" The captain shouted loudly to the soldiers, who'd been waiting for the signal for quite a long time now. They ruthlessly tossed burning torches onto the city walls that were now drenched with oil.

Boom...

The sparks instantly set the slick oil aflame, turning the surface of the city wall into a blazing pyre for any bandits unfortunate enough to be caught on the walls. Harrowing screams dyed the air as the bandits were slowly incinerated.

Some of the bandits quickly jumped off the ladder when they saw the soldiers on the city wall wielding torches. The more experienced ones managed to pull the ladders from the city, allowing the bandits to slowly clamber down to safety.

However, that safety was short lived, as the soldiers immediately loosed a volley of arrows at the surviving bandits. Some sharpshooters managed to pick off the bandits supporting some of the ladders, causing the bandits on their respective ladders to plummet to their deaths.

However, the amount of oil they had on hand was limited, while the walls were too wide. There simply wasn't enough ground they could cover, and sure enough, a cadre of bandits had almost reached the top of the wall in one of those oil free corners.

Whoosh whoosh whoosh!

Han Shuo finally took out the bone staff and chanted the bone spear incantation. Bone spears shot out like arrows, tearing through the dozens of bandits who'd scaled the wall at one of those lightly guarded points..

The bandits at the foot of the city wall also raised up bows with flaming arrows. Once the four hundred bandits steadied the rate in which they could release the arrows, the exposed soldiers from the city wall couldn't hold up beneath the onslaught. Some of the more careless ones were killed under the rain of flame tipped shafts. Even Han Shuo couldn't have saved them, he'd already blocked as many of the arrows as he could, otherwise, there might have been even more casualties.

"My Lord, is it time yet?" Another captain was still relatively calm in the face of such odds. He'd personally seen Han Shuo summon a massive undead army, but as he saw his comrades gradually succumb under the unending assault, he finally opened his mouth to ask Han Shuo.

At this moment, the initial two thousand Greenfire cannon fodder bandits were still blindly charging forward. A portion had been burned to death by the fires, and another two hundred died from the dozen soldiers who still had the strength to keep the ballistae firing.

There were less than eight hundred bandits remaining from the original two thousand, from which roughly six hundred had reached the foot of the city wall.

The war chariots on the city wall had also used up their goblin explosives, with only a hundred bolts or so remaining. All the colossal boulders within the city had been catapulted into the enemy ranks. Finally, the number of soldiers on Brettel City's wall who could stand straight didn't even number fifty.

If Han Shuo still refrained from making his move now, the Brettel City gates might actually fall to the bandits. Therefore, upon seeing the bandits reveal their fanatical excitement after finally reaching the foot of the city wall, Han Shuo clutched the bone staff and calmly said with a nod, "It is indeed time."

Fass of the Greenfire Bandits licked his lips as he looked at the weary defenses of Brettel City. A low sinister laugh bubbled forth and his voice grew cruel as he said, "Young city lord, you will pay a painful price for your arrogance! I will peel your skin, remove your bones, and torture you so badly, you'll feel a pain worse than death!"

"Boss, he's also a necromancer, you should be a bit more careful!" A bandit next to Fass suddenly remembered the rumors about Han Shuo and hastily reminded him.

"Haha, necromancer? A mage who can only summon useless skeletons? What can that sort of mage do in a head on battle?" Fass turned to that bandit and continued, "Command a thousand more men to rush forward. Bring down Brettel City in one swift move!"

The minor leader waved his hand after Fass' orders and said, "Tuku, you guys rush forward, flatten this damned Brettel City as soon as possible!"

Tuku had originally been Fass' personal guard and the leader of the thousand strong brigade. This brigade was different from the previous two thousand strong cannon fodder. Sharper weapons, sturdier armor, and even a special five hundred man team in their ranks who rode fierce warhorses similarly bedecked in full body armor. This was obviously a standard knight brigade.

The brigade charged across a ground full of corpses towards Brettel City with a wave of Tuku's spear. Amongst them, the five hundred man squad riding fierce warhorses reached the foot of the city wall as fast as the wind. Brettel City's soldiers were completely worn out, only managing to fire a disorganized volley of a dozen arrows at the incoming force. This simply wasn't enough to injure the fully armored knights and warhorses.

"Heh heh, they're done for! I knew it!" A cold sneer stretched Fass' face. The light of victory was already dawning in his eyes.

He'd even started to mentally imagine how he would slowly torture Han Shuo after capturing him?

"Eh? Where's the sun? Why can't I see the sun?" Upon reaching the city wall, the bandit knights suddenly felt the sky strangely darken. A gloom that verged on creepy, uncharacteristic for a day only barely past noon, covered the sky. There was no reason for it to become dark so quickly

The originally clear and bright sky now had thunderheads blotting out the sun like a verdant ink. Appearing from who knew where, these green-black clouds created a layer that was impenetrable to sunlight, choking the battlefield of any light it could find. As these clouds gathered, an eerie atmosphere descended on the battlefield, and a grim premonition began to sprout in the hearts of the bandits.

"Don't make a fuss. The weather here has always been creepy. It's just about to rain."

"The oil and fire will lose their effect if it rains. We must be blessed by the gods! Let's use this opportunity to massacre them!" Leader Tuku absentmindedly comforted his subordinates. He pointed at the group of bandits who were still crazily climbing the city wall and shouted, "Hurry up! Wipe out all of those weak, cowardly soldiers!."

"You really run your mouth too much!" Han Shuo had finally finished chanting his lengthy incantation. He swiped at the air with the bone staff, releasing a thin layer of ash-gray mist. The mist, thick with the stench of death, slowly drifted down to the foot of the Brettel City walls.

The battlefield now reeked of a barren, morose smell. Thin, ash-gray mist slowly drifted from the center of the battlefield, slowly creeping between and over the corpses. Several carrion crows, circling the battlefield, took one whiff of the corpse scent blown over by the faint, ash-gray mist, and took wing instantly, as if something in the gray mist struck a deep chord of fear in their hearts.

“Damned weather, black clouds and gray mist! It seems like it’s really going to rain! Hurry, hurry up! Ah, one of you is up, hah!” Tuku lifted his head to look up at the city wall. He happily shouted on, as if encouraging the bandits.

A crunching sound accompanied his words. The bandit who had painstakingly avoided arrows and burning oil had his neck casually twisted into an inhuman direction by Han Shuo. Like tossing out garbage, Han Shuo chucked him at the bandits grouped below.

Crash...

The body of the first bandit to climb up the city wall and had his neck twisted for his efforts made a huge sound as he was thrown down. The bandits below, who were about to desperately surge up the ladders, were greatly shocked.

Then, an even more terrifying sight captured their gazes, something that happened right in front of them!

When the gray mist drifted across the corpse in front of them, they first saw a finger twitch. Then, twisted neck and all, the body slowly and jerkily rose to its feet. The pupils that’d lost the light of life had given way to a dead gray color. Despite being somewhat stiff, the corpse’s next action left no room for doubt as to its intentions. It leapt on a nearby bandit and repeatedly stabbed him to death.

The hysterical scream that tore its way out of the bandits was like they’d encountered demons in the light of day. In the face of such an illogical situation, the courage of this bandit squadron melted away like water in a desert. Fueled entirely by instinctive fear, they fled.

At the same time, more frantic screaming spread from all corners of the battlefield, as if the screaming was contagious. Bandits all over saw their dead brothers open their fish-like, gray eyes one after the other and numbly struggle to their feet. Moreover, their dead brothers even waved weapons and aimed to kill them. Mass hysteria had infected the living.

“This, this is, this is the lost legendary necromancy magic ‘Corpse Reanimation’! My god! How did that damnable evil necromancer master it?!” The leader of the Greenfire bandit group was aghast as he saw the scene from afar. He’d also heard of this ancient legend. His scalp began to tingle at the sight of corpses rising to their feet.

While Fass screeched in horror, more and more corpses stood up with the last lingering desires they had in life. They began to ruthlessly assault any living being nearby, never knowing that the targets of their attacks were once their close comrades who’d drank, chatted, and laughed with them last night.

The terror from the resurrected corpses instantly spread through the entire army of bandits attacking the city. The terrified bandits had no intention of carrying on with their siege. Their only thought was to escape from this evil place as quickly as possible. Incredibly, some bandits with bloodstained hands even started to sing holy hymns of the Church of Light, as if being instructed to do so by the gods and spirits. It seemed that they thought doing so would be enough to purify the power of darkness around them.

It was a pity that the God of Light would never extend an olive branch to these atheists. When a zombie used its weapon to stab a hole into a singing bandit, the rest of the bandits who were singing the holy hymn immediately stopped their futile efforts. With incredible alacrity, they wheeled and bolted, trying to escape.

“Want to run? Not gonna be that easy!” Han Shuo grinned like a madcap up on the city wall. He floated above the city wall like a sovereign of evil descending upon his kingdom, waving the bone staff in his hand. Acid bogs appeared along the path Fass and his people were taking.

“Shoot him dead, shoot him dead now!” Fass pointed at Han Shuo and roared madly, trying to suppress the fear in his heart. He also took out a valuable bow, taking aim at Han Shuo.

“Poor Fass, so what if I played you? See how many gold coins you’ve left for me, and all these weapons and armor all over the ground. Maybe there are even some gold coins on the dead bandits. How should I thank you?” Han Shuo laughed cutely as he squinted at Fass. He lifted his right palm towards the sky as a radiant crimson light shone from the heavens and onto his palm. The beauty of the “Bloody Radiance of Ten Thousand Cuts” was slowly gracing the bandits with its presence again.

Chapter 333: Something unforeseen

Dozens of arrows whistled through the air as they hurtled towards Han Shuo like raindrops. However, the arrows had yet to arrive when the life-reaping light expanded in his palm and shot out once again.

As the Demonslayer Edge was infused with another thirty percent of Han Shuo's magical yuan, countless resentful wails hissed out. The fresh souls, that the Demonslayer Edge had just absorbed, still yearned for life. They emitted an air of unwillingness and grievance that rose into the sky.

However, the bandits' souls were tightly bound by the power of the Demonslayer Edge. They were simply unable to escape this eternal prison. Instead, the resentment and hatred made the "Bloody Radiance of Ten Thousand Cuts" even more powerful. Each blade of light was brilliant like blooming, colorful fireworks, charming and beautiful.

The Demonslayer Edge shot out of Han Shuo's grasp and once again waltzed through the sky, creating a spiky, glaring red sun. None of the arrows reached Han Shuo as they were ground to dust by the "Bloody Radiance of Ten Thousand Cuts". The attack didn't lose one iota of momentum. It stretched the endless resentment and murderous intent into a dazzling, beautiful arc in the sky, aiming directly at Fass' group.

"No! Boss, retreat quickly!" A bandit next to Fass cried out loudly. As soon as the shocked scream rang out, everyone turned their horses around, fleeing with their tails between their legs like defeated dogs.

Fass had originally wanted to scold the underling when he saw the latter frantically fleeing. However, he suddenly recalled the brutal scene from earlier created by the slashing, bloody lights and couldn't help but tremble with cold chills. Fass no longer dared to put on a heroic front. He yanked on the reins of his horse and fled.

The rotating, brilliant, bloody light was a ferocious life-reaping spectre for every person it shone down upon. Everything was disintegrated. Six minor leader bandits were first smashed to pieces. Then, the Demonslayer Edge roiled forth with its billowing murderous aura, spinning mid-air with a savage screech under Han Shuo's control. The weapon pursued after Fass' group, slowing down for no man.

The corpses below Brettel City wall were resurrected one by one whilst under the Canopy of Necromancy, blindly attacking all beings in their surroundings. A corpse strutted around with its intestines hanging out, wielding its weapon and dripping with blood. This was obviously a major blow to the bandits, who'd been relentlessly rushing at Brettel City.

A human's most instinctive reaction in the face of fear would be to escape as far as possible. These bandits fully illustrated the depths of this reaction. The elite bandits on warhorses, under Tuku's command, fled at a much faster pace than what they'd charged forward with. Some had taken the opportunity to dash out like lightning before Han Shuo had created the acid swamps. It was quite the mystery where such potential had come from.

Of course, the majority of the bandits were taken out by the acid swamps. Puffs of deadly air drifted from the swamps, filling the atmosphere with the smell of corrosion. A dozen bandits, who'd risked their lives to rush straight into the acid swamps first, were instantly dissolved into a dozen skeletons. The remaining bandits, who'd yet to escape suddenly came to a complete stop.

In front of them was a multitude of acid swamps capable of granting an instant death, whilst at the rear, corpses of their former allies were drawing closer with each step. The bandits very much cherished their lives. They desperately considered which of the two sides would grant them the higher chance of survival.

After a short while, the desire to live won over the fear of corpses. Unlike Han Shuo, the bandits had no way to fly. They could only suppress the fear in their hearts, tightly clench their weapons, and face the slowly approaching corpses. These formerly dead bodies might have been their good friends in the past, but the bandits knew what had to be done under the threat of death.

“Kill them!” It was unknown which bandit had let out this cry. The still surviving bandits no longer hesitated. They used the sharp weapons in hands against the corpses who’d been comrades not long before, in order to protect their own lives. They cut off the heads of the corpses, letting their comrades die with a complete body.

The combat strength of the resurrected corpses wasn’t particularly strong; it was half of their strength when they’d still been alive. They weren’t as flexible as the zombie warriors summoned from the other dimension either. These corpses existed only to create fear in their opponents. Once the other party overcame the fear in their hearts and took action against these corpses, they’d discover that, not only were the latter’s actions quite slow, but their strength had also been negatively affected. These corpses couldn’t feel pain, but as long as their heads and hearts were destroyed, they wouldn’t be able to stand back up.

The bandits quickly discovered the weaknesses of the corpses. They were no longer scared after destroying a few of them. Their fear gradually subsiding, the bandits started to act together and annihilated the reanimated corpses.

These corpses no longer seemed too terrible compared to the acid swamps blocking the retreating path. As long as the bandits tried not to think about how the dead were once their friends, they would be able to deftly and neatly dispose of the corpses. The bandits weren’t kind folk to begin with, most of them were cruel and unscrupulous. They consoled themselves with the fact that the people facing them were already dead, as they wielded the sharp weapons in their hands to cut off the heads of their former comrades without hesitation.

Standing proudly in the sky, Han Shuo skillfully utilized his mental strength to manipulate the Demonslayer Edge, making it pursue Fass. Looking down upon the bandits, who were slowly calming down, he let out a light exclamation and mumbled, “I’ve underestimated their ruthlessness. No wonder they could become bandits. Soldiers wouldn’t be able to do that to their former comrade in arms.”

After muttering to himself, Han Shuo mused for a bit. He then revealed a cruel grin and said, "It seems like I have to give them a strong shot!"

When Han Shuo intended to use the bone staff to summon the undead army with his remaining mental strength, he suddenly heard an earth-shattering roar. The entire Brettel City seemed to shake after that huge rumbling sound.

That direction of that sound had come from behind Han Shuo. He blanked for a moment, before lightly exclaiming, "The magic crystal cannons are finally in use!"

Taking in a deep breath, Han Shuo planned to once again chant the lengthy magic incantation when he suddenly caught sight of a group in white outfits right where Fass' group was fleeing towards. It was a team of roughly a hundred people who were slowly approaching. Amongst them was Kosse, who'd once fought against Han Shuo. There were also the Templars of the Church of Light, as well as several others in white ritual outfits.

Han Shuo was inwardly shocked. The Demonslayer Edge originally chasing Fass suddenly changed its direction to charge directly towards Kosse's group. The weapon shot out bloody light in all directions as it fiercely targeted the Templars surrounding Kosse.

With his divine weapon "Revelation" of the Church of Light, Kosse could easily turn the tables. Under the holy light of "Revelation", not only would the corpses, but even the undead army summoned by Han Shuo would become useless.

In the middle of this enormous battlefield, the defenses of Brettel City now completely relied on the undead creatures. Once this support was lost, Brettel City would officially embark down the path towards its doom.

Therefore, upon seeing Kosse appear in the distance, Han Shuo was determined to destroy this person above all else. Otherwise, the difficulty of winning would be akin to reaching for the heavens once Kosse opened "Revelation" to sing the divine hymns of blessing.

The "Bloody Radiance of Ten Thousand Cuts" spun rapidly and spewed out fatal bloody light straight at Kosse's group with enormous murderous intent. Several low rank Templars at the front had yet to even unsheathe their weapons and make their move when the great, prickly orb collided with them.

The Demonslayer Edge was as if thousands of spinning sharp blades. It whirled right into the midst of the low rank Templars, once more displaying its destructive power as it ground everything to dust. Several Templars at the front had their armors shattered, with even the bodies inside being crushed as well.

However, the Templars' armors were obviously much more sturdy than that of the bandits. The bandits' armor hadn't even made a sound when they were transformed into powder, as if it was as delicate as the flesh of their owners.

But of course, these were the Templars of the Church of Light. The alchemists must have forged their armors using a special method, adding a magic resistance effect. Even though the Templars also transformed into a bloody rain like the bandits upon being crushed by "Bloody Radiance of Ten Thousand Cuts", it actually took five times the amount of time when compared to the bandits.

It was because this process took five times the amount of time that it gave the six high ranked Templars around Kosse time to create a hexagonal formation. They quickly surrounded the rapidly spinning Demonslayer Edge in the center. Their six longswords, which had been blessed by baptism in holy water, burst out with a pure, divine light, shooting all at once at the Demonslayer Edge erupting with a thousand rays of bloody light.

A string of pleasing, metallic sounds rang out, followed by sprays of flying firebrands. The longswords possessed a certain purification effect after being baptized in holy water. The portion of soul energy that the Demonslayer Edge had just absorbed but had yet to fully assimilate was actually released back into the heavens and earth.

The remaining power of the holy light stopped the Demonslayer Edge from its continued rotation. It seemed that the sword formation of the six high ranked Templars had indeed some miraculous effect. The Demonslayer Edge's speed became increasingly slower due to gradually exhausting its supply magical yuan. The weapon ultimately shot from within the sword formation into the sky under Han Shuo's mental control.

The six high ranked Templars with the cross insignias on their chests were panting a bit after the Demonslayer Edge disappeared into the sky. Their eyes followed the weapon's disappearance with lingering fear in their hearts, as if afraid that it would return again.

Red Archbishop Kosse was inwardly trembling in fear at the happenings before his eyes. He held "Revelation" and prayed over and over. Only when he saw that the Demonslayer Edge had truly disappeared, did he turn to speak to Han Shuo, "Heretic, your sins cannot be forgiven! Being burned by the holy flame shall be your final destination!"

Kosse had tried to patiently persuade Han Shuo last time, but he no longer had any patience with the latter today. In Kosse's eyes, Han Shuo was a genuine demon through and through, even more evil than the Calamity Church. He must be exterminated at all costs, so as to free more people from his evil.

"I'm actually waiting to be burned by your holy flames, but I'm afraid that you won't have the opportunity to do so!" Han Shuo coldly snorted with disdain. He suddenly set his right hand on fire, wrapping his entire right arm in the flames. Han Shuo glanced at his blazing right arm before glaring coldly at Kosse, asking, "Isn't the color of your holy flame also something like this?"

"Heretic who dares to blaspheme the holy flame? Ye shall be judged by the God of Light!" Kosse held his head high and shouted loudly. He then sang the holy hymn within the careful protection of the six Templars.

Along with the melodious hymn that Kosse was singing, the Church of Light's divine artifact, "Revelation", began to quickly flip its pages quickly, even though there was no presence of wind. Circle after circle of light spread out into the surrounding with their holy presence. The corpses resurrected by Han Shuo instantly turned to dust under the shining of the holy light.

Even the green-black Canopy of Necromancy that blotted out the sky was torn apart by rays of dazzling golden radiance, the acid swamps evaporated as well. In just a moment, the vast empire of death that Han Shuo had poured a great deal of mental strength into to build, had crumbled under the enclosure of the holy light.

It was indeed correct to say that the Church of Light was the natural enemy of necromancers. Han Shuo obviously didn't think much of low ranked light mages. However, Kosse, who could use the power of the divine weapon "Revelation", truly posed a great threat to Han Shuo.

Han Shuo had originally been certain of his victory, but now had his momentum disrupted due to the emergence of Kosse and his group. If he had no way to use his undead creatures to defend the city, protecting Brettel City with Han Shuo alone would be as hard as ascending to the heavens.

"I hate this light!" Han Shuo spoke with disgust when he saw the halos of holy light spreading out. However, his mind rapidly spun for a way to deal with them.

This was because he'd suddenly discovered that upon Kosse's appearance, the desperately fleeing bandit leader Fass had led his underlings to return again.

The holy light cleared away all dangers given by the corpses and acid swamps. The several hundred bandits below the Brettel City walls once again began eyeing the sparsely scattered soldiers.

Chapter 334: I really feel ashamed for you, blech!

Since things had already reached this point, Han Shuo could only summon the fire elite zombie, wood elite zombie, earth elite zombie, as well as the little skeleton. Otherwise, he had no chance of defeating the bandits and the Church of Light.

Ripples of divine light slowly spread out from “Revelation” as Kosse stood surrounded by six Templars and chanted. These ripples slowly purified the land of death that Han Shuo had created with so much mental strength. Han Shuo no longer remained in the air to chase after Kosse. Instead, he slowly floated backwards.

Han Shuo threw out the Bloodlust Fang with a wave of his hand. The moment it flew out, it brought forth a dense mist of blood. This demonic treasure that Han Shuo had meticulously refined didn’t have an aura of death on it. Thus, he was naturally not afraid that the holy light would purify it.

The bandits touched by the mist of blood from the Bloodlust Fang began to let out terrible howls. The Bloodlust Fang could quicken the circulation of blood in their body, causing them to explode and die once their bodies couldn’t handle the speed anymore.

Bandits clenched their chest and roared in pain everywhere the mist of blood spread to, but they were unable to change the fact that the blood within their bodies was flowing too quickly. Clear cracking sounds rang in the air, their bones breaking under the horrific acceleration of blood. Before the pain could completely register, the snapped bones forced themselves through the soft skin, causing the trapped blood to rush towards the exit. Like a punctured boiler, the bandits would literally be ripped apart by the pressure of the accelerating blood, dying instantly within the mist of blood.

While this happened, Han Shuo concentrated and waved the skeletal staff in his left hand. Soon enough, the little skeleton, earth elite zombie, wood elite zombie, and fire elite zombie appeared. Under the cover of the mist of blood from the Bloodlust Fang, the earth elite zombie sank into the ground and snuck silently towards Kosse.

The little skeleton grabbed the wood elite zombie and soared high into the sky, directly landing on the city walls of Brettel City.

Under Han Shuo's orders, the little skeleton and the wood elite zombie took charge of securing the ramparts of Brettel City. If a bandit managed to scale the city wall, the little skeleton and wood elite zombie were responsible for killing them.

The moment the fire elite zombie appeared from the other dimension, he caused pillars of fire to shoot up into the sky. As he manipulated the flames, the fire lotus sigil on the fire elite zombie's forehead gradually grew clearer, finally reaching the brilliance of a burning flame. As it flickered on his forehead, flame lotuses started to detach and drift out of it.

The fire elite zombie had gradually grasped how to control the fire lotus, which was a supreme treasure of fire. The flaming lotuses that drifted out from the fire lotus were initially only the size of a fingernail. Yet, this clearly wasn't their true form. The flaming lotuses increased in size as the wind blew, eventually causing each one to become the size of a large bowl.

As the flames on the fire elite zombie burned, larger and larger lotuses floated out the sigil on his forehead, growing in size till they reached the size of the largest lotuses drifting in the air. They then flew towards the surrounding bandits. Any bandit that even had a spark land on them was instantly incinerated.

This ferocity of this sort of flame was beyond their imagination. Even if they quickly used their pouches of water to try and douse it, they were unable to extinguish the little sparks. Anything that came into contact with the little fingernail sized sparks would burn, regardless of what it was. Skin, clothes, even armor and weapons all seemed to fuel the flames in burning even more brightly.

In the span of a few breaths, these bandits who were unwary enough to have sparks land on them howled. The sparks grew to great conflagrations, wreathing them in flame. The terrible smell of burnt flesh began to dominate the battlefield, as their bodies were incinerated.

The people on fire were completely turned into charcoal, the living transformed into the dead. The process was just that short. Under the extremely painful incineration of those strangely beautiful flames, several scores of bandits near the fire elite zombie were transformed into charred cinders.

On the other side, the earth elite zombie, who was deep in the ground, used his ability as the favored child of the earth to steadily make his way over to Kosse and the others during the chaos above.

As the red archbishop of the Church of Light, Kosse did still possess some mercy when dealing with heretics. As he saw the bandits ignite and turn into charred pieces of meat, Kosse took a breath from the sacred hymn he was chanting and to yell at the surrounding Templars, "Save them!"

Han Shuo continued to use the Bloodlust Fang to harvest lives on the battlefield whilst keeping his attention on Kosse. When he saw that Kosse slowly approach, still within his circle of protection from the Templars, Han Shuo immediately gave the earth elite zombie, already in place underneath them, the order to attack.

The ground rumbled, vibrating like an earthquake as the earth elite zombie started his attack. Earthen spikes shot up, towards the Templars and white priests of the Church of Light. Their attention wholly on what was in front of them, they were completely caught off guard, instantly killing approximately ten people.

Those earthen spikes accurately penetrated the feet of the horsed Templars. When this unprotected part of the foot was suddenly drilled by the earthen spike tips, the attack had marvelous results. Despite their excellent armor, the Templars tumbled from their warhorses with howls.

The priests in white, who were purifying the souls on the battlefield, were the target of Han Shuo's hatred. Their purification of the deceased souls had stopped the Demonslayer Edge from gaining more power. It meant that they were indirectly obstructing the Demonslayer Edge's evolution.

The Demonslayer Edge still did not truly have a soul of its own at this point in time. The Demonslayer Edge would only evolve and gain its own soul once it absorbed enough soul energy from others. Only then would the Demonslayer Edge become a truly unparalleled tool for murder.

Had Shuo had felt like a fish in water amidst the countless battles that had occurred after he'd arrived at Brettel City. As the Demonslayer Edge absorbed the souls of the deceased, its growth had accelerated. Han Shuo could even feel that the Demonslayer Edge was barely a step away from evolution. He would not let those pesky priests from the Church of Light put an end to it!

Thus, when Kosse and the others approached him, Han Shuo ordered the earth elite zombie to prioritize the white clothed priests. The priests, who normally weren't in the thick of battle, naturally weren't wearing armor. Each earth spike managed to impale a priest through, killing them instantly. After the earth elite zombie was done his first wave of attacks, aside from Kosse, well protected by the Templars, none of the white priests had been able to escape Han Shuo's wrath.

"Demon! I must get rid of this demon!" Kosse tightened his grip on "Revelation", then roared furiously towards Han Shuo as he watched the white priests die.

"You asked for this! I've never offended your Church of Light. It was you who relentlessly pursued me! Heh, any believers of the Church of Light who dares to offend me from now on, I'll kill every one I see! I don't believe that I can't kill all of you," Han Shuo yelled coldly as he looked down at the trembling Kosse from his vantage point high in the sky.

"Shoot him down! Axes, spears, polearms, hurry!" Fass roared with a pained heart as he watched his subordinates being consumed by the sea of flames.

The remaining two bandit ballistae turned towards the fire elite zombie in the center of the sea of flames. At the same time, a multitude of sharp weapons was flung at the fire elite zombie. The lotus armor on the fire elite zombie rang out multiple times as he manipulated the fire lotuses with complete abandon.

Every arrow, blade, and sword shot at him was melted into slag or incinerated to dust by the scorching flames before they even landed on the fire zombie. When the remains finally landed on him, the impacts were utterly negligible. The fire elite zombie had the natural ability to reconstruct his body after taking damage, and had already done so once already. This body was already quite tough, the soft blows on his skin did hardly any damage.

However, even though the elite zombies of the five elements were nurtured in the five absolute elemental locations, the power in their bodies was not endless. Nothing truly possessed eternal power. After twenty to thirty lotus flames floated out of the fire elite zombie's forehead, he also grew tired and sent a signal to Han Shuo.

Han Shuo could clearly sense the fire elite zombie's thoughts. The fire elite zombie was not yet mature and so would naturally feel tired after releasing so much power at once. Sparks flew everywhere the twenty to thirty lotus flames went, while the bandits that were grazed by even a tiny spark were burned to death.

Approximately three hundred burnt black corpses were forever fossilized on the ground. This had been caused by the fire elite zombie alone, who had not yet learned to fully control the power of the fire lotuses. Once the fire elite zombie matured enough to the point that it could control the fire lotus more deftly, his deadliness would become infinitely more terrifying.

Furthermore, when the elite zombies of the five elements were born, each one of them would possess their own natural way of cultivating. That meant that the elite zombies of the five elements were at their weakest when they first emerged. Once they slowly ascended using their cultivation method, their strengths would gradually increase over time, and they would be able to use their natural talents and abilities with far more ease.

Han Shuo did not doubt that when the elite zombies of the fire elements evolved to the final stage, they would absolutely be able to destroy the world. Furthermore, they would be capable of working together in a formation too. Since the water elite zombie was also being nurtured at the moment, Han Shuo would easily be able to practice setting up the formation once he created the most elusive metal elite zombie.

Having used up all of his energy in one go, the fire elite zombie was beginning to show signs of exhaustion. He disappeared amidst the raging flames into the other dimension with a wave of the skeletal staff in Han Shuo's hand.

When the fire elite zombie disappeared, the fire lotuses gradually dispersed into the air after losing their source of energy. However, they still managed to take the lives of fifty more bandits before they did so.

The screaming, crying, and dodging bandits all breathed a sigh of relief when they saw the life-reaping lotuses dissipate. They secretly cursed and criticized the boss in their hearts. What was “not too dangerous” here? The previously defenseless Brettel City had suddenly become a terrifying demon castle. Anything amazing or weird they could imagine—this place had them all.

At this point, more than half of the six thousand Greenfire Bandits led by Fass had died in battle. Thirty-two hundred of them had died an inexplicable death, and roughly a thousand of those belonged to the elite troops.

Fass wanted to cry but had no tears when he saw the corpses littering the ground. Brettel City was like a demon city that had exposed its fangs. It was a tireless killing machine thoroughly displaying its violence and brutality.

The elite bandits, who'd painstakingly climbed the Brettel City wall, were assaulted by the two strange undead creatures. They fell down one by one, breathing their last in mid-air while tumbling down.

That was to the credit of the little skeleton and wood elite zombie.

Fass had initially thought that the Red Archbishop would easily break through Brettel City's defenses when the bane of necromancers – the Church of Light – appeared. Now that Fass saw the little skeleton and wood elite zombie easily slaughter the bandits after they scaled the city wall with great difficulty, while the two capered madly beneath the holy light. Fass cursed eighteen generations of Kosse's ancestors in his heart.

What natural nightmare of necromancers? What envoy of the Light on the Profound Continent? Complete bullshit!

The Red Archbishop and divine artifact "Revelation" combined can't even purify a puny skeleton and a few zombies? You'll be the death of us!

Fass cursed inwardly. He saw bandits spontaneously explode when enveloped by the drifting bloody mist emitting from the Bloodlust Fang. Simultaneously, he saw men and horses of Kosse's team from the Church of Light unable to protect their own. Fass tried to think of a countermeasure in a hurry.

At this point, Fass had also figured out that Brettel City was relying mostly on Han Shuo's support. Too many brothers had died or retreated in dejection. If word of this spread, the fame of the Greenfire Bandits would fall into a bottomless abyss.

However, if they didn't leave now, who knew how many more astonishing methods the horrifying city lord of Brettel still had up his sleeve? Fass was now truly scared of Han Shuo deep in his heart now. He privately cursed the bastard who had brought him the intelligence and encouraged him to attack this city a hundred times.

Whoosh whoosh whoosh!

The distant ballista began to once more shoot bolt after bolt. Flames suddenly shot out again from the war chariots, falling directly onto the Church of Light's Templars. Three Templars, along with their horses, were instantly sent flying.

The tired soldiers on Brettel City wall had rested for enough time. Having slowly recovered their strength, the soldiers resumed their control over the defensive weaponry to barrage the enemy.

“F*ck! Retreat! Retreat!” Fass no longer hesitated when he saw the flames surging through the sky from the war chariots. A million gold coins was indeed worth attempting a raid, but given this situation, he might not even live to enjoy it. The war chariots coming back to life again meant that the soldiers on the city wall had the strength to continue fighting.

Recalling the terrifying lethality of the war chariots and ballistae from before, and turning to see less than half his men remaining, Fass painfully issued the order to retreat.

The bandits had long since been scared witless and were only awaiting this order from Fass himself. They didn’t dare to remain in place as soon as they heard the angelic word “retreat”. They followed Fass, beating a hasty retreat as fast as they could.

“Useless Church of Light! How the hell are you people the messengers of Light?! You can’t even purify four dark creatures, I really feel ashamed for you, blech!” Fass stopped his horse just before he ran past Kosse and the others. He glared furiously at Kosse,, in the center of the Templars, spitting out a thick wad of phlegm to vent his rage and contempt before actually leaving.

Fass had been toyed with by Han Shuo from the start. When he’d seen the Church of Light appear and purify the corpses with holy light, Fass had thought that he’d seen the light of victory. Who would have known that the purification power of the holy light wasn’t strong enough? In addition, some more undead creatures appeared and caused even more damage. Fass then felt that he’d been toyed with by Kosse, so it was easy to imagine the grievances in his heart.

Had Fass not taken the Church of Light’s influence over the Continent into consideration, had he weighed the fact that the Templars were the trump card of the Church of Light; given his brutal nature, Fass would definitely have ferociously charged forward with his underlings and chopped these incompetent Church of Light believers into pieces already.

“Shoot! Aim at the people in white outfits!” Floating in the sky, Han Shuo had withdrawn the Bloodlust Fang, now dripping with blood. He shouted an order to the distant soldiers on the city wall.

The soldiers had restored their strength. Upon hearing Han Shuo's command, they immediately turned the war chariots and ballistae to shoot what little firepower they had left at the Church of Light's group. The Templars and their horses staggered, with even Kosse almost being struck by the goblin explosives.

"Bishop, what do you think of this situation?" A Templar with a cross insignia on his chest, desperately protected Kosse whilst asking hesitantly, as if he wanted to say something but stopped himself.

Kosse had been insulted by Fass before leaving and was wearing an ugly expression on his old face. Kosse's sorry figure dodged the goblin bomb, before closing his eyes and commanding in a low voice, "I've failed, again. It seems that I will need to personally see the Pope this time. Let's go, we leave immediately!"

The Templar waved his sword to point behind him as soon as Kosse's order was given. The Templars grouped up, rushing forward to collect their thirty seven corpses, placing them on the warhorses. They then left the battlefield that was smoking with explosive residue, not leaving behind a single item of the deceased.

"They're gone, they've all retreated!" An exhausted soldier looked at the gradually disappearing enemies and revealed an ugly, but sincere smile.

Some soldiers, who could still barely stand straight, saw the distant Han Shuo standing proudly in the sky above the battlefield like a demon god. They felt that, as long as this city lord was still alive, Brettel City would never be attacked by anyone from now on.

Han Shuo used the yin demon to carefully watch the leaving enemies. When he had made certain that they'd truly withdrawn, his eyes swept over the scattered corpses that littered the vast pockmarked battlefield in front of Brettel City and loudly shouted, "All soldiers with any energy, defend this place well. Don't relax for even a moment!"

These people were truly tired to death already. When Han Shuo's ears caught the deafening rumbles from the other two city gates, he understood that the battle with the two other sides had yet to wrap up. However, the soldiers on his side had no energy left to reinforce the other sides, thanks to it being the most devastating battlefield. Han Shuo knew that they were spending every bit of effort just to remain on their feet, so he intended to personally go to the other battlefields.

The anxious civilians of Brettel City heard the weak cheering from the soldiers over on Han Shuo's side. These residents had been paying close attention to any changes from this side, for fear of being slaughtered, along with the massacre of the entire city. Some bold folk had even climbed onto the city wall to watch the entire battle.

Therefore, when the Templars and Fass' bandit horde retreated, the civilians in this area immediately began to jubilantly cheer. The people here had always been living a life full of fear, but now felt an intense sense of excitement and happiness filling their hearts. Being able to retain their lives in the face of the threat of a massacre made them extraordinarily happy.

For so many years, the city lords had always been the first to flee.

Han Shuo had finally broken this tradition with his arrival. He had seemingly turned the tides with the power of one person alone.

Han Shuo had used all of his miraculous powers to firmly guard the vast Brettel City.

Victory came full of hardship through twists and turns, but its fruits were sweet beyond belief. They had been limping along in life for all this time and now felt an unvarnished excitement at this moment of victory, because they were the ones to personally witness it.

When the civilians on Han Shuo's side erupted in cheers, the people on the three other sides also gradually smiled. At the city gates defended by Faulke, some civilians even took the initiative to join the struggle against the foreign enemies. These civilians didn't know how to use defensive equipment, but they could join forces by helping to move the huge boulders onto the stone-throwing catapults. Then, they saw with their own eyes how the boulders they personally loaded fell on the bandits, causing horrifying fatalities.

On Faulke's side, when the prepared boulders were used up, the civilians volunteered to move household items from the nearby houses and place them onto the stone-throwing catapults. This gave the desperate invaders an even more unforgettable blow.

The side defended by Dick, Chester, and Fabian were facing the Flying Dragon Bandits.

This gate had two magic crystal cannons, four war chariots, seven ballistae, six rows of stone-throwing catapults, and a thousand elite soldiers. Dick and the others had no experience in commanding an army, so Faulke had arranged a thousand skilled soldiers for defense. Han Shuo had placed a huge amount of firepower on this side precisely because he was worried that they couldn't withstand being overwhelmed.

The leader of the Flying Dragon Bandits, Afie, was a petty, sinister man with a vicious heart. He'd already had another plan in mind from the beginning. When Fass shot the signal into the sky, Afie didn't immediately rush forward to assault the gates. Instead, he waited for a while for the signals from all of the three other sides before he gave the order to attack.

Afie was somewhat frightened from the responding signals from the three sides. He'd had his underlings categorize the signals into three colors: red, blue, and yellow. Yellow signaled that the attack was going smoothly, blue meant there were some difficulties, and red meant that the assault in that area had encountered a fatal blow.

Of the responding signals from the three sides, those from Han Shuo's and Faulke's sides were both red. This showed that the attack on those two gates had met with a fatal blow from the beginning. Because Dorcas had just begun to lure his enemies inside and hadn't violently erupted with overwhelming firepower from the start, the Flying Dragon bandits on this side only released a blue signal.

Two red and one blue signals didn't really look too optimistic. Afie planned to preserve the bulk of his forces, so he let some of his underlings outside attack the gate guarded by Dick and Chester.

Chester had never faced such a battle before. Upon seeing Afie's bandits rush over, they immediately issued orders to launch an intense bombardment.

Because Han Shuo was worried they would be unable to bear the attacks, the firepower on their side was the fiercest. The two magic crystal cannons and war chariots spat out surges of flames at the same time as the ballista and catapults let loose their lethal barrage. Half of the several hundred low rank bandits sent out by Afie were killed instantly.

Afie jumped in fright. He immediately gave an order to hold and observe, his heart somewhat chilled in fright.

When his enemies were successfully lured into his trap, Dorcas unleashed devastating firepower. Those closest to the source died instantly and the few hundred bandits who'd reached the walls didn't leave behind enough for a grave by the time Dorcas was done.

When the bandit who'd released the blue signal saw the originally calm firepower become violent, he hurriedly released two red signals in a row out of shock.

Afie had already been a little worried in his heart when he saw the sudden two red signals in a row after the blue signal. He instantly ordered a retreat of a hundred meters, not allowing anyone to continue attacking.

Afie didn't mobilize a single soldier until the moment Fass withdrew. He only remained on his warhorse and glared at the enemies on the distant city wall, as if trying to cow the opponents with his presence alone. Afie was waiting for the other bandit groups who'd attacked Brettel City to gain some footholds first. Only then would he make a move against those bastards on the city wall.

When the news of Fass' failure was delivered one step ahead to him, the frightened Afie knew that they wouldn't be able to reap any benefits this time. He immediately issued an order to retreat without another word. The bandit group, who always advanced fiercely and bravely, now quickly retreated far away, leaving behind roughly two hundred corpses.

It was the first time Chester and Fabian had experienced such a battle.

Seeing Afie dejectedly leave in resentment, they thought complacently, “Our side is indeed powerful. We’re only fighting from a distance. Could it be that we already scared them off with just our momentum alone?”

Chapter 335: The Fruits of Victory

Han Shuo was most concerned about the gates that Chester and Dick were responsible for. But when he reached the gates, he found the soldiers safe and sound. The vestiges of their battle didn't seem too prominent. The two hundred bandit corpses indicated that the bandits' losses hadn't been too severe, either.

"Are you alright?" Han Shuo descended, an aura of victory swirling around him, and looked at the immeasurably self-satisfied Chester and the others, letting out a sigh of relief as he did so.

"We're fine, my lord. Those cowardly bandits charged us only the once, and then just stayed in the distance and observed the gate. They suddenly retreated just now." Chester gave a relaxed smile, pointing in the direction that Afie had run off in.

Looking into the distance, Han Shuo nodded, saying "That's good. Leave three hundred to defend this gate; the rest of you, go help Dorcas."

"Alright, we'll depart immediately!" Dick and Chester responded in tandem, turning to give spirited orders to the idle troops, haranguing them to get various appendages in order and head out to aid the other two sides.

Rumble...

A deafening explosion sounded from the direction of the other two walls. Han Shuo flew directly over to Faulke's defensive perimeter. Dorcas had already demonstrated his military genius during the merchant kidnapping incident, and was now once again doing so in exterminating the bandits. Han Shuo trusted that he was fine.

On the contrary, it was the high-born, stronger Faulke who needed help. Although it may have been because of his status as a knight, but he was bound by a code of conduct that limited his effectiveness. On the battlefield, his formations weren't flexible enough, and Han Shuo was worried that he might fall into trouble.

When Han Shuo arrived at the city wall under Faulke's command, he found bandit corpses lying everywhere. Looking at the walls, the bandits seemed to have exacted their revenge in kind, leaving countless soldier corpses riddled with arrows. Han Shuo immediately understood that the battle here must have been very intense.

The bandit group Faulke was fighting was the Battleaxe Mercenary Group. The towering leader of the Battleaxe Mercenary Group, Bynam, wasn't good at commanding troops like Fass, nor was his head filled with crafty schemes like Alfie. This single minded simpleton had been blinded by the prospect of a million gold coins and had just committed all his troops in a frontal assault.

Defending the wall, Faulke fought against the assault as if his life depended on it. With the battle devolving into a war of attrition, the barbaric Bynam, who'd sustained severe casualties, did not appear to know the definition of "retreat". He yelled madly at his soldiers to continue attacking the walls. Faulke's side had lost a hundred men, with around four hundred more with various injuries. The remaining soldiers were all bone deep exhausted.

If it hadn't been for the citizens of Brettel City joining the fray against the bandits at the tipping point then Faulke's side would have been in severe danger. When Han Shuo arrived, the battle had once again reached a critical juncture. Tens of ferocious bandits had already stormed the city walls, entangling the soldiers in furious battle.

The exhausted soldiers used their last vestiges of energy to hack, slash, and cut their foes down. A few citizens, unafraid of death in the face of the bandit threat, had willingly joined the fray. Wielding spears and javelins, they furiously stabbed and thrust at the bandits climbing the city walls.

Like a bolt of lightning, Han Shuo slammed into the city wall like a tornado of death.

He whistled loudly and charged the bandits on the wall alone. Like an unstoppable boulder, he tore through bandits using his bare hands, leaving behind a trail of what could only be described as vivisection specimens.

As these bandits died at his hand, there was nothing to stop Han Shuo from starting his loud, long chant with his bone staff. A horrifying army of undead gradually gathered beneath the city walls.

With a single stroke from the evil knight's killing aura infused bone spear, several bandits were mutilated and swept away. Flocks of gargoyles hurtled by like ravens, unhorsing and carrying off the bandits that had come galloping in on horses. The bandits that were carried off would be torn to pieces by the gargoyles' claws long before they hit the ground.

This time, when acid marshes appeared amidst the bandits, the sounds of screaming never stopped. Under the corrosion of the acid marshes, scores of bandits became brand-new, snowy white skeletons.

Han Shuo's actions had completely turned the situation around. Surging waves of magic rippled out whenever the demon-like Han Shuo waved his bone staff. Groups of undead soldiers would rise up, or mind-bogglingly destructive acid marshes would appear. From time to time, a few corpses would even explode. The Battleaxe Mercenary Group's casualties soared exponentially with every passing second.

The battlefield was a complete rout by the time Han Shuo was done. The furious leader of the Battleaxe Mercenary Group, Bynam, was roaring nonstop. In his fury, he completely overestimated himself, jumping on a horse and boldly charged towards Han Shuo. However, a shake of the bone staff sent a blast of magic towards him. The blast turned into rows of bone lances that flew through the air, a dense rain that blotted out the sun.

There were no flukes. Every part of Bynam and his horse that weren't covered by armor was pierced through by bone lances. Two bone lances found his eye sockets. Bynam died on the spot without even uttering a sound.

"Boss! The boss is dead!" Han Shuo's arrival caused panic amongst the bandits. The shocked and fearful bandits began shrieking loudly upon discovering that their leader was dead.

The remaining Battleaxe bandits all bolted as if using this as an excuse, recklessly running from this area. An audacious yet careful bandit pretended to retrieve Bynam's corpse, secretly taking off the latter's space ring and pocketing it.

Han Shuo loved looting the dead and discovered the bandit's actions with a glance. He laughed lightly, flying from the city walls like a specter, silently catching up to the ecstatic bandit who was hurriedly running away. He said, "Sometimes, the wealth of the dead will also cause you to lose your life!"

The bandit who had taken Bynam's space ring thought that it was an avaricious compatriot who desired a share of the wealth upon hearing those words coming from behind him. He turned around and struck out with a battleaxe with an ominous glint in his eyes.

The battleaxe heading towards him flew away with a "Ding! " upon meeting a flick of Han Shuo's right forefinger. The reverb travelled down the bandit's arm, sending him staggering backwards. . He turned around, finally seeing who the person behind him was.

Once he saw who was behind him, the bandit didn't dare hold back. He threw himself into a roll and tried to crawl through the underbrush to escape. Unfortunately, in front of the airborne Han Shuo, the bandit's actions were as transparent as a clear spring. Han Shuo easily impaled the bandit from behind, relieving him of Bynam's space ring and laughing as he flew back to Faulke.

"Some more unexpected revenue!" Han Shuo laughingly said to the panting Faulke.

Faulke understood that the danger he was facing was gone with Han Shuo's arrival. Faulke was also fully aware of the magnitude of Han Shuo's astounding power, and that the battle would be over the instant Han Shuo appeared. The facts proved Faulke's judgement correct.

The bandits did not dare to linger after Bynam's death, especially in the face of the undead army's terrifying combat ability. As such, they retreated from the city like a tide, leaving behind a thousand or so corpses.

The rumbling of the magic cannons from the other side of the city gradually subsided as well.

No longer hearing the sound of the cannons, Han Shuo understood that Dorcas' battle must also be drawing to a close. This was the first trial that Brettel City had faced, and they'd managed to pull through with everyone's cooperation.

Having witnessed Han Shuo's frightening strength, all of the citizens who'd participated in the battle looked at Han Shuo with reverence. When the last bandit disappeared over the horizon, this reverence gradually grew into trust. Loud cheers suddenly broke out around the city walls.

"Today, all citizens who participated in the battle shall be rewarded five gold coins. Faulke, you'll be responsible for the distribution of the rewards." Han Shuo instructed, smiling slightly as he looked at the citizens who were revelling in the joy of their survival.

The cheering citizens let out even more excited cheers as soon as the words left Han Shuo's mouth. The look in their eyes as they looked towards Han Shuo became even more ardent. How grandiose the city lord of Brettel City seemed!

"Rest assured, my lord. I won't unfairly treat the civilians who have aided us." Faulke bowed respectfully and looked at the bandit corpses outside the city. The armor and weapons left behind by the bandits will certainly be worth a pretty penny. Also, their money pouches will likely contain plenty of gold coins?

"Yeah, the bandits really have left. You clean up the battlefield, I'm going to go check on Dorcas!" Han Shuo gave instructions to Faulke and then streaked across the sky towards the section of the wall left to Dorcas.

The cannon fire gradually subsided, and Han Shuo looked through the distant, thick smoke from the magic cannons. In the distance, the bandits were beating a hasty retreat. The battlefield was littered with corpses, and the numerous pockmarks were a direct indicator of a battle just as fierce as the other two. Dorcas had not let Han Shuo down.

Arriving at the wall beside Dorcas, Han Shuo found him making a list of their casualties. Taking a glance, Han Shuo found the bodies of tens of soldiers neatly arranged towards the side. Dorcas and the rest of the soldiers were standing in front of the corpses, solemnly saluting the fallen after they had finished their count.

End of part 1 of the chapter.

Han Shuo walked up to Dorcas, not saying anything. The bodies of the young soldiers lying in front of them were all riddled with arrows. There were more who were killed by flying battleaxes, some even missing limbs. They must have suffered considerably prior to dying.

A grief-stricken aura emanated from the saluting Dorcas and soldiers. Han Shuo copied them, and saluted to pay his respects to the deceased. After a while, Dorcas opened his mouth and said, "There will certainly be casualties in war. Nobody has the power to change this. The only thing I can do is make sure that our casualties are as few as possible, and make sure the enemy suffers as many of these tragedies as possible."

Nodding his head in agreement, Han Shuo said "That's right. Sometimes, being cruel to your enemy is being benevolent to yourself. I think we need to upgrade our soldiers' equipment, with sturdier armor and weapons. This will make it easier for our soldiers to survive."

"My Lord, how are the conditions of the other three walls?" Dorcas took a deep breath, finally taking his eyes off the soldier's corpses.

"Apart from Dick's section, the others are more or less the same as yours; though we all held out." Han Shuo gave a gratified smile as he answered Dorcas's question.

Nodding his head, Dorcas heaved a sigh of relief and said "That's good!"

Clop, clop, clop.

At this time, Dick, Chester, and the others had finally dashed all the way across the city. Upon discovering Han Shuo already standing there, they understood that the battle must have already ended.

It had turned to dusk at some point. The last ray of sunshine gave birth to a fiery sunset. Under the glow of the sunset, the drifting smoke painted the world in blood, adding a touch of desolate beauty to the battlefield that looked like hell on earth.

Flocks of crows cawed as they flew, swooping down on the corpses of the bandits. They gleefully tore at and swallowed that beautiful flesh, giving off cries that disgusted people. As the sun set, the dense mass of crows grew more numerous, their grim screeches a bitter end to the unbearable scene.

“It’s over. It’s finally over!” Han Shuo mumbled a few words to himself, returning to the governor’s manor.

Smoke continued to billow outside Brettel City for three consecutive days. The citizens who resided close to the city gates all smelt the strong, pungent odor of burnt flesh.

A total of fifteen thousand bandits had attacked the city. In the end, they’d left behind eight thousand corpses, four hundred thousand gold worth of armor and weapons, as well as roughly two hundred thousand gold as loot. In addition, the Battleaxe leader’s spatial ring also contained three hundred thousand gold.

The four large bandit groups had arrived greedy for gold. Unfortunately, not only did they not receive a single gold coin from Brettel City, but they gifted a large amount of gold instead. Just as Han Shuo had predicted.

In this battle, Brettel City’s city guard death toll was three hundred and twenty seven. The injured numbered seven hundred and sixty nine. Those who had survived had essentially all suffered some form of injury. Furthermore, the magic crystals for the six magic crystal cannons were all depleted.

The goblin explosives and the more than ten thousand crossbow bolts that the merchants had transported over had also been almost completely consumed. There was not a drop remaining in the dozens of fire oil barrels, while the giant rocks used by the catapults had run out.

The few bandits who’d managed to scale the city walls had managed to destroy two war chariots, four ballistae, and a cumbersome catapult. The bandits also knew the astronomical prices of the magic crystal cannons and the specially refined magic ores they were made from. However, the six magic crystal cannons had been left untouched.

Han Shou finally gained the respect of all of Brettel City's residents after this battle, with army recruitment at an unprecedented high as enthusiastic young citizens flocked towards recruitment centers. Han Shuo's god-like power and influence had spread through the entirety of Brettel City. In the span of just three days, these residents who were at first filled with doubt towards Han Shuo had deified him.

To the younger generation, Han Shuo had become an unreachable myth and legend. There were a few pretty girls and beautiful women, who in the last three days had lightly powdered and gorgeously dressed themselves, coming up with excuses to hover around the city lord manor's main door. Each one of them looked flirtatiously in every direction, carrying who knows what thoughts in their heads.

The previously despised Brettel City city guard had also seemed to become hot commodities. Some residents excitedly introduced their beautiful daughters to the soldiers that were dressed in shiny armor. Brettel City had dramatically changed overnight.

Han Shuo, Jack, Chester and the rest were chatting with the merchants led by Fabian at the city gate leading to Seamist City. Of these merchants who had dared come to Brettel City, every one of them were true merchants, daring risk to obtain fortune. They had gained a new understanding of the city after experiencing the defensive battle of Brettel City.

The siege munitions escorted by the merchants this time had been utterly depleted. Yet, the larger threat of the seven duchies still existed. Therefore, when the corpses were cleared and the roads slightly repaired, Han Shuo immediately spent large amounts of gold to purchase even more munitions. Apart from unending war arsenal, he purchased even larger amounts of food and daily necessities.

Merchants would never rest as long as there was money. When the large deposit was handed over to them, the merchants were similarly anxious to leave the city to handle their affairs, emboldened by the trust that Brettel City and Han Shuo was placing in them. In addition, Fabian held a letter that Han Shuo had passed to him. Within the letter was a list of special ingredients that Han Shuo required, as well as a few warm and sweet words for Phoebe.

“Jack, have you truly decided to stay?” Fabian looked at his distant nephew, asking one more time.

Little Fatty Jack nodded his head, a surprisingly firm answer following, “Yes, I think this city needs me more. Furthermore, Bryan will be giving me the position of finance minister.”

“Don’t worry Old Fabian, I’ll take good care of Jack. Let him stay and try since this fellow is so persistent.” Han Shuo laughed as he spoke to Fabian.

When Han Shuo found Jack two days ago, the latter had been still hiding in his room vomiting nonstop. Having witnessed the defense of the city from beginning to end, Jack’s appetite for meat decreased drastically, continually vomiting as he revisited the experience over the past few days. At that time, Han Shuo thought that Jack would leave, shellshocked after experiencing this gruesome battle. Surprisingly, this fellow had an amazing perseverance, insisting on his continual presence in Brettel City.

Han Shuo had found out from Fabian that Jack was talented in resource management and finance. Under the guidance of a few Boozt experts experienced in trade, Jack displayed a level of financial management that moved even Phoebe. The reason why Phoebe gave such consideration for Jack, apart from the relationship between Jack and Han Shuo, was because of his performance in management.

Knowing this situation and seeing Jack insist on staying in Brettel City, Han Shuo did not continue persuading him and instead gave Jack the position of finance minister. He did so in front of Faulke, Dorcas and the rest. The gold that had previously been obtained from Redbeard Tuoba, the four hundred thousand from Helen Tina, and all the gold that was obtained from the battle were all handed over to Jack, placing him in charge of managing this large amount of wealth.

Han Shuo wouldn’t dare to hand such a large sum of gold to any other person. He trusted only Jack, someone who’d grown up with him at Babylon Academy.

Han Shuo was finally Brettel City's true master. He could appoint any personnel for any areas without need for any other approval. Faulke, Dorcas and the rest had no authority to interfere or intervene.

Jack was silent for a long time as he struggled between excitement and panic at holding such a large sum of wealth. Only after Han Shuo's continual reassurance did he slowly adapt to the role as finance minister.

Fabian's words to Han Shuo were truly accurate. With such a large wealth in Jack's possession, Jack systematically started to clearly allocate the usage and distribution of the gold once he'd gotten over his initial panic. Every amount was thoroughly recorded, causing Han Shuo to have a whole new level of respect for Jack.

Faulke and the rest initially doubted Jack, but were all shocked after receiving their stipend from Jack and hearing him clearly name the price of each armor and weapon. When Jack initiated contact with several merchants to help Faulke and Dorcas purchase some war equipment that were in high demand, both gradually relaxed when Jack bought the equipment at a price much lower than they'd imagined.

Busy Jack displayed the brains of a qualified finance minister in three short days. The young Jack was gradually accepted by Faulke and the rest. The few of them felt in their hearts that such a young finance minister was perhaps not a bad thing.

"Alright then, you all take care!" Fabian looked at the two youthful faces in front of him, as if seeing that Brettel City regain its vitality under their care, emerging brightly onto the chaotic stage that was the eastern region.

The merchants were escorted towards Seamist City by guards led by Chester amidst the farewells of Han Shuo and the others, gradually disappearing from Han Shuo's line of sight.

Han Shuo knew that Brettel City would definitely be even more powerful and prosperous the next time they came.

Chapter 336: The mountain chiefs

Today was a beautiful, sunny, and mild day in Brettel City. The four city gates had been properly repaired and cleaned up. Aside from the potholes in front of the city gates that temporarily couldn't be restored to their original state, the terrifying scenery from several days ago had vanished without a trace.

The five mountain chiefs in the surrounding areas brought some of their brothers and sisters to Brettel City under the warm sunshine.

The earth-shaking happenings in Brettel City a few days ago had spread throughout the surrounding area for dozens of miles. It was easy to see how fierce the battle had been from the deep scars on the city gates when the mountain chiefs arrived. Through the information they had received from Dick, who was also a mountain man, they instantly understood the situation that had arisen several days ago. They were now in awe and more respectful towards the newly appointed, young city lord of Brettel.

Among them, Fulkin of Mount Taki had long since witnessed Han Shuo's powerful might. He'd even made a gesture of goodwill before the fighting had started. Otherwise, Faulke wouldn't have been able to easily transport the large amount of siege equipment back to the city that night. As for the other four mountain chiefs, they all behaved and came docilely to the city lord's mansion under Dick's guidance.

The new changes in appearance of Brettel City along the way left a deep impression on them. The magic crystal cannons, war chariots, and other equipment carried overwhelming momentum and looked much fiercer after enduring the terrors of battle.

The soldiers welcoming them along the way may have been the same soldiers of Brettel City, but the presence these soldiers exuded now gave them a strange feeling. Having survived such a brutal battle, these soldiers were no longer timid and cowardly like they had been in the past. Their armor shone brilliantly, and their bearings were cold and calm with a faint brutal, killing air.

“Are these people the same tattered soldiers in the past who ran even faster than the civilians?” Some mountain chiefs couldn’t help but inwardly wonder when they saw the drastic changes in these soldiers.

As they stood before the main gates of the city lord’s mansion, the mountain chiefs saw some smiling civilians take it upon themselves to clean up the surrounding roads. There were also some beautiful girls and women shyly gathered around the front of the city lord’s mansion, chattering and laughing in low voices. The mountain chiefs felt that Brettel City had become extremely different.

“His Lordship isn’t someone who can be provoked. Zack, you shouldn’t run your mouth, it won’t end well if you offend His Lordship!” Dick was quite familiar with the mountain chiefs. Knowing that Zack was the most rude and careless of the bunch, Dick had constantly warned him along the way.

“Dick, old pal, you’ve been running your mouth more and more nowadays. I remember that you used to be a man of few words before. When did you become so long-winded?” Zack was a short, sturdy man. It was unknown whether or not his skin was as black as charcoal due to year round mining.

“Elder cousin Dick, is this city lord truly as powerful as you say? Or are you deliberately exaggerating?” A female mountain chief called Delia spoke up. She had inherited the leadership of Mount Silk from her father. Delia had a high nose – a typical feature of the mountain people, and a beautiful pair of straight, long, and slender legs. She was around 173 centimeters tall, quite a bit taller than the average woman.

Delia’s appearance was just as charming as her body. Her wheat colored skin shone with a healthy luster, her eyes wild while still preserving the curiosity of a young girl. Her curvy body was covered simply by some leather armor at the important parts of the chest and belly. However, her arms and legs were both exposed, with a valuable dagger sheathed on her left calf. She very much had her own sense of style.

Both Zack and a young mountain chief Kent next to him revealed traces of a fervent expression upon hearing Delia's words. It seemed that they were very interested in Delia.

In a place where beautiful women were scarce, like Brettel City, Delia quickly became the focus of many men's attention. However, Delia was a senior swordsman, in addition to holding the mining rights to Mount Silk. No ordinary person would have the right to capture her.

Delia had the frank personality of a mountain woman and was like a thorny rose. In a place where she was the focus of local men, Delia liked to use her advantages to play off the men who lusted for her. However, she never spoke encouragingly to any man, nor did any man have the ability to take advantage of her.

Dick was Delia's distant relative. He could only smile wryly at this wild cat of a distant little cousin of his and warn her, "You'd best behave! Don't try your tricks in front of His Lordship, he's not someone you can handle!"

"Humph! Just a young man, what's so great about him?!" Delia pouted and snorted gently. That's what she said, but she had actually become even more interested in Han Shuo.

"Alright, alright. Hurry up, don't keep the city lord waiting for too long!" Adleman, the oldest mountain chief, abruptly opened his mouth with a light scold.

Adleman held the most prestige amongst the five mountain chiefs. He belonged to the same generation as the grandfathers of Delia, Zack, and Kent, and they'd always banded up to resist the bandits' assaults. They had also kept in touch with each other over the years. Whenever the mountain chiefs fathered together, Adleman often gave guidance to the rest as their senior.

The others had no more words to say upon hearing Adleman's words. Only Dick was summarizing some of Han Shuo's recent matters to the others in a low voice, particularly Han Shuo's personality. Dick narrated in detail about how Han Shuo had personally killed a soldier who'd dared to defy him when he'd just arrived in Brettel City.

The mountain chiefs understood very well from Dick's previous messages that this new city lord wasn't one to be trifled with. When Dick described Han Shuo's cruel and ruthless style, they all felt some apprehension in their hearts. As for Delia, she became even more curious about Han Shuo.

"Everyone best not to provoke this person. I don't care what you do, our Mount Tali will definitely have a good relationship with him anyway. We don't have any intention of making things difficult for him." Fulkin had planned to get along with Han Shuo after personally seeing Han Shuo destroy Troda in a fight. Otherwise, he wouldn't have had taken the initiative to descend the mountain and help Faulke, doing Han Shuo a favor.

Fulkin was the most stubborn amongst the five mountain chiefs. It had been years since he'd been willing to serve someone. When even Fulkin had made his stand before he'd met Han Shuo, the fear and awe in the others' hearts instantly increased.

They'd walked past broad, stone steps after a while as Dick finally led the five mountain chiefs to the banquet area in the city lord's mansion.

Han Shuo had retained all of the chefs that he'd recruited in the city lord's mansion last time. The banquet was held in the merchants' living room. Dorcas, Faulke, Chester, and Jack had arrived ahead of time to wait for the five mountain chiefs.

"Let me introduce to you all, these are my five fellow mountain chiefs of the mountain mines around Brettel City!" Dick pointed towards the five mountain people before introducing Dorcas and the others as well.

After Dick finished the introduction of both sides, Fulkin, who'd helped Faulke resist the bandits last time, laughed heartily as they gave each other a hug full of heroic spirit.

Fulkin said in a loud voice, "Faulke, my brave brother, I have heard of your amazing exploits even in Mount Tali!"

As a true knight, Faulke gave Fulkin a courteous, small smile, his voice warm and friendly, "You overpraise me. I gladly welcome your visit."

“Oh, where is your city lord?” Zack shifted his gaze around. He was waiting for Dick to introduce the young, miraculous city lord only to find that Dick wasn’t playing along.

Dorcas swept a cold glance at Zack, shouting in a low, somewhat sinister voice, “‘Your’ city lord? Do you mean that you people aren’t under His Lordship’s jurisdiction?”

Although Dorcas’ strength wasn’t strong, the presence he’d accumulated through the intense slaughter of battle couldn’t be looked down upon. His low shout was dark and chilling. like a sharp sword edge.

“Shut up Zack!” Ever since Dorcas had been brought back by Han Shuo, he’d gradually revealed his talent during the several battles. Dorcas had become the soldiers’ object of trust, his deterrence of his presence slowly outstripping even that of Faulke’s. Dick understood full well that this person’s loyalty to Han Shuo was somewhat blindly unreasonable, so he hurriedly scolded Zack.

The mountain chiefs around Brettel City had always looked down on the city lords. Thus, they naturally wouldn’t show any respect in their usual conversation. Old habits died hard, immediately angering Dorcas.

With his 190 centimeters tall body, Dorcas stood there like a sharp unsheathed sword. No one could ignore his presence. It was a pity that his determined face currently wore cold indifference, an expression that rejected people from coming within a thousand mile radius of him, making him unapproachable.

“Our apologies, we haven’t been respectful enough because the previous city lords had been incompetent. Zack’s mouth is unable to adapt so quickly, I think that he didn’t mean to offend His Lordship. I hope you will overlook this.” The old Adleman hurriedly spoke up in an effort to mediate, surreptitiously giving Zack several eye signals.

Dick and Fulkin also winked and glared fiercely at Zack, motioning for the latter to quickly show a respectful attitude so as to avoid making Dorcas unhappy.

Zack was crude, but not stupid. Even though he still held some grievances in his heart, Zack ultimately bowed when the three looked at him and said in a small voice, "I'm sorry!"

Dorcas threw Zack a glance and snorted coldly, not saying another word. He picked up his wine glass before going to seek out Jack to discuss about needing more war equipment, not continuing to pursue Zack's disrespectful manners anymore.

"Faulke, where is His Lordship?" Dick inwardly heaved a sigh of relief upon seeing that the most unsociable Dorcas had taken his leave. He then turned to ask Faulke, who'd been chatting and laughing with Fulkin.

"Ah, His Lordship said that it was rare for him to have guests, so he wanted to personally prepare some good food, telling us to stay here and wait for him for a bit." Faulke explained laughingly. He stared fixedly at Delia, not hiding his interest for her.

"Another stinky pervert!" Delia curled her lips somewhat pridefully. She threw Faulke a glare before turning her head away, inwardly coming to this judgment about him in her heart.

When Delia turned her line of sight away from Faulke, her eyes followed the indifferent Dorcas with some interest. She discovered some interesting points in his seemingly forever unapproachable face. It seemed Delia paid more attention to men who didn't pay any attention to her.

The smooth tongued knight Faulke, humorous Chester, and Dick chatted with the five mountain chiefs. All of the five mountain chiefs were both fearful and respectful towards the new city lord. No one dared to be carelessly unfriendly in their manner of speech. They sipped from their wine glasses while gathering more information about the city lord from Faulke and Chester.

The young Zack and Kent were still extraordinarily curious about the rumors regarding Han Shuo's kidnapping of the grand duke Helen Tina. Chester and Dick were no gentleman either and paid no heed to Han Shuo's heroic image, narrating their self-confirmed true understandings to the two with low, perverted laughs.

Delia, who wasn't very far from them, was also very curious. Upon hearing the four perverts' dirty laughs, Delia paid attention to their conversation and "accidentally" heard some things she shouldn't have heard. She couldn't help but blush to her ears, spitting in contempt and scolding in a low voice, "I didn't think this city lord would be so lewd. Humph! It seems he's much more lustful and perverted than the men in Brettel City!"

"Heh heh, His Lordship is truly an expert!" In this aspect, the dirty men seemed to think nothing of being brutal to a notoriously vicious woman. It wasn't something despicable, and they even felt some glory in it.

After Dick and Chester described it once over, the two young mountain chiefs all revealed looks of awe, the kind of awe that was much greater than when they had heard about Han Shuo killing many bandits. This made the eavesdropping Delia despise the four of them. She inwardly cursed that men were nothing good.

"My apologies to you for being late. The ingredients in Brettel City are too rare. Although I'm a little late, we will be able to enjoy some exotic food!" A hearty laugh resounded from within the room suddenly. The handsome, refined Han Shuo stepped out leisurely from inside.

TLC of an advance GDK chapter going on right abouuuuut now. 😊

Chapter 337: Complete acceptance

Even in front of the uncommonly tall mountain people, Han Shuo's stature of over 190 centimeters exuded a natural deterrence that made him stand out like a crane among a flock of chickens when he walked out of the house. Practicing demonic magic had also given him an evil aura, making him even more attractive.

Smiling lightly as he approached, Han Shuo took out plate after plate of gleaming, roasted shiny golden meat from his space ring and placed them onto the table in front of everyone.

"Ladies and gentlemen, these are some very rare meats from distant lands that I've taken pains to hunt and prepare. Would you like to have a taste?" Pulling all the dishes out, Han Shuo smiled as he invited everyone to try a piece.

Jack was pulled to the other side by Dorcas to discuss military budgets. But when he smelled the mouthwatering fragrance of roasted meat, something he hadn't tasted in so long, his belly couldn't control its desire for good food. Jack quickly threw off the pestering Dorcas and came running over.

Dorcas was a fanatic with a fiery thirst for war. His only interest was slowly polishing his training methods to create an even more powerful, explosive force out of the soldiers under his command.

Therefore, Dorcas became especially interested in Little Fatty Jack, since he was in charge of the budget. Dorcas used all the tricks at his disposal to pry more and more money for equipment out of Jack. To be sure, Jack was a little scared at first, but after a while grew used to Dorcas. Now, he gave as good as he got in those little discussions with Dorcas, leaving him with just what was required.

"You little brat, heh." Han Shuo shook his head when he saw Jack quickly run over, then spoke to the five mountain chiefs in a relaxed manner, "No worries, everyone hurry up and try some, these things aren't delicacies you'd find normally."

Even Fulkin, who was the only one among the mountain chiefs who knew Han Shuo, felt some fear and trepidation when he saw that the latter wasn't aloof and lofty as they'd imagined. He actually became even more cautious.

Jack was most familiar with Han Shuo since he'd been Han Shuo's only friend over the years. Therefore, he wasn't as polite as others. He used a fork to stab into a large piece of fragrant, tender meat, and chomped down on it. As he chewed, he let out a surprised exclamation of praise, "Mmmm, so tasty, what is this meat? It's really so fragrant!"

"This is a Manticore's forelimb, tastes good, doesn't it?" Han Shuo answered, with a smile. He pointed to the dishes one by one as he introduced them, "This one here is the tail of a Deepwater Venom Python, it's the most chewy. That dish over there is the brain of a Harpy, you have to try to know how it tastes. And this is....."

Let alone the five mountain chiefs, even Faulke, Dorcas, and the others grew wide-eyed and openmouthed with astonishment as Han Shuo's introduction went on. They couldn't understand how the meat in front of them could possibly come from high ranked magic creatures like those described. Hunting magic creatures of that rank would require a team of experienced, skilled adventurers. If any ordinary person attempted to do so, they would only face death.

"Furthermore, there are no such creatures around Brettel City. Where on earth did he go to hunt? Ohh, these creatures are not something an ordinary person could hunt, the city lord really is an incredible freak!"

No one needed to look at each other to know that everyone present was feeling the same, gracing Han Shuo with a strange look.

"What!? This is the forelimb of a Manticore!?" Jack jumped in fright, the fork in his hand still holding a large piece of jiggling meat. He'd heard once that a single swipe from a Manticore could tear a person in half. He couldn't help but cry out when he linked that image to the lovely piece of meat he was chewing on.

"Indeed, how does it taste?" Han Shuo laughed out loud, staring at Jack.

“The taste is no problem, but when I imagine the scene of the Manticore tearing up people and the ground using its front claws, I’m still scared!” Jack had some lingering fear, his eyes rolling as he looked over at the delicious dish. He seemed to want to eat, but couldn’t overcome the pressure in his heart.

Han Shuo glanced at the others and discovered their odd expressions. He let out a laugh, amused, “What, can it be that you guys don’t dare to eat? Hehe, I hunted these specifically to serve you, are you not giving me face?”

Dorcas silently walked towards the Harpy dish under Han Shuo’s watchful eyes. He forked a large piece of charred, black meat and swallowed it with a heavy expression.

“What’s the big deal, humph!” To Han Shuo’s surprise, Delia snorted, pouting as she picked up her knife and fork to start on the Deepwater Venom Python. She chose a piece of short rib with some cartilage in it, chewing it carefully.

As she chewed that morsel, Delia’s brows began to relax. She began to excitedly waver her cutlery, cutting a bigger piece. As she chewed, she praised, “It tastes really good!”

“Heh heh, the Deepwater Venom Python is extremely poisonous, even I don’t know if I’ve prepared it properly. Big trouble could come my way if by chance something had gone wrong!, Han Shuo’s lips curled as he muttered to himself, looking at Delia chew voraciously with her small mouth.

Delia had thrown her image to the wind as she ate heartily. Her small ears happened to catch Han Shuo’s mumbling. Her lively actions immediately froze stiff. Her delicate red cheeks paling, she stared at Han Shuo and her voice trembled, “What did you say?”

“Nothing, hehe! The Deepwater Venom Python is extremely poisonous. If I hadn’t prepared it properly, you probably wouldn’t be conscious by now” A loud laugh escaped Han Shuo as he explained it.

“Damn it! You even scared me!” Delia glared ferociously at Han Shuo but didn’t pursue the matter. She focused all of her attention on the Deepwater Venom Python dish.

The other four mountain chiefs as well as Faulke, Dick, and Chester had reacted by now, particularly little fatty Jack, who took off with an entire plate.

These rare dishes were originally hard to even catch a glimpse of, let alone savor like this. Yet, Han Shuo had brought forth quite a large amount of these delicacies. However, there were more than enough people present. With the mountain people's famously large appetite, Delia was afraid that the others would wipe out the remaining dishes while she wasted time talking. Therefore, she no longer paid attention to Han Shuo and instead rejoined the tussle over the food.

The six dishes were spotless after some time, the maniacs having cleaned off the entire table. Some even held onto their forks, as if they hadn't gotten enough. On one hand, the food was delicious beyond belief, causing them to eat quickly. But the rare ingredients were also delicacies in their own right, which was an additional incentive to devour the food.

When the servants hired by Han Shuo set up the food that the chefs had diligently cooked, the guests felt them to be dull and bland. They now despised the ordinary food.

Their palates satiated after food and drink, the bunch followed Han Shuo to the meeting chamber, leaving the mess for the servants to clean up.

Unlike the antisocial image that the five mountain chiefs had expected, Han Shuo always maintained a smile, occasionally cracking jokes. Everyone was now a bit less cautious and more warm when they sat down now. The exotic food had undoubtedly played a large role in this.

Han Shuo sat in the center, as befitting his position. He smiled and glanced at the five mountain chiefs. Seeing them settle down properly one by one with restrained smiles, he nodded and said, "Don't be nervous. I've invited you here to discuss a matter of mutual benefit. You are all people from Brettel City. Maybe the former city lord couldn't hold your trust, so you gradually severed your connections with the city."

"This time, his Majesty has bestowed Brettel City to me, and I will not let the city bear the brunt of the ravaging from the seven grand duchies and other bandit groups. Not only Brettel City, but the five mines of your group will be protected as well. From now on I hope that we can join forces and develop the city.”

“Your Lordship, I believe you can bring peace to Brettel City. I, the chief of Mount Tali, am willing to be at Your Lordship’s disposal. I know that you will not treat us poorly.” Fulkin had already made his decision. He knew that Han Shuo alone could severely injure Mount Tali. Seeing the impressive array of defenses that Brettel City boasted had simply solidified his decision.

Han Shuo had already expected Fulkin’s goodwill. When he heard these words, he said with a smile, “Many thanks to you, Fulkin. When Faulke faced the threat of the bandits last time, your Mount Tali had lent a helping hand. This lord has remembered this in my heart.”

“Your Lordship is too polite. I held the former city lord in disdain because he ignored his own citizens. However you are completely different from him. As an original member of Brettel City, this is what I should do. Not to mention since Your Lordship helped us break the siege against Mount Tali last time, Troda will never come back to disturb us again.” Fulkin was very sensible. Since he had decided to cooperate with Han Shuo, he spared no effort in forming a better relationship.

Seeing Fulkin make his stand, the other four mountain chiefs couldn’t help but look at each other. They knew in their hearts that this newly appointed city lord excelled in all aspects. Their only concern was that Han Shuo would take over their mines. This was the reason why they weren’t ready to compromise.

The mines were their main source of income and also the basis for their survival. According to what Han Shuo had said, everything around Brettel City belonged to the city lord, did that not mean their mines also belonged to him?

Han Shuo slightly smiled, he looked at the four mountain chiefs and said, “You four, are you willing to support me?”

Their four hearts jumped when his words resounded. The three young mountain chiefs didn't speak and focused their gaze on the oldest, Adleman. Adleman was silent for a while, then bit the bullet and spoke respectfully to Han Shuo, "Your Lordship, we are your people. We certainly want Brettel City to develop, but we do not know how we could be of help to Your Lordship. We hope that you will clarify this for us."

Han Shuo smiled, nodding his head, "Since you already admit to be the citizens of Brettel, this is now easy to handle. To be honest, Brettel City currently is not lacking anything except for manpower. The merchants deliver a steady stream of materials, I also have enough gold coins to support the city's operation. Only the problem of the lack of population can't be solved in a short amount of time."

"I know that there are thirty to forty thousand people around the mines on your mountains. Miners excluded, that total includes a large portion of elderly, women and children. Their living conditions near the five mines are not ideal. They only left Brettel due to the incompetence of the former city lord. They did so because Brettel wasn't secure. But now that Brettel is very safe, if you five are willing to, let them come down from the mountain. There are a lot of vacant houses in the city and living conditions are much better for them. What do you think?"

Adleman was moved listening to Han Shuo's words. He knew in his heart that it was indeed difficult to live in the mountains. Except for the variety of ores from the five mines, the trees were sparse, the wildlife had long been hunted, and water needed to be hauled from the foot of the mountain.

The miners worked day and night in the mountains just to exchange for some food transported by the merchants. The mountain people lived in the caves all year round without seeing sunlight in order to prevent raids from the bandits. If not for wanting to ensure their own lives, who would want to live like a savage on the mountain?

Adleman was genuinely touched for Han Shuo to first think of the pitiful mountain people's well-being. He suddenly kowtowed towards Han Shuo, speaking in a thick voice as tears spilled without end from his eyes, "I thank the city lord for your good intentions on behalf of all the mountain people. I won't say any more unnecessary words. As long as Your Lordship can guarantee they will not lack for food and clothing and give them a stable living environment, I will do so without a word even if Your Lordship wishes us to hand over the mines."

"Elder, please rise. They are also my people, giving them a good living environment is what I should do. The five mines are the basis for your survival, from now on they are still under your control. There is only one thing, even though we have a lot of siege equipment, there isn't enough manpower to operate them. Once the official army of the seven grand duchies invade, I'm afraid that with just three thousand city guards, we won't be able to control the situation even with many equipment."

"My only request of you is that you will join us when facing common enemies and help stop them. We will provide enough siege weaponry. As long as we have enough manpower on the city wall, the seven grand duchies can never even dream of breaking our defenses. Are you all willing to work alongside me, fighting for the safety of Brettel City and her people?"

There were no longer any rifts when they'd spoken to this point. Adleman had worked hard all his life to resist the constant plundering of the seven grand duchies and bandit troops, trying to provide the mountain people with a better life.

Han Shuo's approach didn't conflict with his ideals. Adleman no longer held any traces of hesitation towards Han Shuo's proposal. He immediately shouted at the three young mountain chiefs, "You three little babies, why are you not with me thanking his Lordship for his grace?"

The three young people also no longer held any doubts at this point. Even Fulkin, who'd previously expressed his allegiance, bent one knee down to Han Shuo. Each made a vow that they would use their everything to defend the safety of Brettel City.

Helping each of the mountain chiefs to their feet, Han Shuo said with a smile, "The last time I went to Mount Tali, I saw that your equipment wasn't very good. The bandits left behind tens of thousands of equipment this time. They would occupy too much warehouse space in Brettel City. Why don't you take them and equip yourself?"

The mountain people were hard at work mining ores for many years to trade them all for food and daily necessities, maintaining the basic livelihood of their elderly and children. They simply couldn't spare gold coins for weapons and armor. Some people only had rough iron bars of inferior materials to use.

Hearing this, the five mountain chiefs remembered the three thousand shiny armored city guards holding sharp, cold glinted weapons on their way here. They were red in the face with embarrassment when they compared that memory to their own shabbily dressed subordinates.

"Many thanks to My Lord, many thanks to My Lord!" Fulkin was first to react, once again falling down on his knees.

As Fulkin willingly paid obeisance, the other four mountain chiefs did the same with complete willingness. Each were full of excitement and admiration as their eyes looked at Han Shuo, increasingly convinced.

"Haha, everyone please stand up. This is just the beginning. I think with gradual development, the future of Brettel will bloom for the better!" Han Shuo once again lifted the five mountain chiefs up, chuckling merrily.

"Wuuu, there goes hundreds of thousands of gold coins." Only Jack, the finance minister, was sighing painfully. However, his cry didn't garner any attention amidst the joyful cheering of the crowd.

Chapter 338: Exploring the underground world again

A large portion of mountain people who had lived around the five mines for many years already came down from the mountains under the arrangements of the five mountain chiefs, and once again returned to Brettel City.

The news of the four bandit groups' defeat had inadvertently spread throughout the seven grand duchies. The smaller bandit groups wouldn't dare rob Brettel City again. Even the seven grand duchies who were still locked in conflict were shocked by this news. Overnight, Brettel City had transformed from a city anyone could bully to a taboo existence, its new status paved by the corpses of ten thousand bandits.

When Brettel City was busy preparing for the mountain people, Han Shuo left Dorcas and the others a few instructions, then soundlessly disappeared.

All of the magic crystal ores had been used up. These weren't easily acquired either. Although they were unlike the goblin missiles for the war chariots where they were extremely rare and monopolized by the various empires for use in magical formations. Han Shuo had already instructed Fabian to acquire some more crystal ores, but now the former also began to think of other ways to obtain crystal ores.

Han Shuo first thought was of the underground world. The last time he was in the Dark Forest, he'd heard that this world possessed magic crystal mines. Now that Brettel City had temporarily calmed down, Han Shuo once again set out for the Dark Forest by himself.

Arriving at the Dark Forest, Han Shuo didn't tarry and went straight to the entrance of the underground world.

He didn't immediately rush in, but released a yin demon to sweep a five mile radius. After the yin demon covered the area, Han Shuo didn't find any traces of the Redbud Knights, which meant they had either stopped probing the underground world or had gone in.

He didn't spend too much time hesitating. Han Shuo hadn't informed the forest trolls this time either and ventured into the underground world alone. After a long winding underground tunnel, he gradually reached the depths of the world. Since his power had greatly expanded since the last time he was here, Han Shuo only needed one hour of uninterrupted flight before officially entering the underground world.

There weren't many changes compared to last time. According to the division of the underground world's layers, the lizardmen were one layer above Han Shuo, while the Dark Dragon City seemed to be a layer below.

The underground world had a clear hierarchy. The weakest races lived in the upper layers, and the lower a race lived, the more powerful it was. According to legend, some races at the very bottom of the underground world resided were so powerful that they were even headaches for the gods. However, those races were said to be cursed. They were bound by an unknown force, forever unable to leave the underground world that was bereft of light all year round.

"If I knew sooner I'd have summoned Gilbert here. He's from the underground world and must be familiar with the lizardmen. I could save much effort with him here." Han Shuo couldn't help but lament after entering the underground world. He'd forgotten that he had no clue where the lizardmen lived.

The underground world was just as vast as the world aboveground. The roads were endless, numerous and complicated. If one didn't know the way around here and became lost, they'd be hard pressed to find the way back. Fortunately, Han Shuo's memory was astonishing after his brain had been developed by his magic cultivation. He slowly walked along the road where he encountered the lizardmen previously.

Last time in the underground world, Han Shuo had gotten into a conflict with the dark elves. It was due to Gilbert's presence that he'd become familiar with the lizardmen. Just as humans saw the lizardmen to be all alike, in the eyes of the lizardmen all humans looked the same. Han Shuo didn't know if the lizardmen could still recognize him.

Relying on his memory, Han Shuo walked back to where he'd met the lizardmen. He encountered many strange races along the way. There were goblins with grey blue skin, dark batmen who liked gloomy humid places and even dark elves, but he didn't see any lizardmen.

The yin demon released by Han Shuo was also floating around to find traces of the lizardmen to no avail even after a long time.

When Han Shuo entered a dark, humid area, an ear-piercing screech suddenly assaulted his ears. He looked up to discover a mass of black shadows flying towards him, which turned out to be a group of men who could transform into bats. Astonishingly enough, they were trying to attack him.

"Human, leave everything you have here and we will consider giving you an easier death!" A batman in the front of the group spoke awkwardly in the common tongue, heading straight for Han Shuo's head.

The batmen's bodies were smaller than that of an average human. However, they had umbrella-like pair of wings and sharp claws that humans didn't have. These batmen liked to live in flocks and were just as infamous as the forest trolls aboveground. They wouldn't hold back once they encountered easily bullied individuals and would bare their fangs to tear their prey apart, looting their targets.

Han Shuo wasn't terrified and instead rejoiced when he saw the batmen fly out from the spacious, gloomy and damp cave. He sneered evilly, bloody lights shooting out from his ten fingers that were dancing in the air as if playing an invisible piano. Each light was as sharp as a blade, crisscrossing to form an unavoidable streak of light. As they sunk into the incoming mass of flapping batmen, agonized, piercing shrieks echoed through the air as they fell.

Han Shuo actually didn't touch the talking batman. The latter's small, beady eyes gleamed with fear's light as he watched his companions massacred by Han Shuo without even the slightest hint of resistance. He turned around quickly, trying to get away from this fiend of disaster.

“And where do you think you’re running to!?” Han Shuo lightly shouted, releasing his mental strength. His recently practiced demon spell “Soul Tremor” immediately surged into the batman.

The batman’s body plummeted like a plane fresh out of fuel. He vainly tried to flap his way out of his uncontrolled fall, but smashed into the ground with a thundering impact, leaving him dizzy and disoriented.

When the batman managed to come to, he was greeted with the face of a human smiling diabolically. The batman’s individual power was almost negligible, so he swept his small, beady eyes around to see none of his brethren. His wings trembling in his fear, the batman shrieked in common continental language, “Powerful human mage, please forgive the offense of this lowly petty bat, I beg you to forgive me!”

“You speak human language very well, otherwise you’d be dead already.” Han Shuo kicked the batman into the air when it’d just gotten up. Han Shuo laughed heartily and didn’t wait for the latter to land before kicking the batman around like a rubber ball.

“Good, I now forgive your offenses!” Han Shuo stopped his torturing when he saw that the batman was on the verge of falling apart, smiling merrily, “Now, you’ll answer each question I ask. I don’t mind dismantling your fragile skeleton if your answers aren’t good enough.”

The best way to deal with these batmen was to be brutal and domineering. This kind of race bullied the weak and feared the strong. They would bite the weak without a care, but would be meek and honest in front someone stronger. The way Han Shuo handled this batman made him toss away any idea of fleeing or lying. It responded in a shrill voice, “Powerful human mage, my answers will definitely satisfy you. Us batmen are aware of all happenings in this underground world!”

“Very good!” nodded Han Shuo. He smilingly asked, “Did a large group of humans recently enter the underground world? If so, where did they go? Where are the lizardmen? I heard the lizardmen recently discovered a magic crystal mine, do you know its location?”

Just as the scared stiff batman heard Han Shuo’s question, he immediately answered, "So you are also a treasure hunter. The lizardmen have indeed discovered a magic crystal mine. There were many humans entering the underground world recently, but the biggest group seems to be a knight brigade, and their goal is definitely the lizardmen's mine. Are you with that group?"

"Cut the nonsense, just answer my questions!" Han Shuo secretly rejoiced. The Redbud Knights had already entered the underground world indeed. This might be related to the threats from the golden dragon, otherwise Celt wouldn't have been in such a hurry.

"Yes, yes, Lord Mage please ask!" The batman started in fright and spoke up hastily.

"Any other humans besides that group of knights? Also, where are the lizardmen and the magic crystal mine? Has anything major happened recently?" Han Shuo continued his line of questioning.

"There were also several human groups in addition to those knights, but their members didn't number many and their occupations were too random, so us batmen don't know the specifics."

"Only the lizardmen know the magic crystal mine's location. I only know where the lizardmen live, honest!" The batman quickly answered.

Staring sharply at the batman for a while, Han Shuo realized that this batman only seemed to know so much. He casually asked some more questions. The information the batman knew was limited indeed, so Han Shuo ordered after a short interrogation, "Good, take me to the lizardmen's place, and I will spare your life."

The batman didn't dare to mess around after being threatened by Han Shuo. It led him through the complex, winding roads straight to the area where the lizardmen lived. One had to admit, the roads underground were winding with countless twists and turns, and even Han Shuo with his astounding memory was confused along the way. Had it not been for the batman, a native to this underground world, leading the way, Han Shuo simply couldn't have found the lizardmen.

After more than an hour, through who knew how many deep caves, twists and turns, the batman finally stopped at a valley. He pointed to a densely caved area ahead and said to Han Shuo, "That's where the lizardmen live, they like caves even more than us. The large and small caves you're seeing are their houses."

"The underground world lizardmen really live in such a place?" When he saw the batman's beady eyes flicker, Han Shuo was suspicious again and asked for confirmation.

"Powerful Lord Mage, most of the lizardmen gather in this place. The total number of lizardmen far exceeds your imagination, they are scattered in thousands of such areas all over the underground world. You won't make me take you to every single one, would you?" Seeing Han Shuo squint at him, the batman hastily yelped as it couldn't stop chills from running down its body.

Han Shuo had actually harbored this idea. However, the yin demon suddenly discovered a human sneaking around. This human's outfit was a bit familiar, so Han Shuo turned to the panicked batman, waving his hand as if swatting away a fly and said, "Scram, your role here is done."

The batman felt that it had been pardoned when it heard Han Shuo say this. However, its movements were awkward, tiny eyes staring fixedly at Han Shuo while it cautiously flapped his wings backwards.

Seeing this odd action, Han Shuo asked with surprise, "I already told you to leave, why are you still here?"

"I'm afraid you'd kill me to keep me silent. The whole underground world knows you humans are the worst at keeping promises!" Contrary to Han Shuo's expectations, this pathetic batman looked at him pathetically, answering fearfully.

Han Shuo was stunned, then snapped, "You are worthless to me, I won't waste my mental power if killing you don't bring me the slightest bit of benefit."

The batman finally heaved a sigh of relief when it heard this. Not daring to stay next to Han Shuo anymore, it flapped its wings and turned its body, quickly fleeing far away.

The sneaky human was hiding behind the boulders. Han Shuo was certain they were from the Dark Mantle when he saw their outfits and hoods. Dark Mantle members usually wore this concealing, loose outfit whenever they were conducting missions.

Han Shuo jumped out like an arrow towards the colleague hiding behind grey boulder after the batman had left. They were blending in perfectly, one with the rock. Han Shuo didn't make a sound to alert this person as he approached. When his big hand patted the colleague, the latter was startled like birds scared by the twang of a bowstring and jumping from their dormant position. They quickly started chant out two fireballs.

This colleague was wearing a hood which concealed their face, but the magic chanting exposed their identity as female. The only thing visible were her eyes, which were full of horror. As the fireballs blasted out, she suddenly exclaimed, "Bryan?!"

Han Shuo waved his hand. Two inconspicuous purple flashes shot out in the blink of an eye and the two fireballs were scattered into sparks. Han Shuo assessed this concealed fire mage with some astonishment then asked with surprise, "You know me?"

Pulling off the hood to reveal a familiar youthful face, it was the fire journeyman mage Chrissie whom he'd met last time in the Dark Mantle headquarters. The short haired Chrissie gave a surprised cheer, then waving her hands around as she quickly explained, "I'm Chrissie, we met last time at Dark Mantle headquarters, have you forgotten me?"

With Han Shuo's memory, even a glance was enough to never forget someone's face. Chrissie was no exception. Hearing her words, he nodded his head with a smile and replied, "So it's you. Ah, I didn't expect to meet you again here in this underground world. What a coincidence."

"Yes, yes, really a coincidence. I heard you are the city lord of Brettel. Woah, you are really formidable, already a count! Mm, right, shouldn't you be at Brettel, why are you here? Can it be you are also in on this mission? If so that's really great, I heard you even defeated Leah Cain..."

Chrissie wouldn't stop once she opened her mouth. Question after question were asked quick succession in her sweet, crispy voice. As the fully excited Chrissie seemed to have no intention of stopping, Han Shuo had no choice but to give a slight cough, cutting off her endless interrogation.

“Eh, Chrissie, can you take me to the person in charge first? Oh, if you know where lady Emily is, it’s best to take me to see her directly.” Han Shuo finally got the chance to ask when he saw Chrissie’s blabbering take a pause.

Han Shuo had known that Cecilia was in charge of this mission last time in the Dark Forest. Emily was acting as her assistant, and he’d be able to obtain all the necessary information if he found her.

“No problem, I know where Madame Emily is, I will take you to see her right now!” Chrissie readily agreed after she took off her hood.

“Then many thanks to you, Chrissie.” Han Shuo said smilingly.

Chrissie didn’t continue to probe around for the lizardmen’s movement, but cheerfully acted as Han Shuo’s guide, turning left and right on the complicated roads while telling him about the current status of the underground world.

Han Shuo smiled lightly as he listened to Chrissie talk. Every now and then he asked some questions about a few things he was interested in, gradually grasping the current situation in the underground world.

Chapter 339: It was indeed me

Han Shuo learned from Chrissie that the Redbud Knights had indeed traveled to the underground world, and the Celt had already launched one attack against the lizardmen already. The lizard men naturally couldn't stand up to the attacks of the Redbud Knights, but there was an extraordinary presence living in the magical crystal ore mine that the lizardmen guarded.

A dreadfully fierce battle had seemed to take place when Celt and the Redbud Knights entered the mine. A strange entity living within the mine had suddenly turned very terrifying, and even one of the top ten knight troops on the Continent hadn't come off on top in the exchange.

The Redbud Knights decided to furl their banners and cover their drums after failing three times. They were now hiding in some cavern, and not even the Dark Mantle knew where they were holing up. They had concentrated their attention on the area that the lizardmen were living in and was observing every move that occurred there.

"Bryan, why have you come to the underground world? Are you also part of this mission?" Chrissie asked Han Shuo excitedly after describing the current situation to him.

Han Shuo shook his head with a smile, "I was passing through the Dark Forest and happened to fight with Celt of the Redbud Knights earlier. I've come for him."

Even Celt's green dragon had been killed, so he must hate Han Shuo to the bones, not to mention that the latter had chopped off one of Celt's ears. This was the kind of grudge that demanded retribution no matter what. To Han Shuo, Celt was an enormous threat who controlled the Redbud Knights. Not only was his strength uncommon, but he was an important national figure as well. There would be no end of trouble once Celt learned of Han Shuo's identity.

Therefore, Han Shuo had come to the Dark Forest this time from Brettel City to see if there was a way he could obtain more magical crystal cores, and also to see if he could fully uproot the problem that was Celt to prevent future troubles for him after he walked out of the Dark Forest.

“What, you’ve fought Commander Celt of the Redbud Knights?” Chrissie suddenly shrieked and looked at Han Shuo incredulously. She immediately followed up with, “I heard that someone killed Celt’s green dragon, and even one of his ears was sliced off! Was that you?”

The light of intense curiosity shone in Chrissie’s eyes as she fixed her gaze onto Han Shuo. She seemed to have guessed something. It was rather Han Shuo who hadn’t anticipated that the news would spread so quickly. He was quite surprised by Chrissie. They were both hiding behind some red plants with enormous banana-shaped leaves. This was likely the temporary meeting place of the Dark Mantle for this mission.

A low shout traveled in before Han Shuo had time to respond, “Who is it?”

Chrissie snapped out of her curiosity when she heard this voice and also called back in a low voice. “It’s Three Dark Star Chrissie. Is it Wallace?”

“So it’s Chrissie! Mm, come on over.” The voice wasn’t as nervous as before. It laughed softly instead, with a young face popping out from behind a few red leaves. When the boy lifted his head and saw Han Shuo, he was immediately a bit unhappy. “Why is it you? What are you doing here?”

The last time Cecilia had tried to use the forest trolls to block the pursuit of Celt and the Redbud Knights, Han Shuo had forcefully prevented her from doing so. The other Dark Mantle members with Cecilia then had expressed their furious dissatisfaction. The one called Wallace was likely one of the shrouded figures then, which was why he was immediately unhappy upon seeing Han Shuo.

When Chrissie saw that Wallace’s expression had changed for the worse, she thought that Wallace didn’t know who Han Shuo was and hastened to explain, “What are you doing Wallace? Bryan is one of us! Haven’t you heard of his name before?”

“Hmph! He tripped up our plans at a critical moment, I don’t think he’s one of ours at all!" Wallace was quite loyal to Cecilia as he snorted derisively.

"Chrissie, take me to Emily." Han Shuo wasn't overly concerned with an angry Wallace and only spoke to Chrissie at his side.

"Apologies, we don't welcome people like you here!" The young man named Wallace suddenly drew himself straight from beneath the red banana-shaped leaf and blocked Han Shuo's path with a cold face.

Han Shuo flicked a glance at Wallace and went on his way, not caring about Wallace's obstruction at all. When he reached the latter's position and saw that he had no intent of moving out of the way, Han Shuo slowly reached out a hand to send a surge of strength into Wallace's body.

The force behind the strength caused Wallace to stagger. He backed up a few times in a bedraggled fashion before finally falling on his butt on the ground. There were a few traces of humiliation mixed in with the anger on his face as he shouted, "What do you want to do?"

"Whether or not I can go in isn't up to you. You're just a small Dark Star envoy and have no right or strength to stop me. Just don't try then!" Han Shuo expressed the most direct kind of contempt and looked back at Chrissie, who was coming over to try and smooth things over. He smiled, "Let's go and see Emily."

Chrissie was stunned in her tracks by Han Shuo's display of strength and then turned her head with an exclamation of surprise, "It must be you! The mysterious person who killed Celt's green dragon and sliced off his ear must be you!"

Wallace had been about to stand up and challenge Han Shuo again when his face suddenly went as white as paper. His knees weakened, as he was so frightened he fell into a sitting position.

Han Shuo chuckled softly and flicked his eyes contemptuously at Wallace, urging Chrissie onwards, "Speak no more of this, I need to see Emily urgently."

Han Shuo's lack of denial was a subtle admission to things. Chrissie's gaze at Han Shuo was full of worship as she ran over excitedly to Han Shuo. When she passed by Wallace on the ground, she said a bit apologetically, "Sorry Wallace, you don't have much at the moment either, so I'll be going now."

Chrissie no longer looked at the ashen faced Wallace after she spoke, hopping over to Han Shuo's side and saying enthusiastically, "Let's go, I'll take you Madame Emily. Oh Bryan, how did you slice off Celt's ear? That was too amazing!"

Han Shuo discovered that the Dark Mantle had chosen their hideout quite carefully along the way. The leafy fauna grew everywhere, and there were plenty of random rock outcroppings to hide behind. This place was perfect for the Dark Mantle members who were adept at concealing themselves.

All sorts of alarm mechanisms were set up starting from where Wallace had been stationed. These were made by hand and employed some magic elements in them as well. They appeared very adorable and practical. Han Shuo learned that these had all been made by Cecilia.

Although the curious Chrissie kept asking about Celt's destroyed ear, Han Shuo didn't say much more on this matter. He took the attitude of neither confirming nor denying things. When he saw Emily, the latter repressed the agitation in her heart with great effort and spoke with the dignity befitting her situation, "Thank you, Chrissie. I'd like to discuss with Bryan the matters of this mission alone."

"Alright then, Madame Emily." Chrissie responded with disappointment, casting a longing look at Han Shuo before she left. "Remember to tell me the details next time, I really want to know what happened with that!"

"No problem, I'll tell you next time. Thank you Chrissie!" Han Shuo responded with a friendly smile and then walked with Emily towards a cave.

Apart from the lush growth of the red, banana-shaped leaf plants around this area, there were also some small caves. It looked like Emily was temporarily taking residence in one of the caves. Perhaps she didn't want other people to see them as she avoided some of the caves with sounds coming out of them and walked to a remote corner.

“You little bastard has started tempting other girls again. You have me and Phoebe, isn’t that enough for you?” Emily immediately pinched Han Shuo halfway when she saw that there were no other voices, cursing him in a low voice.

Han Shuo felt quite aggrieved as he laughed wryly. When he saw Emily let go out of fear of hurting him, he explained, “It’s not like what you think! I only met her on the way and had her take me to come find you!”

“Hmph!” Emily looked at Han Shuo distrustingly. “Then what was she talking about, what details and what explanation?”

“Eh... she wants to know how I killed Celt’s green dragon and sliced off his ear?” Han Shuo responded honestly.

“What! You did it?!” Emily was startled as she looked at Han Shuo incredulously.

Nodding, since Han Shuo had no secrets in front of Emily, he said, “It was indeed me.”

Chapter 340: The upside down Gourd Mountain

“No wonder, Celt has captured and killed three of our members during this time. He must have heard from Kassel that it was you who saved us last time. Celt should already know your identity by now.”

The traitor druid, Kassel, had been pursuing Cecilia and her group when Han Shuo had suddenly rushed out to block him. After returning to the Redbud Knights, Kassel must have reported the situation to Celt. As many members of the Dark Mantle knew of Han Shuo, the three captured must have revealed the truth under Celt's torture.

“If that's the case, I'd also like to use this opportunity to kill Celt. I'm sure he has yet to recover from his injury. Now is the best time to go for it.” Han Shuo's voice was as cold as the tundra wind; he was determined to destroy his enemy at the roots.

“You're right, Celt indeed hasn't recovered, but because of this he is now heavily protected by the guards. The Redbud Knights are one of the top ten knight troops on the Continent, and Celt and Kassel aren't its only experts. This time, I heard that the fire grand magus Marceau had also come along. That old woman's too powerful, and extremely difficult to deal with.” Fearing that he had taken this matter too lightly, Emily hurriedly told Han Shuo everything about the Redbud Knights.

Han Shuo's lips curved into a disdainful smile as he replied, “That fire grand magus is already dead, so she won't be posing a threat anymore. No worries there!”

Emily was once again stunned when she heard these words. She stared blankly at the confident Han Shuo, trying to feel him out, “You killed her too?”

Nodding his head, Han Shuo said, “Yup, still me!”

Emily was speechless.

Pulling Emily into his embrace, Han Shuo whispered with a grin, “I haven't seen you in a long time, and I've really missed you too much. Bringing me to this remote corner, is it that you want me to... heh heh....."

Han Shuo's hands started misbehaving as he clung to Emily. Panting softly under his skillful hands, her eyes turned soft as she petulantly proclaimed, "I only intended to discuss business quietly, don't misunderstand!"

"I've already misunderstood!" Han Shuo let out a low growl, picked up Emily, and ran straight into the cave. The sound of suppressed panting and moaning echoed out from inside moments later.

After a long while, the two walked out from the cave, their clothes still a little messy. Emily's eyes were watery, moist with a charming subservience. Her soft body leaned on Han Shuo as she spoke with a hint of worry, "Cecilia is in charge of this mission. She seems to have some prejudice against you; what should we do?"

"It doesn't matter. My mission and yours don't conflict, and I have no intention of taking credit from her. I only need to kill Celt, then go see if I can get any magic crystal ores." Han Shuo didn't care about Cecilia's impression of him, nor did he hold any goodwill towards her. If it wasn't for Emily being on her team, he wouldn't have blocked Kassel from pursuing them last time.

"Aii!" Emily heaved a sigh and said to Han Shuo, "Cecilia is actually a very nice person. She is friendly with everyone, and my private relationship with her is even better. I don't know why she would be like this towards you."

"Let's not talk about this anymore, I need to go to the mine. If anything happens, as long as I know you're still here, I'll come for you. Rest assured that no one will find me if I don't want them to." Han Shuo had obtained all the necessary information from Emily and didn't intend to stay any longer. He was ready to go explore inside the magic crystal mine by himself.

The Dark Mantle's purpose in taking a trip to the Dark Forest this time was to observe the movement of the Redbud Knights of the Brut Merchant Alliance. The higher-ups of the Empire naturally needed a clear grasp of what the Redbud Knights were doing at the border of Lancelot Empire. Cecilia was in charge of matters outside the border, so she had taken on this important mission. Her reports were needed to slowly unravel the intentions of the Redbud Knights.

Magic crystal mines were a scarce resource for any country. However, the underground world held all kinds of races, and their numbers were countless, almost beyond imagination. As such, the higher-ups of the Lancelot Empire didn't intend to keep their knowledge of this mine to themselves. They only hoped to disrupt whatever the Redbuds Knights were planning and gain enough of an advantage to obtain some magic crystal ores.

When the Redbud Knights advanced into the underground world, they'd vanished without a trace after a tragic defeat at the magic crystal mine guarded by the lizardmen. However, according to Emily, they had yet to leave the underground world and seemed to have started plundering the other races down here.

Various races held sway over different regions in the underground world. The dark elves possessed a great number of dark magic equipments, the merpeople territory was rich with a variety of beautiful crystals, and other strange races had various rare resources.

Exploring the underground world was the same as entering a hunting ground to Celt. All of the races of this world had become his prey Except for the setback at the magic crystal mine where the lizardmen hindered his army, the valuables of the other races were all his for the taking.

The vast underground world covered an enormous area. Even the Dark Mantle, with its large manpower and secure base, couldn't find any trace of the Redbud Knights; Han Shuo naturally wouldn't waste his time on them. He was interested in the magic crystal mine and even more curious about the powerful entity that lived within it. He wanted to know how it could force Celt, a foe armed to the teeth, to retreat empty handed.

Han Shuo nimbly made his way through the lush shrubs of the lizardmen territory like a lightly flying insect. Numerous caves were hidden in the various crevices of the area. Thanks to his powerful consciousness coupled with a yin demon covering the area, Han Shuo didn't rouse the attention of a single lizardman. He flew all the way to the innermost line, and stopped only when he reached a reddish-brown mountain with a bald top.

The underground world didn't go without light all year round. Various glowing plants grew on top of the thousand-meter high rock wall, covering the underground world in a soft, dim light. The reddish brown bald mountain was roughly two hundred to three hundred meters high. No other plants or animals resided on it except for some reddish brown rock.

Looking from afar, this mountain was like an upside down gourd, wide at its peak and leaner further down. This made one worry if the slender mountain foot could bear the weight of the two heavy, gourd-shaped spheres of rock. Many large and small caves could be seen dotted across this bald gourd mountain. None of them betrayed their depths, seemingly bottomless and leading to who knew where.

Several reddish-brown lizardmen with weapons in hand were cautiously guarding the caves, alert against the possibility of the Redbud Knights invading them again. There were many messy footsteps, several uneven potholes, and some shrubs with scattered leaves around the mountain as if they had been cut across by a sharp knife.

Looking at this scene from the outside, Han Shuo understood that this place must have been the location of the battle. He examined the area minutely, brainstorming a method to infiltrate the magic crystal mine. Finally, he summoned the earth elite zombie and had the zombie take him to the depths of the bald mountain, to feel out the situation. If he couldn't reach the center of the mine through the earth elite zombie, he would have think of other ways.

As long as the ground was soil, it wouldn't hinder the earth elite zombie. The earth elite zombie appeared along with Han Shuo's magic incantation, then disappeared into the earth in the blink of an eye. Through his spiritual connection with the earth elite zombie, Han Shuo knew he was slowly advancing to the mine as per his orders.

End of part 1 of the chapter.

However, the earth elite zombie had yet to draw near the area when suddenly, a howl came from within the magic crystal mine. It shook the mountain, as if a sleeping monster had been awoken. A strange energy swept into the earth from the mountain, heading straight towards the earth elite zombie.

Han Shuo could immediately sense the powerful presence within the bald mountain. He quickly assessed the situation and concluded that this was a powerful creature comparable to the Lord of the Flames. The earth elite zombie was still far from the mountain, so Han Shuo hastily ordered him to retreat.

The earth elite zombie retreated nimbly, like a little eel, to Han Shuo's feet. He jumped out of the earth to Han Shuo's side without waiting for that strange energy to draw near.

Han Shuo waved the white bone staff in his left hand. A mass of black mist appeared, wrapping around the emerging earth elite zombie, and the white bone staff issued a light breeze. As the breeze gradually dispersed the black mist, the earth elite zombie had also disappeared without a trace.

Upon reaching Han Shuo's feet, the strange energy suddenly lost its target, and returned to the bald mountain's depths. After the mountain-shaking howl, hundreds of lizardmen sprang out from the various caves with weapons in hands, cautiously prepared and ready for any incoming attack.

"No wonder Celt failed multiple times. With such a powerful creature guarding the magic crystal mine, this would certainly give him a headache." Han Shuo muttered to himself, slowly retreating to a darker, more remote corner. He watched the now alert lizardmen from afar, knowing that they had received news of his invasion with the help of that strange creature.

With such a powerful creature entrenched in the upside down gourd mountain, it would be somewhat difficult if Han Shuo wanted to advance into the mine. This creature had a terrifying spiritual presence, it had even discovered the earth elite zombie sneaking in from beneath the earth. As such, Han Shuo couldn't guarantee if he himself could enter the mine by suppressing his presence.

Han Shuo naturally wouldn't risk it as long as there was a single shred of uncertainty. Not to mention the powerful creature, just the hundreds of lizardmen endlessly appearing from within the mine would leave him hard pressed.

After hesitating for a bit, Han Shuo temporarily dispelled the idea of sneaking in. He'd wait for the Redbud Knights' to arrive to aid Celt, and then decide his next course of action accordingly.

Be it Celt or any other person, as long as their final goal was the magic crystal mine, they would appear again. Han Shuo fully understood this, so he wasn't in a hurry to leave. Instead, he remained hiding beneath the rocks, silently meditating while awaiting the arrival of those people.

Upon reaching the separate demon realm of demonic magic, one would reach a bottleneck, and future progress would become increasingly harder. However, with each realm's breakthrough, the cultivator's power would immediately increase ten, a hundred fold compared to before. Chu Cang Lan was able to fly to the moon at the mere peak of the nine changes realm. Reaching that realm in this world could be comparable to the gods.

Han Shuo only needed to make a breakthrough from the realm of "separate demon" to "carnal", and then take one more step to reach the "nine changes" realm. Unfortunately, starting from the "separate demon" realm, each realm would composed of many obstacles. Without fortuitous encounters during their cultivation, demonic practitioners would have to spend year after year in hard training before they could take another step forward.

According to the memory of Chu Cang Lan, Han Shuo knew that without fortuitous encounters, it'd take at least a hundred years to advance from the realm of "separate demon" to the "carnal" realm. Even five hundred years wouldn't necessarily be enough to go from "carnal" to "nine changes". No one could say if the cultivator wouldn't go mad with obsession midway through their practice either. As for breaking through from the "nine changes" to the "omen" realm, even Chu Cang Lan had no clue. Otherwise, he wouldn't have kidnapped t Han Shuo, taken him to the moon and fought the three strong experts to seek a chance of breaking through in the decisive battle.

"One hundred years is really too long. I need to find other ways to do this." Han Shuo murmured, silently imprinting the information regarding "fortuitous encounters" from Chu Cang Lan's memory in his heart. He would be ready for any opportunity in the future.

The so-called "fortuitous encounter" was simply a place with an enormous amount of demonic qi suitable for his magical cultivation or swallowing a treasure nurtured by heaven and earth for hundreds of millions of years. It could also mean refining magical treasures and then using those to nourish the demon infant. There was also the method of devouring fellow demonic cultivators.

Sitting cross-legged behind a rock, Han Shuo considered the feasibility of these "fortuitous encounters" as well as some other things, such as the way to cultivate both magic and demonic magic together. After a few days passed unknowingly, Han Shuo's mind brightened as he suddenly thought of a new idea.

The last time he fought Kosse, the latter had destroyed much of Han Shuo's necromancy magic with his divine artifact "Revelation". The undead creatures and Acid Bog had all dissipated after being purified under the holy light. To a necromancer like Han Shuo, this was simply a fatal blow.

Had it not been for Han Shuo's practice of demonic magic that allowed him to use mysterious methods to create five divine elemental zombies, he would have lost the fight against Kosse and the knights.

The reason why the Church of Light and the Calamity Church were so afraid of Han Shuo was that his little skeleton and creatures didn't fear light magic. Han Shuo was planning on honing in precisely on this point.

High-ranked undead creatures such as the evil knight possessed frightening lethality and attacking abilities, so they weren't too afraid of normal light magic. However, if Kosse used "Revelation" to release the holy light, Han Shuo knew that even evil knights would be hard pressed to avoid serious injury.

Necromancers and the Calamity Church actually possessed a long and illustrious history, but due to the effect of holy light on undead creatures, they'd always been at a disadvantage against the Church of Light. Once this rule was broken, Han Shuo believed the Church of Light wouldn't be able to hold onto their absolute advantage forever.

The Church of Light fears this the most, so I really should leverage this. I have the high-ranked evil knight and soon I will be able to summon bone demons and old fey zombies. I don't expect them to have the same ability as little skeleton or the earth elite zombie. However, if I refine them again with the demonic magic secret bone method, then they shouldn't fear the corrosion of light magic anymore right?

High-ranked undead creatures such as the evil knight, the bone demon and the old fey zombie would be frighteningly lethal without the weakness of holy light. When the Church of Light has to face a never ending stream of undead creatures fearless in the face of their light magic, won't they be scared to death then?

The more Han Shuo pondered, the more he understood that this was the fastest way to improve his strength. As long as he successfully created anti-light creatures, Han Shuo believed Kosse would meet his maker no matter how many knights he had backing him up.

"It looks like I need to start experimenting with how to rid the undead of their weakness to holy light upon my return to the Cemetery of Death this time." Han Shuo thought to himself as he made up his mind.

At that moment, the yin demon around Han Shuo sensed a big group of living creatures coming near. It looked toward their direction and saw some familiar dark elves, in addition to the brightly armored Redbud Knights. Even dark elf Dana, with whom Han Shuo had dealings with before, had brought her tribe to follow Celt.

“Interesting, all of my enemies have gathered!” Han Shuo muttered, standing up from his cross-legged posture. He was ready to see how this group would deal with the powerful creature residing inside the mountain.

Chapter 341: An ancient magical formation

Celt certainly felt like his luck had run dry lately. Really, it was almost like he was the epitome of bad luck! This trip to the Dark Forest should've been a rich experience, fat with loot and rewards. There was no way he would've expected to encounter setbacks by the dozen.

To begin, the Dark Mantle had seemingly set their eyes on him the second he'd set foot in the Dark Forest. They stuck to him like a bunch of irritating flies, never leaving him or his group unwatched. When he'd finally managed to loot the den of a golden dragon, an elusive expert had come along to pursue him. That battle had cost him his steed, as well as his ear.

Even that fire grand magus Marceau, who he'd taken great effort to invite, had inexplicably disappeared. Her two disciples wouldn't stop nattering about her all day either, so that hadn't helped his mood.

Finally when he'd reached the underground world, Celt had assumed that he could take advantage of his superior forces to easily subdue that creature. Yet once again, he'd encountered a severe setback. Even after three consecutive attempts, they'd failed to occupy the magic crystal mine. Other than three hundred injured men, they'd gained nothing.

In the end, his low numbers had forced him into an alliance with the dark elves that disgusted him so. His pride and arrogance had taken a severe blow in the last few days, and he intended to rectify that shortly. He would vent all his ill humor by seizing the magic crystal mine and thoroughly torturing any lizardmen who dared to block his path.

"Mister Celt, I hope you can appreciate and cherish this opportunity that you've been blessed with. It's not very often we dark elves are willing to work with others." A refined, elegantly attired male dark elf was speaking to Celt. A natural intricate web of creases and folds decorated his left cheek, and a tuft of a beard grew from his chin. All in all, the effect made him look a bit sinister.

This male dark elf's outfit was that of a noble, gorgeous and luxurious. A black magic staff was lazily gripped in his left hand as his slow words reached Celt.

Celt's face clouded over. He ordered the knights to stop when they were about to reach the gourd-shaped mountain guarded by the lizardmen. Turning his head to glance at the elegant male dark elf, he said in a neutral tone, "Distinguished Sir Arlen, you should know that we are acting in mutual benefit this time, and not that I've begged you to come with me."

"Our aim is the magic crystal mine, while you dark elves would be equally happy to see large numbers of the lizardmen eradicated. If that strange creature continues to protect the lizardmen, it won't be an easy matter for you to occupy their territory. That creature is afraid of flame, so I hope you've prepared enough goblin missiles, or we can just turn back right now."

"Mister Celt, rest assured that the sage dark elves are the true masters of this layer. Those cowardly goblins offer us an astonishing number of missiles in tribute every year. That enormous creature will surely be blasted into smithereens." The dark elf Dana was as flirtatious as ever, smiling obsequiously at Celt. Her limpid eyes that were capable of drawing people in, were sweeping up and down his body. Celt secretly swallowed a mouthful of drool that was threatening to leak out the side of his mouth. This wanton woman is alluring alright! However, he naturally wouldn't reveal the unbridled side of him that "gone to war" with a naked Dana in front of his subordinates.

Celt solemnly revealed a charming smile and nodded, "Then I'm relieved. We have gone in thrice and have some understanding of this creature. It seems unable to leave the foot of the gourd mountain. If not, we would have absolutely incurred a much bigger loss in our last three attempts. As the lizardmen are protecting the magic crystal mine, we don't know whether or not that strange creature has evolved from the lizardmen. It looks like an enormous lizard a thousand times larger than the lizardmen and occupies a large area underneath the gourd mountain.

You should be careful when you go in, it's best to immediately retreat from the gourd mountain if there's anything you can't handle."

"Well then, what are we waiting for? Let's send those lizardmen to hell!" Dark elf leader Arlen waved the dark magic scepter in hand, gesturing for his dark elves to begin the assault.

Celt hesitated no more upon hearing his words. He nodded to the several knight captains to his rear. He himself drew out a bright sword, but it wasn't the divine artifact "Starry Sky". Celt headed straight for the gourd mountain together with the traitor druid Kassel.

"So that fellow is afraid of fire, huh? Celt's finally provided some useful information!" Han Shuo secretly thought as he eavesdropped through the yin demon.

Han Shuo didn't immediately rush into the gourd mountain the lizardmen were guarding. Instead, he used the yin demon to determine Celt's course of action, hiding himself in a dark corner and waiting to take advantage of the ensuing chaos to silently sneak in.

The Redbud Knights and the dark elf invaders advanced openly towards the gourd mountain, accompanied by Celt's long and loud howl. Arlen stood forth as their obvious leader as even matriarch Dana, who'd attempted to take advantage of Han Shuo last time, followed Arlen's lead.

Arlen led several several bow or staff wielding dark elves to stroll leisurely up to the gourd mountain. He watched the lizardmen, running out of their caves after receiving the alarm, and spoke with a voice dripping with disdain, "You base and vulgar lizardmen! You have neither the qualification nor the rights to enjoy this fertile land. I will give you a one last chance. As long as you get the hell out of Paparlia, we noble dark elves will let you go."

Each race had its own unique language in the vast underground world. However, they still used the common human language when conversing, as the human language was concise and simple. Moreover, after so many years of development, human civilization was undoubtedly the leader of the entire Continent.

Many lizardmen walked out of the mountain caves. They stared in anger at Arlen and his lackeys touting their own nobility. A lizardman with a relatively coarse big tail pointed a weapon that looked like a cross between a knife and a fork at the extravagantly clothed Arlen. He shouted shrilly in the common tongue, "Despicable, greedy dark elves, this land is protected by the guardian god of our race! No one can even dreaming of intruding! If you dark elves dare to wage a war with our true god, we will fight this bloody battle with you till the end! Our true god shall destroy you despicable, dirty offenders!"

"Hmph, just an enormous lizard; how did it become your true god?" Arlen snorted dismissively, creating an odd hand seal in front of his chest. He spoke with a somewhat pious expression, "We are blessed with the protection of Goddess Rose, and will sweep out all the races in this layer. The dark elves shall unify all the great races in the world, and no one can stop this!"

"How dare you greedy dark elves look down on our mighty true god!! You will pay the price!" The lizardman's shrill voice became even sharper. He raised his tail high as he bellowed, snapping it in the air like an enormous whip.

The lizardmen possessed strong, fleshy bodies with incredible raw battle strength. However, they were unable to grasp the profundities of magic, so their culture was far more crude and vulgar compared to the illustrious history of the dark elves.

The dark elves proclaimed themselves the most ancient and noble race of the underground world. They considered the lizardmen as wild beasts that only knew to use physical strength. With their magic at the forefront of every assault, the dark elves often won the battles against the lizardmen, forcing them to scatter across the underground world in a desperate attempt to survive over the years.

However, every race of high intelligence had a common problem – civil war. From the self-styled most ancient dark elf race to the human race, they all suffered from this strange disease. Different dark elf tribes constantly fought among each other in immense battles. If it wasn't for an inability for them to unite, they could have long since conquered this layer of the underground world.

Although the lizardmen couldn't compare to the dark elves in terms of overall fighting capability as they didn't know how to use magic, they possessed amazing unity. They had survived by virtue of this unity as well as physical combat effectiveness for the longest time. This was why they hadn't been conquered by dark elves up until now.

When the lizardman cracked his tail in midair, his brethren flung out numerous crude spears, heading straight for the boasting Arlen.

The spears did appear quite simple to Han Shuo. They were essentially only sharpened, durable wooden sticks. This greatly limited their lethality.

In sharp contrast to the lizardmen, the dark elves obviously knew how to utilize sharp weapons. Not only were their bows and swords abnormally sharp, but they were also engraved with intricate patterns. Their weapons did indeed far surpass those of the so-called savage lizardmen in terms of practicality and aesthetics.

The two young archers behind Arlen twanged their bows, shattering the oncoming spears in midair.

Completely unruffled, Arlen looked coldly at the lizardmen and mocked, "Lowly lizardmen who don't know their place! All your race knows is brute strength. The likes of you can only serve as our domestic animals!"

Celt could not be any less interested in the bickering between the dark elves and the lizardmen. As the leader of the Redbud Knights, he held the title of marquis in the Brut Empire. He'd lost all patience by now as he interrupted Arlen's speech, speaking to Kassel, "We're familiar with the inside, lead the way."

Kassel nodded. He understood that as a traitor to the druids, joining the Redbud Knights meant absolute devotion to the leader. Kassel charged forward as soon as Celt finished speaking, his body shifting into the form of an enormous eagle in mid-air.

The Redbud Knights abandoned their horses and followed Kassel to charge towards the gourd mountain caves. When he saw his men already deployed, Celt turned to dark Arlen with some displeasure, “Distinguished Sir Arlen, shouldn’t you be taking action already?”

“I don’t need you to remind me.” Arlen didn’t put on a good face either for humans. Although he admitted that humans was more advanced than the dark elves in some areas, humans were still known for being despicable and shameless. Their notorious reputation in the underground world was more infamous than even the batmen.

“Let’s move!” Dana smiled charmingly as she gave the order to her lackeys. The branch of dark elves answering to her rushed out ahead, aiming fine arrows straight at the lizardmen.

Just as Dana’s elves took action, the numerous dark elves behind her divided into teams and charged the gourd mountain. A part of them stayed behind with Arlen.

Frowning as he watched at the conflict break out, Arlen felt something was amiss. He spoke to Celt nearby, “As long as that damned creature appears, our goblin missiles will end its life along with the gourd mountain.”

“I hope so!” Celt didn’t respond much to Arlen’s egoism. He too looked down on the lizardmen just as Arlen did, and included the dark elves in this disdain as well.

In the human world aboveground, be it the dark elves or the forest elves, they were all enslaved objects. Human claimed themselves to be the center of all things, raising the dark elves as domesticated help. Aristocrats such as Celt even had one or two young and beautiful dark elves serving at them at home.

The vigorous lizardmen immediately retreated back to their caves just as the Redbud Knights and the dark elves mounted their assault. Several dark elves carried enormous bundles on the backs. Han Shuo surmised that those must be the goblin missiles he’d seen before.

Looking at their postures, it seemed that they intended to throw those massive bombs directly inside the gourd mountain, trying to blow up that enormous creature along with all of the lizardmen in one go.

Han Shuo's spirit could sense the seething anger of the creature inside. He knew it wouldn't be able to worry about too many things at once, so he once again summoned the earth elite zombie and commanded it to sneak into the gourd mountain.

The earth elite zombie sank into the ground, and was no longer obstructed and chased back by that strange force this time. As there was a very high number of Redbud Knights and dark elves inside the gourd mountain, it was impossible for the strange, powerful creature to sense and scan every single one.

In addition, its rage had reached the peak and finally boiled over. The piercing sound of its howling cry rumbled out from the depths of the mountain. The whole gourd mountain seemed to shake beneath its howl. Han Shuo was worried that the thin bottom of the mountain would not be able to support the upper part of the mountain and crumble away.

Han Shuo attached the only yin demon he had to the earth elite zombie. He could see the situation underground through the earth elite zombie's vision, but since it had yet to reach the main combat area, the zombie couldn't send any useful information. Han Shuo could only place his attention on the Redbud Knights and dark elves alliance.

In Han Shuo's view, the strength of the Redbud Knights far exceeded that of the dark elves, be it their equipment or individual power. They wore bulky armor, yet their speed still outstripped the sparsely dressed dark elves even without the support of the horses.

The knights all possessed cold and confident looks, having been through various battles. Their bodies were that of true warriors, sturdy with restrained viciousness. Each knight formed either triangle or diamond shaped formations as they charged, complementing their comrades while helping themselves run swiftly. This helped them avoid ambushes from the sides and the rear.

The arrogant dark elves fell far behind in this aspect. They still messily charged forward like a swarm of bees, their tactics unchanged in the last thousand years. The dark elves had resided in the underground world for who knew how long, yet had never fought hand in hand in proper formations like the humans, let alone coordinating skillfully with each other.

As Han Shuo observed the battle, he suddenly saw a scene on his mind. He immediately understood that the earth elite zombie had cleared all the underground obstacles and had reached that powerful creature's location beneath the gourd mountain.

The earth elite zombie was showing Han Shuo his line of sight from beneath the enormous creature. The first thing it conveyed was a huge, ancient octagonal magical formation up above. A much smaller, also octagonal array lay in each corner of the formation. Each small array was filled with magic elements.

A ten meter long, enormous reddish brown tail was in the center of the formation. The tail itself was like a small hill entrenched in the formation. Circles of colorful lightning shot out of the formation, as if restricting it, whenever it struggled.

“Can it be that the huge creature is being sealed beneath this gourd-shaped mountain by this formation? If the goblin missiles destroy this mountain, won't the imprisoning formation be broken?” Han Shuo's heart spasmed with shock as he thought worriedly.

Chapter 342: The Ancient Lizard King

The yin demon circled around the enormous ancient octagonal formation, taking note of every detail. Through the yin demon, Han Shuo saw chunks of large, clear magic crystal ores piled on the surface of the formation, obscuring the intricate details of the formation. These miniature hills obviously provided an endless source of energy for the formation.

As the earth elite zombie and the yin demon drew near the large creature, they saw that the large creature's lower body, as well as the base of its tail, were sunk into the center of the formation. The creature seemed to sense the two as it snapped the end of its ten meter long tail in the air. The dark red tail whipped through the air like a giant metal chain as it sought to smash the earth elite zombie into the ground.

Half the earth elite zombie's body was still underground. When he saw the python-like tail slapping down, he quickly dove into the depths of the earth. He could hear an enormous crash as the ground started shaking above his head.

A strange force shot out from the tail, shooting directly at the earth elite zombie as it dove into the ground. The earth elite zombie was given a huge fright when he sensed this force following him, and quickly tried to flee back to Han Shuo. He was only halfway there when the strange force caught up and surged into his body!.

The earth elite zombie began to thrash as the strange energy passed through his body. When the wave of force completely passed through him, he came to, utterly disoriented. Fortunately, Han Shuo had refined him using magical yuan as well the energy from the place of extreme earth. He was also surrounded by his natural habitat of earth as well, so the strange energy didn't leave any damage behind as it passed through him.

When the strange creature sensed that the earth elite zombie was alive and well even after the force wave had hit him, it flew into a rage. It furiously slammed its tail into the ground several times, sending a multitude of force waves at the earth elite zombie.

Even though the earth elite zombie was still dazed from earlier, his perception was heightened beneath the earth. When he felt more waves of force coming his way, he instinctively drew on the power of the earth to defend himself. Using himself as the epicenter, he started to vibrate the earth around him.

As they broke their way through the vibrating earth, the force waves were gradually weakened. The attrition of their energy meant that when they finally surged through the earth elite zombie, he didn't show the slightest reaction.

The earth elite zombie had been disoriented by the blast of strange energy because he hadn't managed to use his natural talents in time. Otherwise, he wouldn't have ended up in such an embarrassing predicament straight off the bat.

"Eh?!" Han Shuo was astonished, then muttered thoughtfully, "It seems the five divine element zombies need to face dangers more often, otherwise they won't even know how to use their own natural powers. The earth elite zombie most definitely didn't know that this earthquake type ability could withstand the energy attacks, but magically mastered this ability when faced with danger."

As Han Shuo pondered silently, the strange creature restrained by the formation was being driven mad by the repeated failure of its attacks. However, as restricted as it was, there was nothing more it could do to the safely ensconced earth elite zombie at the moment.

Instead, it switched its attention to the Redbud Knights and dark elves, seemingly venting its frustration with the earth elite zombie on them. The entire mountain trembled as it howled. The piercing howl was accompanied by force waves like those aimed at the earth zombie, except this time aimed at those petty ants who dared to step foot into its domain.

The Redbud Knights and dark elves were completely caught off guard by the bizarre force waves. The Redbud Knights fared better than the dark elves, since they battled while enclosed by their fighting aura. They only bled from their noses and mouths when they were hit, slowing down as they fought through the effects. However, the dark elves didn't fight under any such protection, and their weak fighters died or were severely injured by the dozen when the force waves hit them out of the blue.

However, their total force numbered at least a thousand. The powerful creature was restrained by the ancient confining formation, and even its force wave attacks couldn't keep the invaders from swarming the mountain, eventually invading the entrance caves.

Even as the dark elves died in droves, they still managed to place a large amount of goblin missiles in various key regions of the mountain. On the other hand, Kassel led the Redbud Knights in teams to flush the dusky narrow caves, slaughtering every lizardman they could find.

The lizardmen possessed strong bodies, but wielded crude weapons. They were no match for the highly trained Knights, not to mention the existence of a powerful shapeshifting druid like Kassel. As they retreated further into the caves, the lizardmen left a trail of corpses behind.

The dark elves followed closely behind the Redbud Knights, busily burying goblin missiles in every corner of the caves. The running battle drew closer and closer to the ancient creature as the Redbud Knights and dark elves trailed the lizardmen to the location of their "true God".

The terrific casualties that the lizardmen fielded caught the eye of the powerful creature. At the bottom of the gourd mountain, the strange creature howled in fury as it completely lost interest in the earth elite zombie. It roared as it mobilized several force waves to simultaneously smash into the Redbud Knights.

Even the uncommonly strong Redbud Knights couldn't withstand the impact of multiple force waves hitting them simultaneously. They died as they fought, the strange energy savaging their bodies. The weaker dark elves endured worse casualties, with several hundred dying before they reached the innermost area.

By this point, Han Shuo could determine that whatever the Redbud Knights and dark elves alliance planned to do, it was a risky and daring plan .He was sure that the powerful creature was currently being restrained by the formation. In fact, it was restrained to the point where it could only reveal half its body.

The Redbud Knights could only see the upper half of the great lizard's body and the chunks of accumulated magic crystal ores scattered around it. They simply couldn't see the buried lower half of its body or the ancient magic formation.

It was one thing if the goblin missiles blasted the mountain apart and killed the strange creature. However, if the creature managed to survive the blast, then the destroyed mountain would no longer be able to contain it. Han Shuo was sure that once it was released from the magic formation that had imprisoned it for aeons, the Redbud Knights and dark elves were bound to bear the brunt of its horrifying rage. However, this wasn't something Han Shuo needed to worry about.

For Han Shuo, his only purpose was to kill Celt, as well as to obtain as many magic crystal ores as possible. For the strange creature to survive would be the most ideal outcome.

He mused for a bit, but was immediately struck with a wonderful idea.

Calling the earth elite zombie to him, the two headed for the strange creature, tunneling into the depths of the earth. Yet when Han Shuo emerged from the tunnels right outside the ancient magic formation, he was greeted by the ten meter long python-like tail.

It was certainly impressive that the creature could accurately locate Han Shuo while its head was up above. Han Shuo swiftly dashed to a remote corner. The tail chased him until it stopped seven meters from him, thrashing furiously but unable to reach Han Shuo at all.

"Hey, I mean no harm, I just want to offer some help." Han Shuo shouted up to the ten meter long tail, disregarding whether it could understand him or not.

"Tiny feeble presence, you will pay the price!" A message sent purely via consciousness shook the space around Han Shuo, seemingly issued by the strange creature.

Normally, the higher ranked a creature, the more intelligence they possessed. The dark dragon Gilbert or the gold dragon could both speak human tongue, and even the Lord of the Flames had the ability to directly communicate with its mind. Being able to communicate with humans meant that this creature was no less powerful than the Lord of the Flames.

This was indeed within Han Shuo's expectations. The creature had immediately responded as soon as Han Shuo shouted. Communicating directly with one's mind was even clearer than using spoken language.

"Powerful being, I'm not with those people above, I've come to help you! I can use their power to break the formation while not harming you in the slightest. I only want the magic crystal ores at the bottom of the gourd mountain. What do you think?" Han Shuo immediately put forth his proposal after learning they could communicate.

"Pathetic creature, those stupid fellows would still help me blast open this gourd mountain even without your help. I fed them false information that I'm afraid of fire and missiles. Now they are acting right in accordance with my plan, helping me destroy the mountain! No one can stop this anymore. Even if you are not with them, they won't believe you if you inform them either. Your proposal holds no value!" The creature laughed proudly, completely out of Han Shuo's expectations.

Han Shuo expression changed slightly as he heard the ancient creature boast. Who would have imagined that this creature was actually so cunning? It didn't appear to fear flame and missiles like Celt speculated. It had faked disadvantages in the previous battle just to create this situation.

Han Shuo suddenly looked befuddled and responded, "If that's the case, why didn't you ask the lizardmen to get you out? It wouldn't be difficult for them to gather goblin missiles. Since they believe you to be their 'true God', they would help you even more willingly. Why use enemies to help you?"

"I would have long since left this damned place already if they could communicate with me! They are cursed by the gods to forever be bound in their body, unable to break through their shackles. They can't use anything else other than the power of the flesh to communicate. They simply don't understand me."

"Those poor creatures only know the crudest of methods, and that is to remove all magical crystal ores around me. They thought it was the only way for me to leave this damned cage." The creature seemed to have been imprisoned for far too long, talking nonstop with Han Shuo.

When he heard this, Han Shuo suddenly remembered that the lizardmen indeed only knew how to use their bodily strength. The power of their souls and depths of their wisdom were pathetically shallow. Maybe this was the reason why they were unable to obtain information from the enormous creature in this space, and could only call upon their determination to surmount every obstacle and remove the last bit of each magic crystal ore from the mountain.

End of Part 1 of the chapter.

So it seemed that it was not for their self-interest that the lizardmen occupied the gourd-shaped mountain and tirelessly mined the ore, but to help release their "true God" from bondage! Come to think of it, they didn't even know how to forge complex weapons, how would they possibly understand the true value of magic crystal ore?

From this strange creature's explanation, Han Shuo knew that it was now impossible to prevent it from escaping the ancient formation. Celt was on the verge of blowing the entire mountain sky high, and all it needed was a single damaged corner to break free from its age old imprisonment.

Thinking quickly, Han Shuo began to think of another way. Looking at the ten meter long, dark red tail, he remembered Arlen's words of the lizardmen's true god being just a large lizard. Inspiration struck, could this strange creature be protecting the lizardmen?

"Mighty presence, there are still hundreds of lizardmen who worship you trapped within this mountain. Once the invaders blow up the mountain, a mighty being as you would be able to survive, but the poor lizardmen would be wiped out to the last man." Han Shuo paused for effect. He could sense the creature's hesitation clouding the atmosphere. He continued, "However, I can ensure their survival. As long as you promise me the magic crystal ores in this mine, I will lead them to a safe location before the explosion."

"Lowly tiny being, I, the great Ancient Lizard King Dagassi, agree to your request. As long as you can ensure their safety, you can take as much of this ore as you can carry." After a brief silence, the Ancient Lizard King Dagassi gave Han Shuo his promise.

Han Shuo didn't linger after receiving Dagassi's promise. He immediately ordered the earth elite zombie to dig a tunnel to the surface. The earth elite zombie complied, earth readily parting for him. However, halfway through, the zombie sent him a message of helplessness. Han Shuo had already guessed the root of the problem and quickly shot towards the half finished tunnel.

Apart from the large space that the ancient magic formation occupied, the earth was just compacted soil from the outskirts of the mountain to Ancient Lizard King Dagassi's enormous tail. The earth elite zombie discovered that magic crystal ores harder than iron ores stood in his way as he started digging upwards.

Even the earth elite zombie's natural powers were useless against magic crystal ores. He stopped halfway, at a loss of how to proceed. After all, the earth elite zombie was just an earth elite zombie. He didn't have the power of the metal elite zombie to level and ravage mountains.

"My poor children are dying in droves. Little human, hurry up and act." Ancient Lizard King Dagassi sent a surge of urgent messages into Han Shuo's mind.

Pressed for time, Han Shuo took out the peerless Demonslayer Edge. The weapon spun like a drill in his hand as he thrust it upwards. Large chunks of magic crystal ore vanished into Han Shuo's space ring before they'd even had time to touch the ground. Although his speed was a bit slower than the earth elite zombie's use of his natural talents, Han Shuo was still able to drill upwards at the rate of several meters per second with the help of the Demonslayer Edge.

As the Ancient Lizard King hurried him on, each rotation of the Demonslayer Edge brought with it a large chunk of magic crystal ore into Han Shuo's space ring. Within a few moments, he arrived where the upper body and head of the Lizard King was located, above the magic formation.

Han Shuo looked up and couldn't help but give a low exclamation. This Ancient Lizard King did indeed look like an enormous lizardman, but for a few differences. A sharp horn grew from the top of his head, and a line of red, sword-like sharp spikes sprouted down its back from the horn.

The Ancient Lizard King was even bigger than the green dragon. He resembled a towering mountain of reddish-brown muscle. At the height of twenty meters, his body seemed to be made of thick, reddish-brown boulders.

His deep red eyes shone like two lanterns high in the air. He stared down at the ant-like Han Shuo beneath him, once again sending out urgent messages.

"Understood, understood. I will help your children survive." Han Shuo replied to the Lizard King's impatient nagging. He quickly rushed into the complex network of caves whilst admiring the Ancient Lizard King's massive form.

"I'm a messenger from your 'true God'! According to his command, I am here to lead you to a place of safety!" Han Shuo's shout came right when the lizardmen were desperately engaged in a rearguard action. They were fiercely resisting the Redbud Knights' onslaught while retreating towards the Ancient Lizard King.

"Despicable human, why are you here?" The leader with the big tail suddenly panicked, crying out in an awkward version of the common tongue as he pointed at Han Shuo as if wanting to initiate attacks.

"I'm helping you as the messenger of your 'true God'. You'll know if you come with me!" Han Shuo explained then immediately shouted, "Don't do anything unnecessary! They have laid explosives over the entire mountain. All you have to do is hurry to your God's side."

Without staying back to see if the lizardmen believed him or not, Han Shuo flew straight back to the Ancient Lizard King. When the retreating lizardmen heard his words, they sped up their retreat to the Ancient Lizard King, possibly because they believed Han Shuo, or possibly because they were worried about the safety of their ‘true God’ and didn’t want to fight with the Redbud Knights.

Only when the remaining lizardmen saw that Han Shuo standing unscathed next to their ‘true God’ did they somewhat believe Han Shuo. They first kowtowed to the Lizard King before the leader looked up at him and asked humbly, “True God, what are we to do? The enemy has already invaded!”

